tion. In the year 1844 he removed westward with his family, establishing his home in Illinois when his son Gideon was but eleven years of age. The latter worked on his father's farm through the period of his minority and afterward took up the same line of business on his own account, following that occupation until he retired, a few years prior to his death. He worked diligently and persistently to cultivate his fields and make them productive and in time they returned to him a substantial competence. He passed away, December 10, 1898, in Galva, Illinois, where his widow is still living. There he was recognized as a valued and representative citizen and enjoyed the respect and good-will of all with whom he came in contact. In politics he was always a republican for he came to his majority about the time that the republican party sprang into existence. He filled a number of township offices and in all connections of vital interest to the community manifested a public-spirited devotion to the general good. He was a member and trustee of the Baptist church, to which his wife also belongs. They were married on the 20th of May, 1856, and became the parents of eight children: Ames A., Frederick W. and Gideon B., who are residents of Galva; Ada L., the wife of John W. Swickard, of Galesburg; Edgar Sherman, who is living in Kewanee, Illinois; John F., a resident of Kansas City, Missouri; Forest S. and Lewis W., both of Galva.

Ames A. Barlow pursued his education in the Galva schools and after he had finished the high-school course there, pursued a commercial course in Davenport, Iowa. He then became an active factor in the further development and improvement of his father's farm and so continued until the 2d of December, 1902, when he entered the county treasurer's office to serve for a period of four years. He proved a faithful custodian of the public funds, carefully and systematically discharging the duties of his position, and upon the expiration of his term of office he received the commendation of all concerned. He then began operating in the field of real estate, in which he still continues, handling both city property and farm lands, together with realty in Florida. He brings to bear a most enterprising and progressive spirit and is largely regarded as an authority upon anything pertaining to real estate in Knox county.

On the 17th of August, 1879, Mr. Barlow was married to Miss Celinda S. Hathaway, a daughter of Arthur F. and Jane (Mowatt) Hathaway, of Galva. Her father was a native of Salem, Massachusetts, born October 21, 1821, and her mother's birth occurred in Montreal, Canada. Mr. Hathaway became a lumber dealer of Galva, where he took up his abode in 1854, remaining actively in business there until he retired, about twenty years prior to his death, which occurred on the 8th of August, 1894. He had for two years survived his wife, who died in 1892. He voted with the republican party and served as supervisor and in other township offices; but whether in office or out of it he was always loyal to the best interests of the community and gave his active cooperation to many projects for the general good. Unto him and his wife were born four children: Mrs. Barlow, whose birth occurred in Galva, July 10, 1856; Abbie, who was born November 16, 1860, in Galva, where she is still living; Jeptha B., born in Galva, March 23, 1863; and Jennie, born in Galva, October 5, 1865. The two younger daughters are still residents of their native town. Mr. and Mrs. Barlow are the parents of three children: Lawrence W., who was born in Galva, December 14, 1880, resides in Galesburg and is married and has one daughter, Grace. Mabel M., born in Galva, April 1, 1883, is the wife of S. R. Scott, of Galesburg, and has two children, Maxine and Genevieve; Abbie A., born in Galva, July 24, 1894, is yet at home with her parents.

Politically Mr. Barlow is a republican, having continuously supported the party since attaining his majority. The only office he has held for many years was that of county supervisor and he is never remiss in the duties of citizenship and when his aid and cooperation are sought for the benefit of the community they are freely given. He has attained high rank in Masonry, being a member of the Knight Templar Commandery, the Woodmen and the Elks Lodges. He is also a member of the Elks Club and of the Galesburg Club, and is ever appreciative of the social amenities of life. In manner he is genial and cordial and his many attractive qualities have won for him an extensive circle of warm friends.

ALBERT CHESTER KEENER, M. D.

Dr. Albert Chester Keener has become well known because of his connection with educational interests in central Illinois and his present connection with the medical profession as a practitioner at Altona. He was born July 23, 1873, in Biggsville, Henderson county, this state, and represents one of the old families of this section. His grandfather was Marton Keener, who married Miss Meyers and came with his family to Illinois in 1868, settling near Biggsville, where he followed the occupation of farming. His son, James T. Keener, the father of the Doctor, was born in York county, Pennsylvania, and in his boyhood days devoted his time to the acquirement of an education in the country schools in his native state and also to the work of the fields on the home farm. During the period of the Civil war he drove a team on the canal near the Susquehanna river, being thus employed until the removal of the family to Illinois. His wages were four dollars per month and he frequently tells interesting tales of how he rode the mules many a night upon the tow path. He came with his parents to this state in 1868 and in early manhood learned the plasterer's trade which he followed for a time, but afterward returned to the occupation of farming which he followed until his labors had brought to him a substantial competence that he regarded as sufficient to supply him with the necessities and comforts of life throughout his remaining days. He then retired and is now living in Biggsville at the age of sixty years. He married Eliza Jane Edwards, who is now fifty-six years of age. In their family were five children: Charles Lester, a resident of South Dakota; Mary Blanch, the wife of P. Stevenson, of Monmouth, Illinois; John Creston, living on the home farm; and Maud, who is with her parents.

The other member of the family is Dr. Keener, of this review, who in his boyhood days attended school in Biggsville, Illinois, and afterward took up the profession of teaching, which he followed for eight years and three months following his graduation at Biggsville. He proved a capable educator and made steady progress in this profession until his ability was recognized and he was elected county superintendent of schools. His election furthermore was a notable compliment as he is the only democrat that has been elected to this office in Henderson county, a fact which indicates his personal popularity and the confidence reposed in him. He filled the office for four years but two months before the close of his term he entered the Northwestern University Medical School at Chicago, having determined to engage in practice as a life work. There he pursued a four years' course and was graduated in June, 1910, being president of his class in the senior year. In September of the same year he removed to Tower Hill where he entered upon the active practice of his profession but in the following March bought out the practice of Dr. J. H. Conwell, of Altona, where he is now located and is well established in his chosen life work.

On the 10th of June, 1896, Dr. Keener was married to Miss Nannie Magee, who was born in Henderson county, Illinois, February 12, 1873. They have become parents of two children, Alberta Faye and Darcy Dale, aged respectively fourteen and eleven years. The parents are members of the Presbyterian church of Altona and are well known socially in the town, having gained many warm friends during the brief period of their residence here. Dr. Keener belongs to the Masonic lodge at Carman, Illinois, and formerly to the Woodman camp at Biggsville but has transfered his membership to Altona. He was also identified with the Mystic Workers at Biggsville and his political support is given to the democratic party. He holds membership with the Phi Chi fraternity and belongs also to the County Medical and State Medical Societies. Through the proceedings of those bodies as well as by private reading and study he keeps in touch with the advanced work being done by the medical profession and in his private practice he holds to high ideals, performing his work with a sense of conscientious obligation.

ANDREW RYLANDER.

Andrew Rylander, who is an enterprising farmer of Ontario township, was born in Sweden, September 19, 1862. His parents were Johanas and Clara (Johnson) Johnson, who spent all their lives in their native country, where the father was engaged in farming. They were zealous members of the Swedish Lutheran church. The father died in 1899 and the mother in 1903.

Andrew Rylander was reared and received a common-school education in his native country and at the age of fifteen began working on a farm there, where he remained until 1882. At that date he came to America and in the fall of the same year located in Knox county, where he was employed on a farm for eight years. In 1890 he rented a place in Ontario township and engaged in farming it for eighteen years. In 1905 he purchased his present farm of one hundred and sixty-seven acres and moved on it in 1908. He engages in general farming and makes a specialty of raising hogs and cattle.

On the 15th of January, 1897, Mr. Rylander wedded Miss Jennie Holcomb, who was brought from Sweden to America in 1869 by her parents, Haukin and Elsie (Martin) Holcomb, both natives of Blekinge, Sweden, when she was six years of age. The parents located in Knox county, where they later purchased a farm and where the father died in 1884. The mother is now living with a daughter in Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Rylander have become the parents of three children, all of whom are residing at home. They are: Clell V., who was graduated from a business college; Floyd E.; and Carl Milo.

In politics Mr. Rylander is a republican, and fraternally he is a member of Oneida Lodge, No. 555, M. W. A. He is greatly interested in the cause of education and has served as school trustee for six years. Both he and his wife are members of the Lutheran church at Altona. He possesses keen discernment and in the years of his residence in Knox county has gained a handsome measure of success, placing him with the prosperous farmers in this portion of the state.

GEORGE GARDNER STEARNS.

George G. Stearns, deceased, was for some time connected with the agricultural interests of Knox county, but prior to his death retired from business, spending the evening of his life in well earned rest. He was born in Conway, Massachusetts, February 9, 1836, a son of George and Fannie (Arms) Stearns, who were also natives of Conway and spent their entire lives in the east where the father followed the occupation of farming and thus provided a good living for his family. Both he and his wife were consistent and faithful members of the Baptist church and his political indorsement was given to the republican party. In their family were seven children: Isabelle, George G. and Henry, all now deceased; Clara, the wife of Tyler Harding, of Des Moines, Iowa; Harriet, who has also passed away; Fannie, who married John Holcomb, of Conway, Massachusetts; and Jennie, deceased.

In the public schools of his native town George G. Stearns pursued his education and was reared to the work of the farm, early becoming familiar with all the duties and labors that fall to the lot of the agriculturist. On leaving New England he removed westward to Indiana, where he lived for a year, and in 1858 came to Knox county, turning his attention to farming in the vicinity of Knoxville. There he resided until 1861, when his patriotic spirit was aroused by the attempt of the south to overthrow the Union and he joined the army, enlisting as a private in the First Illinois Cavalry, with which he served for four years. He was then mustered out with the rank of captain of Company A, of the Seventy-seventh Illinois Infantry. He had served for one year as orderly sergeant and was captured and for nine months was held as a prisoner of war. His valor and courage won him promotion until he was given command of the company and as its head his personal bravery inspired and encouraged the men who served under him. When the war was over he resumed the pursuits of private life and once more engaged in farming, continuously following that pursuit until about twelve years prior to his death, when he retired to private life and made his home in Knoxville. He always gave stalwart support to the republican party which was the defense of the Union during the dark days of the Civil war and which he ever believed to be the party of reform and progress. He held membership in the Grand Army of the Republic and thus maintained chased a farm and where the father died in 1884. The mother is now living with a daughter in Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Rylander have become the parents of three children, all of whom are residing at home. They are: Clell V., who was graduated from a business college; Floyd E.; and Carl Milo.

GEORGE G. STEARNS

In politics Mr. Rylander is a republican, and fraternally he is a member of Oneida Lodge, No. 555, M. W. A. He is greatly interested in the cause of education and has served as school trustee for six years. Both he and his wife are members of the Lutheran church at Altona. He possesses keen discernment and in the years of his residence in Knox county has gained a handsome measure of success, placing him with the prosperous farmers in this portion of the state.

GEORGE GARDNER STEARNS.

George G. Stearns, deceased, was for some time connected with the agricultural interests of Knox county, but prior to his death retired from business, spending the evening of his life in well earned rest. He was born in Conway, Massachusetts, February 9, 1836, a son of George and Fannie (Arms) Stearns, who were also natives of Conway and spent their entire lives in the east where the father followed the occupation of farming and thus provided a good living for his family. Both he and his wife were consistent and faithful members of the Baptist church and his political indorsement was given to the republican party. In their family were seven children: Isabelle, George G. and Henry, all now deceased; Clara, the wife of Tyler Harding, of Des Moines, Iowa; Harriet, who has also passed away; Fannie, who married John Holcomb, of Conway, Massachusetts; and Jennie, deceased.

In the public schools of his native town George G. Stearns pursued his education and was reared to the work of the farm, early becoming familiar with all the duties and labors that fall to the lot of the agriculturist. On leaving New England he removed westward to Indiana, where he lived for a year, and in 1858 came to Knox county, turning his attention to farming in the vicinity of Knoxville. There he resided until 1861, when his patriotic spirit was aroused by the attempt of the south to overthrow the Union and he joined the army, enlisting as a private in the First Illinois Cavalry, with which he served for four years. He was then mustered out with the rank of captain of Company A, of the Seventy-seventh Illinois Infantry. He had served for one year as orderly sergeant and was captured and for nine months was held as a prisoner of war. His valor and courage won him promotion until he was given command of the company and as its head his personal bravery inspired and encouraged the men who served under him. When the war was over he resumed the pursuits of private life and once more engaged in farming, continuously following that pursuit until about twelve years prior to his death, when he retired to private life and made his home in Knoxville. He always gave stalwart support to the republican party which was the defense of the Union during the dark days of the Civil war and which he ever believed to be the party of reform and progress. He held membership in the Grand Army of the Republic and thus maintained pleasant relations with the boys in blue. He was also an exemplary representative of the Masonic fraternity and his religious faith was evidenced in his membership in the Presbyterian church. He died August 8, 1898, and in 1906 his widow removed to Galesburg, where she still lives.

GEORGE G. STEARNS

It was on the 2d of October, 1865, soon after his return from the war, that Mr. Stearns was united in marriage to Miss Lucy Runkle, a daughter of Eldirt and Nancy (Bowen) Runkle, of Knoxville, who were natives of New York and were married in the Empire state. Her father was a mill man by occupation and came to the west when this region was still a pioneer district, settling at Knoxville in 1835. There he followed the occupation of farming until his death, which occurred in June, 1865, and during the intervening period of thirty years his labors constituted an element in the substantial development and progress of the locality in which he lived. He was a republican in his political views and in his religious faith was a Presbyterian. His wife long survived him and died in October, 1890, at the advanced age of eighty-one years. In their family were six children but only Mrs. Stearns, who was born in Knoxville, is now living. She was the fourth in order of birth. The others were Elizabeth, James, Mary H., George and Frank.

To Mr. and Mrs. Stearns there were born five children, namely: George E., of Olympia, Washington; Arthur D., residing in Galesburg; Fred R., of Omaha, Nebraska; Fannie, the wife of Henry Carl, of Hatfield, Massachusetts; and Mary, who married Fred Holloway, their residence being at 997 North Broad street, Galesburg. Mr. Stearns was nearly sixty-two years of age when called to his final rest. He had lived an active, busy and useful life and his death was the occasion of deep regret to many who knew him as well as to his immediate family. He was always reliable in business affairs and straightforward in his dealings and in matters of citizenship he was as true and loyal to his country as when he followed the old flag upon the battle fields of the south.

FRANK C. HOPKINS.

Frank C. Hopkins is well known as a representative of the grain trade in Knox county, being manager of the Altona Grain Company. He was born January 12, 1885, in the town which is still his home, and is a representative of one of the old families of the county, his grandmother, Mrs. Samuel Hopkins, having been one of the first hotel proprietors of Altona. His father, Samuel Hopkins, resided in Altona for many years and in early life engaged in teaming but afterward became connected with grain buying. At one time he was employed in connection with the elevator at this place and for fifteen years was very prominent as a grain merchant, conducting a large and profitable business. He figured as one of the leading citizens of the town by reason of the extent and importance of his business activities and connections. He married Harriet Pierce, a daughter of D. A. and Sylva Pierce. She had been previously married, however, and by her first union had one child, Lulu, now the wife of Harry Gehring, a resident farmer of Walnut Grove township, and the mother of one child, Mary Frances Gehring. By her second marriage Mrs. Hopkins became the mother of six children, all of whom are yet living, namely: Frank, Mabel, Ermma and Blanch, at home; Arthur, who is following the painter's trade in Altona; and Earl, who is engaged in clerking in Altona. The father died in 1905 at the age of forty-six years and the community lost a valued and representative citizen and business man and the family a devoted husband and father. Mrs. Hopkins now makes her home with her son Frank C. and is forty-six years of age.

Frank C. Hopkins was a pupil in the public schools of Altona through much of the period of his youth, and started out in the business world as a clerk in his native town, being employed in connection with hardware and grocery stores for ten years. He then turned his attention to the grain trade, becoming a buyer for G. S. Dole, whom he thus represented for three years. He afterward spent a similar period as buyer for the Jackson Grain Company and, in 1910, became associated with the Altona Grain Company at Altona as manager. The officers of this company are D. N. McMaster, president; C. C. Sawyer, secretary; and C. S. Nelson, treasurer. Mr. Hopkins, with varied previous experience, is well qualified to handle the business at this place as general manager and keeps in close touch with the grain market. The company finds him an efficient and trustworthy representative and in this connection he has become well known in business circles although one of the younger business men of the county. His fraternal relations are with the Modern Woodmen of America. He is also well known socially in his native town and the surrounding country and many admirable traits of character have made him popular.

HENRY FRANK WILLIS.

Henry Frank Willis, president of the Willis Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of architectural sheet-metal goods, was born in Freeport, Ohio, August 24, 1854. He is descended in the paternal line from English ancestry although the family was founded in America at an early day. His grandfather was Isaac Willis, a native of New Jersey, who married Martha Humpers and removed to Ohio, settling in Harrison county where he died when well advanced in years. Among his children were George, John, Elizabeth, Alexander, Amos F., Isaac, Charlotte E., William and Joseph. His wife was a daughter of Alexander Humpers, a native of New Jersey, who served as lieutenant in the Revolutionary war, enlisting in the Fifth New Jersey Regiment and afterward reenlisting in the Fifth New York Regiment.

Isaac Willis, father of our subject, was born May 16, 1822, ere the removal of the family to Ohio, but much of his youth was spent in the latter state where he learned and followed the shoemaker's trade. He came to Illinois in 1856, settling first at Ipava, Fulton county, where he conducted a shoe business. Subsequently he removed to Havana, Illinois, where he resided for eight years, and then returned to Ipava where he died in 1875, at the age of fifty-three years. While a resident of Ohio he had wedded Mary Jane Murphy, a native of that state who died May 17, 1857. He was a member of the Society of Friends or Quakers while his wife held membership in the Methodist church. They had a family of three sons and two daughters, of whom two died in early childhood. The others were: John Montgomery, who died in 1869; Anna Ruhamy, the deceased wife of William E. Ladd; and Henry Frank, of this review.

Henry Frank Willis spent his boyhood days in Ipava and Havana, Illinois, having been but two years old when his parents removed to Ipava. He is indebted to the public-school system for the educational privileges he enjoyed and after putting aside his text-books, in 1872, learned the harness-maker's trade at Canton, Illinois, following that pursuit until 1891, when he came to Galesburg and joined his cousin, I. H. Willis, in establishing his present business under the name of the Willis Manufacturing Company. In 1900 he took over his cousin's interest and is now president and chief stockholder in the concern. He has since established with him in the business his sons, I. R., J. D., and R. B. Willis. The company manufactures all kinds of architectural sheet-iron goods and they employ about twenty-five or thirty people, shipping their output to all parts of the United States and also to Mexico and Canada. The business is constantly developing in its ramifying trade interests for the modern methods of manufacture employed and the reliable dealings of the house constitute features in business growth and success.

Mr. Willis has been married twice. On the 13th of August, 1879, he wedded Miss Mary Emma Gamble, who was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, and was the daughter of John Gamble. Her father was of Scotch-Irish descent and was born in the north of Ireland, whence he came to America in his boyhood days. Both he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, and reared a family of twelve children all of whom reached years of maturity. This number included Mary Emma, who became the wife of Mr. Willis, by whom she had five children. The eldest, Isaac Ralph, now vice president of the Willis Manufacturing Company, married Beatrice Irene Hagarty and they have two children, Henry Frank and Beatrice Jean. John D., treasurer of the Willis Manufacturing Company married Irene Park Campbell. Robert Bruce, secretary of the company, married Genevieve Davidson. Jessie Ann died at the age of two years and Emma Frank, the youngest, is the wife of Park N. Williams, a resident of Wilcox, Canada. The mother of these children died January 30, 1902, at the age of fifty-one years, in the faith of the Presbyterian church of which she had been a devoted member. On the 7th of March, 1907, Mr. Willis married Miss Mary Eva Wood, who was born at Ipava, Illinois, August 19, 1872, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Wood, who were natives of Ohio and became early settlers of Ipava. Her father was a soldier in the Civil war, going to the front as musician but returning as hospital steward. He is still living at Ipava but Mrs. Wood, who in her maidenhood was Miss Sarah Elizabeth Farquhar, died there in 1881. Their children were Joseph Russell, Ann Elizabeth, Mary Eva, Katharine and Susanna. The death of Mrs. Mary Eva Willis occurred December 16th, 1910, when she was but thirty-eight years of age. She left one child, a daughter, Sarah Louise, born October 21, 1908.

Mr. Willis is a member of the Presbyterian church, as were both of his his wives, and in the work of the church he is much interested, contributing generously to its support. He belongs to Veritas Lodge, I. O. O. F., also to the Modern Woodmen Camp. His position concerning political questions has never been an equivocal one. He is a republican and while residing in Fulton county he served as village clerk of Ipava and was city treasurer of Astoria and also supervisor from Astoria township. There have been no spectacular phases in his life. He has pursued the even tenor of his way, quietly and capably conducting his business interests, his energy, careful management and determination constituting salient forces which have brought him substantial success. At the same time he belongs to that class of citizens who promote the public prosperity in advancing individual interests.

G. W. DUNBAR.

G. W. Dunbar is one of the successful and progressive farmers of Henderson township. He was born in La Fayette, Stark county, Illinois, March 8, 1846, his parents being George and Millie (Collins) Dunbar, both natives of Kentucky, who came to Illinois in 1826 and settled in Stark county on a farm which they had previously purchased. Twenty-two years later they removed to Knox county and again engaged in agricultural pursuits, continuing here up to the time Mr. Dunbar retired from active life. His death occurred in Galesburg in 1903. In politics he was a republican and looked upon the policies of that party as being most conducive to efficient government. In religious faith he was a member of the Free Methodist church.

G. W. Dunbar received his education in the common schools, and in March, 1864, enlisted in Company K, Eighty-third Regular Illinois Volunteers, serving until the close of the war. He was discharged at Springfield, Illinois, in July, 1865, and immediately engaged in farming. At the age of twenty-one years he started upon his independent career by purchasing the farm upon which he still resides and which comprises one hundred and thirty acres. He carries on general farming and also raises cattle and hogs. In addition to his agricultural pursuits, for thirty years he has engaged in the machine and threshing business. The well developed condition of his farm and the profitable crops which he harvests annually attest to his ability as an agriculturist.

Mr. Dunbar has been twice married. In September, 1867, occurred his marriage to Nancy Hogan, the daughter of William and Martha Hogan, natives of Knox county, where Mr. Hogan owned a sawmill. They are both deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar were the parents of three children, only one of whom survives, Mrs. Eva Henderson, who is engaged in the dressmaking business. Mrs. Dunbar died in 1871. In 1873 occurred Mr. Dunbar's marriage to Eva McElhaney, the daughter of James and Rose (Dubbs) McElhaney, both deceased. Mr. McElhaney was a harness maker by trade and resided in Knox county. To Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar three children were born, namely: Verna, who is the wife of Henry Barr, a coal miner, and resides in Mathersville, Illinois; Lola, who is the wife of R. E. Davidson, a merchant of Henderson, by whom she has one child, Doris; and Archie, an agriculturist, who is married and resides in Henderson.

Mr. Dunbar is a republican, and is a member of the Methodist church. His activities have always been along the lines of progress, and the well developed condition of his farm is indicative of his successful agricultural methods. Having been a resident of Knox county during practically his whole life, he has been identified with many of the plans for improvement in the county and in every undertaking has proven his worth and ability.

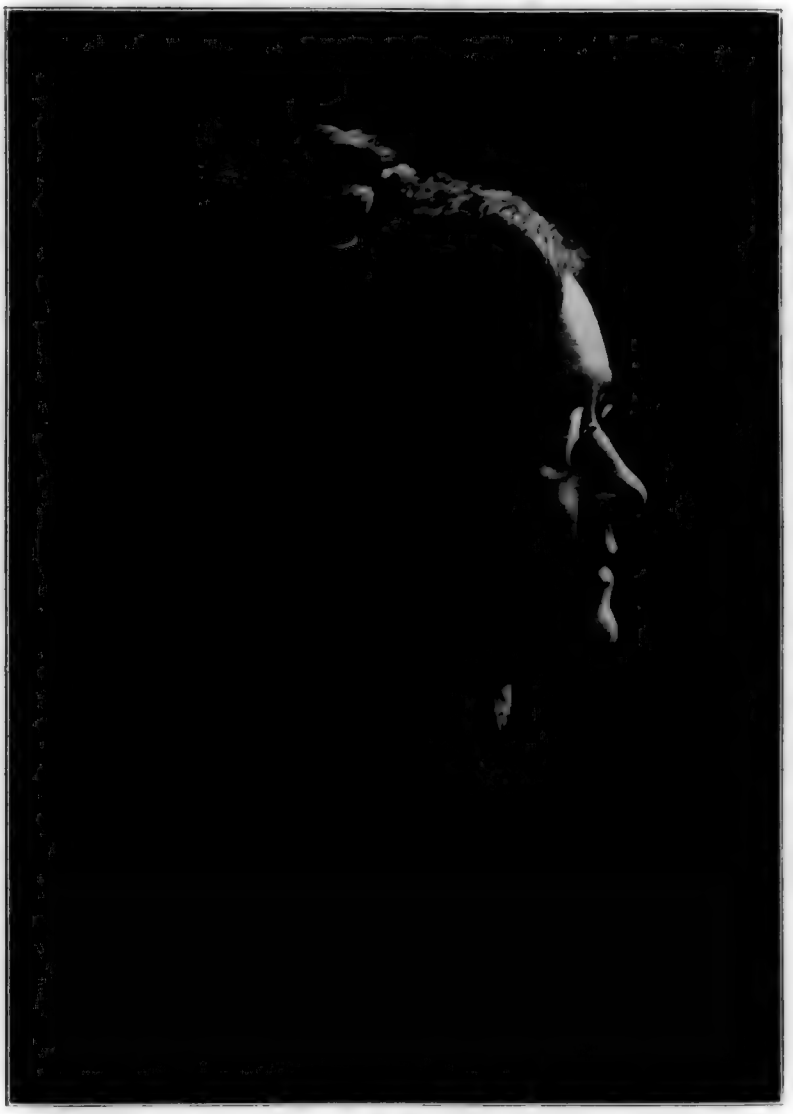
WILLIAM E. DUNN.

William E. Dunn, who is living retired on his farm located on section 24, Rio township, was born in Lewis county, New York, on the 24th of May, 1852. He is a son of Frederick J. and Susan P. (Wetmore) Dunn, who were born and reared in Oneida county, New York, the father's natal day being May 22, 1819. They were married 1847 or 1848, continuing to make their home in the Empire state until 1853, when they came to Knox county, locating on a farm in Ontario township. When they first settled here the father worked in a sawmill in Rio township, but he subsequently purchased a farm to the further development of which he devoted his energies for many years. He was given the advantages of a good education and taught school during his younger days both in his native state and Knox county. During the war he was collector in the country and after the close of hostilities he entered the ministry of the United Brethren church, but continued to operate his farm. In the early '60s he was ordained and thereafter gave his entire attention to his ministerial duties. Mr. Dunn, who has attained the venerable age of ninety-three years, now makes his home in Knoxville, where he has been residing since 1907. The mother, however, died on March 24, 1864 and in 1865, the father married Maria Rine, of Henderson township, this county. She was a native of Pennsylvania and of German parentage. She passed away in February, 1894, and in 1896, Mr. Dunn was united in marriage to his present wife, formerly Miss Maggie Wolloch. Four children were born to Mr. Dunn and his first wife, our subject being the second in order of birth, and two of his second marriage. The paternal grandfather was David Dunn, who was born in the Empire state on November 14, 1791. He came to Knox county in 1853 and passed the rest of his life in this county, where he engaged in farming.

As he was only a child one year of age when his parents brought him to Knox county, the memories of William E. Dunn's entire life are associated with the scenes familiar to his manhood. He was educated in the district schools, and immediately after laying aside his text-books gave his entire attention to farming. Agricultural pursuits have ever engaged his attention with the exception of three years, when he worked on the railroad and also followed the carpenter's trade. He is now living on the old home farm, containing eighty acres, which is being operated by his son. Here for many years, Mr. Dunn engaged in general farming and stock-raising, and was extensively engaged in the feeding and marketing of hogs.



On the 5th of March, 1885, he was united in marriage to Miss Addie C. Haskins, a daughter of Cyrus and Harriet (Case) Haskins. The maternal grandparents were Erastus and Parmelia (Grafton) Case, who came west and passed their latter days with Mr. and Mrs. Haskins. The families originally came from Vermont, whence they removed to Illinois, Mr. and Mrs. Haskins locating on a farm in Ontario township, Knox county, in 1853. Two sons have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Dunn. Roswell E., who received a high-school education, married Hattie Carr of Ontario township, a daughter of the Rev. James S. Carr, minister of the Ontario Congregational church, and they have two children: Maurice and Ralph. Clark A., who is the younger, is living at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunn hold membership in the Congregational church of Ontario township, and fraternally he is a member of Oneida Lodge, No. 337, F. & A. M. and also the Knights of Pythias. His political support he gives to the republican party and has always taken an active interest in affairs of the township. He was school director for fifteen years and trustee for three, while for five he discharged the duties of assessor. Mr. Dunn continues to live on the farm but has retired from the active work of the fields, which are now being cultivated by his eldest son. The greater part of his life has been passed in the immediate vicinity of his present home, where he enjoys a large and favorable acquaintance.

ISRAEL JOHN HARRIS.

A prominent citizen of Abingdon and one whose family name has been connected with the history of this locality for four decades past, is Israel John Harris, a member of the firm of Craig & Harris; stone cutters and dealers in monuments. He traces his lineage back five generations to colonial days in the early part of the eighteenth century and to the days of the American Revolution, when one of his ancestors brought luster to the family name by his unfaltering devotion to the American cause and his prowess throughout the struggle. Israel John Harris was the son of Joseph and Matilda C. (Hart) Harris. His father, Joseph Harris, was a son of James and Rebecca C. (Jennings) Harris, a grandson of Israel and Betsy (Mead) Harris, a great-grandson of Israel and Sarah (Morse) Harris, and a great-great-grandson of John and Rachel (Moss) Harris. Of these antecedents Israel Harris, the great-great-grandfather of the present member of the family bearing this name, was born at Cornwall, Connecticut, on February 16, 1746. Concerning his participation in the war of the Rebellion the Old Northwest, a genealogical quarterly, of April, 1898, has the following to say: "In May, 1775, he joined the famous body of young patriots afterwards known as the Green Mountain Boys and, as orderly sergeant, assisted in the daring rush to and the capture of Fort Ticonderoga, serving with Seth Warner and probably sharing later in the outlawry of the leaders of the regiment which by its success opened the way for the ill-fated expedition of Montgomery and furnished supplies for the siege of Boston. He was still with Warner's forces when that commander joined General Stark near Bennington, Vermont, in the late summer of 1777 and defeated the efforts of Colonel Baum to seize the supplies laid up at that place for the patriot forces, a defeat which caused the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga two months later. Early in 1778 he was made lieutenant and for bravery on the battlefield given his commission as captain in the Old

MRS. I. J. HARRIS

I. J. HARRIS

Continentals in 1779. In October, 1780, owing to complete disability, the result of wounds and exposure, he was honorably discharged and returned to his former home where he remained until 1782, when he removed to Rutland, Vermont. His record as a brave soldier and, above all, his connection with the most famous band of partisan troops the north could boast of, made him an instant leader in that village and one of its most influential citizens."

Israel J. Harris, the subject of this biography, who is justly proud of the honorable record of his illustrious forefathers, was born in Elba township, Knox county, Illinois, October 24, 1857. His father was born in Montgomery county, Ohio, April 17, 1827, and his mother was born in Preble county, Ohio, August 6, 1829. They were married in Rochester, Peoria county, Illinois, where his mother was living at the time, having accompanied her parents thither when she was a child. His father came to Illinois in 1853, when a young man, and located on the west half of section 21, in Elba township, Knox county, where he bought three hundred and twenty acres of land which he cultivated. From time to time he increased his holdings by additional purchases until he owned at one time five quarter sections. Here he resided until the fall of 1868 when he removed to a farm west of Abingdon, living there one year. Then he came to Abingdon to reside, remaining there until his death April 20, 1883. His wife died October 13, 1901. His father was a republican in politics and served one term as justice of the peace in 1856. He voted for Lincoln when elected for the first term. He was a member of the Christian church and, while the war was in progress, on account of his rigid religious scruples, came to the stern conviction that war was wrong. Having taken this stand, he went one step further and, feeling his opposition to the national policy of union even at the cost of war, he voluntarily denied himself the right of the ballot. For this reason he did not vote again for a federal officer until Garfield's campaign when, influenced by the noble Christian life of Garfield, he felt justified in voting for him.

Israel J. Harris was reared at home and began his schooling in the Elba Center district school. For certain reasons it seemed best to his parents, however, to keep him at home. Consequently he was withdrawn after three days at school and his mother undertook his training and education at home. At the end of the school term it was found that he had advanced in his studies far beyond his sister who had been attending the district school. His mother therefore taught both children after that until their removal to Abingdon, when Israel, then in his twelfth year, was fitted to enter old Abingdon College. During his career in this institution his studies were frequently interrupted on account of ill health, so that he was not quite able to complete the course. As a variation from studying he began to teach in 1876, at the age of nineteen, and continued teaching at intervals and attending school until his father's death in 1883. He then took charge of the operation of the farm and pursued agricultural occupations till 1889 when he returned to the schoolroom, teaching until the spring of 1896 when he was stricken with a complete nervous breakdown making him an invalid for four years. At the end of this time, his health being once more restored, he engaged in his present business of monument dealing and became identified with the firm of Craig & Harris.

The marriage of Mr. Harris and Miss Emma Nelson was solemnized September 1, 1887. She was a daughter of Swan Nelson, a resident of Knoxville but later a farmer of Cedar township near Abingdon, and now deceased. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Harris and they are in order of their births: Joseph Victor, graduated from the Abingdon high school with the class of 1906, who is a reporter on the Galesburg Mail; Verna Pernella, graduated from the Abingdon high school with the class of 1911, who will enter the teaching profession this fall; Olive Caroline, a member of her sister's class, graduated in 1911, who will either teach or enter college this fall; Yerda Thresa, who is a student in high school; and Israel J., Jr., the youngest in the family.

Mr. Harris gives his political allegiance to the republicans but has strong prohibition and anti-saloon proclivities. He served for two terms as alderman from the second ward. In his earlier years he was a member of the Christian church, the faith in which he was brought up, but a schism in the church in 1883 caused him to leave it. Later he and his family became members of the Congregational church, in which he is a deacon at the present time. For a number of years he was the superintendent of the Sunday school and on his retirement in 1909 was presented by the school with a handsome silver loving cup which he prizes very highly. He was president of the Knox County Sunday School Association for two years and is now the vice-president of this association.

The house in which Mr. Harris and his family are now residing and which he remodeled in 1902 is the original Harris homestead bought by his father, Joseph Harris, in 1869. The old Harris farm west of Abingdon has for the most part been laid out in town lots and is now known as the Harris addition of Abingdon. Throughout his career Mr. Harris has been an exponent of a high code of business as well as social ethics, living an exemplary life that makes him conspicuously deserving of the public trust placed in him as one of Abingdon's leading citizens.

CHARLES C. REYNOLDS.

Charles C. Reynolds was born in Ontario township, on the 14th of June, 1870, his parents being Alvah and Susan (Hayden) Reynolds. The father, who was a carpenter by trade, was born on the 22d of May, 1830, at Bedford, Westchester county, New York, and the mother's birth occurred in Indiana in 1839. Alvah Reynolds, who has been engaged in agricultural pursuits, followed the carpenter's trade for thirteen years after starting to earn his own livelihood at the age of sixteen. His marriage occurred in Illinois, on the 10th of May, 1859, to Susan Hayden, a daughter of Jonathan and Hulda (Reeves) Hayden, of Henry county, where they settled in 1853. He began his independent agricultural career by purchasing one hundred and sixty acres of land in Ontario township and was the owner of seven hundred and twenty acres upon his retirement. In 1893 he gave eighty acres of land to each of his children and discontinued active farming. He had been most successful in stock-raising and had brought his farm under a high state of cultivation. In politics he is a republican and has served as school director of his district for thirty-six years.

Charles C. Reynolds received his education in the common and high schools of Oneida, the Abingdon Normal school and Hedding College. After discontinuing his studies he engaged in agricultural pursuits and has followed this occupation ever since, at first being employed by his father and later working independently.

Mr. Reynolds was married on the 25th of December, 1901, to Miss Edith Ward, a daughter of Frank and Nellie (Abernathy) Ward. Mrs. Ward, who was of Scotch descent, belonged to one of the pioneer families of the county, the father having come while the Indians were still here. Mrs. Reynolds' brother Frank is a resident of the township and Amos Ward, who came to the county in 1838, served as county commissioner and as justice of the peace. To Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds four children were born, Nellie B., M. Ward, Birdice L. and Helen E. Mrs. Reynolds' death occurred in May, 1896, on the home place.

In politics Mr. Reynolds is a stanch republican, believing that the policies of that party are most conducive to good government. He also holds membership in the Christian church of Ontario township and has served as school director in his district. He is one of Ontario township's enterprising men and has contributed much toward the general welfare of the community, where he is held in high esteem and is numbered among its substantial agriculturists and representative citizens.

HARMAN J. KUNKEL.

Harman J. Kunkel, who owns and operates the largest gristmill not only in Knox county but in this section of the state, is one of Wataga's self-made men, having begun here in his early youth with no capital save his untiring energy and determination. He was born in Cashtown, Adair county, Pennsylvania, on the 27th of October, 1872, and is a son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Smith) Kunkel, both of whom are now deceased, the father having passed away in 1877 and the mother in 1879. Joseph Kunkel, who was a veteran of the Civil war, was a blacksmith by trade but he had been educated for a music teacher, which vocation he sometimes followed while he also engaged in farming. Five of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Kunkel are still living, those beside our subject being as follows: Sarah, the wife of George Kadel, now deceased, of Waynesboro, Pennsylvania; Mary, the wife of Harry E. Smith, of Knoxville; John, who is a resident of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania; and Irwin, who is living in Wellsville, Pennsylvania.

Left an orphan at the age of seven years, Harman J. Kunkel was reared in the county of his birth, whose common schools he attended until he was thirteen, during which time he also worked on a farm. After laying aside his text-books he apprenticed himself to the carpenter's trade, serving for three years, at the expiration of which period he came west. He was only a youth of sixteen when he came to Knox county and first located at Wykoff, near Wataga, where he worked at his trade for fifty cents per day. He subsequently went to Galesburg, where he engaged as carpenter for two years, returning to Wataga, where he farmed until his marriage in 1893. During the succeeding five years he operated a farm in the vicinity of Wataga, but later he bought a place which he has sold, on moving to Wataga, where he is now residing. In 1907 he purchased a flour and feed mill here and soon thereafter withdrew from his agricultural pursuits, giving his undivided attention to the operation of his mill. This proved to be a very lucrative undertaking and on the 30th of March, 1911, he extended the scope of his activities by becoming the owner of the mill belonging to the estate of Warden & Son. He has one of the finest plants in this part of the state, the capacity being far greater than that of any other mill in his vicinity, while it is fully equipped with all modern machinery. Mr. Kunkel has been very successful in all of his undertakings and in addition to his mill is the owner of the electric light plant in Wataga, which he installed in May, 1909. Such success as has come to him has been the result of his own intelligently directed effort and unceasing application, as he began his career in Knox county without either capital or influence, but he possessed those qualities that invariably win: industry and determination of purpose.

Mr. Kunkel's plans for a home of his own had their culmination in his marriage, in October, 1893, to Miss Minnie A. Morgan, of Wataga, Illinois. Mrs. Kunkel is a daughter of Abram and Elizabeth Morgan, both of whom are now deceased. The father was a coal miner. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Kunkel there have been born the following children: Sarah Elizabeth, who is sixteen; Mary Frances, now fourteen; John Morgan, who is thirteen; Beulah Fern, nine years of age; Harry, who is six; and George Harman, who has passed the fourth anniversary of his birth.

The family attend the services of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which the mother is a member, and Mr. Kunkel is an active member of a large number of fraternal organizations. He is affiliated with the Masonic order through his membership in Wataga Lodge, No. 291, A. F. & A. M.; and he is an Odd Fellow, his local connection with this society being through Wataga Lodge, No. 598, I. O. O. F., and he also belongs to the Odd Fellows encampment at Galesburg. The Mystic Workers; Brotherhood of American Yeomen; and United Commercial Travelers, Galesburg Lodge, No. 269, claim his affiliation also. Political activities have never occupied much of Mr. Kunkel's attention his entire time and thought having been concentrated upon the development of his personal interests, in which he has met with notable success. However, he is always ready to give his cooperation or indorsement to any movement he deems qualified to advance the community or to promote municipal enterprises.

ALEXANDER GEHRING.

Alexander Gehring, a well known and successful farmer and stock-raiser of Sparta township, Knox county, Illinois, is still engaged in cultivating the farm on which he has lived for nearly forty-six years. His birth occurred in Baden, Germany, on the 1st of December, 1844. His father, Anthony G., was born March 12, 1821, and his mother, whose maiden name was Mary Mosier, was born June 24, 1823. They came to America and settled in Sparta township in 1857. His paternal grandparents were Bennett and Elizabeth (Closman) Gehring and his great-grandparents were Mathias and Susan Gehring. His maternal grandparents were Jacob and Mary Mosier. Alexander Gehring was the oldest of three children, a sister who is dead, and a brother named Martin, a farmer in Sparta township, with whom his mother makes her home.

Alexander Gehring began his education in Germany, continuing his studies for a little time after coming to this country. When a mere boy, at the age of fourteen, he commenced to work on the farm, first for his father and later hiring out to a neighbor. At twenty-one he began to work for himself and in 1867, after his marriage, took possession of the farm which he is now operating. In addition to general farming he devotes much time to stock-raising in which pursuit he has been very successful. Born to his calling he loves his work and the interests which fill a farmer's life and has no wish to retire while his farm yields him the comfortable income which he now enjoys.

The marriage of Alexander Gehring to Miss Jerusha Squires, of Trumbull county, Ohio, occurred May 30, 1867. Her father, Ira Squires, was born in Ireland in 1818 and came to America when six years old. Her mother, Caroline Stewart was born in 1820 of Scotch parentage. When Mrs. Alexander Gehring was three years old her parents died whereupon she was reared by Isaac and Sarah (Hillergast) Baker. She was the granddaughter of Jason and Dorothea (Tew) Squires. Mrs. Gehring has one brother, Albert Squires, who lives at her home.

In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gehring were four children. Carrie, who remained single and was living at home, died in August, 1911, at the age of thirty-four, at Greenville, Pennsylvania, while on a visit. She was a very devout woman and an untiring worker in the Methodist Episcopal church. She was an officer in the missionary society of her church and a member of the Epworth League. Alice, the wife of James Parkinson, a farmer in Kansas, is the mother of five children. Sarah Luella, the wife of Benjamin Morgan of Wataga, Illinois, has four children. Ira Anthony, married to Effie Richmond, lives in Galesburg and is the father of two children.

The Gehring family holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal church of Wataga, Illinois, in which Mr. Gehring is a steward and a trustee. In his political views he is a republican and has always been an ardent worker for his party. He served as roadmaster for several terms and was on the school board three terms. Coming to this locality more than fifty years ago, Alexander Gehring has not only witnessed the agricultural growth and development of Knox county but has been a large contributor to the prosperity for which this community is noted.

OLIVER SWANSON.

Oliver Swanson was born on the 16th of February, 1853, at Solvesborg, a town in the southern part of Sweden, his parents being Swan and Karna (Person) Olson. The father, whose birth occurred in 1825, engaged in agricultural pursuits in Sweden until his death, which occurred when his son Oliver was a child of but two years. Both mother and father spent their entire lives in Sweden. Oliver Swanson received his education in the common schools of his native land and at the age of eighteen years, after having assisted on the home farm, came to America settling at Woodhull. For a time he worked out by the month and then came to Ontario township where he settled on a farm in 1881. In 1893 he came to his present home. This property consists of eighty acres and has been his residence ever since. Although he devotes his time and energy principally to general farming, he also raises shorthorn cattle and feeds hogs and cattle for the market. In these various branches he is meeting with the success, which is the reward of persistent and diligent labor. On the 12th of April, 1879, Mr. Swanson was married to Marie Anderson, a resident of Knox county, and a daughter of Anders and Anna (Johnson) Anderson, both of whom were natives of Sweden, where they were engaged in farming. The father died in Sweden and the mother came to Henry county, in 1875. They were the parents of five children. To Mr. and Mrs. Swanson three children have been born: Hattie S., who is the wife of William Sebastian, a resident farmer of Henry county; Hartwick, whose birth occurred in 1884 and who died in January 1905; and Florence, who is attending high school in Altona, Illinois.

In politics Mr. Swanson gives his support to the men and measures of the republican party and has served as road commissioner and is assessor at the present time. In religious faith he holds membership in the Lutheran church of Altona. By his earnest work and diligent application to his agricultural pursuits and by his interest and furthering of all measures pertaining to the higher social and moral development of the community, Mr. Swanson has become recognized as a citizen of substantial and honorable worth.

FRANKLIN PIERCE TYLER, M. D.

Dr. Franklin Pierce Tyler, engaged in the general practice of medicine in Galesburg, was born in Rock Island county, Illinois, June 21, 1854, his parents being Dr. Truman Murray and Mary Ann (Cutler) Tyler. The family home was first established in Galesburg in 1862. The father was born in the state of New York in 1804 and the mother's birth occurred in Massachusetts in 1810. In early manhood he prepared for the practice of medicine and for a time followed his profession in Ohio, after which he came to Illinois, settling in Illinois City. His next place of residence was in Edgington, this state, and afterward he lived for a time at Rock Island, coming to Galesburg in 1862. Here he opened an office and continued in active practice until his life's labors were ended in death twenty-one years later. He was widely known as a capable physician whose scientific knowledge was supplemented by broad humanitarian principles, thus making his work of great worth in the world. His widow survived him and died at the home of her son, Dr. Tyler, in Clifton, Kansas. Dr. Truman Tyler, Sr., was a democrat in his political views and fraternally was connected with the Masons, which order found him an exemplary representative. Both he and his wife were members of the Universalist church and were people of kindly purpose and of high principles. In their family were three children, Stella Louise, the elder, who died in 1908; and Christopher C., who like our subject is also a resident of Galesburg.

DR. F. P. TYLER

to America settling at Woodhull. For a time he worked out by the month and then came to Ontario township where he settled on a farm in 1881. In 1893 he came to his present home. This property consists of eighty acres and has been his residence ever since. Although he devotes his time and energy principally to general farming, he also raises shorthorn cattle and feeds hogs and cattle for the market. In these various branches he is meeting with the success, which is the reward of persistent and diligent labor. On the 12th of April, 1879, Mr. Swanson was married to Marie Anderson, a resident of Knox county, and a daughter of Anders and Anna (Johnson) Anderson, both of whom were natives of Sweden, where they were engaged in farming. The father died in Sweden and the mother came to Henry county, in 1875. They were the parents of five children. To Mr. and Mrs. Swanson three children have been born: Hattie S., who is the wife of William Sebastian, a resident farmer of Henry county; Hartwick, whose birth occurred in 1884 and who died in January 1905; and Florence, who is attending high school in Altona, Illinois.

In politics Mr. Swanson gives his support to the men and measures of the republican party and has served as road commissioner and is assessor at the present time. In religious faith he holds membership in the Lutheran church of Altona. By his earnest work and diligent application to his agricultural pursuits and by his interest and furthering of all measures pertaining to the higher social and moral development of the community, Mr. Swanson has become recognized as a citizen of substantial and honorable worth.

FRANKLIN PIERCE TYLER, M. D.

Dr. Franklin Pierce Tyler, engaged in the general practice of medicine in Galesburg, was born in Rock Island county, Illinois, June 21, 1854, his parents being Dr. Truman Murray and Mary Ann (Cutler) Tyler. The family home was first established in Galesburg in 1862. The father was born in the state of New York in 1804 and the mother's birth occurred in Massachusetts in 1810. In early manhood he prepared for the practice of medicine and for a time followed his profession in Ohio, after which he came to Illinois, settling in Illinois City. His next place of residence was in Edgington, this state, and afterward he lived for a time at Rock Island, coming to Galesburg in 1862. Here he opened an office and continued in active practice until his life's labors were ended in death twenty-one years later. He was widely known as a capable physician whose scientific knowledge was supplemented by broad humanitarian principles, thus making his work of great worth in the world. His widow survived him and died at the home of her son, Dr. Tyler, in Clifton, Kansas. Dr. Truman Tyler, Sr., was a democrat in his political views and fraternally was connected with the Masons, which order found him an exemplary representative. Both he and his wife were members of the Universalist church and were people of kindly purpose and of high principles. In their family were three children, Stella Louise, the elder, who died in 1908; and Christopher C., who like our subject is also a resident of Galesburg.

DR. F. P. TYLER

Dr. Tyler, Jr., whose name introduces this record, was a lad of but eight years when the family removed to this city, so that his education was largely acquired here. After attending the public schools, he entered Lombard University, where he pursued his more specifically literary course. His professional training was received in Rush Medical College, from which he was graduated with the class of 1885. He then went to Clifton, Kansas, where he opened an office and continued in active practice for twelve years. On the expiration of that period he returned to Galesburg, where he still follows his profession as a general practitioner, having comprehensive knowledge of the principles of medicine and surgery, while his broad and extended experience has added greatly to his efficiency.

On the 12th of October, 1886, occurred the marriage of Dr. Tyler and Miss Emilia Brewer Laux, a daughter of Professor Carl Rupert Laux, of Galesburg. The children of this marriage are: Carl Rupert, who was born in Clifton, Kansas, in September, 1887; and Cecil May, also a native of Clifton. Both are still at home. Mrs. Tyler is a member of the First Congregational church and Dr. Tyler holds membership with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Knights and Ladies of Security. His political allegiance is given to the democratic party but without desire for office, his ballot merely expressing his approval of the policies and principles of the party. He belongs to the city and county medical societies and is ever deeply interested in anything that tends to bring to man the key to the mystery of life. He is extremely careful and conscientious in all of his professional work and his ability has gained for him a liberal patronage.

BENJAMIN THOMAS HART.

The commercial activity of Altona finds a worthy representative in Benjamin Thomas Hart, who is now proprietor of a drug store. He has conducted this for three years and is accorded a good patronage. He was born at Camp Point, Illinois, December 3, 1877. The early ancestral history of the family has been lost. It is supposed, however, that the great-grandfather was stolen by the Indians and was carried to Kentucky. The grandfather, Thomas W. Hart, was a native of that state. He married Miss Wheeler and they became parents of a son, George M. Hart, who was born in Frankfort, Kentucky, January 29, 1837. When a boy of six years he accompanied his parents on their removal to Quincy, Illinois, where his boyhood days were passed. He learned and followed the cooper's trade and from Quincy removed to Camp Point, Illinois, being at that time twenty years of age. This was some time prior to 1859. In the early '60s he walked from Quincy to Denver, Colorado, starting with an emigrant train that traveled by way of Leavenworth. At length he returned to Camp Point, Illinois, where he engaged in the cooperage business for many years but is now living retired. He married Rhoda Bryant, who also survives and is now sixty-eight years of age, her birth occurring on the 20th of July, 1843, in Kentucky. She was a daughter of Moses Bryant. Unto him and his wife were born six children of whom Benjamin T. Hart and two sisters are now living. The sisters are: Elitha May, the wife of Charles H. Montgomery, of Council Bluffs, Iowa; and Hazel Gertrude, who is teaching in the Loraine high school. Three of the children died in infancy.

Benjamin Thomas Hart spent his youthful days in his parents' home and after his education was over, began clerking in a drug store at Camp Point on the 1st of March, 1892. For two years he attended the Chicago College of Pharmacy and, in May, 1899, came to Altona where he conducted a drug business for two years. He then returned to Chicago where he finished his course of study with the class of 1902. On locating in Altona he engaged in clerking where he now carries on business for himself. He also spent a year in Burt's drug store in Galesburg and in August, 1904, purchased his present drug store at Altona. He has also been engaged in the restaurant business at Altona since 1908 and both branches have proven profitable. He has a well appointed and well conducted establishment and his business methods are such as will bear the closest investigation and scrutiny.

On the 20th of April, 1902, Mr. Hart was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Updike, who was born in Altona, February 12, 1879, and is a daughter of Josiah W. and Edith (Van Scyok) Updike, the father a pioneer resident of this county. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hart have been born two children: Harry Worth, who was born February 8, 1903; and Marjory Lois, born December 20, 1905. Mr. Hart and his wife are members of the Methodist church of Altona and at the present time he is financial secretary of the church. Fraternally he is a Mason, belonging to Altona Lodge, No. 330, F. & A. M. He also holds membership with Altona Camp, No. 3737, M. W. A., of which he is past consul, and he likewise belongs to the Illinois Pharmaceutical Association. He is a young man and yet, in business and in social life, he has made a record which is creditable and enviable, gaining for him the respect and admiration of his fellowmen.

FRANK C. KRANS.

Trained in the printing trade and in editorial work, Frank C. Krans is well qualified to fill the position which he now occupies as editor and manager of the Oneida News, a weekly paper published in Oneida, Knox county, Illinois. During a period covering more than twenty years he has gained his experience in Illinois, in Nebraska, Oregon and Washington, coming in contact with newspapermen and printers from every section of the country, since the members of this fraternity are of a roving disposition fond of seeking new scenes for their field of labor. Frank C. Krans was born July 6, 1870, in Galva, Illinois, a son of O. and Christiana (Aspequist) Krans, natives of Sweden. The father came to America with his parents when he was a young man and made his way to a Swedish settlement at Bishop's Hill, walking all the way from Chicago. When a boy he assisted in hauling the lumber from Bishop's Hill to Galva when the first building was erected in the latter town. At the outbreak of the war he enlisted in Company D, of the Fifty-seventh Volunteer Infantry of Illinois, from Princeton. At the close of the war he returned to Galva, Illinois, where he followed his trade as painter and decorator until ten years ago when he removed to Altona, Illinois, and has resided there ever since, still actively interested in his work. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic of Galva.

Reared at home Frank C. Krans was educated in the common schools and in the high school of Galva. He prepared himself for his career by acting as assistant on the Galva News learning the many varied features of the work. He then went to Altona where he took charge of a paper started by C. F. McDonough and continued in the management of the same for two years, when he decided to gratify his desire to move farther west and secured employment in Ogalalla, Nebraska. A year later he went to the Pacific coast and remained there, working at the printer trade for five years. In the fall of 1893 he returned to Illinois and purchased the Altona Record which he conducted until 1906 when he sold it to Mills & Company. Thereupon he went to Kewanee, Illinois, where he held a responsible position on the Star Courier and labored there until 1911, serving one term of this time as president of the Typographical Union of Kewanee. During the current year he bought an interest in a stock company in Oneida, organized in 1900, which publishes a weekly, the Oneida News, and of this he became editor and manager. He is spirited and enthusiastic in his work and in the brief period since coming to this position has already demonstrated his efficiency.

The marriage of Mr. Krans and Miss Anna Olson, of Altona, was celebrated October 2, 1898. She is a daughter of Peter Olson and obtained her education in the grammar and high schools of Altona and the Normal school of Bushnell, after which she followed the vocation of teaching for a number of years. She gave that up, however, and entered the Hospital Training School at Galesburg where she was fitted for the profession of nursing and after her graduation was given a position on their staff. Mr. and Mrs. Krans are the parents of three children: Kenneth, who is attending school, and two younger ones, John and Walton.

Mr. Krans is a republican in his political affiliations and served as town clerk for five years during his residence in Altona and also as village clerk for an equal period of time, while as a member of the council he gave his efforts to the advancement of the welfare of the community. He is a member of the Masonic order, being connected with Lodge No. 320, F. & A. M., of Altona and the Knights of Pythias, of Oneida, whose beneficent principles he tries to follow in all the relations of his daily life.

HENRY WELCH.

Henry Welch, who is a resident of Ontario township, has been connected with agricultural interests in Knox county throughout his life. He was born in Rio township, March 6, 1871, and is the son of John and Ann Welch, the former, whose birth occurred May 28, 1836, a native of Kings county, Ireland, and the latter a native of New York. John Welch, whose parents, John and Sarah (Clarke) Welch, were agriculturists in Ireland and there resided all their life, worked on the farm and received a common-school education while at home, and after emigrating to this country, in 1850, continued in agricultural pursuits. Going to Galesburg in 1857, he worked out by the day until he removed to Rio township in 1862, at which time he rented a farm. After cultivating this for some time, he purchased two hundred acres of land near by and has ever since made that farm his home although he now rents it and lives retired. This farm is a high tribute to his ability and labor and stands as evidence of his rise from a day laborer, husking corn at fifty cents per day to a successful agriculturist, who has acquired a competence sufficient to provide for a comfortable retired life. Mr. and Mrs. Welch have been the parents of six children, namely: Mrs. Mary Stafford, a widow, who is the mother of two children, Clare and William; Henry, the subject of this sketch; Charles, who is married to Winiferd Barry, the daughter of James Barry, and who is the mother of one child, Anna May, of Sparta township; Margaret, who is the wife of J. H. Rittenhouse, a traveling salesman of Galesburg and to whom two children, Neal and Ruth, have been born; Nellie, the wife of Ira Rice, who conducts a general store at Wataga; and Edward, deceased.

Henry Welch received a common-school education and then worked on his father's farm until he started in life for himself, at the age of twenty-seven years. He began his independent career on a farm in Rio township, which he cultivated for ten years, and, in 1900, he came to Ontario township and purchased the one hundred and fifty-three acres of land comprising his present farm, which is all under high cultivation and returning profitable yields to the labor expended upon it. Mr. Welch is raising grain and general farm products and is also engaged in cattle and hog-raising for the western markets.

On February 2, 1898, occurred Mr. Welch's marriage to Lucy Barry, the daughter of James and Frances (Edwards) Barry, who have long been residents of Knox county. To Mr. and Mrs. Welch three children have been born, Maurice E., Francis M. and Florence L.

Mr. Welch is a democrat and is a member of the Roman Catholic church of Woodhull. In these, as in other relations he is consistently loyal, living in accordance with the highest ideals of citizenship.

ORANGE LOWELL CAMPBELL.

The consensus of public opinion places the name of Orange Lowell Campbell high on the roll of representative and honored residents of Knoxville, where he is now filling the position of postmaster. This is his native town, his birth having here occurred, March 7, 1852. His parents were Elisha and Mary A. (Lowell) Campbell. The father was born in Gallipolis, Ohio, in 1825, and was a son of Dr. John and Mary (Webb) Campbell, both of whom were natives of Virginia, where the grandfather engaged in the practice of medicine, becoming recognized as a prominent member of the profession and a prolific writer who made valuablue contributions to medical literature. His father had been a native of Scotland and Dr. John Campbell displayed in his life many of the sterling characteristics of his Scotch ancestry. At an early day he removed from Virginia to Ohio, settling in Gallipolis, and subsequently he came to Illinois, after emigrating to this country, in 1850, continued in agricultural pursuits. Going to Galesburg in 1857, he worked out by the day until he removed to Rio township in 1862, at which time he rented a farm. After cultivating this for some time, he purchased two hundred acres of land near by and has ever since made that farm his home although he now rents it and lives retired. This farm is a high tribute to his ability and labor and stands as evidence of his rise from a day laborer, husking corn at fifty cents per day to a successful agriculturist, who has acquired a competence sufficient to provide for a comfortable retired life. Mr. and Mrs. Welch have been the parents of six children, namely: Mrs. Mary Stafford, a widow, who is the mother of two children, Clare and William; Henry, the subject of this sketch; Charles, who is married to Winiferd Barry, the daughter of James Barry, and who is the mother of one child, Anna May, of Sparta township; Margaret, who is the wife of J. H. Rittenhouse, a traveling salesman of Galesburg and to whom two children, Neal and Ruth, have been born; Nellie, the wife of Ira Rice, who conducts a general store at Wataga; and Edward, deceased.

O. L. CAMPBELL

Henry Welch received a common-school education and then worked on his father's farm until he started in life for himself, at the age of twenty-seven years. He began his independent career on a farm in Rio township, which he cultivated for ten years, and, in 1900, he came to Ontario township and purchased the one hundred and fifty-three acres of land comprising his present farm, which is all under high cultivation and returning profitable yields to the labor expended upon it. Mr. Welch is raising grain and general farm products and is also engaged in cattle and hog-raising for the western markets.

On February 2, 1898, occurred Mr. Welch's marriage to Lucy Barry, the daughter of James and Frances (Edwards) Barry, who have long been residents of Knox county. To Mr. and Mrs. Welch three children have been born, Maurice E., Francis M. and Florence L.

Mr. Welch is a democrat and is a member of the Roman Catholic church of Woodhull. In these, as in other relations he is consistently loyal, living in accordance with the highest ideals of citizenship.

ORANGE LOWELL CAMPBELL.

The consensus of public opinion places the name of Orange Lowell Campbell high on the roll of representative and honored residents of Knoxville, where he is now filling the position of postmaster. This is his native town, his birth having here occurred, March 7, 1852. His parents were Elisha and Mary A. (Lowell) Campbell. The father was born in Gallipolis, Ohio, in 1825, and was a son of Dr. John and Mary (Webb) Campbell, both of whom were natives of Virginia, where the grandfather engaged in the practice of medicine, becoming recognized as a prominent member of the profession and a prolific writer who made valuablue contributions to medical literature. His father had been a native of Scotland and Dr. John Campbell displayed in his life many of the sterling characteristics of his Scotch ancestry. At an early day he removed from Virginia to Ohio, settling in Gallipolis, and subsequently he came to Illinois, establishing his home in Quincy, where he lived to the time of his death. When a young man he not only practiced medicine but also engaged in the practice of law and, at the time of the war of 1812, manifested his patriotic loyalty to his country by active service in the field. His wide reading made him a well informed man and as a ready writer he discussed through the press many questions of widespread interest.

O. L. CAMPBELL

The maternal grandparents of O. L. Campbell were natives of England, while the paternal grandmother, Mrs. Mary (Webb) Campbell, was of German lineage. Elisha Campbell, the father of O. L. Campbell, spent his youthful days under the parental roof and in early manhood took up the profession of teaching, which he followed successfully in Ohio until his removal to Illinois. He also learned the plasterer's and mason's trades and thus became well qualified for the attainment of success along different lines of activity. It was in 1848 that he became a resident of this state and in May, 1850, he was married in Knoxville to Miss Mary A. Lowell. On coming to the Mississippi valley he had spent a short time in St. Louis, Missouri, and thence made his way to Peoria, Illinois, where he also remained for but a brief period. On the expiration of that time he came to Knoxville, where he followed his trade and also engaged in teaching school. His life was thus busily passed until August, 1862, when he responded to the country's call for troops, enlisting here as a member of Company E, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with which he served for three years. He was appointed corporal of his company and later was advanced to the rank of sergeant. On account of the wounds which he had sustained, he was assigned to a position in the recruiting service, as he was unfit for active field duty, and as such enlisted a company of negro soldiers at Fort Donelson. Following the close of the war he returned to Knoxville, but afterward became a resident of Council Bluffs, Iowa, where he died in 1880, the interment being made, however, in Red Oak, Iowa. His wife survived him until June 2, 1900, passing away at Omaha, Nebraska, and her grave, too, was made at Red Oak. In their family were ten children, five sons and five daughters, as follows: Orange L., who is the eldest in the family; Almira, the second of the family, who was for twenty-one years a teacher in the public schools of Omaha; Clara; Charles, engaged in business in Los Angeles, California; Lloyd, mechanic of Detroit, Michigan, acting as foreman of the paint department of the Chalmers Automobile Company of that city; John and George, both of whom died in infancy; Emma and Louise, twins, deceased; and Ella, also deceased. The first two were teachers in the public schools of Iowa.

Orange L. Campbell pursued his education in the public schools of his native town and, passing through consecutive grades, was eventually graduated from the high school. When a young man he learned the printing trade, which he followed during the summer seasons while continuing his education in the winter months. His first work was in the office of the Knox County Republican, with which paper he continued during the period of the Civil war and until he had completed eight years' service in that connection. He then went to Watseka, Illinois, where he remained for a year, after which he secured a position on one of the leading papers at Quincy, Illinois. Returning to Knoxville, he purchased in 1876 the Knox County Republican, which he edited until 1910, making it one of the progressive country papers of this part of the state, with a good circulation and large advertising patronage. He put aside private business affairs, however, to enter upon public office, being first appointed postmaster under President Harrison and later by Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt, while at the present time he is filling the position by appointment of President Taft. His administration of the office has always been business like and systematic, his course winning the approval of the many patrons of this office. In 1887 he was elected to the position of town clerk and served for eight years. He was also the first secretary and clerk of the public library and for eight years was secretary of the board of education. During seventeen years he served as secretary of the Knox County Agricultural Association and was the first secretary of the Knox County Farmers' Institute, which position he filled for eight years. He is an honored member of the Knox County Old Settlers' Association and has been its secretary for twenty-seven years. His activities have touched the general interests of society along many lines and in every connection he has been found faithful to the trust reposed in him.

Fraternally Mr. Campbell is connected with Pacific Lodge, No. 66, A. F. & A. M., of which he has been the secretary. He belongs also to Raboni Chapter, No. 95, R. A. M., and to Illinois Council, No. 1, which was the first lodge of this kind in the state. He became one of the organizers of the Fraternal Reserves and was its first state vice president. He likewise has membership with the Modern Woodmen of America, with the Sons of Veterans of Galesburg and for two terms was captain of the Knoxville Sons of Veterans, having also been one of the organizers of this society. He is the vice president of the Fifteenth Congressional District Postmasters' Association and is president of the Military Tract Association. All of his varied interests have brought him a wide acquaintance and everywhere he is held in high regard.

On the 19th of June, 1873, in Knoxville, Mr. Campbell was united in marriage to Miss Augusta Stowe Bull, who was born in Milford, Connecticut, July 2, 1851, a daughter of Captain William and Phoebe (Stowe) Bull. Her father came to Knox county at an early day, purchased a farm and resided thereon until his death in 1862. Her mother died in 1909, at the age of eighty-nine years, having spent her last days in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell. The Stowe family of which Mrs. Campbell is a representative in the maternal line came from Milford, Connecticut, and from the same ancestry descended Harriet Beecher Stowe. The great-grandfather of Mrs. Campbell was a soldier of the Revolutionary war under General Washington. Unto Captain and Mrs. But there were born seven children, of whom the Rev. Cornelius Bull was the eldest. He is a minister of the Free Methodist Episcopal church and resides in Fullerton, Kansas. The other members of the family were: Mrs. R. J. Overstreet, of Galesburg; I. T. Bull, living in Shenandoah, Iowa; John S., of Fort Wayne, Indiana; Philip H., of Galesburg; and one, who died in infancy. Mrs. Campbell, also a member of this family, has become the mother of three children, of whom the eldest, Sterling H., now resides in St. Louis, Missouri, being sales agent for the American Railway Equipment Company, in which connection he travels all over the United States. He is a graduate of St. Alban's School of Knoxville. Charlotte W. is vice principal and teacher of language and literature in St. Mary's school. Mary, the youngest, is now a student in that school. Both Mr. and Mrs. Campbell hold membership in the Presbyterian church and he is a member of its choir. Their daughters, Charlotte and Mary, are members of the Episcopal church. In the religious organization to which he belongs Mr. Campbell has always taken an active interest and has served as secretary and treasurer of the Presbyterian Sunday school. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and he has ever been a stalwart champion of its principles. He is also much interested in music, possessing considerable natural talent and ability, and for six years he has been a member of the Galesburg Musical Union. Mr. Campbell has a very wide acquaintance not only in Knox county but in other parts of the state and his sterling worth has won him high regard, while his geniality and cordiality have gained for him enduring friendships. He is popular wherever known and everywhere is spoken of in terms of good-will, confidence and respect.

JOHN SCHWARZ.

John Schwarz, one of the successful farmers and dairymen of Sparta township, Knox county, was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, on the 4th of December, 1866. He is a son of John George Schwarz, who spent the first forty-five years of his life in the fatherland, his birth there occurring on November 14, 1827. His parents were John and Margaret Schwarz, who spent their entire lives in their native land, where they were identified with agricultural pursuits. Left an orphan at the age of seven John George Schwarz was reared by an elder brother until old enough to become self-supporting. For his wife he chose Rosina Moessner, a daughter of Matthew Moessner, a school teacher in Germany. She was also a native of Wurtemberg, her birth occurring on January 3, 1827. Five of the children born of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Schwarz are living, those beside our subject being as follows: Leonard, who is a cooper, Mathias and Michael, all residents of St. Clair county; and Anna Margaret, the wife of Conrad A. Fritz, of Belleville, Illinois. Together with his wife and family John George Schwarz emigrated to the United States in 1872, locating in St. Clair county. There for a time he worked as a laborer, but later by means of his thrift and unceasing energy he was able to buy a small farm that he cultivated until his death on June 16, 1882. The parents were both members of the German Lutheran church and assisted in the organization of the church in the vicinity of their home, Mr. Schwarz being one of the trustees until his death. Although he became a citizen of the United States he never actively participated in political affairs, devoting his entire attention to the development of his personal interests.

Having been only a lad of six years when he emigrated to the United States with his parents John Schwarz obtained practically his entire education in the district schools of St. Clair county, which he attended until he was thirteen years of age. His energies were then directed toward assisting his father in the cultivation of the home farm, where he continued to live until twenty-three years of age. He then came to Knox county, and during the first two years of his residence here he worked as a laborer on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. After his marriage he rented the farm where he is now living, so intelligently directing his efforts in its cultivation that he acquired the means to purchase it in 1890. Mr. Schwarz takes great pride in his homestead and its appearance, giving his personal supervision to everything about his place. His fields are carefully tilled and annually yield abundant harvests in return for his labor, while his dairy business is also proving most lucrative.

Mr. Schwarz has been ably assisted in his efforts by his wife, whose maiden name was Wilhelmina Schultz. She is a native of Galesburg, her birth there occurring on the 22d of October, 1871. Her parents are William and Margaret (Sauter) Schultz, both of whom are still living. The father, who is a blacksmith, was for many years actively engaged in his trade, but having attained the age of sixty-seven is now living retired. The mother is a daughter of Jacob and Dorothea (Zeller) Sauter, the former still living at the venerable age of eighty-seven, but the wife passed away in 1873, when she was fifty-eight. She was a daughter of Christoph and Katherine Zeller, the father a laborer of Lauterberg, Germany, while the parents of Jacob Sauter were Johann and Anna Margaretha (Maier) Sauter. Johann Sauter passed away in 1850 at the age of seventy-eight. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Schwarz there have been born seven children: George William, who is nineteen and living at home; Dorothea Paulina, who is seventeen; Rosa, fourteen; Carolina, who is twelve; Wilhelmina, aged nine; Anna Margaretha, who is seven; and Ruth Irene, aged three weeks.

The family manifest their religious views through their membership in the Lutheran church, while his political support Mr. Schwarz gives to the republican party. He takes an active interest in all matters pertaining to the township and served for thirteen years as a member of the school board, while at the present time he is serving in the capacity of road commissioner. He is held in high esteem in his community where he is known as a straightforward upright man, whose business transactions are always conducted in a fair and honorable manner.

JOHN McMASTER.

John McMaster, who is now living retired in Altona, Illinois, is one of the men whom his fellow citizens regard with honor and respect because his life exemplifies all that is commendable and in accordance with high principles. He was an earnest and diligent laborer and his integrity in any business dealing has never been questioned. He was born on the 15th of May, 1827, at Daldillan, parish of Sorn, Ayrshire, Scotland, and in 1852 came to America with his parents, John and Ann (Struthers) McMaster, the latter being a daughter of James and Mary (Watson) Struthers. The father was the only son of John McMaster, who was an agriculturist of Scotland, his death having occurred at the age of ninety-two years, in 1868, Mrs. McMaster having passed away ten years previous, at the age of eighty-five years. They were the parents of: David, who is living retired in Copley township; George, a resident of Henry county; Thomas, who is living in Walnut Grove township; and John, the subject of this sketch. The McMasters made the trip from their native land in company with the Struthers family and went direct to Chicago and thence overland with teams to Peoria, from which place they set out for Copley township, Knox county. There they built the first log house which was erected in that district on eighty acres of land, which Mr. McMaster and his children brought under such a state of cultivation that it was suitable for a home.

At the age of fourteen years John McMaster began his active career on the home farm. Subsequently he purchased a team of horses and by hard labor and constant saving was soon able to make a home for his parents. After his marriage he bought eighty acres in Walnut Grove township but disposed of it two years later, when he purchased one hundred and sixty acres, which formed the nucleus of the more extensive farm he owned at the time of his retirement in 1898.

Mr. McMaster was married on the 22d of August, 1861, to Miss Lorinda Helen Multer, who is a daughter of Captain Joseph and Susan (Becker) Multer and whose birth occurred at South Worcester, Ostego county, New York, on the 10th of May, 1838. Captain Multer was a veteran of the war of 1812. Mrs. Multer was a daughter of Louis Becker, of Germany, and Joseph Multer was of Dutch descent, his father having been the royal family's physician. Mrs. McMaster came to Knox county to visit her brother in 1860 and was one of thirteen children, her two surviving sisters being: Catherine, the wife of E. Daily, of New York; and Susan, who is the widow of George Payne, of New York. Mr. and Mrs. McMaster became the parents of five children: Chauncey J., who is married to Frances Reed and is living in Walnut Grove township; David N., a resident of Walnut Grove township, who married Miss May Thompson; Anna, who is the wife of Frank Brown, of Galesburg, and has one child, Margaret; John E., also residing in Walnut Grove township, who married Minnie Lock and has two children, Lola M. and Bequeeth; and Mary E., the wife of William Thomson, of Walnut Grove township, and the mother of two children, Helen A., and Mary M.

On the 22d of August, 1911, Mr. and Mrs. McMaster celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, an occasion which gave one hundred and seventy-five of their friends, who had assembled from various parts of the United States and even as far as India, an opportunity to show the regard and esteem in which this worthy couple is held. They were the recipients of the hearty congratulations of their neighbors and of many substantial and valuable gifts. The following poem, which was written and read by J. W. McQueen, gives an idea of the affection felt for Mr. and Mrs. McMaster:

"Fifty years you have walked together
Along the pathway of life,
Amid the storm and shiny weather
You've not faltered in the strife.

"Yes those years have drawn you nearer,
Dearer far than tongue can tell
Have your lives together blended
In the race you have run so well.

"Golden weddings are not common,
Few can reach that auspicious day,
Yours has been a happy concourse
Friends you've made along the way.

"Life without friends would be dreary,
If we lived for ourselves alone
The days would go so long and weary Life a void and empty tomb.

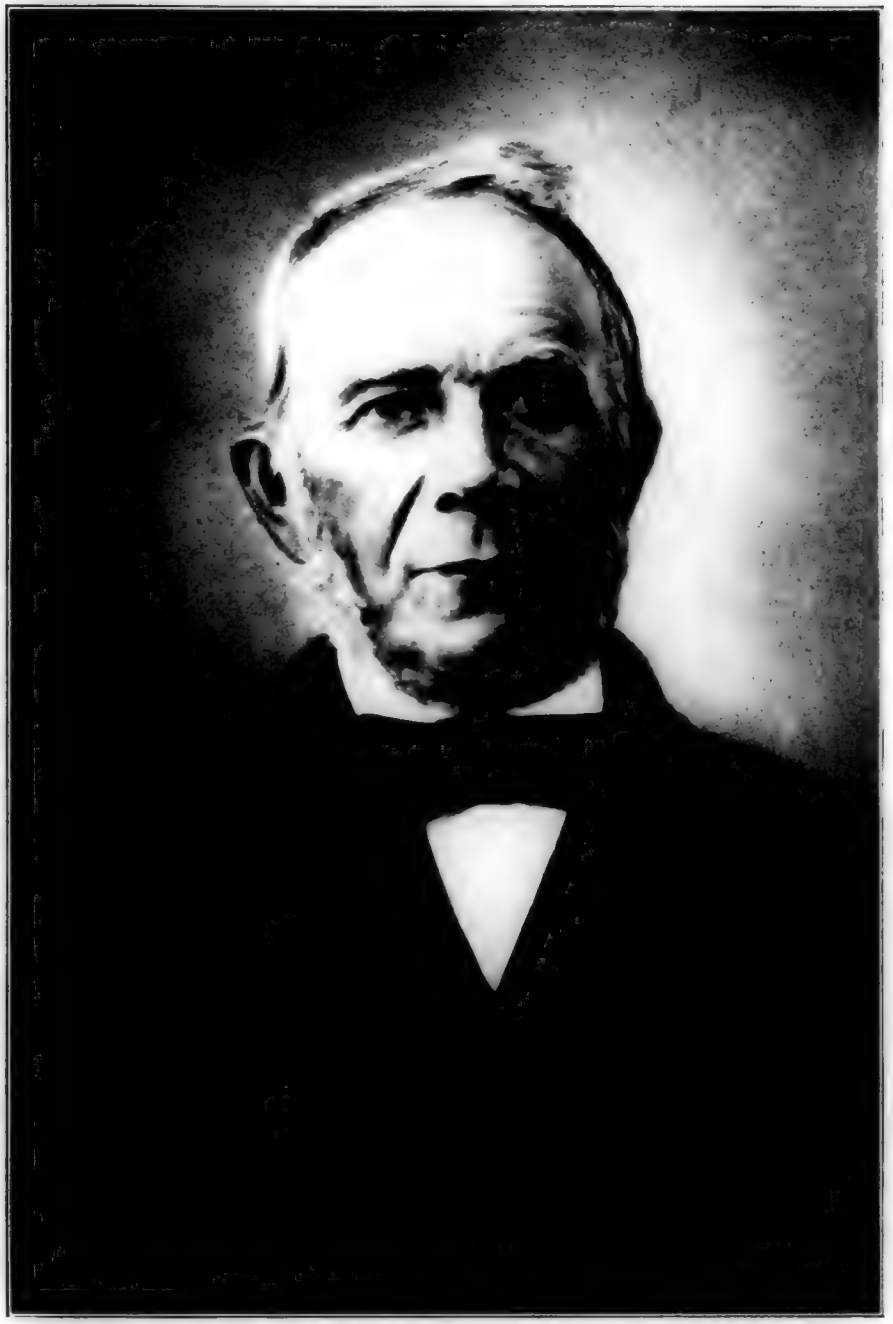
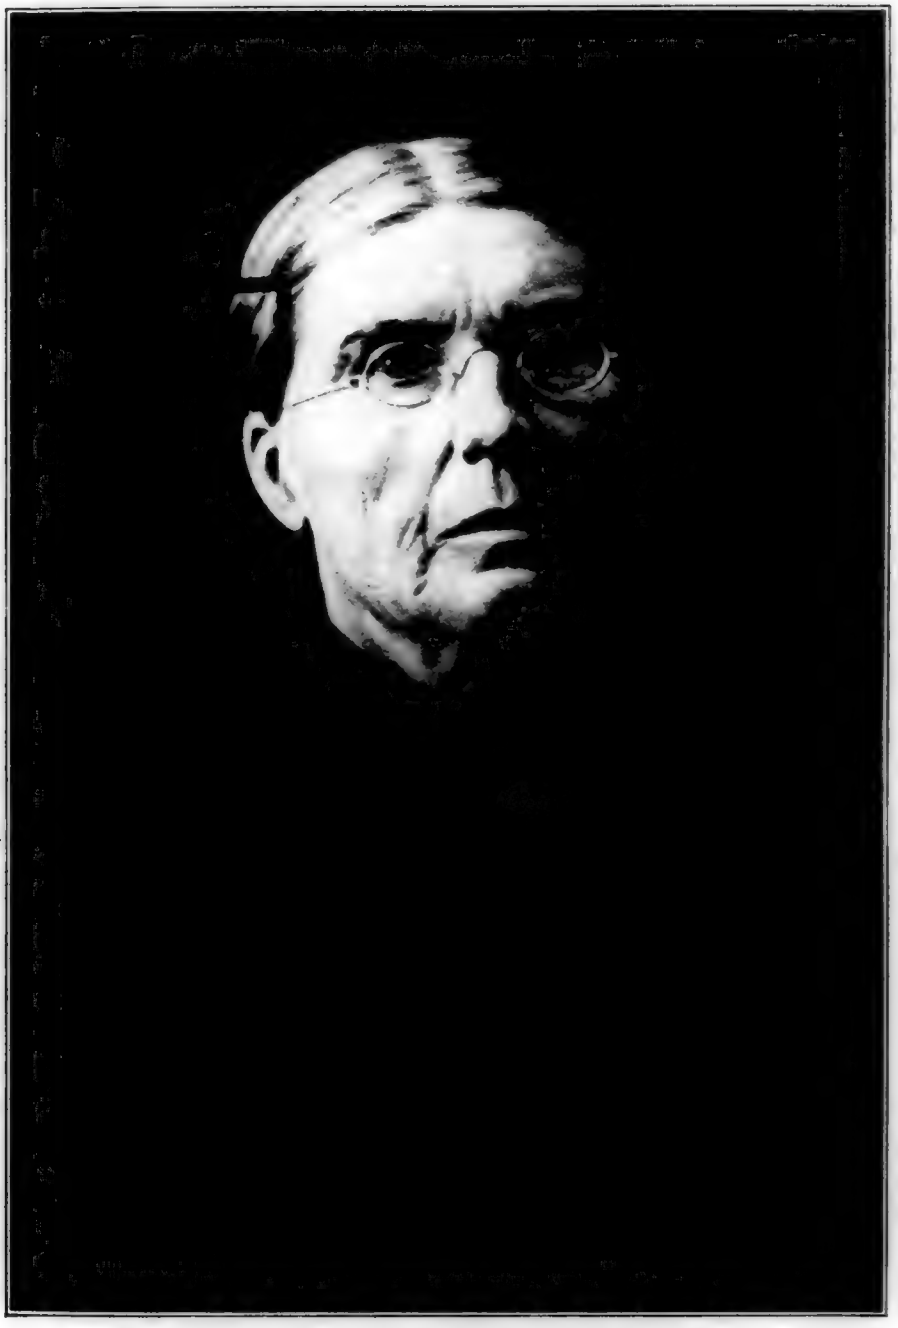
"Here today we meet and greet you
Children, neighbors, friends have come
To extend the hand of friendship
On this your gala nuptial day.



"May the golden sunshine brighten
Many happy days ere yet to come
As adown life's road you travel
Towards the setting of the sun."

In politics Mr. McMaster has always given his support to the republican party and has frequently held township offices, thus having opportunity to serve his community. Mrs. McMaster holds membership in the Methodist church, in the work of which she takes an active and helpful interest. They have passed their entire married life in this vicinity and by their kindly spirit, charitable disposition and generous acts have won the affection and regard of all who know them.



ALAN McQUARRIE.

This country is in a large measure indebted for its civilization and institutions to the sturdy natives of Scotland who have been prominent in stimulating the march of progress and in directing affairs along safe and conservative lines. Alan McQuarrie, who passed away December 29, 1903, and was well known in Copley township, Knox county, is a native of that country, his birth having occurred in Ayrshire, near Glasgow, December 31, 1814. He was the descendant of a family which can trace its ancestry far back in the annals of the Highland Scotch race and at the present time the family has in its possession a tartan worn by one of the earliest generations.

Mr. McQuarrie began his active career in his native land, first engaging in agricultural pursuits, but later he became the owner of coal lands which gave promise of valuable mineral beds and also contracted with his government to drain a section of the adjacent lowlands. These undertakings were all of the kind calling for hard labor and yet would not yield immediate profits and America seemed to him to offer greater opportunities to the man who was willing to sacrifice and labor. Accordingly, he set out for the United States with his wife and two children, in 1851, and came directly to Knox county, where he located upon the Copley township property which is the present McQuarrie homestead. That he was one of the earliest pioneers to enter the district is seen in the fact that his was the first log house built. Throughout his life the greater part of his time and attention was given to dealing in land and farming, although he was engaged in contracting and railroad grading near Altona, Illinois. At various times he bought and sold tracts of land in Iowa.

ALAN McQUARRIE

MRS. ALAN McQUARRIE

Mr. McQuarrie was married June 15, 1849, to Miss Mary Watson McMaster, who was born in Scotland, on the 20th of August, 1824, and died on the 29th of January, 1895, at the age of seventy years. She was a daughter of John McMaster, also a native of Scotland, who came to the United States in 1850, locating in Copley township, Knox county, where his death occurred at the age of ninety-two years. He was married to Ann Struthers, who was a daughter of James Struthers, whose death occurred in 1868, at the age of ninety-five years. Mr. and Mrs. McQuarrie became the parents of five children. Margaret, who is the wife of J. Gordon, was born in 1852. She is residing in Altona. Mary Watson was born on the 17th of January, 1855, on the home farm and has devoted her entire life to her parents. She is a member of the Presbyterian church and is at present residing on the home farm. Alan John, whose birth occurred on the 30th of April, 1859, in the old log cabin, has engaged in agricultural pursuits throughout his entire life. He casts his vote with the democratic party but has never taken an active interest in politics. Agnes Florence is married to Albert Erickson, of Walnut Grove township. Ann Struthers became the wife of Alexander Morgan and both are now deceased.

In politics Mr. McQuarrie was a democrat and, although he was not an active politician, he was always interested in public affairs and contributed his influence and support toward securing the election of those candidates whom he thought would be most efficient in promoting measures which would be to the interest of public welfare. He was a man of high moral character, industrious and enterprising, and his honesty and uprightness always merited the confidence and respect of his neighbors.

STEWART J. COX.

Stewart J. Cox, an agriculturist residing on section 16, Ontario township, was born on the 3d of October, 1876, upon the farm where he is now living. He is a son of L. J. and Elizabeth (West) Cox, of whom mention is made elsewhere in this volume.

Stewart Cox received his education in the common schools and has since assisted in the cultivation of the farm. In 1895 he began farming independently and now is the owner of two hundred and ten acres of land, which he devotes to general farming and to feeding hogs for market purposes. In his agricultural pursuits he has gained the success which is the reward of hard labor and persistent effort conscientiously carried on, even though the start is made without capital.

On the 3d of October, 1900, Mr. Cox was married to Miss Mildred White, a daughter of John and Mary (Barrer) White, the father being engaged in farming. Mr. and Mrs. Cox have become the parents af three children: Stewart Garrett, Minnie E. and James Richard. In his political allegiance Mr. Cox retains an independent attitude, casting his vote for the man or measure which he thinks will be most effective for good government rather than according to the dictates of any party. He holds membership in the subordinate lodge of the Odd Fellows and the encampment of the Modern Woodmen of America, of Woodhull. In all life's relations, whether as a business man, citizen or in fraternal affairs, he is progressive and believes that the individual should continually advance through the recognition and improvement of opportunities which present themselves.

GEORGE BEHRINGER.

George Behringer, who has long been identified with the agricultural interests of Knox county, being engaged in general farming and stock-raising in Sparta township, was born in Galesburg, on the 4th of November, 1856. His father, Michael Behringer, was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, on March 5, 1824, and there he passed the first twenty-five years of his life. He was in the government service, being employed in the capacity of mail driver and express courier, but early recognizing that there was little possibility of his ever attaining such a position as he aspired to, he determined to leave his native land and come to America. In 1849 he took passage for the United States, coming directly to Chicago, where he remained for three years. Almost immediately upon his arrival he obtained a position with the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, continuing in their service during the remainder of his life. Being entirely unfamiliar with the language and customs of the country, as well as with railroading his early duties were of a minor nature. He proved to be an efficient and trustworthy employe, however, and was promoted from time to time to positions of greater responsibility and for many years was overseer of the freight yards, and during the cholera year was placed in charge of the coaches in transit wherein were placed those stricken with this fatal disease. For his wife Mr. Behringer chose Miss Helen Schmidt, also a native of Wurtemberg, her birth there occurring on March 24, 1824, and a daughter of Daniel Schmidt, a fruit-grower and a manufacturer of wine. The paternal grandfather, Michael Behringer, was a weaver by trade. Both of the parents were members of the Lutheran church and for many years the father discharged the duties of trustee. Four of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Behringer are still living, our subject being the eldest of the family. The others are as follows: Daniel M., who is a merchant in Nebraska; William, who lives in Sparta township; and Helen C., the wife of N. E. Olson, a farmer in the vicinity of Galesburg.

George Behringer was reared in Galesburg and educated in the common schools. When old enough to qualify himself for a life vocation, he entered the machine shops of the "Q" at Galesburg, but after being there employed for three years, he decided he preferred agricultural pursuits, so turned his attention to farming. He subsequently located on the place where he is now living, meeting with such excellent success in his undertakings that he ultimately became owner of the property. The place was well improved when he purchased it, but during the period of his occupancy he has effected various changes and installed some modern conveniences, that have greatly added to its appearance. As he is energetic and capable, Mr. Behringer has met with good success in both his farming and stock-raising and is known as one of the prosperous citizens of Sparta township. He was one of the organizers of the Wataga State Bank, of which he is now vice president, and he is interested in various other local enterprises.

On the 3d of March, 1887, Mr. Behringer was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Benson, who was born in Warren county, Illinois, on the 25th of October, 1866, and is a daughter of Tufve and Catherine (Allison) Benson, the father a native of Sweden. The mother passed away on the 18th of November, 1909, at the age of sixty-eight years. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Benson, as follows: Samuel, a retired real-estate dealer of Galesburg; Carrie, the wife of H. Gehring, now retired, also of Galesburg; Mrs. Behringer; Ira, a plumber of Maplewood, Missouri; Harvey, a farmer of Salem, Illinois; Jeannette, who married Charles Harpman, a teacher at Pittsburg, Kansas; Hazel, who is at home; and Edith, who is deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Behringer have three children: Dessa, who is twenty-two years of age, now attending Lombard College; Frank Lloyd, who will soon attain his majority, and Herald, a youth of twelve years, are both at home.

Mr. Behringer is a member of the Lutheran church and Mrs. Behringer of the Congregational, being affiliated with the Ladies' Aid Society and for three years president of this organization. Fraternally he is identified with the Wataga camp of the Modern Woodmen of America, and he also belongs to the Mystic Workers of the World. His political allegiance he has never accorded any one body, but gives his support to such men and measures as he considers best adapted to protect the highest interests of the majority. Although he takes a deep interest in all public affairs, Mr. Behringer has had neither time nor inclination to seek political honors, preferring to give his undivided attention to the development of his business affairs.

GEORGE HILL SMITH, D. D. S.

Dr. George Hill Smith, engaged in the practice of dentistry in Galesburg, was born in Brownsville, Pennsylvania, October 19, 1874, a son of Robert Starrett and Sarah (Hill) Smith. The ancestry is traced back through several generations to Robert and Mary (Starrett) Smith, who were the great-grandparents in the paternal line. There is a strain of Scotch on the paternal side of the family and of Scotch-Irish on the maternal. Robert Smith, the grandfather of Dr. Smith, was a native of Franklin township, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, born November 19, 1799. He was a farmer by occupation and devoted his entire life to that pursuit. He married Rosetta Shotwell, also a native of Franklin township, and a daughter of John and Sarah (Skanklin) Shotwell. The ancestors of John Shotwell came from Scotland and settled in New Jersey, in 1680. The name was originally Shadwell, but upon witnessing the skill in markmanship of one of them the king exclaimed: "Well done, Shotwell," since which time this family has been known as Shotwell. Robert Starrett Smith, son of Robert and Rosetta (Shotwell) Smith, was born in Franklin township, January 20, 1837, pursued his education there and afterward engaged in teaching school for a time. Later he took up the occupation of farming, which he followed at Brownsville, Pennsylvania, until his removal to the middle west in 1879, when he settled near Galva, Illinois, where he carried on farming until 1894. In that year he retired and came to Galesburg, where he is still living. In early manhood he wedded Sarah Hill, who was born in East Liberty, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, November 1, 1841, and was a daughter of Colonel Alexander McClelland and Mary (Johnston) Hill. Her father was born in 1802 and died March 17, 1863, while her mother, whose birth occurred in 1805, passed away on the 11th of January, 1863. Alexander McClelland Hill was colonel of a Pennsylvania regiment and was twice a member of the state legislature, representing the district of Fayette and Westmoreland counties (1851-52) and was prominent in the public life of his locality. He was among the pioneers of the coke manufacture in this country and an earnest advocate of the extension of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad through Fayette county, and labored hard to effect it. He was a son of Rev. George and Elizabeth (McClelland) Hill, the latter being a daughter of Alexander McClelland, of Fayette county, Pennsylvania. Rev. George Hill was born in York county, Pennsylvania, March 13, 1764, and was ordained as the Presbyterian pastor of Wheatfield on the 13th of November, 1792, later accepting the charge of Legonier, Westmoreland county, where he continued to serve until the time of his death, June 9, 1822. Mrs. Sarah (Hill) Smith was educated in the east, attending Blairsville Seminary, which school was founded by her cousin, George Hill, D. D., who was a grandson of Rev. George Hill of Legonier, Pennsylvania. It was on the 27th of December, 1860, that Robert S. Smith and Sarah Hill were married, and unto them were born six children: Alexander, who died in infancy; Mary Rosetta, the wife of Charles E. Eldridge, of Sioux City, Iowa; Annetta P.; Alice J. at home; David Wilson, deceased; and George Hill.

Dr. George Hill Smith spent his youthful days under the parental roof and was educated in the Galva high school and in Knox College. He then entered the Northwestern University Dental School, of Chicago, from which he was graduated with the class of 1902. He first located for practice in Ottawa, Illinois, where he remained for three years and then came to Galesburg in July, 1905. He has since continued in this city and his ability is attested by the liberal patronage now given him. He has a well appointed office, splendidly equipped with all modern dental appliances, and his work is highly satisfactory, for, added to his scientific knowledge, is superior mechanical skill, which is one of the requisites of successful dentistry. He belongs to the Knox County Dental Association, in which he has held all of the offices, having been honored with election to the presidency two years ago.

On the 29th of June, 1903, Dr. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Mabel Lou Foster, a daughter of Julian Albert and Huldah Elizabeth (Parker) Foster, of Salem, Wisconsin. Mrs. Mabel (Foster) Smith was graduated from the Cumnock School of Oratory, Northwestern University, with the class of 1902. She is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution through the service of Asa Parker, whose grandfather was one of the five Parker brothers who came to Haverhill, Massachusetts, from Macclesfield, England, about 1640 and later settled in Andover, Connecticut. Her grandparents on the paternal side, Andrew William and Prudence (Cornwall) Foster, were among the early settlers of Kenosha county, Wisconsin, making the trip in wagons from Oswego, New York, in 1841. Both Dr. and Mrs. Smith have many friends in Galesburg, occupying an enviable position in social circles. He also belongs to the Supreme Chapter of Delta Sigma Delta, a dental fraternity, and to a number of societies and clubs. He is an exemplary representative of Vesper Lodge, No. 584, A. F. & A. M., and also of the Modern Woodmen camp, and he likewise holds membership in the Galesburg Club. He is true to his home teaching in religious matters for his parents are members of the Presbyterian church, to which the Doctor and Mrs. Smith also belong, and in politics he has followed in the footsteps of his father, being a stanch republican, his mature judgment sanctioning the policy and principles of that party. The skill and ability which he has displayed in his profession have placed him in a prominent position in the ranks of the dental fraternity in Galesburg and his personal qualities and sterling worth have assured him high position socially.

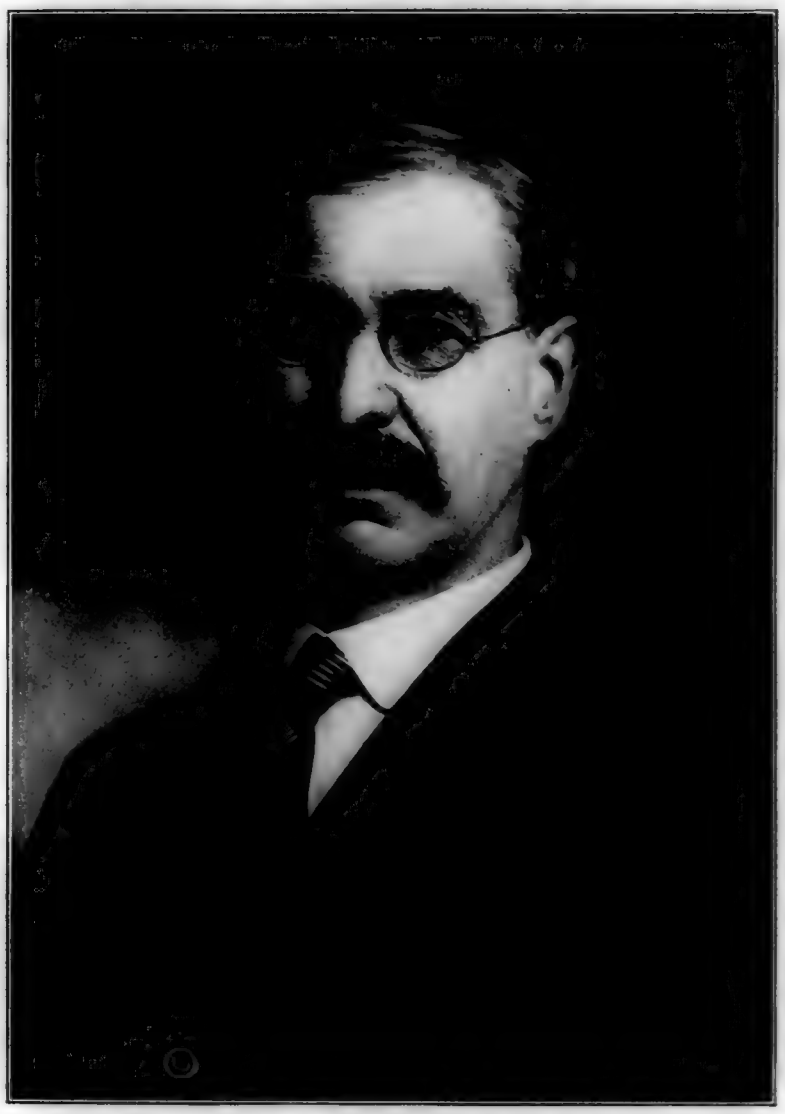
THOMAS PETER MAIN.

Thomas Peter Main, who is residing on his farm in Walnut Grove township, Knox county, was born in the old Main homestead, on the 20th of March, 1873, his parents being Elias and Mary Ann (Huntington) Main. The father was a native of Otsego county, New York, but spent the greater part of his active career in Knox county, where he engaged principally in the wagon-making trade.



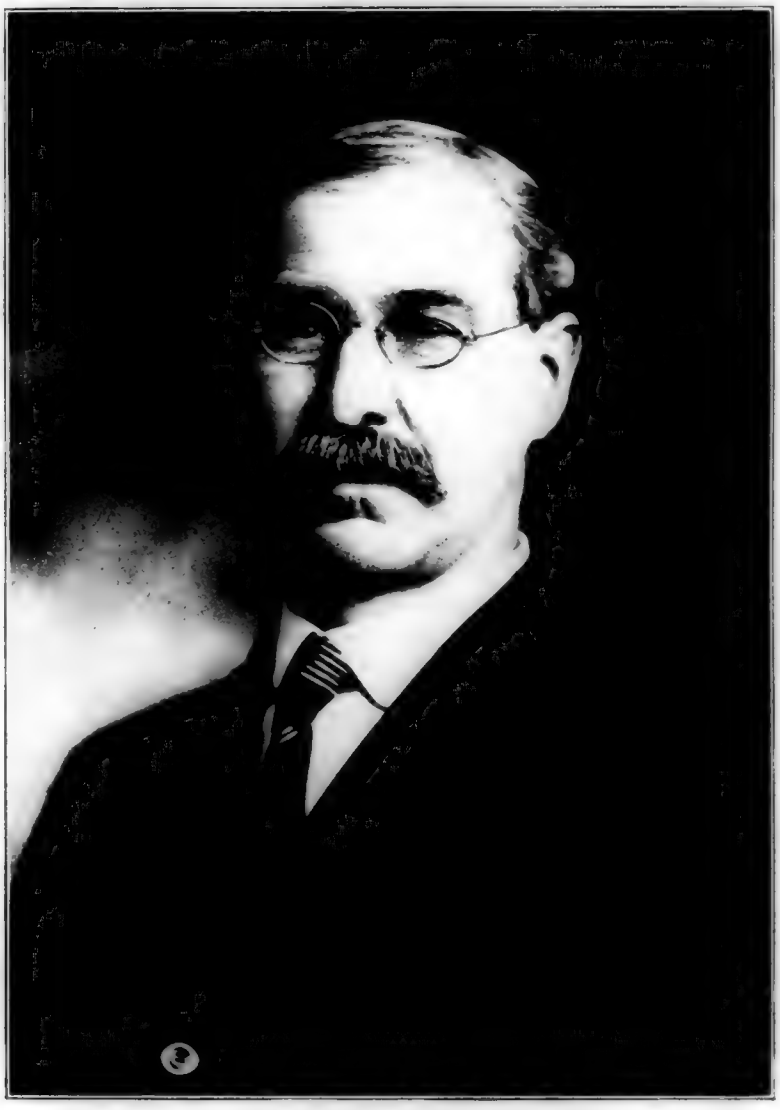
Thomas Main's entire life has been spent in Knox county, and he has done much to further agricultural interests of the county during the last twenty years. His methods have always been practical and scientific, and his application has been so constant that he has met with the success which is due to the energetic and persistent worker.

On the 24th of March, 1908, Mr. Main was married to Patience Jannan, the daughter of Jonathan Jannan of Salem township, Knox county. The father was a native of Brown county, Ohio, where he assisted his father in agricultural pursuits previous to his removal to Knox county when he was very young, his parents being George and Rebecca (Bevens) Jannan. Jonathan Jannan married Clara May Phelps, who is the daughter of Samuel and Emeline Lucy (Frisbie) Phelps. She is living in Knox county at present at the age of fifty-nine years, and Mr. Jannan reached his seventy-second birthday on the 5th of September. Their son, Henry Phelps Jannan, is a prominent agriculturist of Salem township, and is married to Lorine Bowers. Mrs. Main was born on the 10th of February, 1882, and received her education in the Elmwood high school, and three years later was graduated from the University of Illinois at Urbana. Subsequently she taught music until her marriage. To this union one child has been born, Clara Ruth, whose birth occurred on the 2nd of April, 1910.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Main are active and prominent members of the Presbyterian church, of Altona and Mr. Main also holds membership in the Masonic Lodge of his home city. In church and fraternal circles he is held in high regard, and has ever stood to maintain the same honorable relations with which he is accredited in industrial circles. In farming and stock-raising he has shown his readiness to keep abreast with the spirit and development of the times, and has won for himself a name which stands for efficiency, aggression and stability.

IRA L. PILLSBURY.

A highly successful florist of Galesburg is Ira L. Pillsbury, who came here seventeen years ago. He commenced in rather a small way but has so intelligently directed his business, that it has developed until he now maintains one retail store and has several times multiplied the size of his original greenhouse. He was born in Macomb, Illinois, on the 3d of February, 1859, and is a son of Ithamar and Caroline E. (Miller) Pillsbury. The father was born in Dracut, Massachusetts, on the 22d of August, 1794, and the mother in Smithtown, Long Island, on the 14th of October, 1818. Ithamar Pillsbury was educated at Yale Divinity College for the Presbyterian ministry and was graduated in 1822. Subsequently he became a missionary to seamen and sailors in New York city. Later he preached at various points in the east until 1836, when he came to Illinois, bringing the first colony to Henry county, having acquired the land for his settlement from the government. He continued to follow the ministry and organized a church at Andover, where he preached for several years. In Macomb he filled subsequently the pulpit of the Presbyterian church and was also president of McDonough College. During his active connection with the ministry he assisted in organizing fourteen churches in Illinois. The first church that he formed was at Burlington, August 27, 1836, and the last at Dixon, Illinois, January 29, 1852. Andover, Illinois, was the scene of the marriage of the Rev. Ithamar Pillsbury and Miss Miller on December 18, 1837, and there they spent the latter years of their life. Reverend Pillsbury passed away on the 20th of April, 1862, and his wife survived until June 8, 1896, her death occurring at Macomb. During the war of 1812 he served as a private and his political support he gave to the republican party. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Pillsbury numbered ten, our subject being the ninth in order of birth. The others are as follows: Elizabeth, who was born on the 12th of October, 1838, and died August 16, 1886; James Lebbius, born October 26, 1840, who died in 1841; Edward Payson, who was born on April 27, 1842, and died on the 10th of May, 1898; Asiel Nettleton, who was born on November 29, 1844, and is now living at Palma Sola, Florida; Mary Louisa, who was born May 2, 1847, and died on the 1st of June, 1909; Sarah Adelia, who was born on the 3d of April, 1849, the wife of Charles F. Fairfield, of Minneapolis, Minnesota; Francis Ithamar, who was born June 14, 1851, and died January 8, 1893; Alfred Sawyer, born on November 2, 1854, now residing at West Plains, Missouri; and Ithamar, whose natal day was the 19th of August, 1861, a resident of Macomb.



I. L. PILLSBURY

Both Mr. and Mrs. Main are active and prominent members of the Presbyterian church, of Altona and Mr. Main also holds membership in the Masonic Lodge of his home city. In church and fraternal circles he is held in high regard, and has ever stood to maintain the same honorable relations with which he is accredited in industrial circles. In farming and stock-raising he has shown his readiness to keep abreast with the spirit and development of the times, and has won for himself a name which stands for efficiency, aggression and stability.

IRA L. PILLSBURY.

A highly successful florist of Galesburg is Ira L. Pillsbury, who came here seventeen years ago. He commenced in rather a small way but has so intelligently directed his business, that it has developed until he now maintains one retail store and has several times multiplied the size of his original greenhouse. He was born in Macomb, Illinois, on the 3d of February, 1859, and is a son of Ithamar and Caroline E. (Miller) Pillsbury. The father was born in Dracut, Massachusetts, on the 22d of August, 1794, and the mother in Smithtown, Long Island, on the 14th of October, 1818. Ithamar Pillsbury was educated at Yale Divinity College for the Presbyterian ministry and was graduated in 1822. Subsequently he became a missionary to seamen and sailors in New York city. Later he preached at various points in the east until 1836, when he came to Illinois, bringing the first colony to Henry county, having acquired the land for his settlement from the government. He continued to follow the ministry and organized a church at Andover, where he preached for several years. In Macomb he filled subsequently the pulpit of the Presbyterian church and was also president of McDonough College. During his active connection with the ministry he assisted in organizing fourteen churches in Illinois. The first church that he formed was at Burlington, August 27, 1836, and the last at Dixon, Illinois, January 29, 1852. Andover, Illinois, was the scene of the marriage of the Rev. Ithamar Pillsbury and Miss Miller on December 18, 1837, and there they spent the latter years of their life. Reverend Pillsbury passed away on the 20th of April, 1862, and his wife survived until June 8, 1896, her death occurring at Macomb. During the war of 1812 he served as a private and his political support he gave to the republican party. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Pillsbury numbered ten, our subject being the ninth in order of birth. The others are as follows: Elizabeth, who was born on the 12th of October, 1838, and died August 16, 1886; James Lebbius, born October 26, 1840, who died in 1841; Edward Payson, who was born on April 27, 1842, and died on the 10th of May, 1868; Asiel Nettleton, who was born on November 29, 1844, and is now living at Palma Sola, Florida; Mary Louisa, who was born May 2, 1847, and died on the 1st of June, 1909; Sarah Adelia, who was born on the 3d of April, 1849, the wife of Charles F. Fairfield, of Minneapolis, Minnesota; Francis Ithamar, who was born June 14, 1851, and died January 8, 1893; Alfred Sawyer, born on November 2, 1854, now residing at West Plains, Missouri; and Ithamar, whose natal day was the 19th of August, 1861, a resident of Macomb.

I. L. PILLSBURY

Ira L. Pillsbury attended the common schools of Macomb in the acquirement of an education. He graduated from the public school in 1876 and very soon thereafter he engaged in market gardening, meeting with such success in this undertaking that he later extended the scope of his activities by raising flowers and ornamental plants. He continued in his horticultural activity until 1894, when he disposed of his gardens and came to Galesburg, engaging in business as a florist. At the beginning he had but one hothouse, twenty by sixty feet, but during the past seventeen years he has developed his enterprise until he now needs eight greenhouses and has a retail salesroom. A store combined with his greenhouses is located on East Main and Locust streets and the floral establishment at 65 South Seminary street. He makes a specialty of carnations, roses, violets, chrysanthemums and ornamental potted plants, of the flowering and plain variety. From six to ten people are constantly employed in his greenhouses and stores, and during the busy seasons he requires the assistance of several more. Mr. Pillsbury is resourceful and of an inventive turn of mind, so to obviate the heavy loss sustained by every florist in the handling of carnations, caused by the splitting of the calyx of this flower, he has originated a clever little device known as "Pillsbury's carnation staple." It is made of very fine green wire and, being practically invisible, can be used without detracting from the flower's appearance. The artifice has been found practical and has proven economical in his own business and since placing it upon the market, he has been favored with orders from florists throughout the country.

At Macomb, Illinois, on the 19th of March, 1885, Mr. Pillsbury and Miss Dollie B. Harris were married. She is a daughter of the Rev. Ralph and Mary (Wilson) Harris, and was born at Cameron, Missouri, on the 11th of April, 1859. Mr. Harris filled the pulpit of the Presbyterian church at Macomb for some years and was also president of McDonough College. He was born April 6, 1812, in Charlotte county, Virginia, and united with the church at Charlotte Courthouse in 1828. He acquired his education at Center College in Danville, Kentucky, which institution conferred upon him the degrees of A. M. and D. D. In 1840 he was licensed to preach and in 1843 was ordained as an evangelist and sent as a missionary to the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee. In 1849 he accepted the presidency of McDonough College, after having had charge of several different churches, and in 1852 he was called to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church at Macomb, Illinois, where he remained until 1855, when he removed to Cameron, Missouri. When the Civil war broke out he went to the front with the Eighty-fourth Regiment of Illinois Volunteers as their chaplain but on account of ill health was forced to return before the close of the war. He afterward took up the study of medicine and in 1864 was graduated from the Hahnemann Medical College of Chicago and entered upon active practice, in which he continued until 1882, when he retired. He died March 19, 1895, having for only eight weeks survived his wife. They traveled life's journey happily together as man and wife for nearly fifty-eight years and were among the most highly esteemed residents of Macomb. Dr. Harris was twice married, his first union being with Martha P. Hughes on the 2d of October, 1834. They had one daughter, Ellen Amanda, who was born in 1835, and became the wife of Edward Maguire. The wife and mother died in 1836 and on the 31st of May, 1837, Dr. Harris was married to Miss Mary P. Wilson, who was born near Crab Orchard, Kentucky, February 27, 1818, and passed away January 24, 1895. Dr. and Mrs. Harris were the parents of ten children. James Harvie, who was born May 7, 1838, died January 4, 1893. Robert Campbell, who was born January 19, 1840, was killed by guerrillas, October 17, 1861, while serving as a soldier of the Civil war. William Thomas, born September 18, 1841, was a soldier of the Union army and is living in Keosauqua, Iowa. Miss Martha Perry Hughes, born November 25, 1842, is living in Macomb. Ralph Erskins, born July 4, 1846, is living in Pocatello, Idaho. John Green, born August 24, 1848, died August 16, 1849. Mary Elizabeth, born January 29, 1850, died February 28, 1892. Charles Stewart, born March 24, 1852, is living in Galesburg. Sarah Cornelia, who was born March 24, 1854, died November 15, 1905. Dollie Bailey, born April 11, 1859, is now the wife of Ira L. Pillsbury. Mr. and Mrs. Pillsbury have three children. George M., who was born in Macomb, on May 16, 1886, is now engaged in farming near Englewood, Kansas. He is married and has two children, Gertrude Agnes, who was born May 7, 1910 and Dollie Irene, born October 8, 1911. Ira Harris, whose birth occurred at Macomb, on July 25, 1887, graduated from Knox College and is now a student in the McCormick Theological Seminary at Chicago. He has had the unusual distinction of delivering a sermon in the Presbyterian church at Macomb, where both of his grandfathers formerly preached. Walter E., who was born on the 3d of September, 1890, is still at home and is assisting his father in the business.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Pillsbury are active members of the Presbyterian church and take a deep interest in all Christian work. He is deacon of the church and assistant Sunday school superintendent, and he was formerly president of the McDonough County Sunday School Association. He is also affiliated with the Young Men's Christian Association and the Court of Honor, No. 171. Being a progressive and enterprising business man he is a member of the Retail Merchants Association of Galesburg and the National and Illinois State Florists' Associations. Mr. Pillsbury is a stanch republican in politics but, never having had either the time or inclination for public office, does not prominently participate in municipal campaigns of political nature. By reason of his foresight and sagacity he is meeting with excellent success in his business, which is now firmly established and flourishing in its various departments.

OSCAR H. LITTLE.

Since the establishment of The Continental, a men's clothing establishment in Galesburg, Oscar H. Little has been at the head of the business, and as manager has contributed in a substantial measure to its growth and success. Throughout his life he has been connected with the clothing trade and his long experience, his enterprise and earnest purpose have been the elements of making his establishment one of the leading commercial concerns of Galesburg. He was born in Newton, Iowa, September 21, 1863, and is the son of William T. and Emily J. (Grey) Little. The father, who was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, December 8, 1836, was a clothing merchant of Newton, Iowa, having come to the west as a young man. Later he went to Chicago where he engaged in the wholesale clothing business, and after some years opened a real-estate office in that city. At length he retired from business life, and in 1906 removed to Galesburg where he passed away November 18, 1908. His widow still survives and is now living in Rogers Park, one of the Chicago suburbs. She was born in Virginia, January 23, 1843. Mr. Little was a republican in his political views and both he and his wife were members of the Society of Friends. They were married in Lynnville, Iowa, January, 1859, and they became parents of three children: Ida L., Oscar H. and William G.

Oscar H. Little was educated in Newton, Iowa, and his initial experience in business came to him as an employe in his father's store, whom he first represented in Carroll, Iowa, as manager of one of his stores. Two years later he went to Newton, Iowa, and continued in the business with his father for six years, after which he moved to Chicago and engaged in the wholesale clothing business for two years. He remained with his father until 1892 when he entered the employ of Samuel Stern of Chicago. At Hampton, Iowa, he represented Mr. Stern for one year and then, after a brief period spent in Chicago, came to Galesburg, on the 10th of December, 1895. It was on that day that The Continental opened its doors for business at No. 7 Main street, Mr. Stern having established the business of which he made Mr. Little the manager. The trade grew so rapidly that within a year and a half The Continental was forced to seek larger quarters, and in September 1897 removed to their present location at Nos. 152 and 154 East Main street. In May, 1906, the business was incorporated with Mr. Stern as president, N. J. Ullman, vice president and treasurer, S. Schiff, secretary and Oscar H. Little, manager. On the 15th of December, 1908, a fire broke out and that part of the store which was not destroyed by the flames was damaged by water, and the entire remaining stock was then sold to the Underwriters' Salvage Company. For three months Mr. Little was out of business, during which time the room was being refitted and an entire, new stock assembled. The firm is now again successfully conducting a large enterprise in Galesburg, each year having witnessed steady growth in their trade. They carry a large and well selected line of goods, and the business policy of the house is based upon progressive methods and irreproachable commercial integrity.

On the 18th of February, 1889, Mr. Little was united in marriage with Miss Mary Long, a daughter of James and Mary Long, of Newton, Iowa. Unto this marriage was born a son, Harlan William, whose birth occurred at Newton, Iowa, February 28, 1890, and who is now connected with The Continental. After losing his first wife, who died in 1892, Mr. Little was again married September 9, 1902, his second union being with Miss Mae Starnes, a daughter of P. M. and Mahala J. (Van Horn) Starnes, of Ipava, Illinois. Her father was born near Nashville, Tennessee, November 10, 1837, and her mother's birth occurred in Harrisville, Ohio, October 8, 1845. For some time the father was engaged in merchandising at Ipava, Illinois. He is a republican in his political views, and both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, loyal to its teachings and active in its work.

Mr. Little is a member of the Galesburg Club, the Retail Merchants' Association and the Elks Lodge. For a number of years he was connected with the Elks Lodge at Monmouth and was one of the petitioners for the establishment of the Elks Lodge at Galesburg. His friends, and they are many, find in him a social, genial gentleman, courteous and obliging. His business associates know him as a reliable, enterprising merchant, and one whose success has been honorably achieved, and is therefore well deserved. Galesburg numbers him among her leading citizens, and the position is one to which he has attained by his own earnest efforts.

BYRON A. STEVENS.

In the record of Byron A. Stevens are found many qualities such as command confidence and respect. His influence was always on the side of material, political, intellectual and moral progress. He was always loyal to duty, manifesting the same splendid qualities which he displayed when a soldier on the field of battle, defending the stars and stripes.

Mr. Stevens was born in Westford, Vermont, September 9, 1841, a son of Cassius P. and Clamentia (Smith) Stevens. The father was born in Essex, Vermont, January 11, 1815, and the mother's birth occurred in Monkton, Vermont, on the 4th of June, 1814. Cassius Stevens was a farmer by occupation and always remained a resident of the Green Mountain state. His political allegiance was given to the republican party. Mrs. Stevens was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. To them were born two sons, the younger, Loren, being a resident of Galesburg, Illinois. Both Cassius Stevens and his wife passed away in Essex, Vermont; the former on the 5th of February, 1892, and the latter on July 27, 1876.

Byron A. Stevens pursued his education in the schools of Vermont, completing his course in the Classical Institute at Essex. He afterward took up the profession of teaching, which he followed for three or four years prior to the outbreak of the Civil war. With the beginning of hostilities his patriotic spirit was aroused and later he enlisted as a private. However, he was at once made first lieutenant of Company H of the One Hundred and Ninth Colored Infantry and served until the close of the war, making an honorable record by reason of his loyalty and his fearlessness.

When the country no longer needed his military aid, Mr. Stevens returned to Essex, Vermont, and again engaged in teaching school. He was also superintendent of schools of Essex for several years. For a short time he conducted a store. Later he turned his attention to the insurance business, in which he was engaged for a number of years. In the fall of 1877 he came to Galesburg, Illinois, where he entered the employ of George W. Brown in the capacity of traveling salesman. For several years he remained upon the road and was then called to the office, where he proved a valuable man, his previous broad experience and knowledge of the business giving him understanding of what was necessary in his office work as manager of the sales department. At all times he was thoroughly reliable and progressive, and he bore an excellent reputation in business circles.

On the 7th of December, 1862, Mr. Stevens was united in marriage to Miss Hannah M. Drury, who was born in Westford, Vermont, December 21, 1840, a daughter of Jacob K. and Caroline (Bascom) Drury. Her father was born genial gentleman, courteous and obliging. His business associates know him as a reliable, enterprising merchant, and one whose success has been honorably achieved, and is therefore well deserved. Galesburg numbers him among her leading citizens, and the position is one to which he has attained by his own earnest efforts.

B. A. Stevens

BYRON A. STEVENS.

In the record of Byron A. Stevens are found many qualities such as command confidence and respect. His influence was always on the side of material, political, intellectual and moral progress. He was always loyal to duty, manifesting the same splendid qualities which he displayed when a soldier on the field of battle, defending the stars and stripes.

Mr. Stevens was born in Westford, Vermont, September 9, 1841, a son of Cassius P. and Clamentia (Smith) Stevens. The father was born in Essex, Vermont, January 11, 1815, and the mother's birth occurred in Monkton, Vermont, on the 4th of June, 1814. Cassius Stevens was a farmer by occupation and always remained a resident of the Green Mountain state. His political allegiance was given to the republican party. Mrs. Stevens was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. To them were born two sons, the younger, Loren, being a resident of Galesburg, Illinois. Both Cassius Stevens and his wife passed away in Essex, Vermont; the former on the 5th of February, 1892, and the latter on July 27, 1876.

Byron A. Stevens pursued his education in the schools of Vermont, completing his course in the Classical Institute at Essex. He afterward took up the profession of teaching, which he followed for three or four years prior to the outbreak of the Civil war. With the beginning of hostilities his patriotic spirit was aroused and later he enlisted as a private. However, he was at once made first lieutenant of Company H of the One Hundred and Ninth Colored Infantry and served until the close of the war, making an honorable record by reason of his loyalty and his fearlessness.

When the country no longer needed his military aid, Mr. Stevens returned to Essex, Vermont, and again engaged in teaching school. He was also superintendent of schools of Essex for several years. For a short time he conducted a store. Later he turned his attention to the insurance business, in which he was engaged for a number of years. In the fall of 1877 he came to Galesburg, Illinois, where he entered the employ of George W. Brown in the capacity of traveling salesman. For several years he remained upon the road and was then called to the office, where he proved a valuable man, his previous broad experience and knowledge of the business giving him understanding of what was necessary in his office work as manager of the sales department. At all times he was thoroughly reliable and progressive, and he bore an excellent reputation in business circles.

On the 7th of December, 1862, Mr. Stevens was united in marriage to Miss Hannah M. Drury, who was born in Westford, Vermont, December 21, 1840, a daughter of Jacob K. and Caroline (Bascom) Drury. Her father was born at Milton, Vermont, March 30, 1808. His wife's birth occurred in Fairfax, Vermont, August 1, 1818. Mr. Drury was a farmer by occupation, devoting his early life to the tilling of the soil, but later he established a brick manufactory at Essex, which he conducted up to the time of his death on the 29th of September, 1889. For about three years he had survived his wife, who passed away November 9, 1886. In his political views Mr. Drury was a republican, and for a time he represented his district in the state legislature. He was also prominent in local political circles. For many years he served on the official board of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which both he and his wife were members.

B. A. Stevens

Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Stevens: Arthur L., who was born in Essex, Vermont, April 25, 1867, and who is now a traveling salesman, making his home in Minneapolis; Charlie S., who was born October 6, 1869, and died February 19, 1874; and Mabel, who was born at Essex, June 28, 1872, and makes her home with her mother in Galesburg, Illinois. She was graduated from Knox College in 1895 and later became a teacher in the public schools of Galesburg.

Mr. Stevens was a loyal member of the Masonic fraternity and exemplified in his life the beneficent spirit of the craft. He also belonged to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and to the Grand Army post at Galesburg, and he was for many years a member of the Galesburg Club. Although he had never united with the church, in his religious belief he was in sympathy with the Methodist Episcopal church, of which his wife and daughter are members. In his political views he was a republican, believing that the principles of the party contained the best elements of good government, yet he never sought or desired office.

Mr. Stevens' genial manner, his kindly disposition, and his unfailing courtesy made him popular wherever he was known. He passed away November 19, 1895, leaving behind him a circle of warm friends, to whom he was endeared by reason of his sterling traits of character.

HARRY E. MAIN.

Only twenty-six years of age Harry E. Main has already made a place for himself among the enterprising and progressive business men of Knox county, and as the manager of the Terry Lumber Company for the past five years, in charge of the yards at Wataga when the company was first organized and for the past three years filling a similar position at Oneida, has demonstrated his executive ability and efficiency. He was born in Galesburg township, August 15, 1885, a son of Charles A. and Harriet (Mosher) Main, natives of New York, where the grandfather, Thomas Main, was engaged in agriculture until well on in years, when he came west and settled in Boone, Iowa. The father was for twenty-four years in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad until he gave up this connection and took charge of a farm of eighty acres which he had purchased some years previously and on which he had done occasional labor by way of variation from the confining nature of the duties which devolved upon him in his capacity as passenger conductor. He found great pleasure in the open-air work, tilling the fields, and sowing and gathering the crops, continuing in this occupation from about 1880 until some years ago, when he met with a runaway in which he was fatally injured. His widow resides in Marshall, Michigan, with her daughter. There were three children in the family: Frances M., who is the wife of J. G. France, the manager of a fruit farm; Earl T., who was killed in a railroad wreck at Marshalltown, Iowa, in the spring of 1910, just five months after his marriage; and Harry E.

Living in Knox county all his life Harry E. Main obtained his education here first in the elementary schools, and later in the high school at Galesburg. He secured employment with the Terry and Lewis Lumber Company at Galesburg and remained with them fourteen months working in the yards. He then went to Wataga, Illinois, and took charge of the management of the yards of the Terry Lumber Company just organized in that town, filling this position for a year and a half when he was transferred, in 1908, to their lumber yards at Oneida and has been here ever since. He is dependable in the execution of his duties and has a promising future before him. He is also interested in a farm of two hundred acres near Delavan, Faribault county, Minnesota.

Mr. Main was united in marriage to Miss Sadie Graves, on November 22, 1906. Her parents were George and Minnie (Sherman) Graves, and came from New Hampshire, her father, who was a grain dealer at Wataga, being now deceased. The mother is residing in Wataga.

In his political persuasion Mr. Main is republican and has been called upon to serve as city treasurer. He is an enthusiastic worker in fraternal circles, belonging to Lodge No. 894, B. P. O. E. of Galesburg, to the Modern Woodmen of America and to the Mystic Workers. Mr. and Mrs. Main are social favorites among the younger set in Oneida and have many warm friends among the older people as well, being considerate and courteous towards all.

JOSEPH FISHER.

Joseph Fisher, who has been a resident of Knox county for over sixty years, is residing on section 28, Ontario township, Knox county, where he is engaged in farming. He was born on the 27th of May, 1831, in Lancaster, England, his parents being David and Jane (Morris) Fisher, both of whom were natives of England. The father, whose birth occurred in Lancaster, engaged in mining. When the family came to America in 1833 they settled first in Canada but five years later crossed over into the United States, where they located in Ohio, for a short time previous to going to Henry county, Illinois. Mr. Fisher passed away in that county, in January, 1844, and Mrs. Fisher's death occurred in 1876, at the home of her son Joseph in Knox county.

Joseph Fisher received his education in the little log cabin district schoolhouse, but the duties which naturally fell to him, the eldest son, after his father's death made any advanced studying impossible, and in April of that year he removed to Sparta township with his mother. The same year, at the early age of fourteen years, he started to make his own way in the world by accepting employment on a farm until he was able to purchase land for himself. His first purchase was an eighty acre plot which cost him one dollar per acre at the time but subsequently he had to pay six hundred and fifty dollars, in order to obtain a clear title to the property. He and his wife own two hundred and forty acres, all of which has been brought under a profitable state of cultivation. His entire active career has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, general farming and dairying having received the greater part of his attention.

On October 20, 1852, Mr. Fisher was married to Miss Emily Fisher. Her death occurred in 1888 and besides her husband she was survived by an adopted daughter, Nellie. Mrs. Fisher was born in Kentucky, in 1834, and was one of three children born to Woodford Fisher, all of whom are now deceased. Her parents removed to Marshall county, Illinois, when she was very young and later came to Knox county. Joseph Fisher was again married, his second union being with Elizabeth Pittard, whom he married on the 30th of October, 1890. She was a daughter of Viel and Jane (Kember) Pittard, who came to America in 1854 and located in Knox county in the following year. They were both natives of Somersetshire, England. The father was a blacksmith by trade in his native land and also for a short time in the United States before engaging in agricultural pursuits. His death occurred in Ontario township on the 5th of July, 1881, when he was sixty-eight years of age. Mrs. Pittard was born May 5, 1811, and was married on the 24th of December, 1838. She was a member of the Congregational church and her death occurred at the age of seventy-eight years, July 7, 1889. Five children were born to this union, the eldest having died in infancy.

Mr. Fisher is an active member of the republican party and has been elected to office many times. For three terms he served as road commissioner, for two years as highway commissioner and for three terms in the county court. For over sixty-five years he has been connected with the agricultural interests of Knox county and during that time has done his share in developing the resources of the soil of the county, a work which has called for self denial, the encountering of hardships, persistent, hard labor and the ability to give constant application to an undertaking not always showing immediate profits.

BEN J. HUFF, JR.

Ben J. Huff, Jr., who for the past four years has been city clerk of Galesburg, has the distinction of being the youngest man ever elected to that office in the city. He is a native son, his birth having occurred here, on the 6th of January, 1883, and he is the younger of two children born of the marriage of Ben J. and Mary (Phillips) Huff. Their elder child is a daughter, Helen, the wife of Harry N. Thurman, of Galesburg. Ben J. Huff was born in Kentucky, the son of George N. and Elizabeth Huff, also natives of that state. In his early boyhood the parents removed to Indiana, where he was reared to manhood, later becoming a resident of Illinois. In 1870 he came to Galesburg and entered the repair yards of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, and there he has ever since been employed. He proved to be a trustworthy and efficient workman and was promoted from time to time until he is now general foreman of the car department. The grandfather, who was a veteran of the Civil war, was also an employe of the "Q," but had withdrawn from active life prior to his death, which occurred at the age of eighty-five years. The grandmother was sixty when she passed away. They also had two children: Ben J., the father of our subject; and Helen, who married T. C. Salvetor, a master car builder. The maternal grandparents were Edward and Adelia Phillips, who were among the pioneer settlers of Galesburg. They both lived to attain a ripe old age, Mrs. Phillips having been killed by a train at Clinton, Illinois, at the age of ninety-six years. They had three children: Charles, Mina, and Mary, the mother of our subject. In religious faith Ben J. Huff was reared a Methodist and his wife a Roman Catholic. Mrs. Huff was born in Galesburg and here she has passed her entire life.

The life of Ben J. Huff, Jr., up to the age of eight years was very similar to that of other lads of the same circumstances. At that time, however, he had the misfortune to be kicked by one of his schoolmates, and the injuries sustained made of him a permanent cripple. He attended the public schools in the acquirement of his education, and after he was graduated from the high school he entered Brown's Business College, where he pursued a commercial course. When qualified to begin earning his own living he entered the offices of the "Q" in the capacity of stenographer. He continued in this capacity until 1903, when he resigned to enter upon the duties of assistant city clerk. He was retained in this position for four years, and at the expiration of that period, in 1907, was the successful candidate for the office of city clerk, of which he is still the incumbent. That Mr. Huff has proven to be well qualified for the responsibilities of this position and that he has discharged his duties with efficiency is manifested by the length of his term.

On the 9th of July, 1905, Mr. Huff was married to Miss May Winifred Fuller, who was born in Bedford, Taylor county, Iowa, and is a daughter of Marshall and Mary Fuller. One child has been born to them, Charles Raymond.

Mr. and Mrs. Huff manifest their religious views through their membership in the Baptist church, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. He is also a member of the Galesburg and Crescent Clubs. In his political views he is a republican, considering that the policy of this party is best adapted to subserve the highest interests of the majority. Mr. and Mrs. Huff have a very pleasant home at No. 215 North Chambers street, the hospitality of which is freely extended to their large circle of acquaintances.

CHARLES E. HOLMES.

A capably tilled farm of three hundred and twenty acres located on section 15, Ontario township, does full credit to the agricultural skill of Charles E. Holmes, one of the estimable citizens Sweden has furnished Knox county. His birth occurred in Sweden, on the 11th of December, 1864, his parents being N. P. and Anna (Larson) Holmes. The father, who was also a farmer, engaged in the cultivation of land in his native country until 1875, when he emigrated to the United States. He arrived in Oneida, this county, on the 5th of August, 1875, and took up his residence with a son, who had preceded him to America, continuing to make his home with him until his death in February, 1910, at the advanced age of ninety-two years.

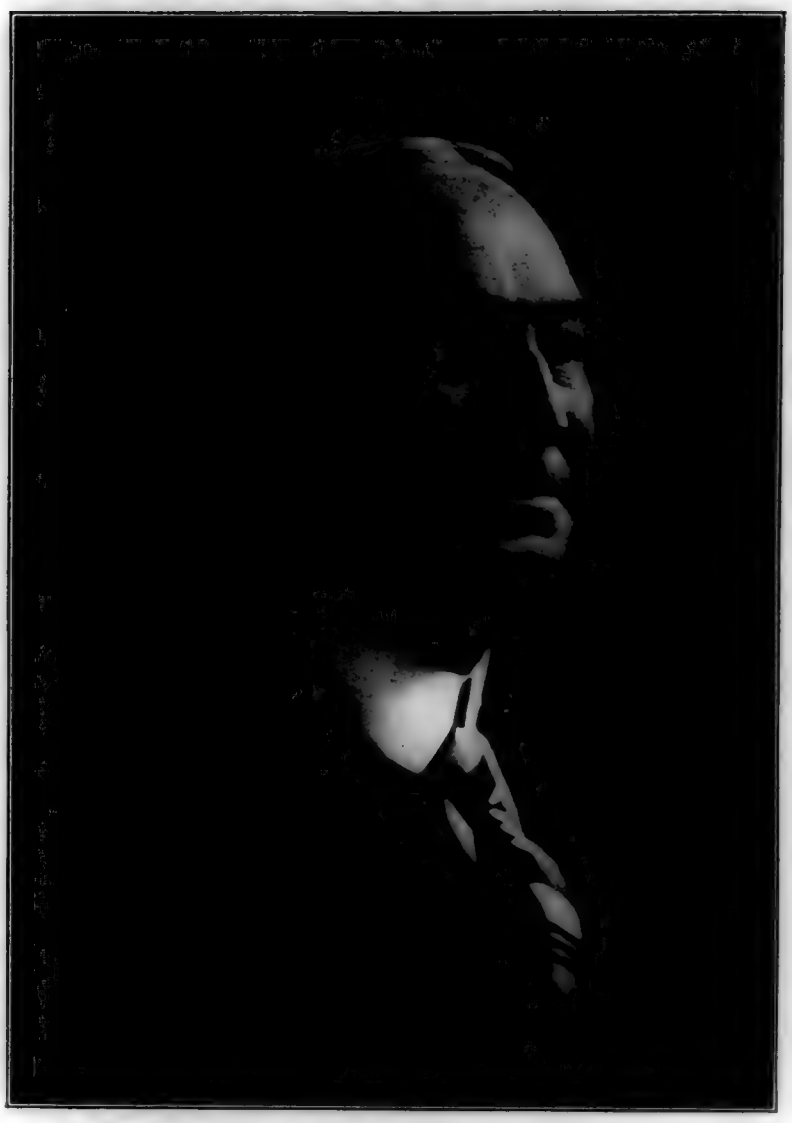
Charles E. Holmes had his attention turned to agricultural pursuits when still a small lad, his early energies being devoted to assisting with the lighter duties about the farm. These increased with the development of his strength and sense of responsibility during the passing years, and by the time he had attained his maturity he was familiar with the practical methods of agriculture. For twenty-two years he has now lived on his present farm, leasing the land from Mr. A. B. Anderson. Mr. Holmes is a practical man and devotes his fields to such cereals as he feels are best adapted to the soil, the plowing, planting and harvesting being given his personal attention. In connection with general farming he raises stock, making a specialty of feeding cattle and hogs for the market. His farm is fully equipped with all modern appliances, essential to the pursuit of agriculture and everything about the place is suggestive of the business sagacity and spirit of progress that invariably characterize Mr. Holmes' undertakings.

On the 28th of March, 1890, Mr. Holmes was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Rosene, adopted daughter of John Rosene, and they have become the parents of eleven children: Walter, Everett, William, Forrest, Laverne, Harold, Robert, Frankie, Ebbie, Wendell and Richard.

Ever since granted the right of franchise through naturalization, Mr. Holmes has given his support to the men and measures of the republican party, and at the present time is acting as school director. Fraternally he is a member of Oneida Camp, No. 555, M. W. A. Mr. Holmes is another energetic foreigner, who has clearly demonstrated that it is possible to attain prosperity in America by close application and unceasing industry, as he began without any capital save his ambition and determination of purpose.

WILLIAM STEPHENSON.

It is a notable fact that the native sons of Scotland who have come to our shores to delve with their hands and work with their brains have added a leaven in our melting-pot of nations that has left its stamp upon the character of our people infusing a firmer virility and a note of greater seriousness. Of this type is William Stephenson, born January 20, 1833, the son of George and Isabella (McMillan) Stephenson. The father was a stone mason by trade and in the fall of 1850 came to America and took up his residence in New Orleans. Soon after, however, he moved northward and settled in Knox county, buying a farm of eighty acres in Copley township, where he lived until the time of his death in 1883. The death of the mother occurred at an earlier date. There were nine children in the Stephenson family, of whom one died before they left Scotland, while only three are living now, namely: William Stephenson; his brother, George Stephenson of Oneida, whose biography appears elsewhere in this volume; and a sister, Mrs. David Hamilton. The father was a republican in politics and with his family worshipped in the Presbyterian church.



William Stephenson received a common-school education and became self-supporting at an early age, securing employment with Robert McCormick for his first year at a wage of eight dollars a month. He worked seven years more under several other employers until, in 1857, he engaged in farming on his own account and continued in this calling, operating a farm of eighty acres in Ontario township, until 1906 when he retired, and removed to Oneida. He owns no land now but has disposed of his holdings and is freed from all the responsibilities which the possession of property entails.

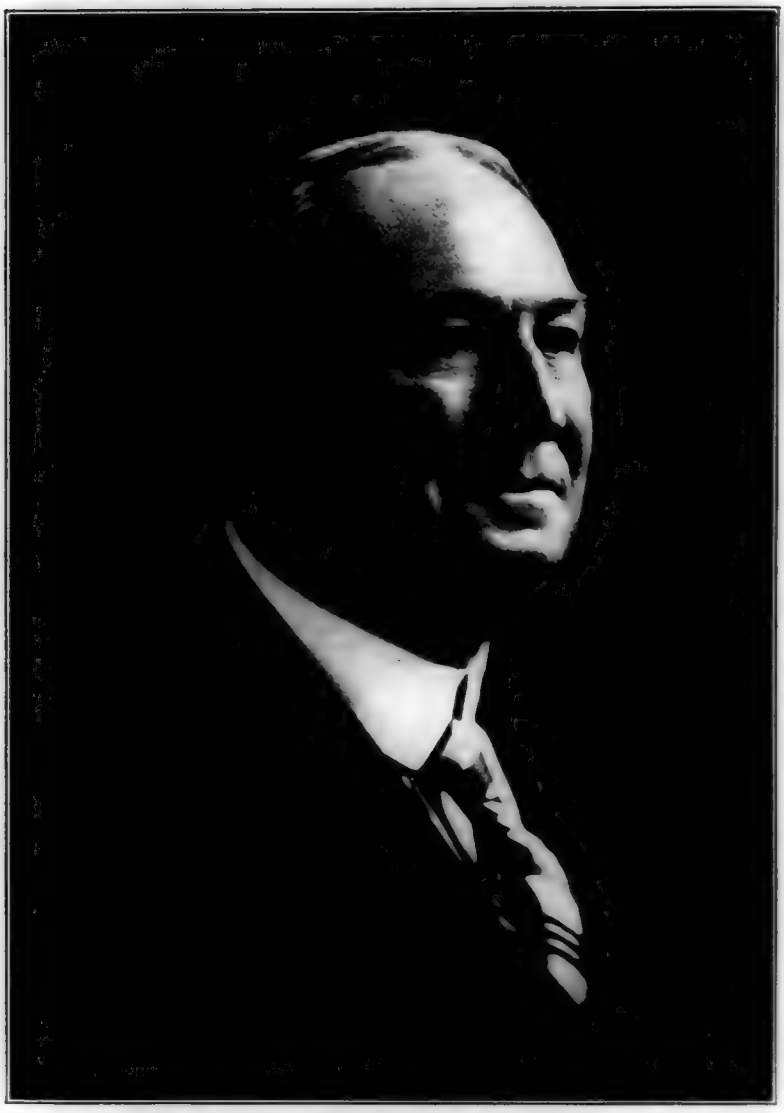
On November 25, 1858, the marriage of William Stephenson and Miss Susan Cornish, a daughter of Thomas and Susan Cornish of Knox county, occurred. Mrs. Stephenson passed away in November, 1882, leaving two children: Elizabeth, the wife of John McCullough, who lives on a farm at Princeton, Illinois, and has two children, both high-school graduates; and Fred, a graduate of the high school of Oneida, who is in business at St. Joseph, Missouri, is married and has one child. Mr. Stephenson married again on May 6, 1886, his second union being with Rachel Wood, a daughter of Alexander and Mary (Phillips) Wood, and a native of Scotland. Her father died when she was a little girl and her mother later became the wife of Lockhart Leighton, coming to this country in 1853 and settling in Copley township, Knox county.

In his fraternal relations Mr. Stephenson is affiliated with the Oneida Lodge, F. & A. M. In politics he is a strong worker in the republican party, supporting this party's measures and voting for its candidates. He served twelve years as alderman of Oneida. Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson are members of the Congregational church and give their active and sincere aid in spreading the spirit of Christianity by their devotion to truth and righteousness and their good-will towards men.

LAKE W. SANBORN.

Lake W. Sanborn, well known in Galesburg as a representative of insurance interests and also as secretary of the Mechanics' Homestead & Loan Association, was born in Brimfield, Peoria county, Illinois, January 10, 1845, his parents being David and Sophia A. (Ramsay) Sanborn, who were natives of Vermont and of Walpole, New Hampshire, respectively. The former was left an orphan at an early age and in his childhood became a member of the household of the Lake family of Vermont. His first employment was in connection with the sale of the old Mitchell school map and atlas but, feeling that his business opportunities in New England were more limited than he desired and that better advantages could be obtained in the middle west, he made his way to the Mississippi valley in 1846 and settled at Winchester, Illinois, where he lived for a year. He next removed to Peoria county, where he engaged in farming until 1851, when he came to Knox county, settling in Galesburg. He was a man of high character, resolute and purposeful, and at all times held to advanced standards of manhood and citizenship. While in Peoria county he was chosen to represent his district in the state legislature. After coming to Galesburg he occupied a prominent and honored position in financial circles in connection

Lake W. Sanborn.



William Stephenson received a common-school education and became self-supporting at an early age, securing employment with Robert McCormick for his first year at a wage of eight dollars a month. He worked seven years more under several other employers until, in 1857, he engaged in farming on his own account and continued in this calling, operating a farm of eighty acres in Ontario township, until 1906 when he retired, and removed to Oneida. He owns no land now but has disposed of his holdings and is freed from all the responsibilities which the possession of property entails.

On November 25, 1858, the marriage of William Stephenson and Miss Susan Cornish, a daughter of Thomas and Susan Cornish of Knox county, occurred. Mrs. Stephenson passed away in November, 1882, leaving two children: Elizabeth, the wife of John McCullough, who lives on a farm at Princeton, Illinois, and has two children, both high-school graduates; and Fred, a graduate of the high school of Oneida, who is in business at St. Joseph, Missouri, is married and has one child. Mr. Stephenson married again on May 6, 1886, his second union being with Rachel Wood, a daughter of Alexander and Mary (Phillips) Wood, and a native of Scotland. Her father died when she was a little girl and her mother later became the wife of Lockhart Leighton, coming to this country in 1853 and settling in Copley township, Knox county.

In his fraternal relations Mr. Stephenson is affiliated with the Oneida Lodge, F. & A. M. In politics he is a strong worker in the republican party, supporting this party's measures and voting for its candidates. He served twelve years as alderman of Oneida. Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson are members of the Congregational church and give their active and sincere aid in spreading the spirit of Christianity by their devotion to truth and righteousness and their good-will towards men.

LAKE W. SANBORN.

Lake W. Sanborn, well known in Galesburg as a representative of insurance interests and also as secretary of the Mechanics' Homestead & Loan Association, was born in Brimfield, Peoria county, Illinois, January 10, 1845, his parents being David and Sophia A. (Ramsay) Sanborn, who were natives of Vermont and of Walpole, New Hampshire, respectively. The former was left an orphan at an early age and in his childhood became a member of the household of the Lake family of Vermont. His first employment was in connection with the sale of the old Mitchell school map and atlas but, feeling that his business opportunities in New England were more limited than he desired and that better advantages could be obtained in the middle west, he made his way to the Mississippi valley in 1846 and settled at Winchester, Illinois, where he lived for a year. He next removed to Peoria county, where he engaged in farming until 1851, when he came to Knox county, settling in Galesburg. He was a man of high character, resolute and purposeful, and at all times held to advanced standards of manhood and citizenship. While in Peoria county he was chosen to represent his district in the state legislature. After coming to Galesburg he occupied a prominent and honored position in financial circles in connection with the old Second National Bank, which he organized and of which he remained the president for forty years. At length that institution was merged into the People's Trust & Savings Bank. Nor was this his only contribution to the business stability and progress of the county and district. He was the first treasurer of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company; for years was treasurer of Lombard College; and was long actively interested in the development of Galesburg, his labors proving of practical benefit in its upbuilding and progress. During the period of the Civil war he served as United States assessor and for three years was city assessor of Galesburg. In every relation of life his record would bear the closest investigation and scrutiny and stands as an example that others may well follow. He died in 1883, when more than sixty-nine years of age, and his wife, surviving him, passed away in January, 1910, in her ninetieth year. Both were members of the Universalist church and their recognition of the obligations of life was manifest in a helpful spirit toward all mankind. They became the parents of a family of six children, of whom four are now living, namely: William D., a resident of San Francisco, California; Ellen S., the wife of Professor George Churchill; Mary S., the wife of James K. Mitchell; and Lake W. The last three are all residents of Galesburg. Two daughters, Lelia R. and Hattie, have both passed away, the former in early womanhood and the latter when six years of age.

Lake W. Sanborn.

Lake W. Sanborn, so called because of his father's appreciation of the kindness of those who had given to him parental care and protection when he was left an orphan, was but six years of age when the family came to Galesburg and here he has since made his home. After attending the public schools he continued his education in Lombard College and later served an apprenticeship at the machinist's trade but put aside all business cares and other personal considerations when the country became involved in Civil war, enlisting as a member of Company D, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, in 1864. He was then but nineteen years of age and he served until the close of hostilities, holding the rank of sergeant. After the war he followed his trade for a time and then spent two years as a clerk in the employ of H. A. Watkins & Brother. He entered the insurance field in 1867 and therein still continues, his usefulness and, therefore, his success increasing in that field. In 1882 he organized the Mechanics' Homestead & Loan Association, nor did this comprise the limit of his activities, and his serviceable work is a factor in the upbuilding of Galesburg. In 1905 he was called to the office of mayor and during a two years' term gave to the city a businesslike administration characterized by needed reform and by substantial progress. In 1907-8 he was president of the United States League of Building and Loan Associations and during the past ten years has been treasurer of the State League of Building and Loan Associations of Illinois. For years he was a director of the old Second National Bank and he also promoted the People's Traction Company, building an interurban line from Galesburg to Abingdon. His brother, William D. Sanborn, now living in San Francisco, California, has been general western agent for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad for twenty-six years.

Mr. Sanborn has ever given his political allegiance to the republican party nor has he seen cause to change his views, believing that the party has ever endeavored to promote progress and to uphold the national honor in all the multitudinous phases of our national and international relations. Mr. Sanborn is widely known in the Masonic fraternity, holding membership in Vesper Lodge, A. F. & A. M.; Galesburg Chapter, No. 46, R. A. M.; Galesburg Commandery, K. T.; and Mohammed Temple of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is also identified with Galesburg Lodge, No. 142, I. O. O. F.; Galesburg Lodge, No. 894, B. P. O. E.; and sustains pleasant relations with his old army comrades as a member of General Shields Post, No. 45, G. A. R. His activities have touched many lines and many interests and have never been selfishly centered upon his own advancement but have also constituted a valuable factor in the city's progress and improvement. His long residence in Galesburg and his sterling characteristics have made his acquaintance a very wide one and the circle of his friends is almost coextensive therewith.

LEWIS W. PETERSON.

Lewis W. Peterson, who is residing on his farm in Sparta township, Knox county, was born in Gestrikland, Sweden, on the 22d of February, 1858. He is a son of Olaf Peterson and a grandson of Peter Peterson, who was the owner of a very large estate in Sweden, which had been in the Peterson family for many generations. His death occurred in 1863, when he was seventy years of age. Olaf Peterson was born in 1818 and died the second day after arriving in America in 1868. In his native land he had been the owner of a farm of nine hundred acres, thus being one of the prominent and extensive agriculturists of his district. He was a member of the Swedish Lutheran church. He was married to Carrie Peterson, whose birth occurred in 1825 and who was a daughter of Peter and Carrie Hanson. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson were the parents of six children who came to America, four of whom were: Lewis W., the subject of this sketch; Betsy, the wife of William N. Olson, of Galesburg; Christine, who became the wife of A. J. Hubbard, a resident of South Dakota; and Cora, deceased, who was married to Joe Gehring. Mrs. Peterson went to Oneida with her family after her husband's death and resided there for three years before removing to Sparta township, where they were engaged in farming for three years. The mother died on a farm east of Wataga in 1893.

At the age of seventeen years Lewis W. Peterson began managing his mother's farm, and continued till about the age of twenty-six, when he married and began farming for himself. He continued his agricultural pursuits and in 1888 purchased his present home, where he is now successfully engaged in general farming, stock-raising and threshing, always operating his own machinery. By persistent effort and hard labor he has brought his property under a high state of cultivation and is accounted one of the most able and successful agriculturists in the township.

In 1883 Mr. Peterson was married to Miss Kate Faulkner, whose birth occurred January 12, 1865, and who died on the 16th of August, 1910, at the age of forty-five years. She was a daughter of George and Bertha (Emerson) Faulkner, who were also engaged in agricultural pursuits and stock-raising. Mrs. Faulkner's birth occurred in 1838 and her family first located in Racine, Wisconsin, before settling in Knox county. The grandfather, William J. Faulkner, who was a native of New York state, was the first of the Faulkner family to locate in Knox county. He was one of seven children, all of whom engaged in agricultural pursuits. His death occurred on the old homstead in April, 1875, when he was ninety-one years of age. George Faulkner was born on the 13th of November, 1827, in Orange county, New York, and removed with his parents in 1839 to Sparta township. Throughout his life Mr. Faulkner was a stanch republican and did much to further the success of his party in Sparta township. His death occured in February, 1904. In her early life Mrs. Peterson was a member of the Methodist church but one year before her death affiliated with the Congregational church. She was a member of the Ladies' Aid Society and was eligible to membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Faulkner family, who were residents of New York city, having been represented in the Revolutionary war. To Mr. and Mrs. Peterson three children have been born. Harry was born February 6, 1888, and married Miss Eleanor Douglas Gilmer, a daughter of John Gilmer, of Quincy, who is state's attorney, and whose mother-in-law, Nancy N. Crippen, is the oldest living person in Adams county. Harry Peterson is at present aiding in the management and cultivation of his father's farm. Edith, who is eighteen years of age, is employed in a clerical capacity. One child died in infancy.

Mr. Peterson is a member of the Congregational church and is active in its various departments, being superintendent of the Sunday school and one of the deacons of the church. In politics he is a republican and has frequently held office, having been road commissioner and at present is serving as school trustee. Though born across the water, Mr. Peterson is thoroughly American in thought and feeling and is patriotic and sincere in his love for the land of his adoption. His career is identified with the agricultural development of Knox county, where he has met with unqualified success and where he is an honored and respected citizen.

JAMES TANNEY.

James Tanney, the owner and manager of the largest general mercantile store in St. Augustine, Knox county, was born in County Roscommon, Ireland, August 31, 1857. He is the third child born of the marriage of Patrick and Catharine (Tiernan) Tanney, also natives of County Roscommon. The father, who was a gardener and farmer in the old country, emigrated to the United States with his wife and family in 1857, first locating in Upper Sandusky, Ohio. After living there for five or six years they removed to Macomb, McDonough county, Illinois, residing there until 1878, when they came to Knox county. Upon their arrival here they located on a farm adjacent to St. Augustine, and there Mr. Tanney passed away in 1910, at the age of eighty-five years and was laid to rest in the Catholic cemetery of St. Augustine. He always took an interest in local political affairs, giving his support to the candidates of the democratic party. The mother is still living at the age of seventy-five years and continues to reside upon the family homestead. The family of Mr. and Mrs.

Tanney numbered eight: P. H., who is a farmer of Warren county; Winifred, the wife of S. S. Strickland of Galesburg; James, our subject; John, chairman of the grievance committee of the Burlington Railroad, Lincoln, Nebraska; Anna, the wife of E. P. Burk, a farmer of St. Augustine, Illinois; Kate, the widow of John O'Mara, now residing with her mother; Thomas L., a farmer of Fulton county, Illinois; and Frank, who is a train dispatcher of Galesburg.

As he was only an infant when his parents emigrated to the United States, practically the entire life of James Tanney has been spent in this country. He attended the common schools of Sciota, Illinois, in the acquirement of an education, after which he learned the carpenter's trade. He remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-three years of age when he went to Peoria, following his trade in that city for three years. In 1883 he removed to Kansas City, where for seven years he engaged in carpentry work. At the expiration of that time he returned to Knox county, and here continued to pursue his vocation as a carpenter for six years, and then came to St. Augustine and established the business he has ever since conducted. This has proven to be very lucrative, and in addition to his fine mercantile establishment Mr. Tanney has acquired quite extensive real-estate interests in St. Augustine.

In 1887 Mr. Tanney established a home for himself by his marriage to Miss Mary Comer, a native of Ohio. Four children have been born of this union: Catherine Frances, the wife of Fred Barnfield, of Indian Point township; and Anna Gertrude, Mary Lillian, and Edward Joseph, all of whom are at home.

The family are all communicants of the Roman Catholic church, and Mr. Tanney is a member of the Knights of Columbus, of Galesburg, and the Modern Woodmen of America, of St. Augustine. In matters politic he accords his support to the men and measures of the democratic party and served for one term as justice of the peace, but his extensive personal interests have prevented his taking a prominent part in municipal affairs of political nature.

JOHN LAFFERTY.

John Lafferty, who is a prosperous farmer of eighty acres, residing on section 13, Victoria township, was born in Lynn township, February 12, 1849. His father, John Lafferty, was a native of Ashland, Ohio, and came to Illinois in 1839, settling in Lynn township, where he purchased one and one-half sections of land and resided until his death, when he had reached the age of sixty-seven years. His wife, Sarah (Slocum) Lafferty, whom he wedded in Ohio and who was also a native of that state, survived him by several years, dying at the age of eighty-two. They are both buried in McClennaghan cemetery. In connection with farming the father was an auctioneer. In politics he was a republican and very active in public work, serving as supervisor of the county, as justice of the peace and as constable. In their family were seven children: Eleezer, Elias and Euphemia, all of whom were born in Ohio; and Edward, Royal, John and Ophelia, who were born in Lynn township, Knox county, Illinois.

John Lafferty, of this review, received his education in the common schools of Lynn township and after his school days worked on his father's home place until 1870, when he settled on his present farm, which then belonged to his father. He took the land in hand in raw condition, undertook its cultivation, erected all the buildings and made all of the general improvements. He now has a well developed place, where he engages in general farming and sells yearly his products at a good margin of profit.

On the 15th of November, 1870, Mr. Lafferty was united in marriage to Miss Vienna Stettler, who was a native of West Virginia, born December 17, 1852. Her parents were Robert and Margaret (Smith) Stettler, both of whom were born and reared in West Virginia. The father, who was a democrat in his political views, served in the Confederate army during the Civil war and died of fever while in service, at the age of thirty-nine, in West Virginia. The mother died at the age of seventy-three and is buried in West Jersey, Stark county, Illinois. They were the parents of five children: Alice; Vienna, now Mrs. John Lafferty; Mary; Christopher; and Lemon. To Mr. and Mrs. Lafferty have been born ten children: Loverna, who is the wife of Ed McNeal, of Peoria, Illinois, and the mother of one child, Garland; Laura, now Mrs. Harry Miller, of Victoria township; Pless, of Maquon, Illinois, who married Rosa Sandal and is the father of five children, Charles, Edwin, Mary, Agnes and Alice; Walter, who married Emma Parmelee and is principal of the Peoria high school; Alfred, who is a practicing physician and surgeon of La Rose, Marshall county, Illinois, and is married to Eleanor Scott; William, at home; Florence, who is engaged in teaching school; Fairy, who is a music teacher and the wife of Walter Heer; Venus, who attends the common schools; and Wylie, who is a pupil in the high school at Maquon, Illinois.

Mr. Lafferty gives his political allegiance to the republican party but has neither sought nor desired office. A man of strict integrity and of exemplary habits, he is one of the best and most favorably known citizens of this vicinity.

CARL S. BURNSIDE.

Carl S. Burnside, who is engaged in the operation of six hundred acres of land in Chestnut township, four hundred and forty of which he owns, is numbered among the highly successful and prosperous agriculturists of Knox county. He was born on the farm, where he now resides on the 1st of April, 1873, and is a son of William and Julian (Terry) Burnside. The father is a native of Ohio, whence he was brought when a little child, to Illinois by his parents, who located in Knox county and here spent the remainder of their lives. His father, who was an agriculturist, acquired a tract of government land, in Chestnut township, to the cultivation and improvement of which he devoted his attention during the remainder of his active career. It was there William Burnside was reared to manhood, and educated and trained for an agriculturist, this vocation engaging his energies until his retirement in 1893, since which time he has made his home in Galesburg. The mother, who was a native of Chestnut township, passed away in 1895. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Burnside there were born six children: Mark, who is a farmer in Chestnut township; Nellie, the wife of D. E. Meeks, a resident of Galesburg; Charles, who is living in Maquon, Illinois; Albert

G., who is a resident of Spirit Lake, Iowa; Carl S., our subject; and Fanny, who is deceased.

The entire life of Carl S. Burnside has been spent in the community, where he is now living. His boyhood and youth were very similar in every respect to those of other lads of the neighborhood. He attended the district schools in the acquirement of his early education, assisted with the work of the fields and indulged in such sports as usually afforded amusement to country youths. After completing the course of the country schools he went to Quincy, where he pursued a business course, thus acquiring a more comprehensive knowledge of modern commercial methods. Returning home he once more resumed agricultural pursuits, having decided to adopt farming for his life work. He has been very successful in his undertakings, having applied himself to the intelligent direction of his affairs in accordance with the best accepted modern methods of scientific farming. Clear judgment, practical ideas and unremitting energy are the secrets of his prosperity. In addition to his own fine farm Mr. Burnside is operating one hundred and sixty acres of land which he rents, thus making the aggregate of the acreage he has under cultivation six hundred. He is also the owner of a tract of land in the vicinity of Hereford, Texas.

Mr. Burnside has not married. He is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, of Galesburg and of the Galesburg Club. His political support he accords to the republican party, but his extensive interests have always demanded so much of his time as not to permit of an active part in township affairs. Mr. Burnside is constantly forging ahead, his business sagacity and progressive ideas making of him a practical agriculturist, who realizes that success in farming as in any other vocation depends upon system and method in the execution of the work.

THOMAS JEFFERSON HUBBELL.

Thomas Jefferson Hubbell is now practically living retired in Altona, although he is filling the office of justice of the peace, being one of the oldest in that position in Knox county, having first been elected in 1888. His long retention in this office is incontrovertible proof of the fairness and impartiality of his decisions and of his devotion to duty. He was born in Victoria township, this county, April 14, 1842, and is therefore numbered among the older of its native sons. His father, M. C. Hubbell, was born in Seneca county, New York, April 4, 1806, and reached a ripe old age, passing away December 28, 1884, his remains being interred at Victoria. His educational privileges in youth were quite limited for circumstances forced him to begin the battle of life early. Thus when a young lad he worked on a small farm belonging to his parents. He was only seven years of age when his father died in 1813, and at the age of ten years he accompanied his mother on her removal to Delaware county, Ohio, remaining at home with the family, consisting of two brothers and four sisters, in order to aid in the support of his mother. The burdens and responsibilities of life rested heavily on young shoulders and yet he bravely took up the duties that awaited him. After reaching manhood he married Philena Buck, who was born

THOMAS J. HUBBELL

G., who is a resident of Spirit Lake, Iowa; Carl S., our subject; and Fanny, who is deceased.

The entire life of Carl S. Burnside has been spent in the community, where he is now living. His boyhood and youth were very similar in every respect to those of other lads of the neighborhood. He attended the district schools in the acquirement of his early education, assisted with the work of the fields and indulged in such sports as usually afforded amusement to country youths. After completing the course of the country schools he went to Quincy, where he pursued a business course, thus acquiring a more comprehensive knowledge of modern commercial methods. Returning home he once more resumed agricultural pursuits, having decided to adopt farming for his life work. He has been very successful in his undertakings, having applied himself to the intelligent direction of his affairs in accordance with the best accepted modern methods of scientific farming. Clear judgment, practical ideas and unremitting energy are the secrets of his prosperity. In addition to his own fine farm Mr. Burnside is operating one hundred and sixty acres of land which he rents, thus making the aggregate of the acreage he has under cultivation six hundred. He is also the owner of a tract of land in the vicinity of Hereford, Texas.

Mr. Burnside has not married. He is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, of Galesburg and of the Galesburg Club. His political support he accords to the republican party, but his extensive interests have always demanded so much of his time as not to permit of an active part in township affairs. Mr. Burnside is constantly forging ahead, his business sagacity and progressive ideas making of him a practical agriculturist, who realizes that success in farming as in any other vocation depends upon system and method in the execution of the work.

THOMAS JEFFERSON HUBBELL.

Thomas Jefferson Hubbell is now practically living retired in Altona, although he is filling the office of justice of the peace, being one of the oldest in that position in Knox county, having first been elected in 1888. His long retention in this office is incontrovertible proof of the fairness and impartiality of his decisions and of his devotion to duty. He was born in Victoria township, this county, April 14, 1842, and is therefore numbered among the older of its native sons. His father, M. C. Hubbell, was born in Seneca county, New York, April 4, 1806, and reached a ripe old age, passing away December 28, 1884, his remains being interred at Victoria. His educational privileges in youth were quite limited for circumstances forced him to begin the battle of life early. Thus when a young lad he worked on a small farm belonging to his parents. He was only seven years of age when his father died in 1813, and at the age of ten years he accompanied his mother on her removal to Delaware county, Ohio, remaining at home with the family, consisting of two brothers and four sisters, in order to aid in the support of his mother. The burdens and responsibilities of life rested heavily on young shoulders and yet he bravely took up the duties that awaited him. After reaching manhood he married Philena Buck, who was born in October, 1808, in Christian county. She was but four years of age when during the progress of the war of 1812 she was taken to Ohio by her uncle, living with his family until her marriage. Her uncle continued a resident farmer of Ohio up to the time of his death. During the pioneer epoch in the history of Knox county Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Hubbell came to this state and the father secured land and devoted his attention to general agricultural pursuits. Following his demise in 1884 his widow ever remained true to his memory and passed away in Victoria, January 21, 1897. In the family were ten children of whom four are yet living: Phoebe Philena, now the wife of N. J. Johnson, of McCook, Nebraska; Joseph L., who is living retired in Nebraska; Ruth, the wife of David Swickard, a resident of Victoria; and Thomas J., of this review, who is the youngest living member of the family.

THOMAS J. HUBBELL

The boyhood days of Thomas J. Hubbell were spent upon the home farm and almost as soon as old enough to handle the plow, he began work in the fields, to which he devoted his time from early spring planting until crops were harvested in the late autumn. In the winter seasons he attended school until twenty years of age, when he put aside all personal considerations that he might offer his services to his country, then engaged in Civil war. He enlisted on the 11th of August, 1862, for three years as a member of Company K, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain George W. Reynolds, his regiment being assigned to duty with the Army of the Cumberland. He could not serve out the entire term of his enlistment because of disability and was discharged on the 11th of January, 1865, at Clarksville, Tennessee.

When no longer able to remain at the front Mr. Hubbell returned to his home in Victoria township and made farming his life work, continuing actively in the labor of the fields until 1886, when he retired from business life and removed to Altona, where he has since enjoyed a well earned and well merited rest. While upon the farm he carefully and systematically cultivated his fields and his well directed business interests and unfaltering diligence brought him the competence that now enables him to rest from further labor.

On the 16th of March, 1867, Mr. Hubbell was united in marriage to Miss Matilda Bell, who was born near Belleville, Canada, on the 17th of February, 1846, a daughter of Peter and Emeline (Yaeger) Bell and a granddaughter of Fred Bell, of Canada. Her father, Peter Bell, followed farming in the Dominion until about 1863, when he crossed the border into the United States and made his way to Knox county, settling in Victoria township where he followed that occupation until his death, which occurred in 1895. His wife, who was of German descent, still survives him and is now living with a daughter in Missouri at the advanced age of ninety-seven years. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hubbell have been born the following children: George W., a resident farmer of Walnut Grove township, who married Mrs. Bell Lawrence, the widow of Thomas Lawrence; William H., of Campbell, Minnesota, who married Minnie Whitcomb and has two children, Ruth and Firn; and Charles A.

In his political views Mr. Hubbell has always been a republican, supporting the party which was the defense of the Union during the dark days of the Civil war, and has always been a member of reform and progress. He has made a most creditable record in office, having been elected justice of the peace in his township in 1888. He has since filled the position and is undoubtedly one of the oldest justices in years of continuous service in Knox county. He has made an excellent record in presiding over this court, his decisions being ever based upon the law and the equity of the case. He maintains pleasant relations with his old army comrades through his membership in the Grand Army post at Galesburg, and his religious belief is evidenced in his membership in the Methodist Episcopal church. His has been an active, useful and well spent life, devoted to duty and to the high principles in which he believes, and there is in his entire life history no esoteric chapter.

REV. STUART M. CAMPBELL, D. D.

One of the strongest forces in the moral development and progress of Galesburg is the First Presbyterian church, of which Dr. Stuart M. Campbell is the pastor. Thoroughly versed in the church doctrines and in the principles of theology, he has, too, that broad human sympathy which enables him to reach out in helpful spirit toward all whom he seeks to influence in their choice of the things of life that are most worth while. He first became connected with Galesburg during his college days, for he was a student at Knox. Later his work called him to various other fields and in June, 1907, he returned to this city to accept his present pastorate.

Dr. Campbell is of Canadian birth, a native of the province of Ontario. He was born July 13, 1859, being one of the twelve children of Thomas and Margaret (McAlpine) Campbell, natives of Edinburgh, Scotland. The former was a son of Thomas Campbell, who lived at Thurso, Scotland, where his son Thomas was born. He was a stonecutter, thus providing for his family, which numbered three sons and a daughter. The maternal grandfather of Dr. Campbell was Thomas McAlpine, a native of Prestonpans, Scotland. Both he and his wife lived to a ripe old age and reared a large family.

Thomas Campbell, the father of Dr. Campbell, spent his youthful days in Edinburgh, Scotland, where he became a merchant tailor. He crossed the Atlantic to Canada when forty years of age and lived for some time at Picton and at Galt, Ontario, but is now living retired in Toronto, at the venerable age of ninety years. He is a Presbyterian in religious faith, as was his wife, who died in 1896, at the age of about sixty-five years. In their family were seven sons and five daughters, of whom nine reached adult age: John; Thomas; Jessie, the wife of George W. Scott, of Toronto; James; Margaret, the wife of William McMaster, of Toronto; Walter; Charles, deceased; Agnes, the wife of J. H. G. Russell, of Winnipeg, Canada; and Stuart M. Three daughters of the family died in infancy.

Dr. Campbell spent his youthful days in his native country, leaving Picton at the age of ten years to become a resident of Galt, where he was reared to manhood and acquired his preliminary education. He afterward devoted several years to the newspaper and printing business in Galt and then crossed the border to seek the opportunities of this country, where competition is greater but where advancement is more quickly secured. He made his way to Chicago where he worked as a printer until 1884. Realizing the fact that intellectual progress must constitute the basis of success in professional lines, he then entered Knox College in the fall of that year and was graduated with the class of 1888. In the meantime he had determined to enter upon the active work of the ministry and with that end in view became a student in the McCormick Theological Seminary of Chicago, in which he remained for a year. He afterward spent two years in the Princeton Theological Seminary of New Jersey and was graduated in May, 1891. Ordained to the ministry, he became pastor of the Presbyterian church at Lyons Farms, near Newark, New Jersey, where he continued until the fall of 1894, when he accepted the pastorate of the Emerald Avenue Presbyterian church in Chicago. In 1903 he was called to the pastorate of the Second Presbyterian church of Evanston, Illinois, and in June, 1907, came to Galesburg as minister of the First Presbyterian church of this city, with which he has since been identified.

On the 10th of September, 1889, Dr. Campbell was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Martha Eunice Kent, who was born in Akron, Ohio, a daughter of Oscar and Charity Kent, who were likewise natives of the Buckeye state and resided upon a farm near Akron. There her father died a number of years ago and her mother passed away in Chicago in 1909, at the age of seventy-eight years. They were members of the Christian church and they had a family of two sons and four daughters, George, William, Cordelia, Alice, Martha and Mary. Four children have been born unto Dr. and Mrs. Campbell, Gladys M., Helen, Stuart M. and Marion K. During the four years of Dr. Campbell's pastorate here he has carefully systematized the work and the different societies and organizations of the church are now in a flourishing condition. He is an earnest, logical and effective speaker, a deep student not only of the Bible but of humanity as well, and is thus able to make of his teachings a practical force for good in the lives of those who come under his ministry.

G. W. VAN BUREN.

G. W. Van Buren, formerly a wagonmaker and blacksmith of Victoria, now retired, was born February 15, 1831. A native of Delaware county, New York, he is the son of Peter Van Buren, a well known farmer of Victoria township. Peter Van Buren was born in Delaware county, New York, in 1800, and was reared and educated there. He married in early youth Charity Sornberger, also of Delaware county, New York. She was the daughter of George Sornberger, who later was a resident of Knox county, Illinois, where he died. Mr. and Mrs. Van Buren came to Illinois in 1838 and settled on a farm of one hundred and five acres, one and one-half miles south of Victoria, where they lived during the remainder of their lives, he dying at the age of fifty-six and she, at the age of sixty-five years. They are both buried in the Victoria cemetery. Mr. Van Buren was a very prominent man in his community and for ten and one-half years was justice of the peace of Victoria township. He was a democrat in politics and both he and Mrs. Van Buren were devoted workers in the Methodist Episcopal church, of which they were members. They were the parents of nine children, of whom G. W. was the third in order of birth. The others were: Ambrose; Benjamin, who lived and died in Oregon; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Moses R. Aldridge and is now deceased; Katherine, who married Franklin Force and is also deceased; Martha, now Mrs. John W. Harold, of Missouri; Mary M., who married Abraham Files, of Kewanee, Illinois; Helen, who is the wife of Novates Tiffany, of Nebraska; and John, who was murdered in Idaho.

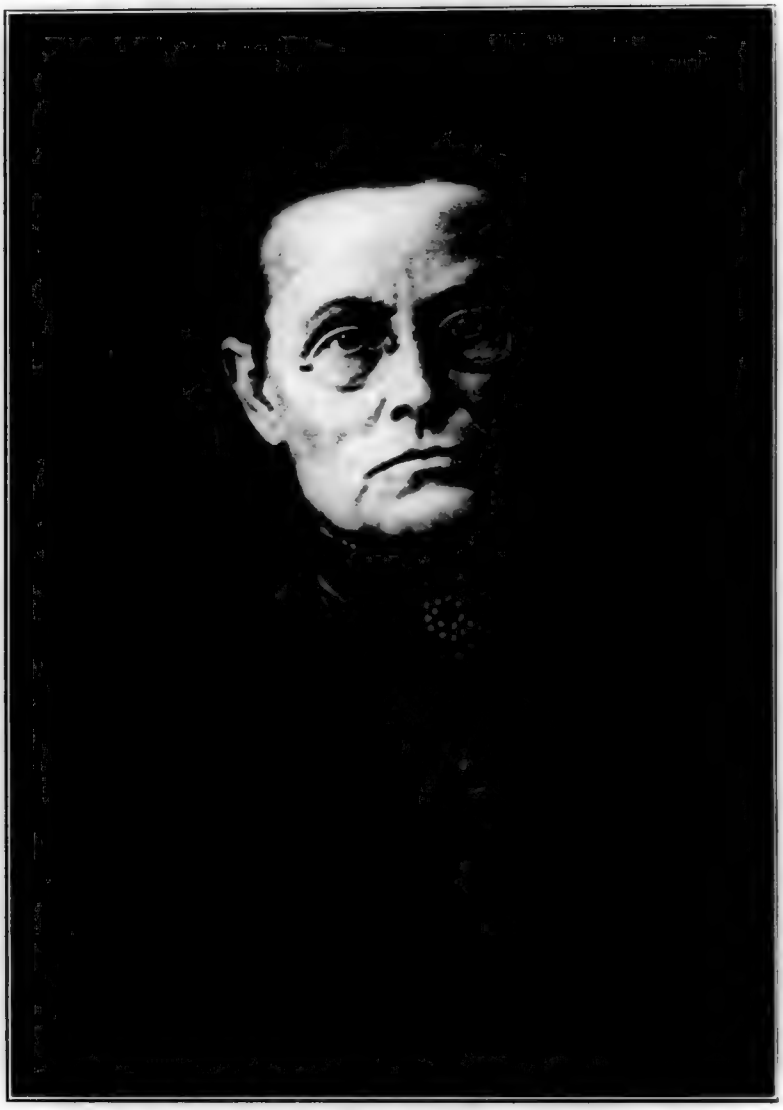
G. W. Van Buren was six years of age when his parents came to Victoria. He was educated in an old-time, rudely constructed log schoolhouse with its desks made of slabs supported by pegs that were fastened in holes bored into the wall, and with its seats that were long wooden benches. After his school days he learned the carpenter trade, working for six years all over this part of the county. He then took up farming, managing and operating the old homestead until 1861, at which time he came to Victoria and began the work of wagonmaking and blacksmithing, a business which for forty-seven years he successfully pursued, retiring in 1908.

He was married in 1857 to Emma J. Force, who came as a young girl with her parents, Thomas and Phoebe (Wiley) Force, from New York to Knox county. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Van Buren but the eldest, an infant girl, died at the age of six months. The second child, John, who is a resident of Victoria, is a carpenter and contractor, and in the strawberry business. He married Lulu Tripp and they are the parents of two children, Edna and Bessie. Arthur, deceased, married Grace Cummings, who is and has been for five years postmistress at Victoria. They have one child, Marie. Cora, the wife of William Hosford, of Michigan, has no children. Mary Emma, the wife of John Cooke, lives in Truro township, Knox county, and has nine children, Bernice, Mabel, Sydney, Van, Calvert, Phyllis, Kenneth, Margaret and Harlan. Alice, the wife of John Doak, resides in Copley township and has one son, Dale. Charles E. married Ella Rice, a daughter of Amos Rice. Mrs. Van Buren, the mother of these children, a lifelong member of the Methodist Episcopal church, died in July, 1904.



Mr. Van Buren has been an active member of the Methodist Episcopal church since he was twenty years of age and has given it faithful service, having held almost all of the church offices. He is a republican in politics, has given much time to public service, and has at different times in his life held most of the town offices. Few men have had the opportunity to render to their community such long and efficient service as has Mr. Van Buren. Eighty-one years of age, having lived in the county more than seventy-four years, he has seen its development from the formative to the present state and has rendered at all times whatever help he could to bring about better conditions in his community.

A. L. HURD.

Many years of industry and enterprise devoted to agricultural pursuits enabled A. L. Hurd to acquire a competence that now permits him to live retired in full enjoyment of all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. His birth occurred in Portage county, Ohio, May 2, 1837, his father being Nehemiah Hurd, a native of the state of New York, but a resident of Ohio during the greater part of his life. In 1851 he removed with his family to Illinois, locating on a farm in Knox county, to the further cultivation and development of which he devoted his energies during the remainder of his active years.

A. L. HURD

MRS. A. L. HURD

A. L. Hurd was a lad of thirteen years when he left his native state, in the common schools of which he began the education that was completed in those of Illinois. After he had mastered the common branches he laid aside his school books and gave his entire attention to the work of the home farm, in the operation of which he had been assisting his father when not engaged with his studies. In 1863 he responded to his country's call for volunteers and enlisted in Company C, Eighty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving until peace was restored. When mustered out he returned to farming, continuing to devote his efforts to this occupation until 1891, when he withdrew from the active work of the fields and came to Williamsfield, where he has ever since lived retired. Mr. Hurd owns a farm of one hundred and thirty seven and a half acres of farming land in Truro township, that he successfully operated for many years. In connection with the cultivation of his fields he also engaged in stock-raising, both branches of the business proving to be very remunerative.

On February 12, 1868, Mr. Hurd's plans for a home had their culmination in his marriage to Miss Eliza Jane Balch, a native of New Hampshire, born June 15, 1847. In his political views Mr. Hurd is loyal to the principles of the republican party, the policy of which he has always indorsed, and he is an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic. Mr. Hurd feels that he has most miraculously escaped physical injuries on many occasions, as he went through the war without sustaining any wounds and a few years after returning, in 1870, he was cleaning a well on the farm when a rock slipped and the sides caved in, burying him beneath about sixteen feet of stone and dirt, but when rescued he was found to be without injury. He has always led a very unobtrusive life, his attention being entirely concentrated upon his own interests, unless he felt there was need of his personal services as when he fought on the battlefields of the south. The courage and the quiet and efficient manner in which he discharged his duties there has characterized him in all of his relations of life, and he has established a reputation for trustworthiness and reliability in the community where he resided for so many years, that would be a valuable asset to any man.

CLYDE T. LIKEN, D. D. S.

Dr. Clyde T. Liken, who enjoys a constantly increasing and lucrative dental practice in Knoxville, was born in Henry county, Illinois, on the 7th of May, 1878. His father, Thomas P. Liken, is a native of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, born on the 20th of November, 1846, and is a son of Thomas and Sarah (Sands) Liken. Thomas Liken, Sr., was a native of Ireland but was brought to America when only four years of age. His parents settled in Pennsylvania, and he was there reared to manhood. When Thomas Liken had reached adult age he married Sarah Sands, who was a native of the Keystone state, where the family remained until 1865, when they came to Illinois. Thomas Liken engaged in farming in Munson township, where he purchased land for ten dollars per acre.

His labors converted this raw land into a valuable tract and he continued a resident of the state until his death, which occurred about thirteen years ago. He had a brother, who was a soldier of the Civil war and died in Andersonville prison. One of his sons, William Liken, an uncle of Dr. Liken, served in the war between the north and south, enlisting in Company E, One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was killed at Petersburg, June 8, 1864.

The first nineteen years in the life of Thomas P. Liken were spent in his native state, but in 1865 he removed to Illinois with his parents, who settled in Henry county. There his father bought land and successfully engaged in farming, becoming one of the extensive property owners and prosperous agriculturists of the county. Thomas P. Liken was reared to manhood on his father's farm in Henry county, where he became proficient in tilling the fields and caring for the crops, thus qualifying himself for the vocation that he followed during the entire period of his active life. On December 27, 1871, Thomas P. Liken was united in marriage to Miss Rachel Victoria Hill, who was born in West Virginia, on the 27th of April, 1851, and was a representative of one of the old and honored pioneer families of Virginia. Her grandfather, John K. Hill, was born in that state and served as a soldier of the war of 1812. Her parents were William T. and Elizabeth (Lockhart) Hill, the latter a daughter of a Virginia planter. After her marriage to Mr. Hill, they lived for a time in the Old Dominion and in 1855 they removed westward to Henry county, Illinois, becoming early settlers of that part of the state, where they ever after made their home. Mr. Liken actively engaged in farming until eight years ago when he retired to Geneseo, where he and Mrs. Liken continue to make their home. They are the parents of two sons and three daughters, all of whom are living: William E., who is living on the old homestead in Henry county; Clyde T., our subject; Maude, the wife of Joseph Coombs, of Henry county; Myrtle, who married D. C. Shaw, a banker of Pittsburg; and Grace, who is living at home with her parents.

The boyhood of Dr. Liken was spent on his father's farm in the work of which he assisted while attending the district schools, where he obtained his elementary education. Later he became a student of the Geneseo Collegiate Institute, being graduated from there in 1897, when he entered Knox College. Upon the completion of the work of his junior year he left college and began to make his own way, his first position being that of associate editor of the Geneseo Daily and Weekly Arena, with which publication he was identified for two years. At the expiration of that period he decided to enter the dental profession and to realize his ambitions matriculated in the Chicago College of Dental Surgery, being awarded his degree with the class of 1904. Educationally Dr. Liken is well equipped for his life work as in addition to his collegiate studies he took a commercial course, being a graduate of the Cedar Rapids Business College, and since entering upon his practice he has taken some post-graduate work in dentistry. He first engaged in practice in West Chicago, where he maintained an office for two years and then came to Knoxville, locating here in 1907. Although he has been identified with his profession in this city little more than four years, the period has been of sufficient length for him to demonstrate the quality of his work and its thoroughness in every detail. His ability, business-like methods of conducting his practice and pleasing personality have all been very important factors in enabling him to build up the excellent practice he now has.

In Knoxville, on the 20th of October, 1908, was celebrated the marriage of Dr. Liken and Miss Elizabeth Alvira Charles, whose birth occurred in this county on the 21st of July, 1884. Mrs. Liken is a daughter of A. G. and Charlotte (Rogers) Charles, both natives of Knox county, where the mother resides; the father has passed away. Mr. Charles' birth occurred in 1846 and his wife was born on the 31st of January, 1848. Her father was a native of Connecticut and her mother a native of England. To Dr. and Mrs. Liken has been born one child, Mary Alice, on July 12, 1911.

Dr. and Mrs. Liken are members of the Presbyterian church and he is affiliated with Pacific Lodge, No. 66, F. & A. M., of which he is past master; Knoxville Camp, No. 411, M. W. A.; and Horatio Lodge, No. 362, K. P. While in college he joined the Delta Sigma Delta fraternity and his political support he accords the republican party. Dr. Liken's outlook toward the future is most promising in every way as he is popular socially and highly regarded as a representative of his profession.

CARL V. NELSON.

Carl V. Nelson, the cashier of the State Bank of Victoria, Illinois, is a progressive and reliable young man with remarkable business abilities. A native of Victoria, born February 2, 1887, he is keenly alive to the interests and advancement of his town.

George M., father of Carl V. Nelson, was born in Sweden, October 12, 1846, the second son of a family of four children of Nels and Mary (Erickson) Johnson, of Sweden. All of this family came to America except the father and mother, both dying in Sweden at the ages of fifty-six and thirty-five years respectively. George M. Nelson was educated in Sweden and came to America in 1869, where he settled at Oneida, in Knox county, Illinois. He was married in 1876 to Sophie Peterson, the daughter of Peter Peterson, who also was born and educated in Sweden. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson later located in Victoria, where he engaged in the trade of wagon making and repair work, a line which he is still successfully pursuing. To them were born seven children, of whom Carl V. Nelson is the sixth, the others being: Mrs. Alma Welin, of Victoria, who is the mother of two children, Vincent and Harris; Gertrude, formerly a school teacher; Frank, of El Paso, Illinois; William, also a resident of El Paso, who married Edna (Van Buren) Nelson, by whom he has two children, Dorothy and Millicent; John, who makes his home in South Dakota; and Grace, who resides at home. The Nelsons are active members of the Swedish Methodist church of Victoria. Mr. Nelson is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and is an independent in politics.

Carl V. Nelson, reared under the parental roof where he still resides, was educated in the public schools of Victoria and after completing a high-school course began work in the State Bank of Victoria as a bookkeeper. Ever faithful and efficient, he was soon promoted to the position of assistant cashier. In this place his splendid business qualities were shown more strongly, and on July 1, 1911, he was again promoted, this time to the position of cashier, in which capacity he is now serving. He takes an active part in all local politics and is known in his township as a conscientious and efficient public servant of the city party. He has been for three years town clerk of Victoria township and is now serving a first term as village treasurer. With whatever organization he is allied, he usually is entrusted with positions of trust and responsibility. Fraternally, he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and is clerk of the local lodge. He is an earnest worker in the Swedish Methodist church of Victoria, of which he is a member, and is treasurer of the Epworth League and also of the Galesburg District League. Mr. Nelson's rapid progress so far in life gives promise of his being one of the most prominent and successful business men of the county, as well as one of its most honest and useful citizens.

PETER STROM.

Prominent among the business men of his part of the county is Peter Strom, cashier and general manager of the Victoria Exchange Bank. He was born in Victoria township, on the 28th of February, 1876, and is a son of Eric Strom, who is now living retired one-half mile south of Victoria, on section 18, Victoria township. The father was born in Bollnas, Helsingland, Sweden, August 4, 1839, his parents being Eric and Martha (Peterson) Strom. The grandfather of our subject spent his entire life in Sweden, dying in that country when his son Eric was seventeen years of age. His widow come to this country in 1846 with her son Peter and made her home in Bishop Hill until her death in December, 1907. Here she married Suralla Helborne, of Bishop Hill. She was a member of the Adventist church.

Eric Strom, father of our subject, was reared and educated in his native land and was there married in 1862 to Miss Carrie Nelson, who was also born in Bollnas, August 20, 1841, and was a daughter of Nels and Carrie Nelson, who were lifelong residents of Sweden. By this marriage the following children were born. Eric, Jr., who controls and manages a coal bank for C. S. Clarke and resides in Victoria township, married Ida Grimm and they have eight children, Harry, Merle, Earl, Grace, George, Archie, Ross and Gehrl. Carrie, the second child of Eric Strom, Sr., died at the age of seven years and was buried in Bishop Hill. Della is the wife of Oliver Peterson, a barber of Victoria, and they have three children, Roy, Floyd and Alice. Annie died at the age of fourteen months and was buried in Victoria cemetery. Emma, who died at the age of thirty-one years and was buried in Victoria cemetery, married Fred Goodspeed, of California, and to them were born three children, Gladys, Wayne and Vans. Henry is unmarried. Carrie is the wife of Ned Cadwell and has two children, Lavone and Winthrop. Peter, of this review, completes the family. It was in 1867 that his parents came to America, arriving at Bishop Hill, Illinois, on the 6th of August of that year, but the following year removed to Victoria, where the father worked as a farmer and coal miner until 1874, when he purchased his present home. He is a republican in politics but has never cared for official honors.

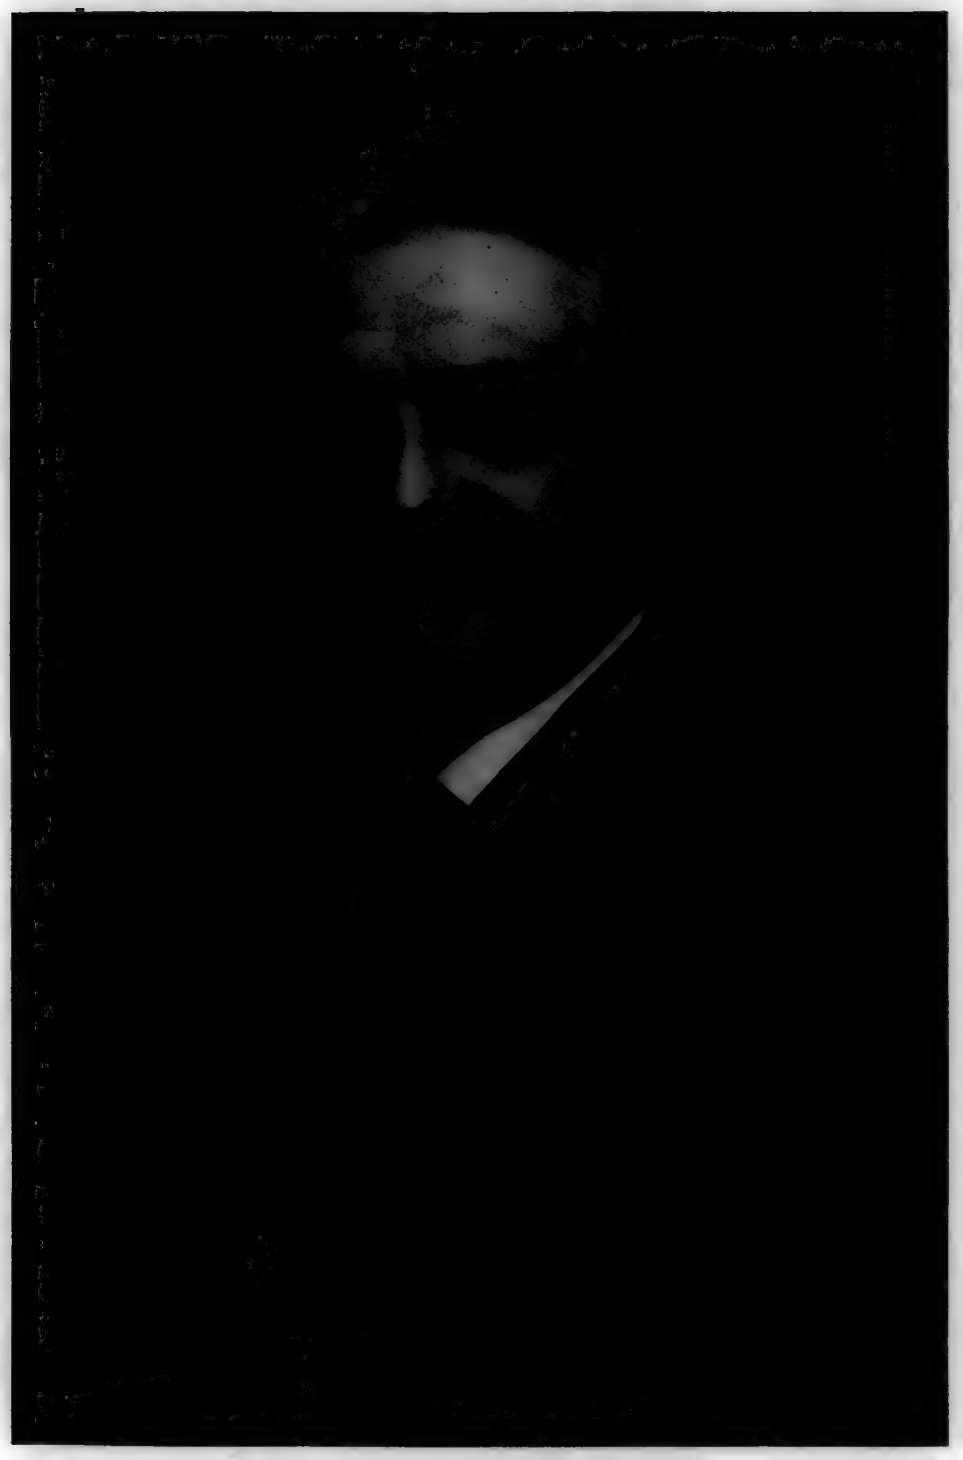
Peter Strom was reared in Victoria township, where as a youth he attended the public schools. After finishing a business course at Quincy, Illinois, he was employed for a while in the Victoria Bank, leaving there to become a bookkeeper in the State Bank of Galva, Illinois, where he remained until November, 1903, when he entered upon his present position.

He was married December 25, 1910, to Etta Conner, a daughter of William D. and Sarah A. (McMullen) Conner, of Victoria township. Her father was born in Licking county, Ohio, in August, 1832. He was a son of Samuel and Anna (Griffith) Conner, who came from old Virginia families that migrated to Ohio at the time when Anna Griffith was fifteen years of age. William D. Conner was married in Licking county in 1856 to Sarah A. McMullen, who was the daughter of M. M. and Harriet (Pyle) McMullen, also descendants of old Virginia families, but both born in Ohio. M. M. McMullen was reared in Bowling Green, Ohio, and spent all his life in Licking county. He died at the age of forty-four years and his wife at the age of seventy-eight, both being buried at Brownsville, Ohio. They were members of the Methodist church. Mr. McMullen was a democrat in politics, served as a school director and held many township offices, always performing his duties faithfully. The children of M. M. and Harriet (Pyle) McMullen were: George; Joseph, who went to California in 1849; Drusilla, the deceased wife of Stephen Smith, of Missouri; Sarah A., the mother of Etta (Conner) Strom; Lemuel, who died in Knox county, Illinois, at the age of twenty-two years; Robert, who died in Knox county; Mary, who is the present wife of Stephen Smith, of Missouri, the former husband of her sister; Margaret, the wife of a Mr. Chaplear, of Mount Vernon county, Ohio; and Lewis, who resides on the old home farm in Licking county, Ohio, and is the father of five living children. After the marriage of William Conner he spent eighteen months in Iowa, and then moved to Stark county, Illinois, living there six years. He came in 1895 to Knox county, Illinois, where he resided until the time of his death, which occurred September 6, 1909, on his farm of seventy-four acres, which is within the corporation limits of Victoria and is now the home in which his wife, Sarah (McMullen) Conner, and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Strom live. To William and Sarah Conner were born eight children, of whom Etta Strom is the fourth in order of birth. The other children are as follows. Edgar, of Victoria, wedded Mary Sornborger and they are the parents of eight children, Clarence, Albert, Sadie, deceased, William, Florence, Earl, Eva and Mary. Belle is the wife of Charles Johnson, of Beardstown, and is the mother of three children: May and Maud, twins, and Sadie. Carrie, the wife of William R. Church, of Bureau county, Illinois, is the mother of three children, Russell, Niles and Nettie. William, Elmer, Mamie and Alice May are deceased, William dying at the age of five years and the other three in infancy. William Conner, always a leading man in his community, was a democrat in politics, a trustee of the town board and school director when in Iowa. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.



Peter Strom is very active in all local politics and is a stanch prohibitionist, believing the principles of this party to be most conducive to good government. Both he and his wife are faithful workers in the Methodist church, he being a member of the board of trustees. Mrs. Strom is also a great worker in the Ladies' Aid Society. Mr. Strom belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and has filled all the chairs in the local lodge. Ever conscientious and efficient, his faithfulness to his tasks and his duties make him one of the leading citizens of his town.

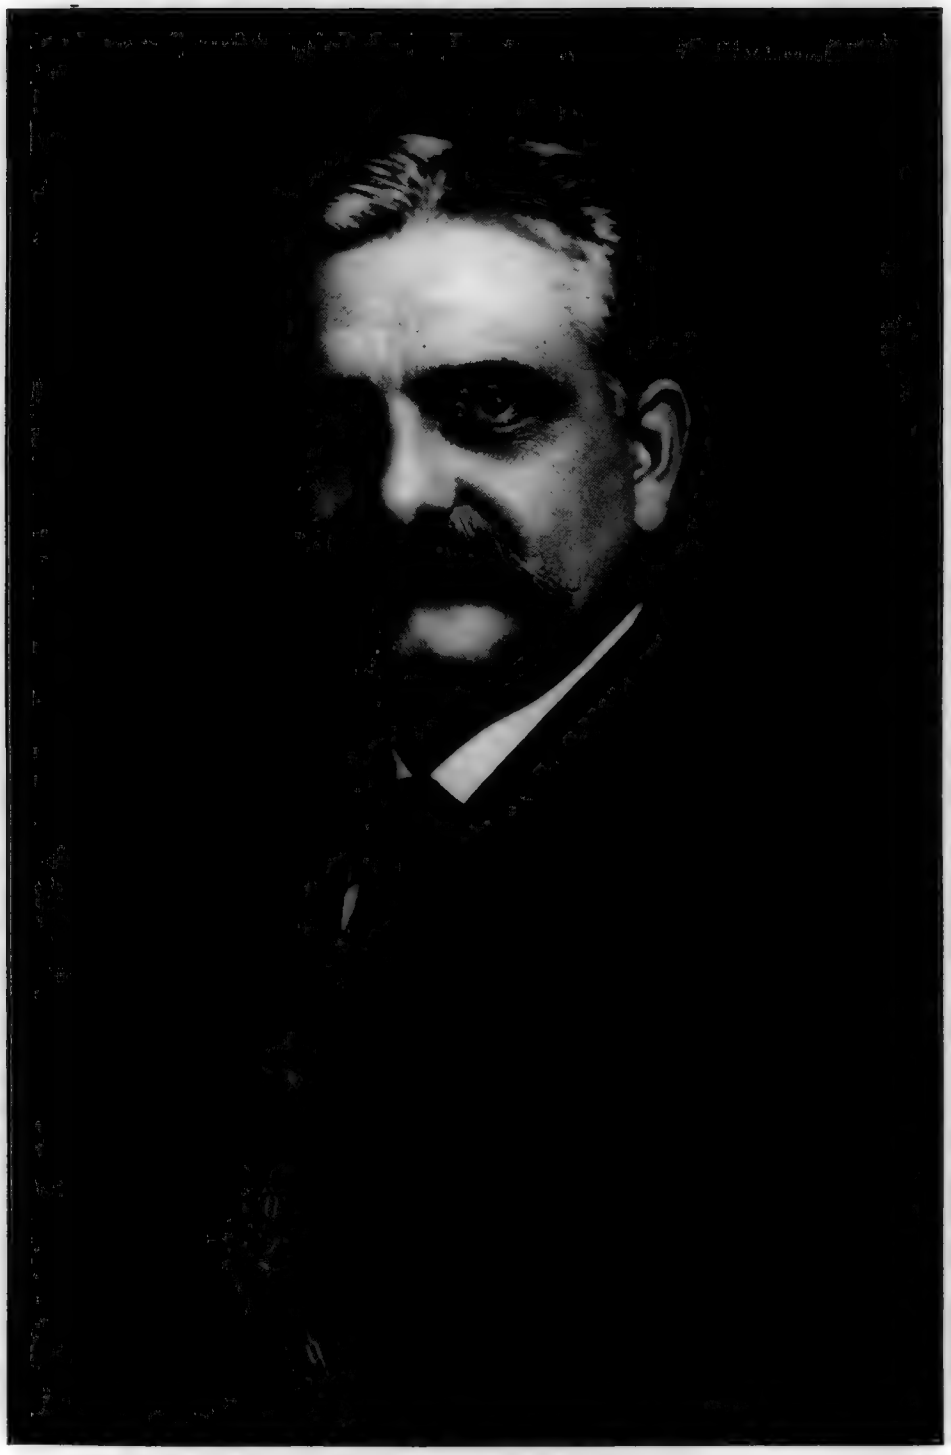
KARL R. HAGGENJOS.

Karl R. Haggenjos, well known as a representative of journalism in central Illinois, now owning and publishing the Illinois Democrat at Galesburg, together with a number of other papers in different towns in this section of the state, was born in Chicago, February 19, 1859. His parents, John and Fortunata (Siedle) Haggenjos, were both natives of Villingen, Germany, the former born on the 25th of December, 1833, and the latter on the 2d of September of the same year. It was in 1856 that John Haggenjos sailed across the broad Atlantic to the United States and made his way into the interior of the country to Chicago, where he followed carpentering and contracting. For a long period he was associated with the building interests of that city but retired about five years prior to his death, which occurred July 30, 1890. He was survived for seventeen years by his wife, who passed away May 6, 1907. His political support was given to the democracy and his religious faith was that of the Catholic church, St. Michael's numbering him as one of its communicants. It was in Chicago, in April, 1858, that he wedded Fortunata Siedle, who came to America in the spring of 1847, with her brothers and sisters and settled in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, she, however, coming to Chicago in 1858. Unto them were born nine children: Karl R., of this review; Emily, Michael, Albert, Stephanie and Josephine, all of whom are residents of Chicago, Illinois; Wilhelmine and Mary, both deceased; and Wilhelmine, the second of the name, who makes her home in Chicago.

In his youthful days Karl R. Haggenjos was a pupil in St. Michael's parochial school of Chicago and when his school days were over at the age of twelve years, he sought and obtained a position on the Freie Presse, a German newspaper, serving as compositor for five years, during which period he gained intimate knowledge of various branches of newspaper publication. In 1877 he came to Galesburg and entered the employ of his uncle, Charles Haggenjos, in the rendering business. Another five years was thus passed, at the end of which time he went to Denver, Colorado, and worked on the Rocky Mountain News. He afterward had charge of the Colorado Journal at Denver and subsequently began the publication of the Denver Freie Presse. He also established the Denver Volksblatt, a morning paper. After his removal to Pueblo, that state, he started the Colorado Freie Presse of that city and when he sold out returned to Galesburg in 1891. He began the publication of the Tribune in East Galesburg, in 1892, but has since changed the name of the paper to the Illinois Democrat, removing the plant to Galesburg. In addition to its conduct he also publishes the Rio Reporter, at Rio; the St. Augustine Eagle, at St. Augustine; the North Henderson Review, at North Henderson; The Maquon Tomahawk, at Maquon, Illinois; and the Cameron Gazette, at Cameron, Illinois.



KARL R. HAGGENJOS

member of the board of trustees. Mrs. Strom is also a great worker in the Ladies' Aid Society. Mr. Strom belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and has filled all the chairs in the local lodge. Ever conscientious and efficient, his faithfulness to his tasks and his duties make him one of the leading citizens of his town.

KARL R. HAGGENJOS.

Karl R. Haggenjos, well known as a representative of journalism in central Illinois, now owning and publishing the Illinois Democrat at Galesburg, together with a number of other papers in different towns in this section of the state, was born in Chicago, February 19, 1859. His parents, John and Fortunata (Siedle) Haggenjos, were both natives of Villingen, Germany, the former born on the 25th of December, 1833, and the latter on the 2d of September of the same year. It was in 1856 that John Haggenjos sailed across the broad Atlantic to the United States and made his way into the interior of the country to Chicago, where he followed carpentering and contracting. For a long period he was associated with the building interests of that city but retired about five years prior to his death, which occurred July 30, 1890. He was survived for seventeen years by his wife, who passed away May 6, 1907. His political support was given to the democracy and his religious faith was that of the Catholic church, St. Michael's numbering him as one of its communicants. It was in Chicago, in April, 1858, that he wedded Fortunata Siedle, who came to America in the spring of 1847, with her brothers and sisters and settled in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, she, however, coming to Chicago in 1858. Unto them were born nine children: Karl R., of this review; Emily, Michael, Albert, Stephanie and Josephine, all of whom are residents of Chicago, Illinois; Wilhelmine and Mary, both deceased; and Wilhelmine, the second of the name, who makes her home in Chicago.

In his youthful days Karl R. Haggenjos was a pupil in St. Michael's parochial school of Chicago and when his school days were over at the age of twelve years, he sought and obtained a position on the Freie Presse, a German newspaper, serving as compositor for five years, during which period he gained intimate knowledge of various branches of newspaper publication. In 1877 he came to Galesburg and entered the employ of his uncle, Charles Haggenjos, in the rendering business. Another five years was thus passed, at the end of which time he went to Denver, Colorado, and worked on the Rocky Mountain News. He afterward had charge of the Colorado Journal at Denver and subsequently began the publication of the Denver Freie Presse. He also established the Denver Volksblatt, a morning paper. After his removal to Pueblo, that state, he started the Colorado Freie Presse of that city and when he sold out returned to Galesburg in 1891. He began the publication of the Tribune in East Galesburg, in 1892, but has since changed the name of the paper to the Illinois Democrat, removing the plant to Galesburg. In addition to its conduct he also publishes the Rio Reporter, at Rio; the St. Augustine Eagle, at St. Augustine; the North Henderson Review, at North Henderson; The Maquon Tomahawk, at Maquon, Illinois; and the Cameron Gazette, at Cameron, Illinois.

KARL R. HAGGENJOS

On the 10th of August, 1884, Mr. Haggenjos was married at Denver, Colorado, to Miss Minnie Haessel, a daughter of Peter and Catherine (Brill) Haessel, of Peoria, Illinois, who were natives of Bavaria, Germany. The father, who was a soap manufacturer, was born September 7, 1813, and his wife's birth occurred on the 29th of January, 1819. On coming to the United States they settled in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where they remained for a year, and then removed to Peoria, Illinois. In 1867 the family removed to Galesburg, where Mr. Haessel died July 3, 1872. He was survived for almost a third of a century by his wife, whose death occurred March 28, 1904. In politics he was a republican and both were consistent members of the Lutheran church. Unto them were born four children: Philippine, the wife of Charles Haggenjos, of Galesburg, Illinois, who is deceased; Catherine, living in Galesburg; Adam, who has passed away; and Mrs. Karl R. Haggenjos, whose birth occurred in Peoria, Illinois, on the 6th of August, 1859. Mr. and Mrs. Haggenjos have become the parents of seven children: Albert, who was born in July, 1885, and who is still at home; Mabel, the wife of Bertrand Weingartner, of Galesburg; Maude, twin sister of Mabel, who is at home; Carolyn; Virginia, the wife of J. Glenn Bragg, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; and John and Philippine, who are also yet under the parental roof. The first four were born in Denver, Colorado, while Virginia and John were born in Pueblo, Colorado, and Philippine in East Galesburg, Illinois.

Since age conferred upon him the right of franchise Mr. Haggenjos has supported the democratic party and publishes his papers in its interest. He is a member of the Typographical Union and is very widely known in newspaper circles. Gradually he has worked his way upward to success and the prominent position which he now occupies, and in the publication of his papers he has held to the high standards of modern journalism, giving to his readers a comprehensive review of the chief points of interest as the days go by.

FRED G. SMITH.

Fred G. Smith, who for ten years has been engaged in the cultivation of his home farm in Henderson township, was born on the 25th of August, 1882, in Henderson. He is the son of Anthony L. and Margaret A. (Davidson) Smith, more extended mention of whom is made under the caption of a sketch of George A. Smith.

Fred G. Smith acquired his education in the common schools and since then has been connected with the agricultural pursuits of the county, at first as an assistant to his father and for the last few years as an independent agriculturist on the farm of one hundred and twenty acres which he has recently purchased. This is a valuable piece of land and by capable management and progressive methods it can be developed into a highly productive farm.

On October 25, 1905, occurred the marriage of Mr. Smith to Helen M. Rhodes. To this union two children, Charles Anthony and Robert R., have been born. Mrs. Smith is the daughter of Charles H. and Frances Rhodes, prominent agriculturists of Henderson township.

In politics Mr. Smith accords his support to the candidates of the democratic party and his interest in the welfare of the schools of his district has led him to act as school director but otherwise does not seek office as a reward for party fealty. In political and social questions, as well as in his agricultural pursuits, his ideas are practical and intelligent and throughout his community he has made himself felt as a man standing for the best development of his county.

BENJAMIN DAYTON.

Benjamin Dayton, deceased, was numbered among the successful and prominent agriculturists of Walnut Grove township, the energy which he displayed in this pursuit bringing to him the success that enabled him to rest from labor during his last days. He was born in Delaware county, New York, March 13, 1834, his parents being Bryant C. and Lydia (Copley) Dayton. The father was born in 1800 in New York, in which state he always resided, giving his attention to general farming. His death occurred in 1845. The mother, also a native of Delaware county, was born in 1810 and was a daughter of Joseph and Lydia (Birdsall) Copley, who moved to Copley township after their children were grown and after whom the township was named. Mrs. Dayton's death occurred April 14, 1885, at the home of her son Benjamin Dayton, with whom she had resided for some time. The paternal grandfather, Plyment Dayton, who was a native of Connecticut, married a Miss Bryant and died in 1834. The great-grandfather, Charles Dayton, and four of his family were soldiers in the Revolutionary war, one of them having been killed in battle. To Mr. and Mrs. Bryant C. Dayton seven children were born, five of whom died in infancy and one son, William O., died in Oneida, Illinois, in 1909.

At the early age of twelve years, after having laid aside his text-books, Benjamin Dayton started to earn his own livelihood by working on a farm for three years at five dollars per month. Subsequently, at the age of fifteen years, he went to work on his mother's farm doing a man's work, and five years later came to Knox county, Illinois, where he was employed in Victoria at ten dollars per month. During the same time in which he was engaged at the carpenter's trade he taught school for several terms in this county, receiving fifteen dollars per month, and in 1859 he removed to Walnut Grove township and in 1864, after his mother arrived here, he purchased the farm where he continued to reside throughout the remainder of his life. About the same time his brother William O. Dayton enlisted in the Civil war in the Eighty-ninth Illinois Infantry and was made corporal in Company G, the company in which Ira B. Copley was first lieutenant, Mr. Copley being a prominent merchant of Victoria and the father of Ira C. Copley, who was elected to congress from the Aurora and Joliet district in 1909. In his younger days Benjamin Dayton was also employed in a clerical position in Victoria and neighboring towns. Among the many trying experiences he had to encounter was when he first arrived in Peoria and had but fifteen cents in his possession. His first night was spent in a lumberyard and because the team he had intended to drive had departed he was forced to walk to his uncle's home in Victoria. Throughout the greater part of his life Mr. Dayton continued to engage in his agricultural pursuits and placed his farm under high cultivation. His was the first brick house erected in Walnut Grove township. Many of the difficulties he encountered would have discouraged a less ambitious and determined man, but Benjamin Dayton worked steadily and faithfully and his record is evidence of what industry and perseverance will do if reinforced by intelligence, for he began with neither means nor influence and became a prominent man in his community and the owner of a highly profitable farm.

In politics Mr. Dayton gave his support to the men and measures of the republican party and he served as delegate to many conventions, being an active worker in his party. He also served as highway commissioner and school trustee and for six of his fifteen years' service as director of the Altona Library served as its president. In all of his social, business and political relations he was thoroughly reliable, helpful and progressive, giving his aid and influence to many measures for the public good. He died on the 3d of November, 1911, and was laid to rest by the side of his mother and brother in Oneida cemetery.

WILLIAM O. DAYTON.

William O. Dayton, a soldier of the Civil war and a highly esteemed citizen of Knox county, was born on the 11th of July, 1841, in Harpersfield, New York, a son of Bryant C. and Lydia (Copley) Dayton. He spent the first seventeen years of his life in his native state, attending the schools of Harpersfield and assisting in the work of the home farm. It was in 1858 that he came to Illinois and took up his residence in Knox county, where he was living at the outbreak of the Civil war. Feeling that his country needed his services, he enlisted in 1864 as a corporal in Company G, Eighty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and after one year's service was discharged for disability.

On the 6th of March, 1870, Mr. Dayton was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Churchill, a daughter of Levi and Mary Churchill, of Imlay City, Lapeer county, Michigan, where her father was engaged in farming. By this union one son was born, Edmund O., who is now a resident of Oneida, Illinois. Mr. Dayton died on the 9th of May, 1909, and is still survived by his widow, who also makes her home in Oneida. He was one of the prominent and influential men of his community and stood high both in business and social circles.

GEORGE W. REED.

Among the residents of Victoria township who are closely associated with agricultural interests in this part of the state is George W. Reed, the owner of an excellent farm of two hundred and forty acres on section 1 of Victoria township, Knox county, and the adjoining eighty acres of section 6, West Jersey township, Stark county. He was born November 2, 1858, in Galva township, Henry county, and was reared in Victoria township, where he received his education at the Union schoolhouse. After his school days he began farming on his home place, where he remained until 1882, when he came to his present farm, part of which was inherited by his wife. He has worked diligently and persistently to develop and improve his farm, has erected all the buildings on the same, and he now owns one of the most valuable tracts of land in the community. At the present time all of his land is rented but he owns a half-interest in all the hogs, sheep and cattle on the farm.

On the 27th of December, 1882, Mr. Reed was united in marriage to Lenora C. Gibbs, who was a native of Lynn township and a daughter of Joseph D. and Elizabeth (Gitzenger) Gibbs, both of whom have passed away. Mrs. Reed received her early education in the public schools of her home community and later attended Knox College at Galesburg, Illinois. She passed away in January, 1905, and is buried in Galva cemetery. Her death was deeply regretted by a host of friends and acquaintances throughout Knox county. She was a member of the Christian church, and socially was connected with the Royal Neighbors. After her death Mr. Reed gave up housekeeping but he remains on his farm. He has been a lifelong republican and has filled the office of commissioner of highways, in which capacity he served for twelve years. In all his business dealings he is straightforward and reliable and enjoys to the fullest extent the confidence and good-will of those with whom he comes in contact.

J. B. MERRIS.

J. B. Merris, who for twenty-seven years has been engaged in general farming in Knox county, was born in Scott county, Illinois, October 22, 1849, being a son of Bethol and Mary (Crawford) Merris. The father was also a native of Scott county, and there he married Miss Crawford, whose birth occurred in the vicinity of Columbus, Ohio. In 1851 they removed to Warren county, Illinois, locating on a farm near Greenbush, where the father passed away in 1891. The mother survived for seven years thereafter, her demise occurring on the 24th of December, and was laid to rest beside her husband in Olive cemetery in Warren county. In the paternal line the family was originally of Irish extraction, but for several generations have been American citizens, while the Crawfords came from New England. Six children were born unto Mr. and Mrs. Merris: Meribah, who passed away on the 23d of October, 1910; J. B., our subject; and Liza and Flora, both of whom are deceased; Almira, who is the widow of G. Ray, of Warren county; and Malissa, who is unmarried and living in Avon, Illinois. The family always affiliated with the Christian church of which the mother was a member.

Illinois has always been the home of J. B. Merris, who obtained his education in the common schools of Warren county. Having been trained in agricultural pursuits from his earliest boyhood upon attaining his majority he decided to make farming his life vocation and continued to remain at home assisting his father with the work of the farm until he was thirty-one. He then decided on an independent career and coming to Knox county located in Indian Point township, where he now owns seventy-one acres of land. This is devoted to general farming and in a high state of cultivation and well improved. He has met with success in his endeavors and in addition to the place where he resides owns eleven acres of timber land in Fulton county, Illinois.

Mr. Merris has never married. He attends the Christian church, while his political allegiance is given to the democratic party. He is one of the energetic and capable farmers of the community in which he resides and has met with substantial rewards through the intelligent direction of his energies.

W. H. SELBY.

W. H. Selby, who is now living retired, was for many years successfully engaged in the operation of his homestead of three hundred and seventy-five acres, located a half mile east of Maquon, that is now being cultivated by his son. His birth occurred on this place in 1850 and here he has spent practically his entire life, and is watching his grandchildren grow to manhood and womanhood surrounded by the scenes familiar to his own youth. His father, Philemon B. Selby, was born in Lancaster, Ohio, in 1807, and there he grew to manhood and studied to be a physician, but later engaged in the cattle business. In 1834 he came to Illinois, locating on some land in the vicinity of Aqua Vitae Springs, but later he disposed of this and bought the farm where our subject now lives. Here he devoted his energies to general farming and stock-raising until his demise in 1868 at the age of sixty-one years. He was one of the very early settlers in the county, and one of the first to build a dam across the Spoon river and erected a sawmill, which was the first one in Knox county and which he afterward remodeled into a gristmill. There were no bridges in this section of the state at that time and soon after locating here, Mr. Selby drove a herd of five hundred cattle to Ohio, being the first man in this vicinity to assume such an undertaking as they had to be driven across the Illinois river. He was one of those men who possess the essential characteristics for pioneering, having the determination and indomitable purpose that enabled him to carry to a successful issue, in the face of every discouragement, whatsoever he undertook. He was married on November 12, 1837, to Miss Elizabeth Gullett, a native of Indiana and a daughter of Joshua Gullett. Mrs. Selby's mother, prior to her marriage was a Miss Housh, an aunt of the family of that name now residing in Maquon. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Philemon B. Selby were born the following children: Nelson and Mary, both of whom are deceased; Elisha, who owns a farm in Maquon township, but is now a resident of Kansas; Amanda, who married Arthur Summers, of this county; Salina, the wife of Thomas A. Clark; W. H., our subject; and Ruth, who became the wife of George Bigelow, of Haw Creek township.

The youthful years of W. H. Selby were very similar in every respect to those of other lads of that period and circumstances. He attended the public schools of Maquon in the acquirement of his preliminary education, later supplementing the knowledge therein gained by a course in a business college at Galesburg. While attending school he always assisted in the work of the farm, his duties being increased from year to year as his strength and ability developed. After laying aside his text-books, he returned home and resumed agricultural pursuits, giving his undivided attention to the cultivation of the fields and care of the stock. When he came into possession of the property, Mr. Selby erected all of the buildings now standing and made other extensive improvements, thus making his one of the most attractive and valuable farms in this section of the county. It has many natural beauties and advantages not common to the majority of farms in this vicinity, being plentifully supplied with springs, which furnish water for both household purposes and the stock. Across one portion of the land runs an old Indian trail. In connection with his general farming Mr. Selby made a specialty of raising stock, meeting with most substantial returns from both undertakings.

Mr. Selby married Miss Florence Isabel Allen, a daughter of William Allen, of Orange township, a well known agriculturist at that time. Of this union there was born one son, William Floyd, whose birth occurred in 1880. He was educated in the public schools of Maquon, following which he attended Lombard College. After the completion of his education he returned to the farm, the entire control and management of which is now vested in him. He married Miss Myrtle Harler, a daughter of W. W. Harler, and they have became the parents of three children: Walter Ferree, Helen Isabel and Grace Maurine. Mrs. W. H. Selby is now deceased, her demise occurring on the 24th of January, 1904.

Fraternally Mr. Selby is a Mason, to which organization as well as to the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, and the Mystic Workers of the World, his son also belongs. The political views of Mr. Selby coincide with the principles of the democratic party, but he has never been an aspirant to official honors, preferring to give his entire attention to the direction of his own affairs, in the conduct of which he met with a most gratifying measure of success. He is a well known and highly respected representative of Knox county's esteemed pioneer citizens, to whom must be given much credit for the development of Maquon township, where the family has now resided for more than seventy years.

PHILIP H. FRENCH.

Philip H. French is well known in Sparta township, being connected with the railway mail service. He was born in North Henderson, Illinois, September 11, 1885, and is a son of Hugh French, a native of Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, who was born in 1838. The latter was a son of John and Sarah (Young) French, who with their family removed westward during the boyhood of their son Hugh, the family settling first in the vicinity of Knoxville but afterward removing to Mercer county. Following the death of his parents Hugh French responded to the country's call for aid, enlisting in Company A, of the One Hundred and Second Illinois Regiment, at Knoxville. He served with that command until the close of the war, the regiment being attached to the Army of the Cumberland. As a companion and helpmate for life's journey Hugh French chose Miss Louisa Schroeder, who was born in the state of New York, July 31, 1848, and was a daughter of Henry F. and Mary (Stahl) Schroeder. The Schroeder family removed from the east to Henderson, Illinois, where the pursuits, giving his undivided attention to the cultivation of the fields and care of the stock. When he came into possession of the property, Mr. Selby erected all of the buildings now standing and made other extensive improvements, thus making his one of the most attractive and valuable farms in this section of the county. It has many natural beauties and advantages not common to the majority of farms in this vicinity, being plentifully supplied with springs, which furnish water for both household purposes and the stock. Across one portion of the land runs an old Indian trail. In connection with his general farming Mr. Selby made a specialty of raising stock, meeting with most substantial returns from both undertakings.

HUGH FRENCH

Mr. Selby married Miss Florence Isabel Allen, a daughter of William Allen, of Orange township, a well known agriculturist at that time. Of this union there was born one son, William Floyd, whose birth occurred in 1880. He was educated in the public schools of Maquon, following which he attended Lombard College. After the completion of his education he returned to the farm, the entire control and management of which is now vested in him. He married Miss Myrtle Harler, a daughter of W. W. Harler, and they have became the parents of three children: Walter Ferree, Helen Isabel and Grace Maurine. Mrs. W. H. Selby is now deceased, her demise occurring on the 24th of January, 1904.

Fraternally Mr. Selby is a Mason, to which organization as well as to the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, and the Mystic Workers of the World, his son also belongs. The political views of Mr. Selby coincide with the principles of the democratic party, but he has never been an aspirant to official honors, preferring to give his entire attention to the direction of his own affairs, in the conduct of which he met with a most gratifying measure of success. He is a well known and highly respected representative of Knox county's esteemed pioneer citizens, to whom must be given much credit for the development of Maquon township, where the family has now resided for more than seventy years.

PHILIP H. FRENCH.

Philip H. French is well known in Sparta township, being connected with the railway mail service. He was born in North Henderson, Illinois, September 11, 1885, and is a son of Hugh French, a native of Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, who was born in 1838. The latter was a son of John and Sarah (Young) French, who with their family removed westward during the boyhood of their son Hugh, the family settling first in the vicinity of Knoxville but afterward removing to Mercer county. Following the death of his parents Hugh French responded to the country's call for aid, enlisting in Company A, of the One Hundred and Second Illinois Regiment, at Knoxville. He served with that command until the close of the war, the regiment being attached to the Army of the Cumberland. As a companion and helpmate for life's journey Hugh French chose Miss Louisa Schroeder, who was born in the state of New York, July 31, 1848, and was a daughter of Henry F. and Mary (Stahl) Schroeder. The Schroeder family removed from the east to Henderson, Illinois, where the father of Mrs. Hugh French followed the cabinet-maker's trade, which he had previously learned. Later he opened a mercantile establishment at Henderson and also filled the office of postmaster there. After conducting his business successfully for a number of years he sold out and retired, enjoying well earned rest up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1885, when he was seventy-five years of age. His wife survived him until 1893 and passed away at the age of seventy-six years. It was their daughter Louise who became the wife of Hugh French, and unto them were born three children: Minnie, who is now the wife of E. W. Goldsmith; Charles, a resident of St. Paul, Minnesota, who married Ethel Daniels and has two children, Edward and Harvey; and Philip H., of this review. The father, long a valued and respected resident of Knox county, as loyal to his country in days of peace as when he followed the old flag on southern battlefields, died on the 12th of December, 1907.

HUGH FRENCH

Philip H. French, whose name introduces this review, spent his youthful days in his parents' home and acquired his education in the public schools. He now gives his attention to official duties as a clerk in the railway mail service, his run being over the Burlington road.

Mr. French was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Williamson, who was born April 3, 1889, in Sparta township, and is a daughter of John E. and Christina (Hanson) Williamson, who are residents of that township, her father being now forty-nine and her mother forty-seven years of age. The former was a son of Jonas Williamson, a native of Sweden, now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. French have become the parents of two children: Constance, who was born January 1, 1910; and Delwin, born July 29, 1911. Both Mr. and Mrs. French have spent their entire lives in this county and are well known among a circle of friends who entertain for them warm regard and who extend to them the cordial hospitality of their home.

C. E. SHUMAKER.

C. E. Shumaker, a former agriculturist of Knox county and now living in a comfortable home at No. 402 Carlisle avenue, Abingdon, is a native of Knox county, born in Indian Point township, February 3, 1864. Gallipolis, Ohio, was the birthplace of his father, James Shumaker, who came to Indian Point township, Knox county, when a boy and became one of the pioneer agriculturists, joining in the widespread movement that converted the raw prairie lands of Illinois into richly producing farmlands. He pursued farming until his death terminated his labors. His widow, who is still living and is now in her seventy-second year, is a native of Knox county, Illinois, a daughter of one of the early settlers of this community. She resides in Abingdon where her declining years are often gladdened by the happy occasions when her children gather about her. The latter are seven in number, all but one inhabitants of Illinois and living within easy distance from her. C. E. Shumaker is the eldest child. The others are: Ella, the widow of L. Blisa, of Abingdon; W. F., living near Hermon, Illinois; J. L., farming in Swaledale, Iowa; Myrtle, the wife of J. R. Stephens,

New Boston, Illinois; Mamie, the wife of Daniel Rodenbaugh, a farmer of St. Augustine; and Alta May, the wife of Bert Dawdy, of Abingdon.

C. E. Shumaker had a common-school education supplemented by training in commercial branches at the General City Commercial College, of Quincy, Illinois. He remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-four years old, when he bought a farm on section 11, Indian Point township, and engaged independently in farming. After some years he removed to a farm on section 13 and gave his efforts to the improvement of the land which soon yielded abundant crops. Four years ago, in 1907, he retired from farming, purchasing a handsome new house in Abingdon where the family now resides. He still has valuable farm holdings, two hundred and forty acres in Knox county which he rents, and a half section in the Saskatchewan valley in Canada. From these and from investments in various industrial plants in Abingdon he enjoys a liberal income enabling him to live not only in ease but in affluence.

Twenty-five years ago, in 1886, C. E. Shumaker was united in marriage to Miss Ella Davis, a native of Knox county. They are the parents of two children, Verda Maud, aged twenty, a graduate of the Abingdon high school and now attending college at Lynchburg, Virginia; and James Harry, aged seventeen, a student in high school. Mr. Shumaker and his family are members of the Christian church. Like his father before him, he is republican in his political predilections and, although loyal to his party, he has never cared for the honors of public office. Fraternally he is connected with the Abingdon lodge of the Knights of Pythias in which organization he has passed through all the chairs. He is a man of determination and excellent judgment, qualities which have been no small factor in winning for him the success that is justly his.

GEORGE A. SMITH.

For the last year George A. Smith has been engaged in cultivating the two hundred acre farm in Henderson township upon which he resides. He was born in Henderson township, April 28, 1876, and is the son of Anthony L. and Margaret A. (Davidson) Smith, who were among the early settlers of Knox county. The father, whose birth occurred June 24, 1839, in Ulster county, New York, was the son of Samuel and Clarissa (Gosso) Smith, both natives of Brooklyn, New York, having been born there in 1792 and 1795, respectively. Samuel Smith served for two years in the war of 1812, under General Jackson, and was colonel of his regiment. He engaged in various pursuits during his active career, such as agriculture, the tanning business and the lumber business. At the same time that he owned and managed his five hundred acre farm in Ulster county he also built and ran a tannery for twenty-five years and engaged to a considerable extent in the lumber business, which he continued even after he had sold the tannery. After having disposed of this, his last business interest, he retired from an active life and lived with his son. In politics he was a member of the whig party, and in religious faith, a Methodist. Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith died at the age of eighty-three years, the former passing away at the home of his son, Anthony Smith.

Anthony L. Smith was the eleventh of the twelve children born to his parents. After receiving what education the common schools could give him, he began to earn his own livelihood by working in a sawmill and hauling logs and subsequently accepting employment on a farm, at which work he continued until eighteen years of age, when he came west. He left New York, September 27, 1857, and after arriving in Illinois settled in Henderson Grove, where he worked in a sawmill for more than thirty years. At that time he purchased a farm of two hundred acres, the cultivation of which occupied his time until his retirement, in February, 1906. He is now living comfortably in Henderson and his sons are managing the farm. On February 7, 1867, he was married to Maggie A. Davidson, a daughter of Robert and Julia A. (Elishier) Davidson, who were among the early settlers in Knox county. To Mr. and Mrs. Smith three children were born, namely: George A., the subject of this sketch; Fred G., who married Helen Rhodes and to whom two sons, Charles A. and Robert, have been born; and Harvey. The two older sons are residng on the father's farm and Harvey makes his home with his parents. In religious faith Mr. Smith is a member of the United Brethren church, and in politics gives his support to the democratic party, by whom he has frequently been elected to office. Among the offices he has held are those of supervisor, collector, assessor and school trustee.

George A. Smith acquired his education in the common schools, the Henderson high school and Brown's Business College. His first employment after finishing these courses was on a farm, but in 1903 he accepted a clerical position in Galesburg and for four years was stockman for the W. A. Jordan Company, wholesale grocers. During the next two years he was employed by the Galesburg office of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, remaining with them until he removed to the two hundred acre farm upon which he now resides.

On September 10, 1895, Mr. Smith was married to Rebecca Windom and to this union one child has been born, Irene, who is a student in the Galesburg high school and the Knox Conservatory of Music. Mrs. Smith was the daughter of William and Mary Windom. The father was a native of Ohio, where his death also occurred, and the mother has been a resident of Knox county since she was twenty-seven years of age.

In politics Mr. Smith gives his support to the republican party and is a loyal supporter of its principles and an advocate of its policies as being the most efficient for good government. He is a member of the Elks Lodge of Galesburg, No. 894. In the various business positions he has held and in his social relations Mr. Smith has always shown himself to be a man of integrity and ability, one, who is an advocate of any measure standing for improved social conditions or business progression.

ARTHUR JOSEPH GEHRING.

Our modern improved methods of education and the more comfortable mode of life amid which our young people are being brought up, these, it has frequently been demonstrated, are not a hindrance but a help in the better administration of affairs whether in business life, on the farm or in the home. A good illustration of this fact may be noted in Arthur Joseph Gehring, one of the rising generation of young farmers rapidly coming to the front and commanding the recognition of their elders for their alertness and efficiency. He has been operating the home farm since the retirement of his father, Joseph Gehring, in 1903 and is now only twenty-six years old.

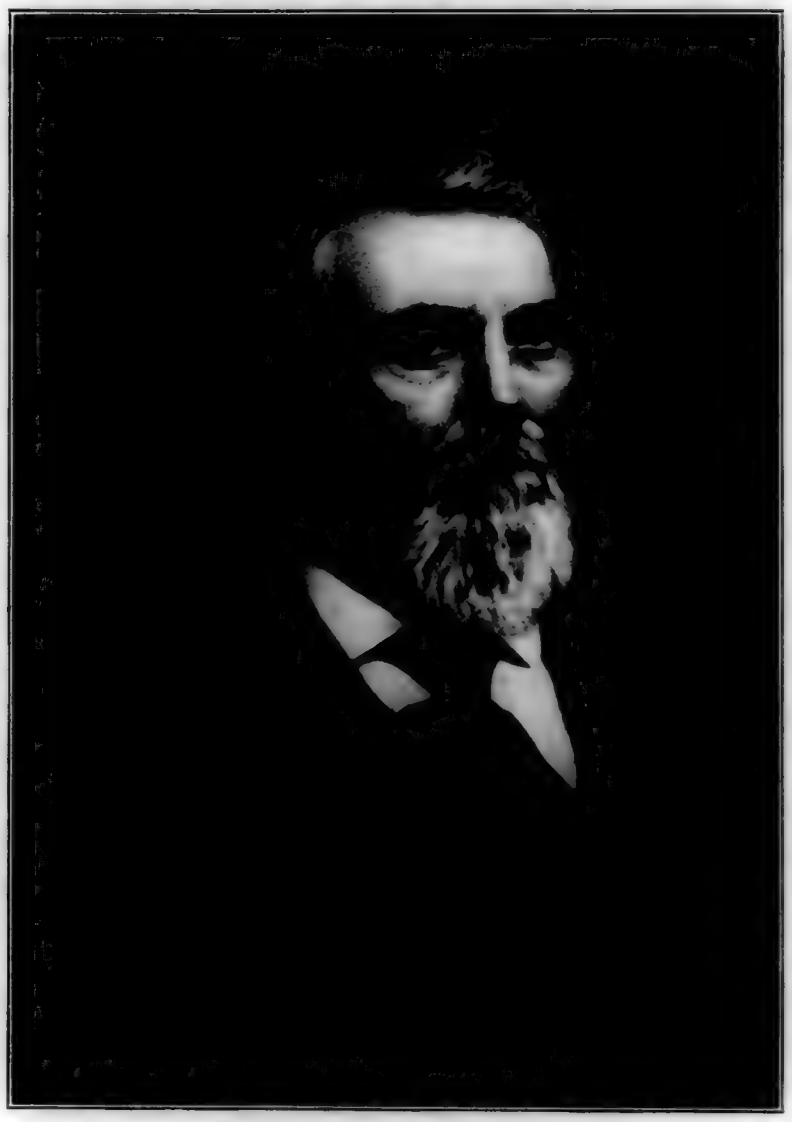
His birth occurred August 21, 1885, in Sparta township, Knox county, on the homestead where he is living. He is a son of Joseph and Cora (Peterson) Gehring. His father is a resident of Wataga and was born east of that town, in Sparta township, March 16, 1856. He lost his mother when a boy ten years of age, her death occurring in 1895 when she was thirty-five years old. The family took possession of the farm in 1869 and for twenty-four years the father carried on general farming and stock-raising, devoting himself to improving the land and enriching the soil until he had greatly enhanced the value of the property.



In the district schools of Sparta township Arthur J. Gehring obtained his early education, following this by a course at the Wataga high school and thereafter attending the Brown Business College at Galesburg. In 1903 he undertook the management of the farm for his father, continuing the former policy of general farming and stock-raising in accordance with improved methods and progressive ideas.

Mr. Gehring was united in marriage to Miss Nina McDonald December 27, 1911. She was born May 10, 1889, in Burlington, Iowa, and, being left an orphan in her infancy, was reared by Mrs. Ella (Woods) Bird, of Girard, Kansas, a sister of her mother, whose maiden name was Laura Woods. Mrs. Gehring has two brothers: Vernon, a farmer in Knox county; and Frank, living in Denver, Colorado.

Mr. Gehring and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and Mr. Gehring is a member of its official board. In the social life of the community they are popular with young and old alike.

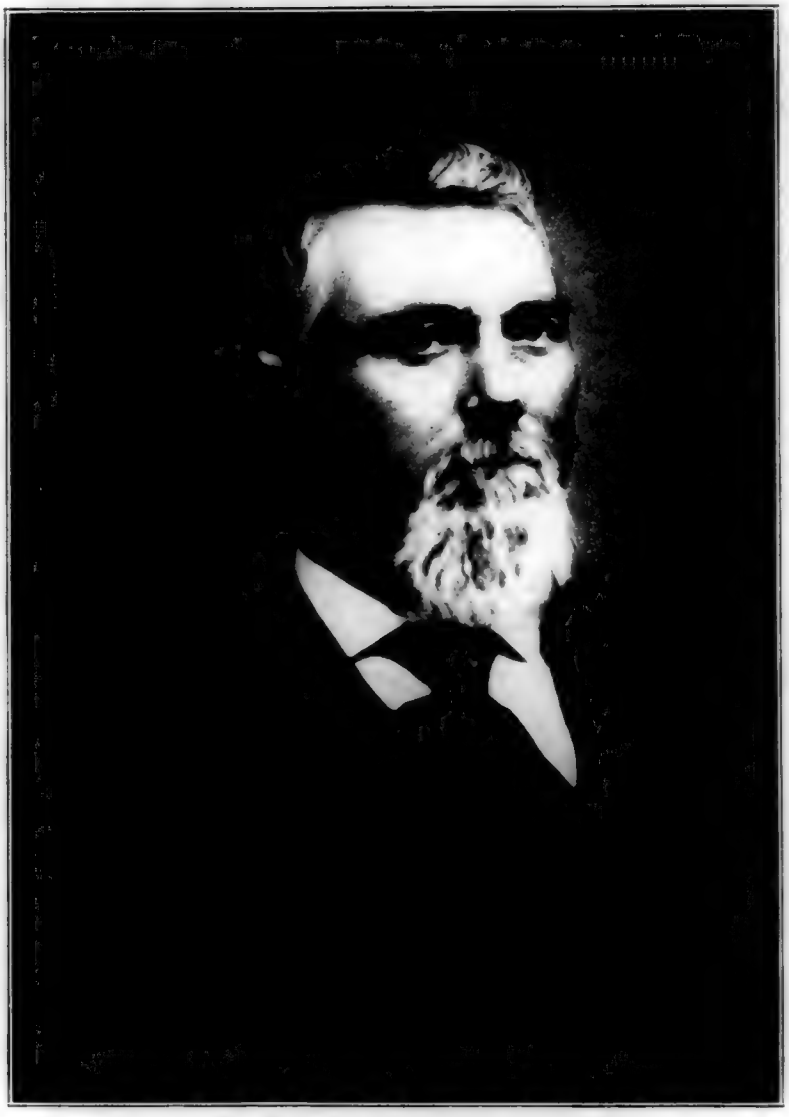
CORNELIUS WAYMAN.

Cornelius Wayman is now living retired in Altona. He has passed the seventy-fifth milestone on life's journey, his birth having occurred in Otsego county, New York, June 3, 1836. His father, Thomas Wayman, died in 1860, when sixty years of age. He had followed farming throughout his entire life and was long known as an industrious, energetic agriculturist of Otsego county. His wife died when their son Cornelius was a boy, and of the three children of the family he is now the only one living. His educational advantages were limited, for his services were needed upon the home farm and he worked diligently and with determination through the period of his boyhood and thus laid the foundation for whatever success he has enjoyed. He first came to Wisconsin in 1857, when twenty years of age, making his way from there to Victoria, Illinois. Soon he secured a situation as a farm hand and was thus employed until after the outbreak of the Civil war. The country was but entering upon the long, four-year period of hostilities when he offered his services, enlisting on the 25th of May, 1861, as a member of Company D, Seventeenth Illinois Infantry, under Captain

CORNELIUS WAYMAN

tion of this fact may be noted in Arthur Joseph Gehring, one of the rising generation of young farmers rapidly coming to the front and commanding the recognition of their elders for their alertness and efficiency. He has been operating the home farm since the retirement of his father, Joseph Gehring, in 1903 and is now only twenty-six years old.

His birth occurred August 21, 1885, in Sparta township, Knox county, on the homestead where he is living. He is a son of Joseph and Cora (Peterson) Gehring. His father is a resident of Wataga and was born east of that town, in Sparta township, March 16, 1856. He lost his mother when a boy ten years of age, her death occurring in 1895 when she was thirty-five years old. The family took possession of the farm in 1869 and for twenty-four years the father carried on general farming and stock-raising, devoting himself to improving the land and enriching the soil until he had greatly enhanced the value of the property.



In the district schools of Sparta township Arthur J. Gehring obtained his early education, following this by a course at the Wataga high school and thereafter attending the Brown Business College at Galesburg. In 1903 he undertook the management of the farm for his father, continuing the former policy of general farming and stock-raising in accordance with improved methods and progressive ideas.

Mr. Gehring was united in marriage to Miss Nina McDonald December 27, 1911. She was born May 10, 1889, in Burlington, Iowa, and, being left an orphan in her infancy, was reared by Mrs. Ella (Woods) Bird, of Girard, Kansas, a sister of her mother, whose maiden name was Laura Woods. Mrs. Gehring has two brothers: Vernon, a farmer in Knox county; and Frank, living in Denver, Colorado.

Mr. Gehring and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and Mr. Gehring is a member of its official board. In the social life of the community they are popular with young and old alike.

CORNELIUS WAYMAN.

Cornelius Wayman is now living retired in Altona. He has passed the seventy-fifth milestone on life's journey, his birth having occurred in Otsego county, New York, June 3, 1836. His father, Thomas Wayman, died in 1860, when sixty years of age. He had followed farming throughout his entire life and was long known as an industrious, energetic agriculturist of Otsego county. His wife died when their son Cornelius was a boy, and of the three children of the family he is now the only one living. His educational advantages were limited, for his services were needed upon the home farm and he worked diligently and with determination through the period of his boyhood and thus laid the foundation for whatever success he has enjoyed. He first came to Wisconsin in 1857, when twenty years of age, making his way from there to Victoria, Illinois. Soon he secured a situation as a farm hand and was thus employed until after the outbreak of the Civil war. The country was but entering upon the long, four-year period of hostilities when he offered his services, enlisting on the 25th of May, 1861, as a member of Company D, Seventeenth Illinois Infantry, under Captain

CORNELIUS WAYMAN

Henry Bush, of Galva. The regiment was with the Western Army under General Grant. Mr. Wayman served for his three years' term of enlistment and then veteranized, at which time he was transferred to the Eighth Illinois under Captain Caldwell and was with the Army of the Gulf until the close of the war. His last commander was General Canby, who commanded the Department of the Gulf. With his regiment he went to Mobile and later through Texas and afterward was sent up the Red River gathering up arms following the cessation of hostilities. He was mustered out at Baton Rouge in 1866 and left that place for Springfield, Illinois, where he was honorably discharged, having made a most creditable military record during the five years in which he wore the country's blue uniform.

Mr. Wayman returned to Victoria and was again engaged in farming for nine years, after which he removed to Wataga, where he followed teaming for two years. He then came to Altona and is now living retired. For a long period, however, he was janitor of the high-school building, occupying that position for thirty years beginning in 1881. During that period his daughter and his granddaughter were graduated from that school.

Mr. Wayman married Letitia Blackwood, who was born in Ohio and died October 14, 1911, at the age of sixty-four years. She was a daughter of Beverly D. Blackwood, a carpenter by trade. Mrs. Wayman was a devout member of the Methodist church and an active worker in its various departments, particularly in the Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies. When she was quite young her mother died and her father married again. She remained at home with her stepmother up to the time of her marriage, which was celebrated in Knoxville, Illinois, on the 11th of September, 1866. Mr. and Mrs. Wayman began their domestic life near Victoria in the plain, old-fashioned way. As the years passed, four children came to brighten their home but death entered the household and only one is now living, Mrs. Harriet E. Peacock, who was born February 16, 1868. She is the wife of James J. Peacock, who was born near New Brenton, Illinois, July 1, 1864, a son of Joseph Peacock, who was born in 1820 and was a brickmaker. He wedded Mary D. Kindred, who was born in 1825. Mr. Peacock was a native of England but was only seven years of age when brought by his parents, Thomas and Ann (Payne) Peacock, to the new world. Joseph Peacock, after reaching manhood, engaged in brickmaking in the state of New York but in early manhood removed westward to Peoria, Illinois, where he married. He operated the first brickyard at Peoria, Illinois, its location being near the old fair grounds on Knoxville avenue. In early manhood he served as a soldier in the Indian war which occurred in Florida. It was his son, James J. Peacock, who wedded Harriet E. Wayman and unto them were born three children: Claude J., nineteen years of age; Edna B., seventeen years of age; and Ralph E., a youth of fifteen. In early manhood James J. Peacock learned and followed the brickmaker's trade, continuing in that line of business in Iowa county, Iowa, until thirty-two years of age, when he came to Altona, where he has since made his home, being now recognized as one of the representative residents of that place.

Mr. Wayman is classed with the most widely known and highly esteemed citizens of Altona, his upright life having gained for him the warm regard of all who know him. He is a devoted member of the Methodist church and has served as one of its trustees for many years. Fraternally he is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and has passed all of the chairs in the local lodge to which he belongs. His life has been well spent and his devotion to duty and his irreproachable integrity have been the salient qualities which have gained for him the confidence and good-will of all who know him. His life has been in many respects an exemplary one and furnishes many an example that might well be followed by others.

JOHN HEFFERNAN.

John Heffernan, a retired farmer and now proprietor of a boarding house on Main street in Victoria, Illinois, was born June 15, 1841, in Medina county, Ohio. He is the grandson of John Heffernan, who resided all his life in Charleston, South Carolina. The father, Francis Heffernan, was born, reared and educated in Charleston. After leaving school he chose to take up as his trade the work of shoemaking, a business which he followed with much success all his life. In youth he married Miss Caroline Hodgeman, a daughter of William Hodgeman and a native of Vermont. A few years after his marriage he settled in Medina county, Ohio, where he lived for fourteen years, and then moved to Victoria, where he began his trade in the old shop that is still standing. He was a republican in politics and although he was not an office seeker, he took a great interest in a private way in helping to better the conditions of his town. He followed his trade loyally all his life and up to the time of his death, when he had reached the venerable age of seventy-eight years. Untiring and faithful labor netted him an income ample for his wants and comforts. His wife passed away at the age of seventy-four years and they are both buried in the Victoria cemetery. Their family consisted of two children: Isabelle, who died in Ohio, at the age of fifteen; and John, of Victoria.

John Heffernan after finishing his course in the public schools of Victoria began farming, working by the month for seven years for David Swickard, now of Victoria. After leaving that employ he was married, in 1866, to Miss Margaret Smith, who was born in Victoria township, December 5, 1840, a daughter of John and Mary (Gingrich) Smith, both of whom were born in Little York, York county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were the parents of ten children, eight of whom lived to maturity. The parents, leaving Pennsylvania with their two children, went to Ohio where they remained one year, moving to Illinois in 1835 and settling on a farm of three hundred and twenty acres upon section 24, Victoria township. Having made the trip from Ohio in wagons, Mr. and Mrs. Smith lived in this fashion of camping until they had constructed a log house which contained one room on the first floor and one above. Later this log house was moved to another part of the farm and used as a tenant house. Mr. Smith was a stock-raiser and farmer whose labors won much success. Although willing to do all he could for his community, he never sought office. He was a democrat in his political views and a Lutheran in religion, of which church both he and his family were faithful members. He died in 1889, at the age of eighty-three, and his wife passed away in 1892, at the age of eighty, both being laid to rest in the Victoria cemetery.

After his marriage John Heffernan settled in Victoria township, where he lived for about five years, or until 1870, at which time he moved to Kansas, where he resided for four years. Returning to Knox county in 1874, he lived in Copley township until 1887, when he moved to Victoria township, residing at the old Smith homestead for six years, at the close of which time he took charge of the boarding-house which he now has at Victoria. He is the father of two children. The elder, Frank W., of Victoria township, married Miss Susan Mosher, a daughter of Charles Mosher, and they are the parents of four children, Mabel A., Edna Lucy, Bessie Courtney and Jessie May. Their other child is Mary C., the wife of Charles F. Nelson, of Walnut Grove township, and mother of seven children, Clio L., Vera B., Vaun O., Clem A., Vivian I., Clare D. and Willard Ivan.

Fraternally Mr. Heffernan is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America, while politically he adhers to the republican party. He attends the Methodist Episcopal church with his wife, who is a member thereof, and alsc an active worker in the Ladies' Aid Society and a member of the Royal Neighbors. Mr. Heffernan while in Kansas was a trustee of the school board and although he has never cared for positions of public trust, whenever such occasion did arise, he rendered services which have been most beneficial to the community and township of his residence.

JONAS JOHNSON.

Jonas Johnson owns a farm of eighty-four acres located on section 5, of Victoria township, where his well tilled fields manifest his agricultural skill. He is one of the worthy citizens that Sweden has contributed to Knox county, his natal day being the 5th of February, 1872, and his parents Jonas and Annie Johnson passed their entire lives in the old country.

In the common schools of his native land, Jonas Johnson obtained a good, practical education and there he also received his early agricultural training. By the time he had attained the age of twenty years he felt oppressed by the limitations of expansion and opportunities in his native land. Carrying the conviction that conditions more admissible of ambition and more conducive to progress were prevailing in the western hemisphere, he determined to put to the test the wonderful stories he had heard regarding the advantages awaiting the ambitious and enterprising young man in America and, in 1892, took passage for the United States. Upon his arrival in this country he came directly to Knox county, first locating in Galva. Later he purchased his present farm, at that time the property of a Mrs. Brott, and here he has ever since lived. Although the place was improved and under cultivation when he bought it, during the period of his ownership Mr. Johnson has wrought many and extensive changes. The greater part of the buildings now standing have been erected since he located here, and he has also added various other improvements, thus thoroughly modernizng it and at the same time greatly enhancing its value. He is industrious and practical in his methods and has always given his personal attention to the tilling of his fields and gathering of his crops. His labors are annually rewarded by abundant harvests, the quality of which is in every way fully equal to the quantity. Stock-raising as well as general farming has engaged the attention of Mr. Johnson, who has met with lucrative returns from both branches of his business. Clear judgment, persistence and the determination of purpose that refuses to accept defeat have been the most striking characteristics manifested by him in the direction of his activities. Owing to his painstaking efforts and the intelligent direction of his endeavors he has prospered from the first and is now numbered among the substantial citizens of the community. In addition to his fine homestead Mr. Johnson owns stock in the Victoria Telephone Company.

In the attainment of prosperity Mr. Johnson has been capably assisted by the efficient management of the household affairs by his wife, whose maiden name was Anna Johnson. She, too, is a native of Sweden, whence she emigrated to the United States by herself as a child of ten years. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, as follows: Verna, Elmer, Herman, Clinton, Helen and Hilda.

The parents both hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church at Victoria, and Mr. Johnson is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America, holding membership in the camp at Victoria. Ever since attaining rights of citizenship he has given his political support to the candidates of the republican party but has never been an office seeker. His private interests always required his undivided attention and he has concentrated his energies upon the development of the farm. He now has his land tiled and under high cultivation, and is making such further improvements as his returns warrant, from year to year, and takes great pride in his homestead, which he desires to make one of the most attractive properties in the township.

AMBROSE L. KING.

One of Knox county's patriotic citizens who donned the blue and went to the front during those troublesome days in the '60s is Ambrose L. King. He is now and has been for a long period engaged in general farming and stock-raising in Victoria township, where he has resided for fifty-eight years. His birth occurred in Wyandotte county, Ohio, on the 27th of December, 1843, his parents being Ambrose and Harriet (Porter) King. The father was born in the state of New York, in 1798, and there he was reared and educated. In his early manhood he went to Pennsylvania, locating in the vicinity of Erie, where he met the lady who later became his wife. During the early years of their domestic life they removed to Ohio, residing there until 1853. In the latter year they crossed the prairies of Indiana to Illinois, settling in Victoria township, a mile east of our subject's farm, where the father acquired six hundred and forty acres of land. Here closed his active and useful life in its eightieth year, while the mother was only sixty-six years of age at the time of her death. They were both members of the Seventh Day Adventist church and he was a stanch advocate of the political principles of the republican party, but never held an office. The family of Mr. and Mrs. King numbered six, as follows: Nelson; Herman; Homer; Ambrose, our subject; Sarah; and Corwin.

Ambrose L. King was only a lad of ten years when he removed with his parents to Knox county, where he was reared to manhood, completing his education in the common schools of Victoria township. He had early been impressed with a fine appreciation of patriotic duties and responsibilities toward one's country, so when the nation's chief sent out a call for volunteers in the early days of the war, it aroused his fervor and he responded by enlisting in Company B, One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. During the period of his service he participated in several of the notable conflicts of the war but was never wounded or captured by the enemy. When mustered out he returned to Knox county and resumed the duties of civil life as an agriculturist and has always continued to be identified with this vocation. He now owns eighty acres of land located on section 5, Victoria township, where he has resided ever since. his marriage. Here he engages in general farming and stock-raising and has met with lucrative returns from both. He is a man of practical ideas and progressive methods, who uses intelligence and discretion in the direction of his undertakings and is recognized as one of the capable agriculturists of the community.

The lady who now bears the name of Mrs. Ambrose L. King was known during her girlhood as Miss Sarah Collinson. She was born and reared in Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, whence she removed with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collinson, to Lynn township, Knox county. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. King, as follows: Ivy, the wife of Charles Spencer, of Williamsfield; Ida, who married Fred Grant, of Victoria township; Kate, who became the wife of Homer Patty, of Riverside, California; Sarah; Ora, who married Bert Thomas; and Avery, who is at home.

Mr. King votes with the republican party, considering its policy best adapted to subserve the highest interests of the country. He takes a deep interest in the development of the community and its political activities, but he has never aspired to public office. During the long period of his residence in Knox county he has been an interested observer of its development and increasing prosperity, having witnessed the introduction of modern methods and inventions that in rapid evolution and on-march have completely revolutionized commercial, industrial and agricultural life. His early manhood covered that formative period in the state's progress when pioneer methods were being superseded by modern conditions, following the advent of a newer and higher form of civilization that developed after the war.

ABRAHAM L. HOOFNAGLE.

A resident of Knox county for the past twenty-seven years Abraham L. Hoofnagel has not only witnessed the agricultural development of this section of the country but he has been an active participant of the movement, being successfully engaged in the pursuits of general farming. He owns and operates a fine farm on section 15, in Orange township. He claims Adams county, Pennsylvania, as the place of his birth, which there occurred April 25, 1861. His parents were Henry and Nancy (Caldwell) Hoofnagle, both natives of Pennsylvania. The father, who was a farmer and carpenter by occupation, and lived until his death in Adams county, enlisted in the army at the time of the Civil war and saw active service in a number of important battles. There were seven children in the family, two daughters who are deceased, and five sons, all living. They are: Samuel, at Fairfield, Pennsylvania; Robert and John, also of that state; Grant, who lives in the state of Washington; and Abraham, of this review.

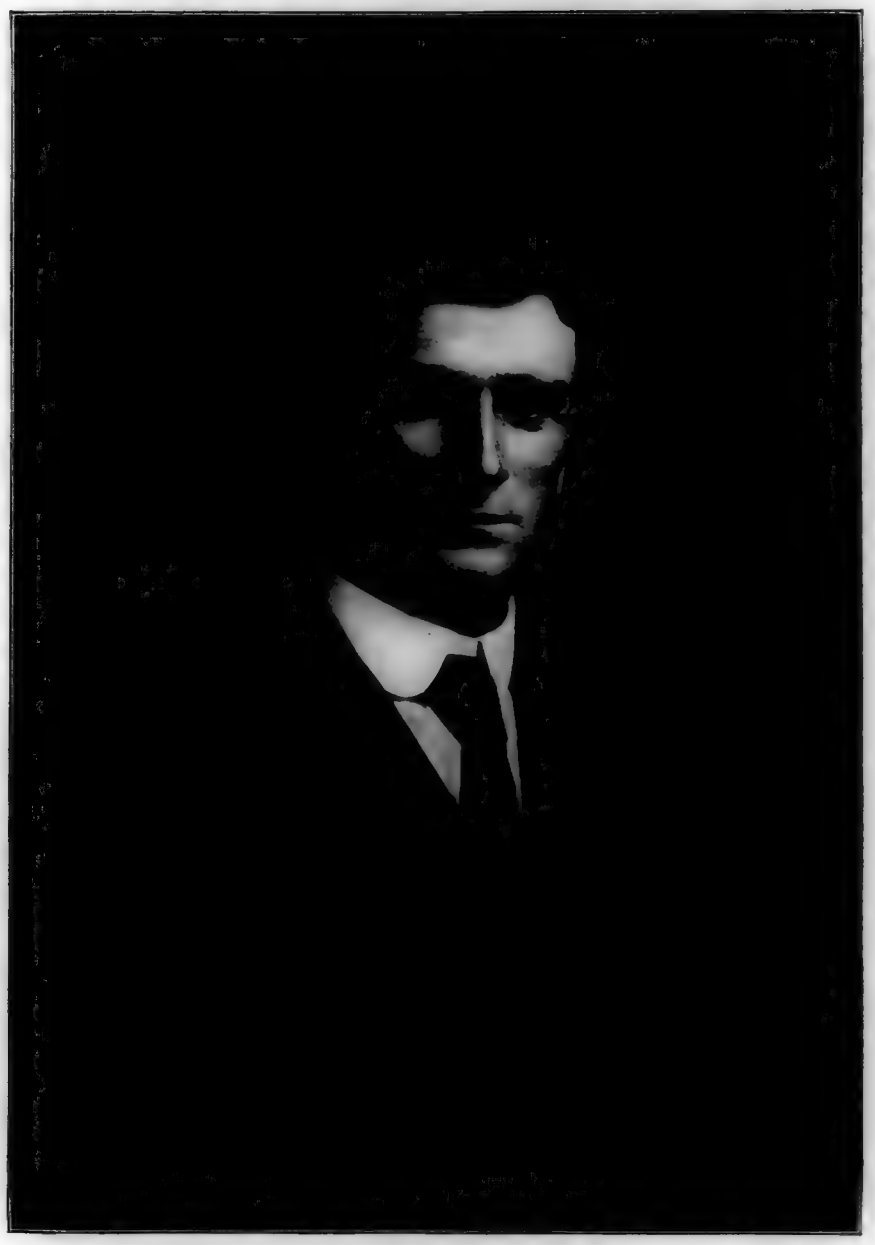
During his boyhood days spent in Adams county, Pennsylvania, Abraham Hoofnagle obtained an elementary education in the rural schools of his locality. and when not engaged with his text-books was employed in various occupations about the farm thus learning at an early age the many details necessary to know in connection with the tilling of the soil and the raising of cattle. In 1874 he came to Knox county, settling in Knox township where he first worked on a farm in the employment of another. Later he engaged in agriculture on his own account. Seven years ago, in 1904, he purchased the tract of land on which he now lives, eighty acres of the soil of which is particularly rich and productive. He is progressive in his methods and untiring in his efforts to make his place one of the attractive spots in the county, conspicuous for its good equipment and its thorough cultivation.



Mr. Hoofnagle was united in marriage to Miss Amy Brown, the marriage occurring in Knox county in 1895. She was a daughter of Amos Brown, an early pioneer settler in the county. Both parents are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Hoofnagle are the parents of six children: Mabel, Alva, Bernice, Russell, Eva and Cecil, all living at home. Surrounded by an interesting family for whom he wishes to provide a comfortable living and make larger opportunities possible, Mr. Hoofnagle finds that impelling inspiration in his work that urges him on to constantly renewed effort and cannot fail of winning success.

J. ORTON FINLEY.

J. Orton Finley, who resides on section 24, Ontario township, was born on the 18th of December, 1874, and is a son of J. Alexander and Mary E. (Cox) Finley, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this volume.

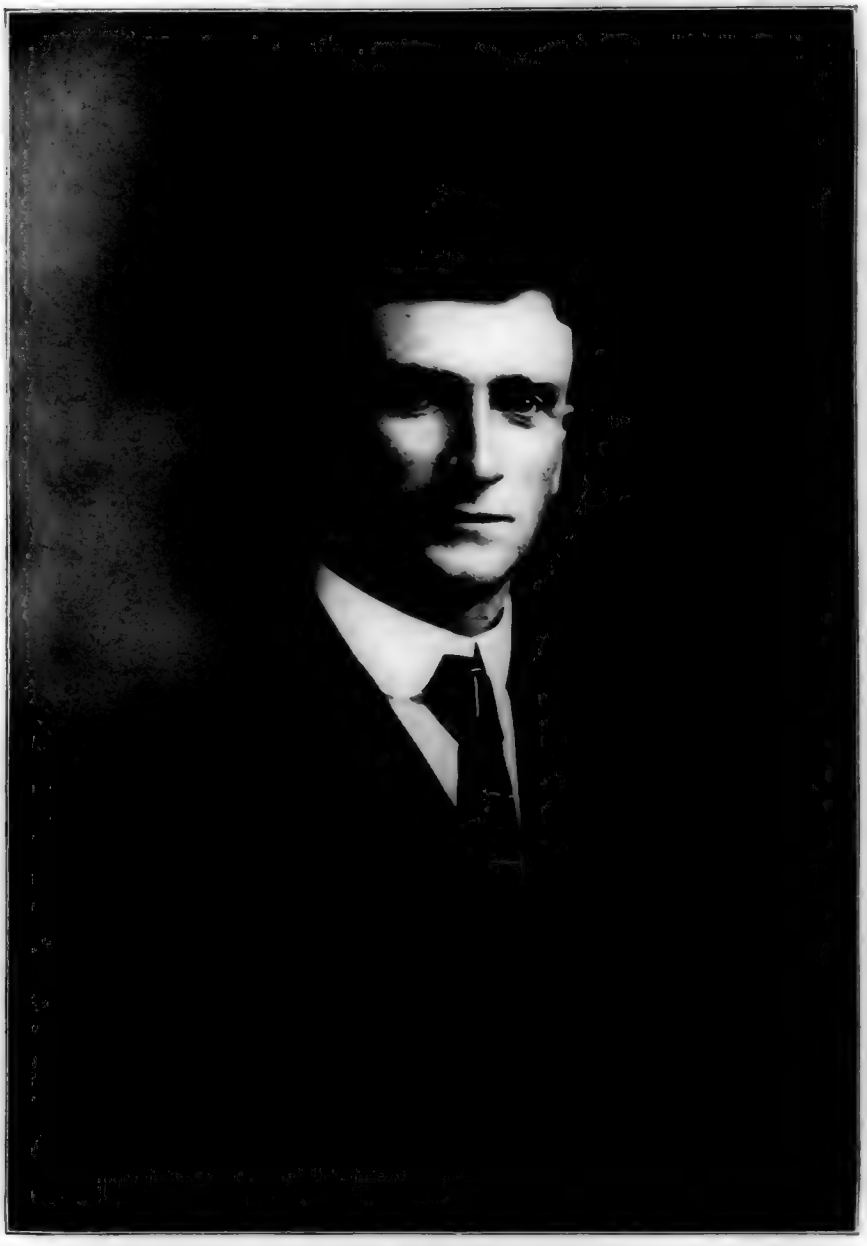
Mr. Finley of this review received his early education in the common schools and later was a student at the University of Illinois. As soon as he had completed his education he took up farming on the old homestead, where he worked according to the modern and scientific principles, which he acquired in his university course. In the spring of 1905 he started in for himself and is now operating four hundred acres of land, all under a high state of cultivation, which he devotes to live-stock raising. He feeds over a thousand head of sheep, many of which are used for exhibition purposes, as, for instance, Mr. Finley is the largest and most successful exhibitor of sheep, at the International Fat Stock Show in Chicago. He also exhibits cattle. In addition he carries on general farming and also feeds cattle and hogs.

On the 24th of December, 1904, Mr. Finley was married to Miss Anna S. Fox, a daughter of the Rev. J. W. and Charlotte (Stanley) Fox, the former a Congregational minister. Mrs. Finley received her education at Wheaton, graduating with the class of 1900, and at Oberlin College, of Oberlin, Ohio. To Mr.

J. ORTON FINLEY

until his death in Adams county, enlisted in the army at the time of the Civil war and saw active service in a number of important battles. There were seven children in the family, two daughters who are deceased, and five sons, all living. They are: Samuel, at Fairfield, Pennsylvania; Robert and John, also of that state; Grant, who lives in the state of Washington; and Abraham, of this review.

During his boyhood days spent in Adams county, Pennsylvania, Abraham Hoofnagle obtained an elementary education in the rural schools of his locality, and when not engaged with his text-books was employed in various occupations about the farm thus learning at an early age the many details necessary to know in connection with the tilling of the soil and the raising of cattle. In 1874 he came to Knox county, settling in Knox township where he first worked on a farm in the employment of another. Later he engaged in agriculture on his own account. Seven years ago, in 1904, he purchased the tract of land on which he now lives, eighty acres of the soil of which is particularly rich and productive. He is progressive in his methods and untiring in his efforts to make his place one of the attractive spots in the county, conspicuous for its good equipment and its thorough cultivation.



Mr. Hoofnagle was united in marriage to Miss Amy Brown, the marriage occurring in Knox county in 1895. She was a daughter of Amos Brown, an early pioneer settler in the county. Both parents are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Hoofnagle are the parents of six children: Mabel, Alva, Bernice, Russell, Eva and Cecil, all living at home. Surrounded by an interesting family for whom he wishes to provide a comfortable living and make larger opportunities possible, Mr. Hoofnagle finds that impelling inspiration in his work that urges him on to constantly renewed effort and cannot fail of winning success.

J. ORTON FINLEY.

J. Orton Finley, who resides on section 24, Ontario township, was born on the 18th of December, 1874, and is a son of J. Alexander and Mary E. (Cox) Finley, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this volume.

Mr. Finley of this review received his early education in the common schools and later was a student at the University of Illinois. As soon as he had completed his education he took up farming on the old homestead, where he worked according to the modern and scientific principles, which he acquired in his university course. In the spring of 1905 he started in for himself and is now operating four hundred acres of land, all under a high state of cultivation, which he devotes to live-stock raising. He feeds over a thousand head of sheep, many of which are used for exhibition purposes, as, for instance, Mr. Finley is the largest and most successful exhibitor of sheep, at the International Fat Stock Show in Chicago. He also exhibits cattle. In addition he carries on general farming and also feeds cattle and hogs.

On the 24th of December, 1904, Mr. Finley was married to Miss Anna S. Fox, a daughter of the Rev. J. W. and Charlotte (Stanley) Fox, the former a Congregational minister. Mrs. Finley received her education at Wheaton, graduating with the class of 1900, and at Oberlin College, of Oberlin, Ohio. To Mr.

J. ORTON FINLEY

and Mrs. Finley three children have been born, Mary C., Sarah E. and Anne Josephine. In political views Mr. Finley is a republican and keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day. He has served as school director for a number of years and the cause of education finds in him an ardent champion whose labors in its behalf are practical, beneficial and far reaching. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Congregational church of Oneida. He occupies a prominent position in agricultural and social circles and has aided materially in the upbuilding and advancement of the county, being widely recognized as a public-spirited citizen.

FRED O. McFARLAND.

Fred O. McFarland, a practitioner of the Galesburg bar, a member of what is one of the leading law firms of the city under the name of Williams, Lawrence, Welsh & Green, was born in Mendon, Adams county, Illinois, June 6, 1875, His father, Adam McFarland, was also a native of this state and was a son of John McFarland, who was born near Clearland, Ohio, but became one of the early residents of Adams county, Illinois. He died when seventy-five years of age. The children of his first marriage were David, Thomas, Elizabeth, Josephine and Mary J. After losing his first wife he married Catharine Taylor, a native of Kentucky, and unto this union there were born five children, William, Adam, Sarah, Martha and Olive.

Adam McFarland was reared in Adams county, Illinois, and in early life learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed until his death, in 1882. He married Deborah Ely, a native of this state and a daughter of Ralph and Permelia Ely. Her father was a native of Ohio and became one of the pioneer settlers of Adams county, Illinois, where both he and his wife died when well advanced in years. Their family numbered five children, Jared, Phoebe, Emma, Deborah and Lewis. Deborah became the wife of Adam McFarland and unto them were born five children, of whom four reached years of maturity: Fred O.; Herman, who died in the Spanish-American war; Ralph; and Floyd, who is living in Norman, Oklahoma.

Fred O. McFarland spent his youthful days in the usual manner of lads of the locality and period, dividing his time between the duties of the schoolroom and the pleasures of the playground, and when about twelve years old began to learn the printer's trade which he followed during school and college vacations for a number of years. He completed the high-school course in 1892 and following his graduation entered Knox College in the fall of 1893. He is numbered among its alumni of the class of 1898 and in the fall of that year he removed to Knoxville, Illinois, where he became editor of the Knox County News, continuing with this publication until the 1st of August, 1899. He regarded his newspaper career, however, merely as an initial step and help toward professional life, for in the fall of the latter year he matriculated in the law department of the Iowa University, in which he spent one year. He then came to Galesburg and was a student in the office of Williams, Lawrence & Welsh, prominent attorneys. At the same time he provided for his own support by working on the Galesburg Evening Mail and the Republican Register and later he entered the circuit clerk's office in the position of deputy in September, 1902, and so continued for seven years, his service being entirely acceptable in this connection. It was during that period that, in 1906, he took the bar examination and was admitted to practice in the month of June. However, he continued in the circuit clerk's office until December, 1909, when he entered the office of Williams, Lawrence, Welsh & Green as a member of the firm.

On the 16th of December, 1903, Mr. McFarland was married to Miss Edith Simpson, a native of Knoxville and a daughter of James S. and Mary (McGowan) Simpson. Her paternal grandfather, William Simpson, was a native of Pennsylvania and an early settler of Knoxville, Illinois, where he operated a mill for many years. He married Susan Gallagher and to them were born three children, James S., Jane and Nancy. The maternal grandfather was William McGowan and he, too, was an early resident of Knoxville and a prominent citizen there in pioneer times. Unto him and his wife were born twelve children, of whom eight reached maturity, Henry, Curtis, Mary, Harry, Charles, Frank, Carrie and Belle. James S. Simpson was a native of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, and his wife was born and reared in Knoxville, Illinois. Mr. Simpson died August 11, 1911. They became parents of two sons and a daughter, Irvin, Edith and Harry. Unto Mr. and Mrs. McFarland has been born but one child, Maxine. Mr. McFarland holds membership in the Congregational church and his wife in the Presbyterian church. He has voted with the republican party since age conferred upon him the right of franchise and is somewhat prominent in its local ranks. He is a member of the county central committee and is serving now as a member of the city council, having been elected from the sixth ward in 1909 and reelected in 1911, thus receiving indorsement of his first term. He is deeply interested in all matters pertaining to the city's welfare and improvement and in the questions which come before the council for settlement he seeks ever to support those plans and projects which eliminate useless expenditure and misrule in public affairs and promote the general good.

GEORGE PATTY.

George Patty, a well known agriculturist of Victoria township, who has retired from the active work of the fields but still makes his home on his farm, is a native of Knox county, his birth having occurred in the township, where he now lives, on the 10th of July, 1849. His parents were Josiah and Rebecca (Brown) Patty, the father a native of Tennessee, where he was also reared, and the mother of North Carolina. They were married in Tennessee and there they passed the early years of their domestic life, coming to Knox county in 1837. Upon their arrival they located in Victoria township, where the father successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits during the remainder of his active life. He acquired extensive property interests, and at the time of his death owned five hundred and twenty acres of land, three hundred and twenty of which was under cultivation and the remainder in timber. Both parents passed away on the homestead and were buried in Salem cemetery. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Patty numbered eight, the two eldest of whom were born in Tennessee and the others in this county. In order of birth they are as follows: James; William; Sarah J.; Nancy A.; Obed; Robert; George; and Josiah. The parents originally joined the Baptist church, but after locating in Victoria township, Mrs. Patty united with the Methodist Episcopal church. The father voted the democratic ticket, but never sought office.

The entire life of George Patty has been passed in the immediate vicinity of his present home, his education having been obtained in the Center Prairie district school. When still in his early boyhood he was assigned duties about the farm, and, as in common with other lads of the pioneer period, he had to assume his share of the duties and responsibilities that devolved upon both young and old living on the frontier. By the time he had attained his maturity he was a practical agriculturist, continuing to devote his entire attention to this vocation until 1904, when he turned over the operation of his farms to his son and son-in-law. He early manifested the energy and perseverance that have been the salient factors in his success, so intelligently directing his undertakings that he acquired three hundred and eighty acres of valuable land, all of which is under high cultivation. His holdings are located on section 14, of Victoria township, on the east side of the north and south road. During the period of his ownership he has erected all of the buildings now standing, including the house, which was built in 1876, and has wrought various other improvements consistent with the spirit of progress and enterprise he has at all times evinced.

For his wife Mr. Patty chose Miss Rosetta Florence Cain, who was born in Stark county, Illinois, and is a daughter of Joseph and Barbara Cain. Four children have been born to them, as follows: Joseph Delbert, who married Pearl Tucker and is now residing on one of his father's farms; Roy, who chose for his wife Blanch Jarnagan, and lives in Galesburg; Stella, the wife of Fred Orwig, who is living on the home farm; and Etta, who is a music teacher.

Ever since age conferred upon him the right of franchise, Mr. Patty has cast his ballot for the candidates of the democratic party. He has always taken an active interest in township affairs, and during his early manhood assumed his share of public office, serving with efficiency both as justice of the peace and constable, having resigned from the latter office before the expiration of his term. His energies were equally divided between general farming and stock-raising during the long period of his agricultural career, both occupations proving to be remunerative under his intelligent and capable supervision. He is now enjoying the ease and comfort afforded by the goodly income received from his property; the reward of the well spent years of his early life.

CARL G. JOHNSON, M. D.

A capable representative of the medical fraternity of Galesburg is Dr. Carl G. Johnson, who was born in Ascarshamn, Sweden, on the 5th of January, 1865. He is a son of Carl X. and Helena S. (Malstrom) Johnson, who were natives of the same locality, the father's birth occurring on March 15, 1842, and that of the mother on Christmas day, 1841. In his early youth the father followed the sea, but later he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. Chafing under the limitations of his native land and its meager opportunities, he, in 1869, together with his family, emigrated to the United States. He came directly to Galesburg and for a short time was employed in a lumberyard here, subsequently taking a position as boiler maker with the Frost Manufacturing Company. He was an efficient employe, thoroughly reliable and trustworthy as well as thrifty and enterprising, and about 1882 he purchased stock in the company, and later was made foreman of his department. In 1894 he withdrew from active work, having acquired a competence that provided him and his wife with all of the comforts and many of the luxuries of life, and has ever since lived retired. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were married in Ascarshamn, Sweden, in the fall of 1863, and to them were born three children, of whom our subject is the eldest. The second member of the family, Selma S., the wife of Nathan Hoogner, lives in Minneapolis, and Hulda A., the youngest, is deceased. The parents are members of the Swedish Lutheran church, in the faith of which they reared their family, always taking an active interest in the work of the various departments of this organization, Mr. Johnson having for many years been one of the deacons. He gives his political support to the men and measures of the republican party, but has never been an office seeker.

As he was only a lad of four and a half years when he came to Galesburg with his parents, Dr. Johnson has passed practically his entire life in this city. He acquired his preliminary education in the common and high schools of the city and then entered Augustana College at Rock Island, graduating from the scientific department with the class of 1889. Having decided to adopt the medical profession for his life vocation, the following autumn he matriculated in the Long Island College Hospital, of Brooklyn, New York, being awarded the degree of M. D. with the class of 1892. In order to better qualify himself for the duties of a general practitioner, immediately following his graduation he became an interne in the Eastern District Hospital, being identified with this institution from June to September. Resigning his position in the latter month, he went to Minneapolis and entered the City Hospital in the same capacity. He remained there until June, 1895, when he came to Galesburg, where he was associated with Dr. Wilson until November, 1896. His various experiences had brought him to a full recognition of his deficiencies and needs and he subsequently went abroad, spending four months in post-graduate work in the hospitals of London, Berlin and Braunschweig. Upon his return to Galesburg he established an office and has ever since been engaged in general practice. In addition to an excellent equipment for the profession, Dr. Johnson is by nature well qualified for the varied and exacting duties of a physician. He possesses a kindly sympathetic nature, an abundance of vitality and the ease and assurance as well as the perception that inspires confidence in him and the school he represents. During the period of his connection with the medical profession of Knox county, he has had ample opportunity to manifest his skill both as a physician and surgeon. In his diagnosis he is seldom if ever at fault, while he possesses the acute mental faculties, delicate yet firm touch and deft hand so essential in the operating room. His abilities have received their full recognition, and he is enjoying a large and lucrative practice. He was a member of the Galesburg City Hospital board for fourteen years, during four of which he was chief of the staff and for the past seven years he has been a member of the staff of Augustana Hospital in Chicago.

On the 5th of August, 1896, Dr. Johnson was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Larson, a daughter of Paul and Hannah Larson, of Moline, Illinois, and they have two children: Helena Katharine, whose birth occurred in Galesburg, on the 3d of October, 1900; and Fritiof Paul, born in Chicago, February 8, 1909.

For the past seven years, Dr. Johnson has been a trustee of the Swedish Lutheran church, in which both he and Mrs. Johnson hold membership. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and he also belongs to the Galesburg Club, while he maintains relations with the members of his profession, through his connection with the City and Knox County Medical Societies and the Illinois State and American Medical Associations. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and he takes an active interest in all municipal questions, and during the years of 1904-5 represented the second precinct of the second ward as alderman, while he filled the office of health commissioner of the city during 1906 and 1907 to the general satisfaction of the constituency. Dr. Johnson is a man who takes a deep interest in all matters pertaining to the community and its welfare, and cooperates in every progressive movement. Educational matters in particular engage his attention and for twelve years he was a member of Augustana College board of trustees. Efficiency is one of the most striking of Dr. Johnson's characteristics, and is especially marked in his conscientious devotion to the interests of his patients and his loyalty to every trust reposed in him.

JOSEPH G. REED.

Joseph G. Reed owns and controls one hundred and sixty acres of rich and valuable land on section 1, Victoria township, where he makes a specialty of raising thoroughbred Hereford cattle, on which he has won several prizes. He was born in Henry county, Illinois, November 27, 1860, the son of George and Jane (Cockburn) Reed, both of whom were natives of England and were married in that country. The parents on coming to the United States, located in Henry county and after several years removed to Knox county, residing first in Victoria township and later in Lynn township, where the father still resides, at the venerable age of ninety-one years. The mother passed away at the age of eighty-one and is buried in Lynn township. She was a member of the Baptist church and her husband belongs to the Christian church, although in their native country both were natives of the Church of England. The father even at his advanced age has a remarkable memory. He is a stanch republican and has been a very active politician in his time. Fraternally he is associated with the Masonic lodge. In their family were ten children, namely: Annie, Mary and John, who were born in England; Gabriel and Mary, whose birth and demise occurred in that country; and George, Joseph, Emma and two who are deceased,—William and an infant girl—all of whom were born in Henry county, Illinois.

Joseph G. Reed was three years old when his parents removed to Victoria township, where he was reared and received his education. On reaching man's estate he was employed for some time on a farm in Victoria township, after which he engaged in farming for two years in Lynn township. Subsequently returning to Victoria township, he rented land for a few years and, in 1895, purchased of Lafe Kennedy his present farm, on which he has made all of the improvements and erected all of the buildings. He engages to some extent in general farming but does not attempt to raise more grain than is needed to feed his Hereford cattle, of which he has yearly about thirty head. Besides his farming interests Mr. Reed owns stock in the Farmers' Mutual Telephone Company and is vice president and director of the La Fayette Fair Association.

Mr. Reed was united in marriage to Miss Jessie I. Grant, a native of Lynn township and a daughter of H. P. and Lucy (Norton) Grant, the father born in Peoria county, Illinois, and the mother in the state of Connecticut. The parents were married in Stark county and lived in Lynn township until the time of the retirement of the father who first removed to Galva, Illinois, and later to La Fayette, where he now resides, making his home with his daughter. The mother died at the age of seventy-one years and is buried in La Fayette. The father followed the occupation of farming and in connection was an auctioneer and also served as assessor and later as supervisor of Lynn township, being elected on the republican ticket. They were the parents of seven children: Ellen, the wife of John Reed, of Galesburg township; Arthur, who resides in Stark county, Illinois; Jessie I., now Mrs. Joseph G. Reed; Fred, who resides in Victoria township; Maude, of Galesburg; N. B., of Stark county; and Harold, of Victoria township. Mr. and Mrs. Reed have become the parents of two sons: Walter A., who was born in Lynn township and lives at home; and Roy W., who was born in Victoria township and died there at the age of eight years. He is buried in the Galva cemetery. Mr. Reed in political allegiance is independent and fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order and is master of the lodge. Both he and his wife are members of the Christian church at La Fayette and all their acquaintances entertain for them the highest regard.

CHARLES C. CRAIG.

Charles C. Craig, lawyer, was born in Knoxville, this county, on the 16th of June, 1865, his parents being Alfred M. and Elizabeth P. (Harvey) Craig.

Mr. Craig began his education in the public schools and afterward attended Knox College, Notre Dame University and the United States Naval Academy. He was a student in the law office of Stevenson & Ewing, of Bloomington and also attended the Wesleyan Law School. Following his admission to the bar, in 1888, he began practice and for twenty-three years has been an active representative of the legal profession in Galesburg. He has been in general practice and the success which he has attained is due to his own efforts and merits. He has been counsel in many important cases tried in Knox and adjoining counties and has enjoyed a large practice before the courts of this state and in other states. In addition to his law practice Mr. Craig is interested in farming and is identified with various business interests in this cty. He has been a director of the Bank of Galesburg and also its attorney for several years and is now president of that bank. Mr. Craig is a democrat and has taken an active interest in politics until his increasing law practice and business interests demanded his entire time. He was elected a member of the forty-first and forty-second general assembly, was chairman of the committee on agriculture of the Illinois commission at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis; was nominated as the candidate of his general farming but does not attempt to raise more grain than is needed to feed his Hereford cattle, of which he has yearly about thirty head. Besides his farming interests Mr. Reed owns stock in the Farmers' Mutual Telephone Company and is vice president and director of the La Fayette Fair Association.

C. C. CRAIG

Mr. Reed was united in marriage to Miss Jessie I. Grant, a native of Lynn township and a daughter of H. P. and Lucy (Norton) Grant, the father born in Peoria county, Illinois, and the mother in the state of Connecticut. The parents were married in Stark county and lived in Lynn township until the time of the retirement of the father who first removed to Galva, Illinois, and later to La Fayette, where he now resides, making his home with his daughter. The mother died at the age of seventy-one years and is buried in La Fayette. The father followed the occupation of farming and in connection was an auctioneer and also served as assessor and later as supervisor of Lynn township, being elected on the republican ticket. They were the parents of seven children: Ellen, the wife of John Reed, of Galesburg township; Arthur, who resides in Stark county, Illinois; Jessie I., now Mrs. Joseph G. Reed; Fred, who resides in Victoria township; Maude, of Galesburg; N. B., of Stark county; and Harold, of Victoria township. Mr. and Mrs. Reed have become the parents of two sons: Walter A., who was born in Lynn township and lives at home; and Roy W., who was born in Victoria township and died there at the age of eight years. He is buried in the Galva cemetery. Mr. Reed in political allegiance is independent and fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order and is master of the lodge. Both he and his wife are members of the Christian church at La Fayette and all their acquaintances entertain for them the highest regard.

CHARLES C. CRAIG.

Charles C. Craig, lawyer, was born in Knoxville, this county, on the 16th of June, 1865, his parents being Alfred M. and Elizabeth P. (Harvey) Craig.

Mr. Craig began his education in the public schools and afterward attended Knox College, Notre Dame University and the United States Naval Academy. He was a student in the law office of Stevenson & Ewing, of Bloomington and also attended the Wesleyan Law School. Following his admission to the bar, in 1888, he began practice and for twenty-three years has been an active representative of the legal profession in Galesburg. He has been in general practice and the success which he has attained is due to his own efforts and merits. He has been counsel in many important cases tried in Knox and adjoining counties and has enjoyed a large practice before the courts of this state and in other states. In addition to his law practice Mr. Craig is interested in farming and is identified with various business interests in this cty. He has been a director of the Bank of Galesburg and also its attorney for several years and is now president of that bank. Mr. Craig is a democrat and has taken an active interest in politics until his increasing law practice and business interests demanded his entire time. He was elected a member of the forty-first and forty-second general assembly, was chairman of the committee on agriculture of the Illinois commission at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis; was nominated as the candidate of his party for judge of the supreme court, in 1909, and only defeated by a small majority. He also has an interesting military chapter in his life history, having for several years served as captain of Battery B, of the First Artillery, Illinois National Guard, while at the present writing he is lieutenant colonel and ordinance officer, on the staff of General Kittleson, of the Third Brigade and is instructor and supervisor of rifle practice of the various companies in the Northwest part of the state.

C. C. CRAIG

On the 15th of July, 1893, Mr. Craig was married to Miss Louise Dary, a daughter of Eugene and Sidonia (Benedict) Dary, of New Orleans. Her father was a merchant of that city and Memphis. Both he and his wife are now deceased. Their daughter, Mrs. Craig, has been continuously a resident of Galesburg since her marriage. Both he and Mrs. Craig are well known socially in this city and throughout the state. Colonial Craig is a member of the Galesburg Club, the Elks and several other societies, while in Masonry he has attained high rank, holding membership in Galesburg Commandery, Knights Templar and in the Mystic Shrine. His interests are wide and varied and his influence is found on the side of progress and improvement. He has always been popular with his business associates.

IRA BULSON.

Ira Bulson, one of the well known native sons of Victoria township as well as one of the highly successful and capable agriculturists, was born on the farm, where he now resides, on the 7th of October, 1863. His father, Frederick Bulson, one of the pioneer settlers of Knox county, was born and reared in Otsego county, New York. At an age between twenty-one and twenty-two years he left his native state and came west, locating in Knox county. Here he met and married Miss Mary Heinline, who was a native of Kentucky, subsequently locating on the farm now owned and operated by their son Ira. Mr. Bulson was an ambitious, enterprising agriculturist and capable business man, who directed his undertakings with intelligence and sagacity. He met with success ultimately, although the early years were well filled with the usual obstacles and difficulties that confront the pioneer. He erected practically all of the buildings now standing on the place and brought the fields into a high state of productivity. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Bulson numbered eight, our subject being the seventh in order of birth. The others are as follows: Sarah, the wife of Clinton Bradley, of Iowa; Hannah, the deceased wife of David Shearer; Lizzie, who married M. A. Shearer of Clay county, Nebraska; George, who died in childhood; Alice, the wife of Henry Turner of Clay county, Nebraska; Mary, who is a resident of Santa Anna, California; and Adam, who passed away at the age of twenty-two years. The children were born and reared on the farm and there the parents passed the latter years of their life, the mother being sixty at the time of her death, while the father had attained the venerable age of eighty-six when called to his final rest. They are both buried in the cemetery at Victoria. Mr. Bulson was one of the foremost citizens of the township and took an active and helpful interest in its political affairs, giving his support to the candidates of the democratic party. He discharged with efficiency the duties of pathmaster and at one time he was also a member of the board of school directors.

The entire life of Ira Bulson has been passed on the farm he now owns and which is endeared to him by the memories of childhood as well as the associations of his mature years. He attended the district school in the vicinity of his home, and while mastering the elements of English learning assisted with the work of the farm, the services of the entire family being required to perform the multitudinous duties connected with its operation. When he had acquired a sufficient public-school training, he gave his entire attention to agricultural pursuits, with the intention of qualifying himself to adopt this life vocation upon attaining his maturity. After his marriage he brought his bride to the home of his parents, later acquiring the title to the property. Since becoming the owner of the farm, Mr. Bulson has remodeled and improved many of the buildings to which he has also made additions. As his circumstances have warranted during the passing years he has introduced various modern conveniences and appliances that have added greatly to the comfort and value of the place. His operations have always been conducted along the lines of general farming, but in connection therewith he has also raised stock, both lines of departure having proven remunerative under his capable direction. Success has attended the efforts of Mr. Bulson and in addition to his valuable property he owns stock in the Farmers' Elevator at Victoria and the Farmers' Cooperative State Bank at Galva.

Mr. Bulson has twice married, his first union being with Miss Minnie Dudley, and they became the parents of a son and daughter, Harry and Jessie. On the 2d of June, 1911, Mr. Bulson and Miss Laura Boggs were united in marriage. The present Mrs. Bulson is a native of Galva and a daughter of Light and Laura Boggs, residents of that place. His holdings are located in Lynn and Victor townships, but he resides on section 6 of Victoria township, his house facing the road that divides Copley and Victor townships.

Ever since granted the right of franchise upon attaining his majortiy, Mr. Bulson has accorded his support to the men and measures of the democratic party. Although he is interested in local political activities and meets the requirements of good citizenship by the casting of his ballot on election day, he has never aspired to office, always having preferred to give his undivided attention to the development of his private affairs. Both Mr. Bulson and his family are held in high esteem in the community, where the name has been held in favorable regard for three generations, and the hospitality of the best homes is freely accorded them.

WILLIAM HENRY GIBBS.

William Henry Gibbs, who is successfully engaged in the insurance business in Galva, Illinois, was born February 8, 1849, in Philadelphia, his parents being Joseph D. and Ann Elizabeth (Goetzinger) Gibbs, natives of Delaware county, New Jersey. The father came to Knox county with his father, Martin Gibbs, who located at Gibbs settlement, being at that time beside a Mr. Lafferty the only settler in Lynn township. Subsequently Joseph D. Gibbs returned home, going by boat as far as Pennsylvania and working his way overland through that state. The grandmother, Hannah Beck, died in Illinois, in 1849. Joseph Davenport Gibbs passed away in 1891.

After spending a few years in the common schools and attending Galva high school for two years and Coles Business College in Peoria, Illinois, William H. Gibbs assisted his father on the home farm until he was twenty-four years of age. At that time he was married and removed to the property which is now the Goff farm and where he remained fifteen years previous to coming to Galva, in 1890. Upon his arrival in this town he engaged in the insurance business, which he is still conducting in connection with the real-estate business.

Mr. Gibbs was married to Miss Harriett Westerdale, who is a native of London, England, having been born there in 1855. Her parents, William and Sophia (Bampton) Westerdale, formerly of London, came to Copley township in 1849 and engaged in agricultural pursuits, which they followed for many years. In the meantime Mr. Westerdale returned for a short visit to England and upon the conclusion of this he returned to Copley township, where he again took up his residence. His death occurred there in 1897, at the age of eighty-eight years. Mrs. Westerdale was a daughter of James and Henrietta Bampton, also natives of England, where the grandfather, William Westerdale, Sr., enlisted for active service in the Crimean war. He was a florist in London, and came to America with his family by way of Canada and settled near Peoria, Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs have become the parents of three children. Eva H., the eldest, is the wife of James S. Richmond, of St. Charles, Illinois. After graduating from Knox College she served as principal of the high school for six years. Jessie Bruce is teaching vocal music in Clinton, Illinois. She makes her home with her father. James Bampton is bookkeeper and auditor with Parlin & Orendorff at Canton, Illinois.

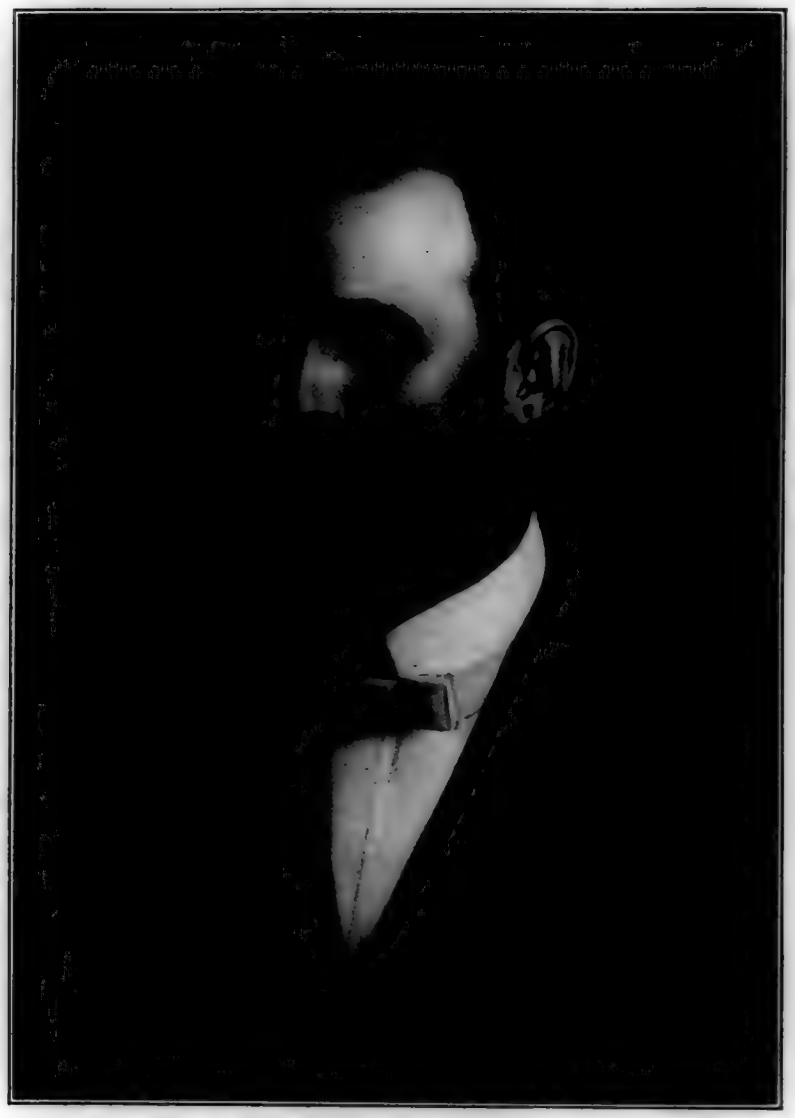
In politics Mr. Gibbs casts his vote independent of any party, voting for the man or measure which he thinks will be most effective in carrying out the policies which will promote civic welfare. He was town clerk for seven years, having been elected on the people's ticket. He holds membership in the Methodist church of Galva and is a member of the Mystic Workers. Mrs. Gibbs is a prominent worker for the temperance cause in her district and has served as president of the Galva Women's Christian Temperance Union for four years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs have won for themselves the respect and esteem of all who know them and the circle of their friends is almost coextensive with the circle of their acquaintances.

AUGUSTUS LUDING APPELL.

Augustus L. Appell, who has been a resident of Lynn township since his birth on the Appell homestead, on the 23d of August, 1877, is a son of Charles L. and Sophia (Anderson) Appell. To the parents, whose births occurred on June 11, 1837, and in April, 1849, respectively, eleven children were born, namely: Lydia, who is the wife of Rev. G. A. Brandell of Denver, Colorado; the Rev.

Alfred Appell, who is residing in Pittsburg; Hannah, who is married to Gust Liljaroot, of Lynn township, Knox county; Carl J., who is an attorney in Chicago; Amanda, who is the wife of Otto Johnson, of Henry county, Illinois; Augustus L., the subject of this review; Edward J., who is a resident of Lynn township; Alfrida and Ferdinand L., both of whom are residing at home; Martin, who is living at home; and Edith, who is also residing at home.

Augustus L. Appell spent his boyhood and youth in the manner common to the average boy living on the farm. He attended the district school for a few years and at the same time assisted his father with the duties which daily came to hand on the farm. Later he devoted his entire time and efforts to agricultural pursuits in which his father was engaged, there learning to work along lines of profitable and practical methods. Subsequently he worked out as a farm hand until he was thirty years of age, when he began farming independently on a part of the home property, where he is now successfully engaged in general farming and stock-raising. During the five years of his management this property has been brought under a greater productivity than it ever before showed, and the energy, hard labor and attention to details which Mr. Appell is displaying will in future years bring him increasing returns.



On September 25th, 1907, Mr. Appell was married to Miss Esther Alfrida Nelson, whose birth occurred on the 22d of June, 1886, in Henry county, and who is a daughter of Bert L. and Anna (Westman) Nelson. The parents are fifty-five and forty-five years of age respectively and are residing in Galva, Illinois. They became the parents of four children, namely, Ambrose L., who is a resident of Henry county; Mrs. Augustus L. Appell; and Dora Norena and Edna, both of whom are living at home.

Although Mr. Appell is very active in political circles and gives his support to the republican party, he neither seeks nor desires office excepting, where he can assist in promoting local welfare. At present he is serving his second term as justice of the peace. In religious faith he is a Lutheran, holding membership in the Lutheran church of Galva. In his community he enjoys the respect and esteem of all who know him, accorded him because of the fidelity and integrity, which characterize all his undertakings and relations.

JOHN LOCKLIN.

John Locklin, a native and lifelong resident of Rio township, was born January 16, 1865, his parents, Henry and Bridget (Welch) Locklin, both being natives of Dublin, Ireland. The father left his native country in the '50s and after arriving in America, resided in New York state for one year before coming to Knox county and settling at Galesburg, where he engaged in farming. From that time until his death in Henry county, in 1902, at the age of sixty-seven years, he was an agriculturist. His farm comprises six hundred and forty acres and had been well cultivated for successful general farming. Mrs. Locklin, who is seventy-three years of age, is still a resident of Knox county.

John Locklin received his education in the common schools and the remainder of his life has been spent in agricultural pursuits. Until he was twenty-nine years

JOHN LOCKLIN

Alfred Appell, who is residing in Pittsburg; Hannah, who is married to Gust Liljaroot, of Lynn township, Knox county; Carl J., who is an attorney in Chicago; Amanda, who is the wife of Otto Johnson, of Henry county, Illinois; Augustus L., the subject of this review; Edward J., who is a resident of Lynn township; Alfrida and Ferdinand L., both of whom are residing at home; Martin, who is living at home; and Edith, who is also residing at home.

Augustus L. Appell spent his boyhood and youth in the manner common to the average boy living on the farm. He attended the district school for a few years and at the same time assisted his father with the duties which daily came to hand on the farm. Later he devoted his entire time and efforts to agricultural pursuits in which his father was engaged, there learning to work along lines of profitable and practical methods. Subsequently he worked out as a farm hand until he was thirty years of age, when he began farming independently on a part of the home property, where he is now successfully engaged in general farming and stock-raising. During the five years of his management this property has been brought under a greater productivity than it ever before showed, and the energy, hard labor and attention to details which Mr. Appell is displaying will in future years bring him increasing returns.

On September 25th, 1907, Mr. Appell was married to Miss Esther Alfrida Nelson, whose birth occurred on the 22d of June, 1886, in Henry county, and who is a daughter of Bert L. and Anna (Westman) Nelson. The parents are fifty-five and forty-five years of age respectively and are residing in Galva, Illinois. They became the parents of four children, namely, Ambrose L., who is a resident of Henry county; Mrs. Augustus L. Appell; and Dora Norena and Edna, both of whom are living at home.

Although Mr. Appell is very active in political circles and gives his support to the republican party, he neither seeks nor desires office excepting, where he can assist in promoting local welfare. At present he is serving his second term as justice of the peace. In religious faith he is a Lutheran, holding membership in the Lutheran church of Galva. In his community he enjoys the respect and esteem of all who know him, accorded him because of the fidelity and integrity, which characterize all his undertakings and relations.

JOHN LOCKLIN.

John Locklin, a native and lifelong resident of Rio township, was born January 16, 1865, his parents, Henry and Bridget (Welch) Locklin, both being natives of Dublin, Ireland. The father left his native country in the '50s and after arriving in America, resided in New York state for one year before coming to Knox county and settling at Galesburg, where he engaged in farming. From that time until his death in Henry county, in 1902, at the age of sixty-seven years, he was an agriculturist. His farm comprises six hundred and forty acres and had been well cultivated for successful general farming. Mrs. Locklin, who is seventy-three years of age, is still a resident of Knox county.

John Locklin received his education in the common schools and the remainder of his life has been spent in agricultural pursuits. Until he was twenty-nine years of age he resided on his father's farm and assisted in its cultivation, here learning the methods which have brought his own farm to its high state of productively. He made his independent start on the property of three hundred and twenty acres which is still his home. Besides carrying on general farming he also raises cattle and hogs for market purposes.

JOHN LOCKLIN

On January 25, 1894, Mr. Locklin was married to Miss Ella Torticill, the daughter of James and Mary Torticill, who reside on their farm in Sparta township. To Mr. and Mrs. Locklin was born a son, Bernard. On the death of his first wife Mr. Locklin married Catherine Butler, and to them have been born three children, namely: Eilene; Lucile; and Alice.

In politics Mr. Locklin gives his support to the democratic party, of whose principles he is a loyal supporter, and in religious faith he is a member of the Roman Catholic church. By devoting practically his whole attention to his chosen pursuit not only has he proven his worth and ability but he has also shown that the successful agriculturist is the one who possesses energy and power for indefatigable labor.

J. H. JUNK.

A highly prosperous agriculturist, who has acquired extensive property interests in Rio township is J. H. Junk, whose realty holdings in Knox county aggregate twelve hundred acres. He is the second in order of birth of the four children in the family of Samuel and Anna (Henderson) Junk, his natal day being the 30th of January, 1861. The parents were both natives of Pennsylvania and there they were also reared and educated. Samuel Junk, although a carpenter by trade, engaged in farming during practically the entire period of his active life. He came to Knox county with his brother John, now a resident of Henderson, during the pioneer period. In 1867, he removed from Henderson to Rio township, where he bought a farm for ten dollars per acre, to the further cultivation of which he devoted his energies for many years. He subsequently retired from the work of the fields and he and the mother removed to Rio, where they lived the remainder of their lives. He passed away on the 8th of August, 1908, at the age of seventy-three, and the mother, who was a daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Dunlap) Henderson, died on the 24th of February, 1903.

After he had completed his studies in the district schools, J. H. Junk attended Knox College for a time and he also pursued a commercial course, thus better qualifying himself for practical business duties. In common with other lads who are reared in the country, he was early assigned duties about the barn and fields and by the time he had attained his maturity he had a thorough knowledge of the practical methods of agriculture. After completing his education he returned to the home farm, and has ever since engaged in agricultural pursuits with the exception of two years when he was in the hardware and also the real-estate business, in Galesburg. He is a practical man possessed of foresight and sound judgment, and has so intelligently directed his undertakings that he has prospered. In 1903 he purchased the place, where he now lives containing three hundred and sixty acres of land. It is in a high state of productivity and equipped with good modern improvements and, as Mr. Junk takes great pride in his homestead, he devotes much time to keeping up its appearance. Here he engages in general farming and stock-raising and under his capable and intelligent direction both are proving to be very remunerative. He annually reaps abundant harvests from his fields, the quality of which is fully commensurate with the quantity and he keeps a good grade of stock. Everything about his place manifests a careful regard for details and thrift, as well as the spirit of progress that characterizes the successful modern agriculturist.

At Hennepin, Illinois, on the 21st of September, 1887, Mr. Junk was united in marriage to Miss Leota N. Corson, a daughter of William and Harriet (Shinn) Corson. The father was a native of Northumberland, Pennsylvania, and the mother was born and reared in Virginia. William Corson, who was a farmer, first located in Henry county, Illinois, but later went to Putnam county, whence he removed, in 1891, to Knox, and he and his wife went to Rio, where he lived retired until his death in 1910. The mother passed away in 1907. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Junk, as follows: Albertus and William, both of whom are attending high school; and La Vonne, who is studying in the Knox Conservatory of Music.

Ever since age conferred upon him the right of franchise, Mr. Junk has given his political support to the men and measures of the democratic party and he takes an active interest in all public questions pertaining to the progress and welfare of the community. Mr. Junk is one of the enterprising and successful residents of Rio township, where he is held in high esteem by reason of his many fine personal qualities as well as his business sagacity.

NED S. STUCKEY.

Ned S. Stuckey, a resident farmer of Walnut Grove township, was born July 22, 1877, on his present home place, and is a son of Richard C. and Mary (Timmens) Stuckey. His paternal ancestors came from Germany to America at an early period in the development of this country. The grandfather, Charles Stuckey, married Rebecca Silvers and devoted his life to farming in Pennsylvania. He died in 1872 at the age of seventy-two years. His son, Richard C. Stuckey, was born in Bedford county, Pennsylvania, March 12, 1833, and came to Knox county in May, 1853, locating on what has since been known as the old homestead farm. There he continued to reside until 1897, when he retired and removed to Altona, where his death occurred October 8, 1910. He wedded Mary Timmens, who was born in Madison county, Ohio, February 29, 1836, a daughter of Thomas Timmens, of Carlton, Pennsylvania, who was born in 1800 and died in 1863. In 1833 he removed to Ohio and became one of the active and progressive farmers of his locality and was especially prominent in the Universalist church. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Stuckey were born nine children, but five of the number are now deceased. More extended mention of the family is made in connection with the sketch of Richard C. Stuckey on another page of this work.

After acquiring his education Ned S. Stuckey continued to engage in the work of the home farm, managing the place and carrying on its cultivation along progressive lines. His early training had been thorough and he has kept in touch with progressive methods, so that he is thoroughly familiar with the best ways of tilling the soil and caring for the crops. Everything about his place presents a neat and thrifty appearance and indicates his careful supervision. He is not afraid of work, and earnest, intelligently directed labor has been the basis of the success which has come to him.

Mr. Stuckey was united in marriage to Miss Nellie Chapman, who was born December 25, 1887, in Henry county, Illinois, and is a daughter of Robert and Carrie (Baer) Chapman. Her father is now living at La Fayette, Illinois, where he follows farming, but her mother died in 1910 at the age of forty years. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Stuckey have been born two children: Mary Irene, who was born October 17, 1908; and Jessie May, born September 3, 1910. Mr. Stuckey is a member of the Owl Lodge of Galva. He has never been active in politics, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his business affairs. The occupation to which he was reared, he chose to make his life work, and in the further development of his farm in Walnut Grove township he is proving himself a capable and progressive business man. His entire life has been spent in this locality, where he now has a wide acquaintance, while his sterling traits of character have gained for him the friendship and regard of many.

JOHN W. ASPLUND.

John W. Asplund, who is an agriculturist residing on section 34, Ontario township, was born in Sweden on May 4, 1850, his parents being John P. and Anna (Lotta) Asplund, both of whom were natives of Sweden, the former having been born there in 1819 and the latter in 1829. The father was engaged in farming in his native country until he came to the United States with his family in 1867 and settled in Henry county, Illinois. They located first in Andover, where Mr. Asplund accepted employment on a near-by farm. He continued in this line of work until his death, which occurred in 1893. Mrs. Asplund passed away in Henry county several years later. Of their thirteen children, six came to the United States and three were born in this country.

John W. Asplund, who was the second child born to his parents, received a common-school education both in Sweden and in America and after he had laid aside his text-books was employed by the month at farm work until he made himself independent at the age of twenty-two years. Since that time he has operated a farm. In 1884 he came to Knox county and after renting for twelve years he purchased one hundred and forty acres, which is now highly developed and well equipped for modern and intensive cultivation. In addition to general farming he feeds cattle and hogs for market purposes and at one time was also extensively engaged in raising sheep.

Mr. Asplund has been married three times. On the 25th of April, 1873, he was married to Carrie Johnson, a daughter of Samuel Johnson, who is an agriculturist of Henry county, where he located in 1869. To this union five children were born, namely: Frank A., who is employed on a railroad in Nevada; William W., an agriculturist of Illinois; Peter M., deceased; Josephine W., who is married to Oscar Hagerstrom, a plumber of St. Louis; and Amanda C., who is residing in Galesburg and is the wife of G. E. Carlson, a railroad fireman and to whom one child, Frances Josephine, has been born. Mrs. Asplund's death occurred in August, 1882. Mr. Asplund's second union occurred in September, 1884, when he wedded Emma Christina, who was a daughter of Swan Johnson and whose death occurred in 1895. In October of 1897 Mr. Asplund married Clara Anderson, a daughter of John August and Anna Anderson, of Burlington, Iowa. To this union five children have been born, namely: Robert, deceased; and Irene, Maria, Alma and John Wilbur.

Mr. Asplund gives his political allegiance to the republican party and in religious faith is a Lutheran, holding membership in the Swedish Lutheran church of Wataga. His fraternal affiliations are with the Masons of Oneida.

WILLIAM FRITZ.

William Fritz, who is now living retired in Rio, where he owns a very comfortable home, was for many years actively engaged in agricultural pursuits in Knox county. His birth occurred in Milford township, Somerset county, Pennsylvania, on the 8th of February, 1834, his parents being Adam and Elizabeth (Phillippi) Fritz, who were likewise natives of Somerset county. In the paternal line he is of German extraction, the great-grandfather having been born and reared in the old country, whence he emigrated to America, settling in Pennsylvania. There his son, William Fritz, the grandfather of our subject, passed his entire life, devoting his energies to the operation of a large farm which he owned in Somerset county.

The boyhood and youth of William Fritz were passed in a community, where his family had resided continuously for three generations. He was given a common-school education, such time as he was not occupied with his studies being passed in a manner very similar to that of other lads of the same period and circumstances. After laying aside his school books, he gave his entire attention to the work of his father's farm, where he received a good training in the practical methods of agriculture. Later he worked for an uncle and a cousin, both of whom were farmers, continuing to reside in his native state until he had attained the age of eighteen years. In 1852 together with John B. Senneff, a brother-in-law, Mr. Fritz came west, making the entire journey from Pennsylvania to Illinois in a wagon he had built for the purpose. Upon their arrival in this state they first located in Lee county. He remained there for a year and then went to Warren county, where he spent a similar period, his next removal being to Mercer county. There he acquired a farm that he successfully operated until 1875, when he disposed of it and came to Knox county, investing his capital in one hundred and thirty-seven and a half acres of land, located on the dividing line between this and Mercer counties. The further development of this place engaged the energies of Mr. Fritz until the 21st of August, 1895, when he withdrew from the active work of the fields and removed to the village of Rio. Here he is enjoying the ease and comfort that is the justly merited reward of his long years of labor and self-denial, but his life is far from being an idle one, as he owns four acres of land that he devotes to gardening. He has always been too active and enterprising to retire from all work, and takes great delight in keeping up his property and takes especial pride in his garden, which is said to be one of the finest in the village.

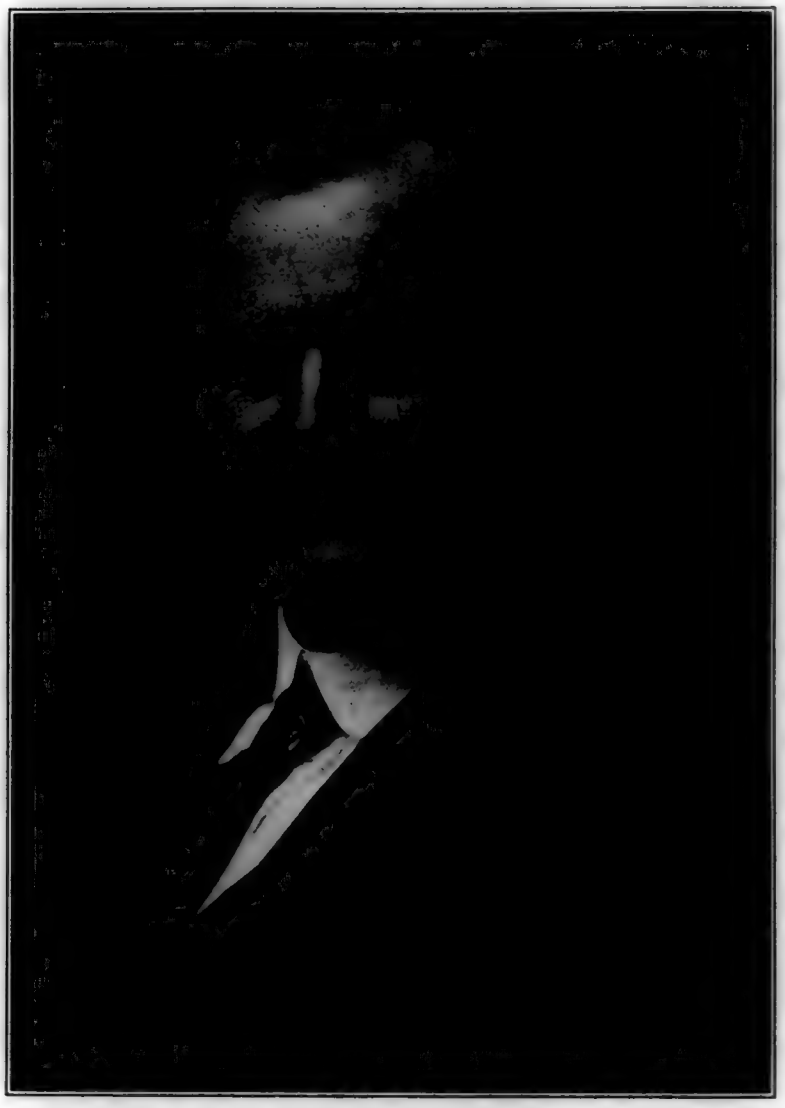
On the 3d of August, 1858, Mr. Fritz was united in marriage to Miss Caroline C. Abell, a daughter of Simon Kingsley and Lydia (Proctor) Abell. The father was a native of the state of New York and the mother of Vermont, but in their early youth they removed to Ohio, where they met and were subsequently married. The father engaged in farming in Lake county, that state, for many years, removing from there to Carroll county, Illinois, in 1852. The parents thereafter continued to reside in this state, passing away in Mercer county. The paternal grandfather, Asa Abell, was one of the pioneers of Ohio, removing there from New York, where he had always followed the carpenter and cabinet maker's trade. Six children have been born unto Mr. and Mrs. Fritz. Charles W., who was the eldest, died in infancy. Asa E., who owns a fine farm in Mercer county, married Clara Breckenridge, of that county, and they have eight children: William H.; Lillian E.; Raymond; Donald, who is deceased; John; Ira; Rollo; and Charles Wesley. Ira E., a twin brother of Asa E., completed his education in the college at Shenandoah, Iowa, and is now engaged in the furniture business at Galesburg. Lillian A. lives in Galesburg, where she keeps house for her brother. Fred married Eva Buffin and has two children, Blanche and Charles. Carrie completed her education at Hedding College, after which she taught for a time in Rio township, but is now bookkeeper for the Anderson Hardware Company, at Rio.

The religious faith of Mr. and Mrs. Fritz is manifested through their membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, in the faith of which they reared their family. He is a republican in politics, but does not endorse the policy of this party regarding the liquor traffic, favoring the stand the prohibitionists take on this particular question. While residing in the country he served as school trustee and pathmaster, always taking an active interest in all township affairs. Mr. Fritz has led an unobtrusive but efficient life, having discharged his duties from day to day to the best of his ability, his every act guided and directed by the high standards and upright principles that characterize the best type of citizens.

GUST LOFGREN.

Gust Lofgren, who resides on his farm which is situated on section 12, Ontario township, was born in Kalmar, Sweden, July 1, 1859. He was the son of John and Anna (Bowgren) Lofgren, both of whom were natives of Sweden. The father, who was engaged in farming there, died in 1859, when his son Gust was only eleven weeks old. The mother resided in her native country until 1883, when she came to America and spent her remaining days with a son in Sparta township. She died in 1907, at the age of eighty-three years.

Gust Lofgren was reared and received a common-school education in his native country, working on his father's farm until 1880. At that date he came to America, locating in Henry county, Illinois, where he remained five years. Subsequently he came to Knox county, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land, on which he now resides. He engages in general farming and also raises hogs and cattle quite extensively. He is very successful in the financial world and owns stock in the Oneida Farmers' Elevator and also in elevators in Nekoma, and is a stockholder in the bank at Galva.



On the 8th of April, 1886, Mr. Lofgren wedded Miss Almeda Peterson, a daughter of Charles and Dorothea (Bloomberg) Peterson, of Henry county. The father was an old settler in that county, having come there in 1854, at the time of the construction of the railroad, and later engaged in farming. Both he and his wife are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Lofgren have become the parents of three children, Ella, Edward and Dora. In politics Mr. Lofgren is a republican, and he has served as road supervisor. He gives much attention to the interests of education and has been a member of the school board. Both he and his wife are members of the Swedish Lutheran church at Altona and are highly esteemed residents of the community, having won the warm regard of all with whom they have come in contact.

JAY WELSH.

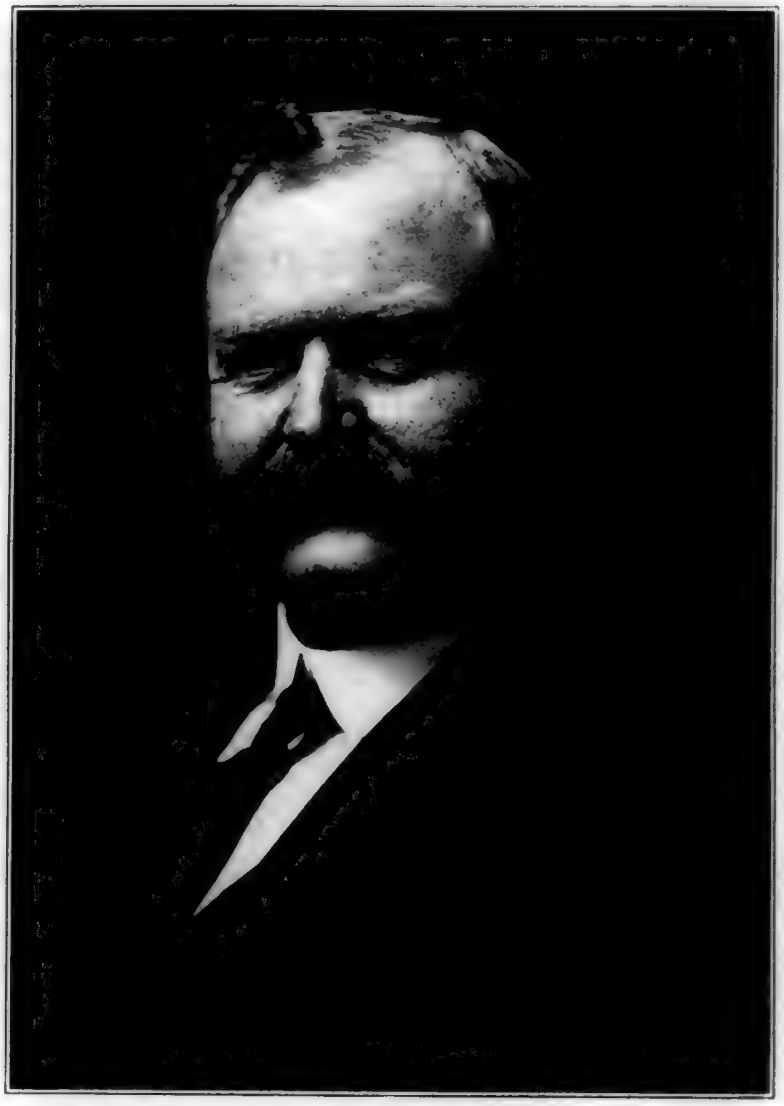
Jay Welsh, who owns and operates one of the largest farms in Truro township, was born in the township where he now resides, in 1861, and is a son of Squire Michael Welsh.

A descendant of one of Knox county's early pioneers, Jay Welsh is well known in this vicinity, where he has passed his entire life. When old enough to begin his education he entered the school of his home district, and was there introduced to the elements of English learning, afterward attending school at Maquon. His early schooling was subsequently supplemented by a course at Lombard College, from which institution he was graduated. Having been reared on a farm, when confronted with the necessity of selecting a vocation after leaving college, he decided in favor of the one to which he had been trained from childhood. That his decision was a wise one is manifested by the success attending his efforts. His is one of the most highly cultivated and best improved farms in the township. In the direction of his undertakings, Mr. Welsh has as rigidly adhered to system and method as he would have followed in directing either an industrial or commercial enterprise. He is practical in his ideas and progressive in his methods, and his personal attention is given to everything about his place. His fields annually yield abundant harvests, the quality of which is fully equal to the quantity, and in connection with his general farming he also raises stock of a good grade.

Mr. Welsh is a communicant of the Roman Catholic church, and his political support he gives to the democratic party. He takes an active interest in township affairs of a governmental nature and has discharged the duties of tax collector, road commissioner and school director. The greater part of his life

Jay Welsh.

Gust Lofgren was reared and received a common-school education in his native country, working on his father's farm until 1880. At that date he came to America, locating in Henry county, Illinois, where he remained five years. Subsequently he came to Knox county, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land, on which he now resides. He engages in general farming and also raises hogs and cattle quite extensively. He is very successful in the financial world and owns stock in the Oneida Farmers' Elevator and also in elevators in Nekoma, and is a stockholder in the bank at Galva.



On the 8th of April, 1886, Mr. Lofgren wedded Miss Almeda Peterson, a daughter of Charles and Dorothea (Bloomberg) Peterson, of Henry county. The father was an old settler in that county, having come there in 1854, at the time of the construction of the railroad, and later engaged in farming. Both he and his wife are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Lofgren have become the parents of three children, Ella, Edward and Dora. In politics Mr. Lofgren is a republican, and he has served as road supervisor. He gives much attention to the interests of education and has been a member of the school board. Both he and his wife are members of the Swedish Lutheran church at Altona and are highly esteemed residents of the community, having won the warm regard of all with whom they have come in contact.

JAY WELSH.

Jay Welsh, who owns and operates one of the largest farms in Truro township, was born in the township where he now resides, in 1861, and is a son of Squire Michael Welsh.

A descendant of one of Knox county's early pioneers, Jay Welsh is well known in this vicinity, where he has passed his entire life. When old enough to begin his education he entered the school of his home district, and was there introduced to the elements of English learning, afterward attending school at Maquon. His early schooling was subsequently supplemented by a course at Lombard College, from which institution he was graduated. Having been reared on a farm, when confronted with the necessity of selecting a vocation after leaving college, he decided in favor of the one to which he had been trained from childhood. That his decision was a wise one is manifested by the success attending his efforts. His is one of the most highly cultivated and best improved farms in the township. In the direction of his undertakings, Mr. Welsh has as rigidly adhered to system and method as he would have followed in directing either an industrial or commercial enterprise. He is practical in his ideas and progressive in his methods, and his personal attention is given to everything about his place. His fields annually yield abundant harvests, the quality of which is fully equal to the quantity, and in connection with his general farming he also raises stock of a good grade.

Mr. Welsh is a communicant of the Roman Catholic church, and his political support he gives to the democratic party. He takes an active interest in township affairs of a governmental nature and has discharged the duties of tax collector, road commissioner and school director. The greater part of his life has been devoted to farming, although for a number of years in his early manhood he engaged in teaching. He is widely known in this immediate vicinity, where he has many friends, the majority of whom have known him from early boyhood and were the comrades of his youth.

Jay Welsh.

ERICH LARSON.

Among the residents of Altona and the northern part of Knox county are many of Swedish birth and the work which they have done in upbuilding and developing this section of the county is worthy of most favorable comment and consideration. Erich Larson is numbered among those whose labors have constituted a force for progress here, and in a review of his life in all of its connections one is reminded of the statement of an eminent lecturer who said that "Sweden is the home of the honest man." It has been this characteristic national quality of integrity that has constituted an important feature in the success of Mr. Larson, who for many years was identified with farming interests but is now living retired. He was born at Bollnas, Sweden, June 4, 1837. His paternal grandfather was Lars Larson and his father was Erich Larson, who died in 1849. He was a tailor by trade and started for America with his family in 1849. While en route his death occurred on Lake Michigan, being occasioned by cholera, and an older brother of our subject died in Chicago. There were altogether three of the family who died while en route. The others proceeded on their way to Andover and afterward became residents of Victoria, Illinois, Erich Larson accompanying his mother on that trip. They secured land in Knox county and engaged in farming. Mrs. Larson, who bore the maiden name of Anna Carlson and was a daughter of C. Carlson, long survived her husband and died in 1887 at the age of eighty-eight years, three months and ten days. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Erich Larson, Sr., were born seven children, of whom the following are now living: Caroline, who is the widow of P. Nelson and is a resident of Galva; Anna, who is unmarried and lives in southern California; and Erich.

The last named spent the first twelve years of his life in the land of his nativity and then started with his parents for the new world. His education completed he worked on a farm, breaking the land, and when a boy of thirteen years did as much work as any man in the fields. He remained with his mother until he reached the age of twenty-two years and then started out independently, from which time forward he was indebted entirely to his own resources and his labor for the success which he achieved. After his marriage he removed to Victoria, where he resided for two years, when he purchased another farm, now the old home place. He afterward spent four years in Ontario township and then returned to his mother's farm, on which he lived for two years. In 1875 he located in Walnut Grove township, where he purchased a large farm, continuing thereon until 1904, when he came to Altona and retired. While actively engaged in business he converted his fields into productive tracts of land from which he annually gathered bountiful harvests. He used the most progressive methods in tilling the soil and caring for his crops and annually found ready sale for his produce and stock. During the past eight years he has lived retired, enjoying a rest which he has truly earned and richly deserves.

In 1861 Mr. Larson was united in marriage to Miss Mary Elizabeth Pitts, who was born in Henry county, Indiana, January 1, 1837. Her great-grandfather was a native of Ireland. Her grandparents were John and Hannah (Hall) Pitts and her parents were William H. and Cynthia (Knight) Pitts. The father was born in North Carolina and became a shoemaker by trade. The mother was also a native of that state and was a daughter of Elias and Sarah (Cary) Knight, who were of English descent. It was in the year 1850 that the parents of Mrs. Larson came to Knox county from Indiana and later, in 1852, they removed to Iowa, where their last days were passed, the father dying in 1871 at the age of sixty-one years, while his wife passed away in 1875 at the age of sixty-four years. In their family were the following children: John W., who starved to death in Andersonville prison during the Civil war; William Harvey, now living in Iowa, who was also a volunteer for the Union cause and was crippled for life; George M., a resident of Vinton, Iowa; Elias H., who is also located in that state; Aril Emery, of Kansas; Mary Elizabeth, now Mrs. Larson; Rachel L., now Mrs. Brody; and Sarah, who is living in Vinton, Iowa, and is married to Joseph Berry.

Unto the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Larson were born the following named: Cynthia Ann, now deceased; George William, at home; John Henry, who was born in 1866 and is living in Walnut Grove with his wife, who was formerly Ellen Swanson, and their four children; and Emma Jane, who was born in 1869 and is the wife of E. E. Thrasher, who is living on the home farm. There are two grandchildren and one great-grandchild, Helen May Walsh, who is the daughter of C. and Fay (Thrasher) Walsh.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Larson are members of the Baptist church and his political allegiance is given to the republican party but while he has always kept well informed on the questions of the day, he has never sought nor desired office, preferring in his earlier years to concentrate his energies upon his business affairs; and so capably and successfully did he manage his farming interests that he gained in time a substantial competence, enabling him to live retired. He is now seventy-four years of age and receives the respect which should ever be accorded one who has traveled thus far the journey of life and whose record has at all times been creditable and honorable.

CHARLES AUSTIN.

Charles Austin is profitably engaged in general farming and stock-raising in Knox, his native county, his birth having occurred on the old homestead in Walnut Grove township on the 29th of May, 1857. He represents a family which, long established in America, came originally from England. His grandparents, James and Beulah (Jennings) Austin, were both natives of Ohio, the former born in Preble county, September 5, 1798, and the latter on the 30th of April, 1798, and both lived to a ripe old age, the father's death occurring on the 28th of October, 1886, and the mother's on the 30th of September, 1888.

Their son Allen, the father of our subject, was also born in Ohio, on the 17th of February, 1823, and in early life learned and followed the carpenter's trade. On the 2d of March, 1854, he came to Knox county, Illinois, making the journey on horseback. Subsequently he returned to Preble county, Ohio, and later again came to Knox county, the second trip being made on foot. Taking up his abode on a farm near Altona he there established what is now known as the old Austin homestead, and there he engaged in agricultural pursuits until about nine years prior to his death, when he removed to Altona and lived retired until called from this life on the 14th of May, 1898, when seventy-five years of age. He was a faithful and consistent member of the Presbyterian church and was deeply interested in the public life of the community in which he resided, giving stalwart support to the party of his choice although not a politician in the sense of office seeking. He was twice married. On the 18th of May, 1856, he wedded Miss Louisa Gehringer, who was born on the 1st of May, 1839, a daughter of Levi Gehringer, who was born on the 14th of September, 1806. He married Catherine Reynard, who was born March 2, 1805, and died May 15, 1889. Her father, Henry Reynard, was a representative of a family that came to Knox county, Illinois, in 1855, from Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Austin were seven children, of whom five still survive, as follows: Charles, of this review; Emily, at home; Albert, a resident of Douglas, Illinois; John, living in Burlington; and Harry, of California. On the 22d of April, 1878, the wife and mother passed away and for his second wife Mr. Austin chose Miss Emily Gehringer, a sister of his former wife. Unto the second union of Allen Austin there were born two children: Olive, the wife of William McClure, of Altona; and Ida, yet at home. The Gehringer family is of German origin and its representatives were numbered among the early settlers of Knox county, Illinois, whence they came from Pennsylvania at an early day. They ever took a deep interest in the work of the Presbyterian church.

Charles Austin, whose name introduces this review, was reared amid the busy activities of rural life, spending the period of his boyhood and youth on his father's farm, and after securing a good education in the district schools of Walnut Grove township he assisted in the cultivation of the fields until after the death of his mother, which occurred when he was about twenty-one years of age. He then carried on agricultural pursuits independently on the old homestead for a number of years, and in 1898 took up his abode on his present farm, since which time he has concentrated his efforts upon the further development and improvement of this place. He carries on general farming and stock-raising and in both lines is meeting with excellent success for his methods are practical, his ideas progressive and his well directed efforts and intelligently applied labor productive of good results.

On February 14, 1884, Mr. Austin was united in marriage to Miss Grace McGaan, who was born October 21, 1860, a daughter of William and Agnes (Andrews) McGaan, both of whom were natives of Scotland, the father's birth there occurring on the 1st of January, 1817, and the mother's in the year 1819. Mrs. Austin's grandfather, William McGaan, Sr., was born in Scotland and there passed his entire life. He married a Miss Hunter. Their son William came to the United States with his family in 1857 and here took up farming near Altona, Illinois, following that line of activity throughout his active career.

He is living at the old home farm at the remarkable age of ninety-five years. In his family were three sons and one daughter, the brothers of Mrs. Austin being: William, an attorney of Clarke, Dakota; Hugh, operating the home farm; and James, living retired in Altona. With the passing of the years four children were added to the household of Charles Austin and his wife, as follows: Edgar and Perry, aged respectively twenty-five and twenty-two years, at home; Grace Ethel, who at the age of nineteen years is teaching school; and Charles R., fourteen years of age, who is also under the parental roof.

Reared in the faith of the Presbyterian church, Mr. Austin has long been an active and helpful worker in the church of that denomination in Altona and for the past twenty years has served as elder. At the polls he gives loyal support to the men and measures of the republican party although he has never sought nor desired public office for himself, and feels a deep interest in all matters which have to do with the welfare of the community at large. His life, which has been an active one, has been lived to good advantage, a fact which is attested not only by the material gain which has come to him as the reward of well directed efforts in agricultural lines but also by the high place which he occupies in the esteem, good-will and confidence of his fellowmen.

GUSTAF E. FREDRICKS.

Prominent among the farmers of this vicinity is Gustaf E. Fredricks, who accompanied his parents from their old home in Sweden on their journey to the new world and their new home which they established in Knox county, in 1857, when he was a lad five years of age. His birth occurred, October 23, 1852, his parents being Charles J. and Inga C. (Larson) Fredricks, natives of Sweden, where the father was a laborer. On their advent in this county they settled in Galesburg and lived there for two years, removing to Soperville, in 1859, where the father bought ninety-six acres of land and engaged in farming and teaming. In 1867 he sold this place and went to Log City and farmed there until 1870, then coming to Ontario township, where he bought a tract of land, comprising one hundred and sixty acres, at thirteen thousand dollars, and tilled the soil on this place until 1878, when he removed his family to Altona. In addition to his farming he ran a threshing machine for a great many years. His wife died January 11, 1892, at the age of seventy-four years, and his death occurred March 9, 1899, at the age of eighty-two years and twenty-five days. He was a man of means owning at the time of his death five hundred and twenty acres of land. In politics he gave his support to the republican party and with his family he worshipped in the Swedish Lutheran church of Altona.

Gustaf E. Fredricks acquired his education in the common schools and early in life devoted himself to agricultural pursuits working in the fields for a wage until twenty-three and a half years of age, when he rented a farm and started out for himself. Later he purchased the old homestead and has developed and improved this ever since, possessing a fine farm of two hundred acres of rich and productive land. He is a successful farmer and finds much pleasure in his daily round of labors in which he still continues since he has his son Newton with him who lightens the responsibilities greatly and performs the heavier duties. In addition to his farming he operated a threshing machine for thirty-four years, which he ran for ten years by horse-power and during the latter twenty-four by steam. He uses a Case threshing machine and was one of the first in the county to buy a self-binder and a traction engine. He has provided a substantial income for his family and is accounted a man of wealth, who enjoys handsome financial returns, not only because he worked hard and lived simply, but also because he had good judgment and knew the value of sacrificing immediate enjoyment to permit him to accumulate means for future investments which he made wisely and with deliberation, for his own benefit and contributing to the commercial upbuilding of his community. He is a stockholder in the Oneida State Bank, in the Altona Bank and in the Galesburg Street Car Company. He also owns real estate of considerable value in Nebraska.

On February 26, 1876, Mr. Fredricks was united in marriage to Miss Ida Matilda Walgreen, a daughter of Nelson P. and Johanna Walgreen, long since deceased, who lived in the county where the father carried on agricultural pursuits. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Fredricks: Clara A., the wife of C. E. Swanson, a tailor at Lewiston, Illinois, who has one daughter; Mollie C., who lives at home; Fannie C., at home; Jennie, who is also living under the parental roof; Emma R., at home; Minnie H., who is a graduate of the Oneida high school, of Oneida and of Brown's Business College at Galesburg; Hilda C., a graduate of the Galesburg high school, who lives at Galesburg; and Clarence N., who assists his father on the farm. Mrs. Fredricks died on August 5, 1905, at the age of fifty-four years, her birth having occurred February 4, 1851.

Mr. Fredricks and his family belong to the Swedish Lutheran church of Altona. He gives his political support to the republican party and is an earnest worker for its issues and candidates, being elected on the ticket to the office of road commissioner and town supervisor, serving twelve years and four years respectively. Mr. Fredricks is a man of genial disposition and cordial bearing and has won many warm friends during the long years of his residence in Knox county.

ALONZO L. ROBY.

Alonzo L. Roby, who rents a farm in Walnut Grove township, where he is engaged in farming and stock-raising, was born January 10, 1874, at Bethesda, Ohio, his parents being Eriah and Martha (Hinkle) Roby. The father was also a native of Bethesda, who is living retired at the age of seventy-five years but the mother passed away in 1905 at the age of fifty-five years. They were the parents of eleven children, six of whom survive, who beside our subject are as follows: Lola, who is the wife of R. Clay, of Belmont county, Ohio; Ella, who is married to Jefferson Medley, a resident of Morristown, Ohio; Lily, who is the wife of Jesse Atkins, a resident of Bethesda, Ohio; Ernest, who is residing in Barnesville, Ohio; and Hugh, who is living in Belmont, Ohio.

Alonzo Roby spent his early days attending the common schools and accepting employment on the farm until he was eighteen years of age, when he removed to Knox county and engaged in farming pursuits for four years. Subsequently, in 1901, he rented the farm near Altona upon which he is now residing. He has met with unusual success in both general farming and stock-raising, and to these pursuits has given his undivided attention, his early training fitting him for close application and scientific methods.

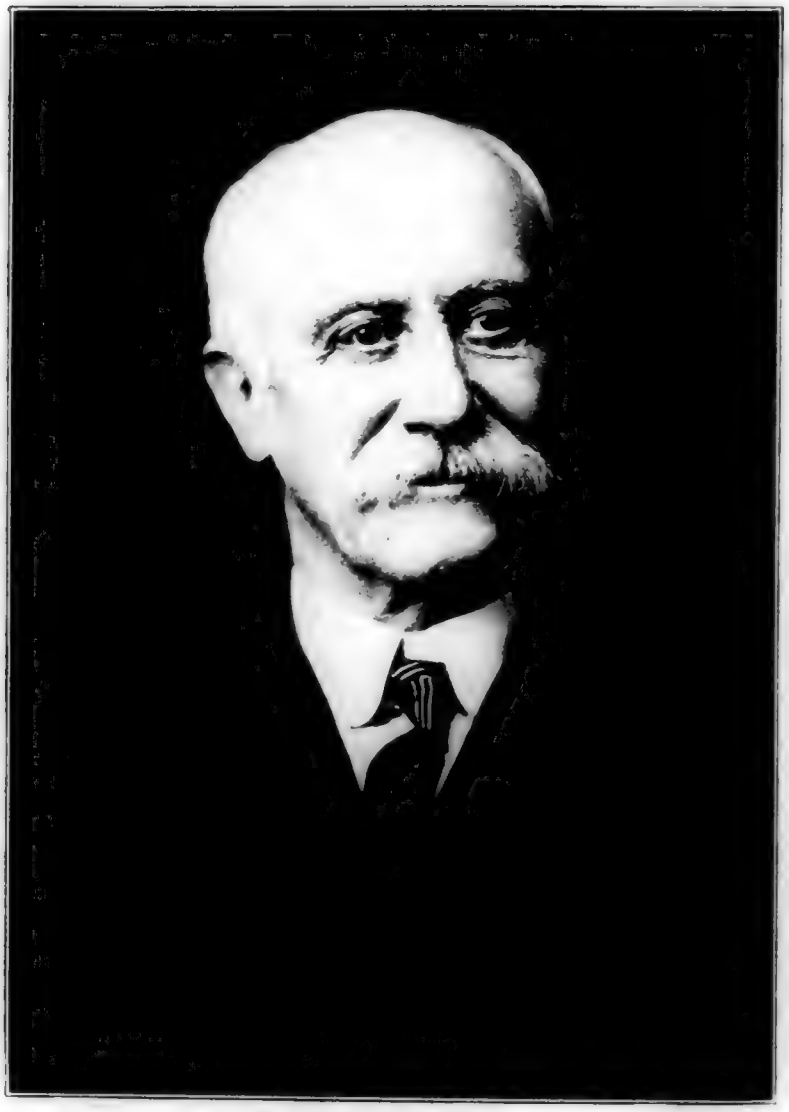
Mr. Roby has been twice married. His first union was to Mabel Shear, who was born on the 6th of September, 1876, and whose death occurred on the 4th of May, 1903. To this union three children were born: Ralph, whose birth occurred March 31, 1893; Warren, who was born September 28, 1896; and Lelah, born November 11, 1899. His second union was to Mrs. Belle Gibson, the widow of Jerry Gibson, a native of Canada. Mrs. Belle Roby before her first marriage was a Miss Dixon, a daughter of George and Sarah Ann (Tedder) Dixon, both natives of Canada. The father was born in the province of Ontario, where he attended school and grew up, following the occupation of farming. He died in 1890. To them were born eleven children, in the following order of birth: John Nelson; Hannah Margaret, deceased; Isabelle, the wife of Alonzo L. Roby, our subject; Mary Tedder; George Warner; Bertha Florence Elizabeth; Franklin James Alfred, deceased; Irene Lillian Gertrude; and three others who died in early life. Mrs. Roby removed to the United States from Canada in 1901 with her first husband, Mr. Gibson.

In politics Mr. Roby gives his support to the republican party and has done much active service in promoting its progress and influence. In religious faith both he and his wife are members of the Methodist church of Altona, Mrs. Roby holding membership also in the Ladies' Aid Society. Mr. Roby belongs to Lodge No. 330, A. F. & A. M., and is at present worshipful master of this organization. He also belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is the treasurer of this order, and is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, of Altona. He is a man of strong character, whose natural ability makes him a worthy representative in any community and he has won for himself a creditable place among Walnut Grove township's leading citizens.

FRANK N. GAY.

Frank N. Gay, who since 1869 has been connected with the Farmers & Mechanics Bank of Galesburg, at which time he assumed the office of assistant cashier, was born in Henderson, this county, June 20, 1845, his parents being Joseph and Maria Antoinette (Rhodes) Gay, both of whom were natives of Vermont. The father came west in 1838 and settled in Log City, Knox county, where he was employed in getting out timber for the old Galesburg House. At length he went to Henderson, where he built a store, and in addition to commercial pursuits there also engaged in farming, and buying live stock of all kinds, which he sold at St. Louis. He followed general merchandising until 1860, when, with a well earned and substantial competence, he retired from business life and came to Galesburg, where his remaining days were passed. His political allegiance was given to the republican party and he filled a number of township offices, discharging his duties with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents.

FRANK N. GAY



moved to Knox county and engaged in farming pursuits for four years. Subsequently, in 1901, he rented the farm near Altona upon which he is now residing. He has met with unusual success in both general farming and stock-raising, and to these pursuits has given his undivided attention, his early training fitting him for close application and scientific methods.

Mr. Roby has been twice married. His first union was to Mabel Shear, who was born on the 6th of September, 1876, and whose death occurred on the 4th of May, 1903. To this union three children were born: Ralph, whose birth occurred March 31, 1893; Warren, who was born September 28, 1896; and Lelah, born November 11, 1899. His second union was to Mrs. Belle Gibson, the widow of Jerry Gibson, a native of Canada. Mrs. Belle Roby before her first marriage was a Miss Dixon, a daughter of George and Sarah Ann (Tedder) Dixon, both natives of Canada. The father was born in the province of Ontario, where he attended school and grew up, following the occupation of farming. He died in 1890. To them were born eleven children, in the following order of birth: John Nelson; Hannah Margaret, deceased; Isabelle, the wife of Alonzo L. Roby, our subject; Mary Tedder; George Warner; Bertha Florence Elizabeth; Franklin James Alfred, deceased; Irene Lillian Gertrude; and three others who died in early life. Mrs. Roby removed to the United States from Canada in 1901 with her first husband, Mr. Gibson.

In politics Mr. Roby gives his support to the republican party and has done much active service in promoting its progress and influence. In religious faith both he and his wife are members of the Methodist church of Altona, Mrs. Roby holding membership also in the Ladies' Aid Society. Mr. Roby belongs to Lodge No. 330, A. F. & A. M., and is at present worshipful master of this organization. He also belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is the treasurer of this order, and is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, of Altona. He is a man of strong character, whose natural ability makes him a worthy representative in any community and he has won for himself a creditable place among Walnut Grove township's leading citizens.

FRANK N. GAY.

Frank N. Gay, who since 1869 has been connected with the Farmers & Mechanics Bank of Galesburg, at which time he assumed the office of assistant cashier, was born in Henderson, this county, June 20, 1845, his parents being Joseph and Maria Antoinette (Rhodes) Gay, both of whom were natives of Vermont. The father came west in 1838 and settled in Log City, Knox county, where he was employed in getting out timber for the old Galesburg House. At length he went to Henderson, where he built a store, and in addition to commercial pursuits there also engaged in farming, and buying live stock of all kinds, which he sold at St. Louis. He followed general merchandising until 1860, when, with a well earned and substantial competence, he retired from business life and came to Galesburg, where his remaining days were passed. His political allegiance was given to the republican party and he filled a number of township offices, discharging his duties with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents.

FRANK N. GAY

Both he and his wife held membership in the Congregational church. Mr. Gay survived his wife for a considerable period, her death having occurred in Henderson in 1854. In their family were four children: David and Loraine, both now deceased; William M., living in Madison, Wisconsin, who was born in Log City, August 30, 1838, and said to be the first white male child born in the colony; and Frank N.

The last named pursued his early education in the public schools of his native town and afterward entered the academic department of Knox College. Subsequently he went to Ellington, Connecticut, where he was a pupil in the Hall school, and following his return to Knox county began clerking in a store in Henderson. He afterward spent three or four years as a salesman in Reid's dry goods store in Galesburg and for a year was connected with the house of O. T. Johnson. He afterwards was salesman in the clothing store of Mr. Arnold for two years and subsequently spent a few years in the employ of E. F. Thomas, to whom he returned after the suspension of Mitchell & Rhykerd. After the death of Mr. Thomas he was with J. B. Colton, the successor of Mr. Thomas, and for six years was upon the road as traveling salesman in the boot and shoe trade. In 1889 he entered the Farmers & Mechanics Bank as assistant cashier, which position he still holds, and he is furthermore connected with the financial interests of Galesburg as a stockholder in the First National Bank. He is now well known as a representative of the banking interests of this city and county, and his ability in this field is attested by his long connection with the Farmers & Mechanics Bank, covering a period of more than twenty-two years.

On the 25th of June, 1872, Mr. Gay was united in marriage to Miss Mary Dellgratia Clark, a daughter of the Rev. William D. and Mary Clark, of Quincy, Illinois. Two children were born of this marriage but the elder, Frank Nelson, is now deceased. The daughter, Loraine, is the wife of George T. McCandless, who is cashier of a bank in Anson, Kansas, and they have two children, Frank Gay and George McCandless. Mr. and Mrs. Gay are members of the Central Congregational church society, and in his political views he is a republican. They have a large circle of warm friends in Galesburg and Mr. Gay has for many years been identified with the business interests of this city, whereby he has gained a wide acquaintance, while his business ability and sterling personal worth have won for him the warm regard, good-will and confidence of those with whom he has been associated. He has not sought to figure prominently in public life, but has been content to do the duty nearest at hand day after day, and it is such citizens who constitute the real source of strength and stability in a community.

CLAUS EMIL QUICK.

A large percent of the citizens of Knox county claim Sweden as the land of their nativity or that of their forefathers, and through the exercise of the sturdy qualities peculiar to their race combined with the more progressive spirit of the new world, are meeting with substantial success in the various avenues of labor in which they engage. In this class is numbered Claus Emil Quick, who was born in Smalands, Jonköping län, Sweden, on the 24th of June, 1859, a son of Carl Johann Quick, also a native of that country, his birth occurring April 9, 1823. The father, who was a son of Johan Johanson, followed the occupation of farming as a life work and also served for a time in the Swedish army. At an early age he married Fredericka Anderson, a daughter of A. Anderson, and in 1900 they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Of their family of nine children one daughter is now deceased. In 1875 four of their sons came to this country, locating in Altona, Illinois, where they worked as farm hands until 1886. The six succeeding years were passed in farm labor in Lynn township and then they moved to Walnut Grove township and rented land, where Claus Emil Quick has since engaged in general farming and stock-raising. In 1877 the father and remaining members of the family also came to the United States, and here the father passed away on the 19th of April, 1910. The mother who still survives him at the age of eighty-four years, makes her home in Knoxville.

Claus Emil Quick was a pupil in the schools of his native town until twelve years of age, when he put aside his text-books to learn the tailor's trade. Two years later, however, not finding that field of labor congenial, he took up farming, to which occupation he has devoted his attention continuously throughout the intervening years. That these years have brought substantial success is due to the fact that Mr. Quick has ever made wise use of his opportunities and in the conduct of his affairs has manifested industry, perseverance and thrift, characteristic elements of the Swedish race. He has never been afraid of hard work but has labored untiringly in the prosecution of agricultural pursuits and as a result is today numbered among the enterprising and progressive farmers of his locality.

It was on the 6th of March, 1886, that Mr. Quick was united in marriage to Miss Helga Mathilda Amenoff, who was born in Aspey, Linköping län, Sweden, on the 17th of March, 1865. Her father, John Amenoff, was born in Sweden on the 29th of April, 1837, and is a son of Theodore Amenoff. The latter, a representative of a well known family of Sweden, was a merchant and official of that country, where he passed away on the 6th of August, 1871. He had married Sophia Ohnstadt, who was born in Sweden in 1810, and the only son born unto this union was John Amenoff, who in 1874 came with his family to the United States. He located upon a farm northeast of Altona, in Knox county, Illinois, and for twenty years was successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits upon that place. At the expiration of that period his accumulations made it possible for him to withdraw from active work and in 1906 he took up his residence in Altona, where he is now living retired. Ere leaving his native country he had been married, in 1861, to Miss Johanna Luisa Carlson, who was born on the 22d of October, 1835, a daughter of Carl and Adela Carlson, both now deceased. The father, a farmer by occupation, passed away in 1849 at the age of fifty years and the mother's death occurred in 1889 when she had reached the ripe old age of eighty years. Of their family of six children five still continue their residence in Sweden. Mrs. Quick was one of six children born unto John and Johanna Amenoff, and she now has one living brother, Alex, of Galva, Illinois. On December 15, 1911, Mrs. Johanna Luisa Amenoff, the mother of Mrs. Quick, passed away and was laid to rest in the cemetery at Altona. She was a lady of rare qualities and refinement and not only greatly beloved by her immediate family but venerated by a host of devoted friends. By her marriage to Mr. Quick Helga Mathilda Amenoff has become the mother of three children. The eldest, Ida Charlotte, was born on the 29th of July, 1887, and is now the wife of Ora Krumstadt, a resident of Galva. The second daughter, Minnie Olivia, born July 5, 1889, after her graduation from high school pursued a course of study at Geneseo school, and also at Valparaiso, Indiana, and is now successfully engaged in teaching school. Edward Theo, born October 1, 1891, is still at home.

The religious belief of Mr. Quick is indicated by his membership in the Swedish Lutheran church of Altona, and in fraternal relations he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Since becoming a naturalized American citizen he has given stalwart support to the republican party and for fifteen years has held public office, in the capacity of school director and also as road master. He has ever proved a most popular official and a valued, public-spirited citizen for his interests are thoroughly identified with those of his adopted country, for whose laws and institutions he has the highest regard.

J. ALEXANDER FINLEY.

J. Alexander Finley, a resident of Knox county since he was four years of age, is a progressive and thoroughly modern man believing in the value of higher education both for its practical value as the shortest means of preparing adequately for a business or professional career and also for its purely aesthetic value, since education is the necessary basis for all broader culture and fuller enjoyment of the things worth while in life. He was born in Delaware, Ohio, March 26, 1839, his parents being Joseph and Jane (Ferris) Finley, the former a native of Highland county, Ohio, and the latter of West Virginia. The father, who followed agricultural pursuits with much success on his farm in Ohio, came to Illinois, in 1838, and purchased a quarter section of land. In 1843 he removed his family to his farm situated in Ontario township and became a resident of the county remaining here until his death in 1865. He was a prosperous farmer and at his death left a tract comprising five hundred acres of well improved farmland to be divided among his heirs. He was twice married, his first wife dying when J. Alexander Finley was aged two years, and his second marriage occurring in 1843, the year of his removal to Knox county. There were four children in the family, of whom the subject of this review was the third in order of birth. Mr. Finley was a supporter of republican policies and a loyal member of the Presbyterian church.

J. Alexander Finley had no educational advantages beyond the district schools of Ontario township, but what he was denied in his childhood he made up in later years and through his wide reading and careful observation gained a fund of information concerning the most varied topics, on which he discourses with much fluency and native charm. At the age of twenty-two years he interrupted his labors in the fields, where he had worked since old enough to assist his father, and enlisted in the army with Company D, First Regular Illinois Cavalry, on April 23, 1861, after Fort Sumter was fired upon. His company was mustered in July 15, 1861, and he was taken prisoner at Lexington, Missouri, and paroled, being mustered out July 14, 1862. He operated a farm for forty-one years, meeting with unusual success in raising crops and in his more specialized undertaking, the breeding of Clydesdale horses. He is the owner of four hundred acres of very valuable land which he cultivated until 1904, when he retired to Oneida and has lived there ever since.

On November 6, 1868, the marriage of Mr. Finley and Miss Mary E. Cox occurred. She was born in Somerton, England, and her parents, Joseph and Elizabeth Cox were natives of England, who came to America in 1853 and settled on a farm in the county. They are both deceased, the father's death having occurred in 1904, and the mother's some years earlier. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Finley: Gertrude, the wife of W. L. Allen, a retired farmer, who resides in Oneida; George, who attended Knox College and lives at home; J. Orton, who attended the State University of Illinois and now operates a farm, and is married and has two daughters; Dr. Clyde A. Finley, who is married and practices as a physician at Galesburg, having received his professional training at Bellevue College, New York; and Louise B., who is a graduate of Knox College, and now teaching school in Eureka, Utah.

Mr. Finley is a republican in his political affiliations and with his family holds membership in the Congregational church of Oneida. Possessed of a keen sense of duty, he has devoted himself throughout his life to the interests of his family providing his children with every opportunity that lay within his reach in order to make of them exemplary men and women, such as we need in larger numbers in every state in the land.

JAMES COOK.

James Cook, now deceased, was one of the prosperous agriculturists and extensive landowners of Knox county and his business record may well serve as a source of encouragement and inspiration to others, showing what may be accomplished when energy and determination lead the way. He was born in Roxburyshire, Scotland, October 22, 1816, and his life record covered the intervening years to February 12, 1887, when he passed away. His parents were Robert and Janet (Lockie) Cook, who spent their entire lives in the land of hills and heather, where the father devoted his attention to farming. In their family were the following children: Jane, Agnes, Margaret, William, Janet, Mary, James, Elizabeth and Robert.

James Cook spent his youthful days in his native land and assisted his father on the home farm until 1836, when at the age of twenty years he bade adieu to home and friends and sailed for the new world. He possessed a young man's ambition to make the most of life and believed that better opportunities would be offered him in the United States. He first made his way to Buffalo, New York, and thence to Canada, where he continued for a time. He afterward went to Ross county, Ohio, settling near Chillicothe, and for six years was engaged as a drover, driving cattle to New York and Philadelphia. The 1st of July, 1845, witnessed his arrival in Knox county, where he soon completed was mustered in July 15, 1861, and he was taken prisoner at Lexington, Missouri, and paroled, being mustered out July 14, 1862. He operated a farm for forty-one years, meeting with unusual success in raising crops and in his more specialized undertaking, the breeding of Clydesdale horses. He is the owner of four hundred acres of very valuable land which he cultivated until 1904, when he retired to Oneida and has lived there ever since.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES COOK

On November 6, 1868, the marriage of Mr. Finley and Miss Mary E. Cox occurred. She was born in Somerton, England, and her parents, Joseph and Elizabeth Cox were natives of England, who came to America in 1853 and settled on a farm in the county. They are both deceased, the father's death having occurred in 1904, and the mother's some years earlier. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Finley: Gertrude, the wife of W. L. Allen, a retired farmer, who resides in Oneida; George, who attended Knox College and lives at home; J. Orton, who attended the State University of Illinois and now operates a farm, and is married and has two daughters; Dr. Clyde A. Finley, who is married and practices as a physician at Galesburg, having received his professional training at Bellevue College, New York; and Louise B., who is a graduate of Knox College, and now teaching school in Eureka, Utah.

Mr. Finley is a republican in his political affiliations and with his family holds membership in the Congregational church of Oneida. Possessed of a keen sense of duty, he has devoted himself throughout his life to the interests of his family providing his children with every opportunity that lay within his reach in order to make of them exemplary men and women, such as we need in larger numbers in every state in the land.

JAMES COOK.

James Cook, now deceased, was one of the prosperous agriculturists and extensive landowners of Knox county and his business record may well serve as a source of encouragement and inspiration to others, showing what may be accomplished when energy and determination lead the way. He was born in Roxburyshire, Scotland, October 22, 1816, and his life record covered the intervening years to February 12, 1887, when he passed away. His parents were Robert and Janet (Lockie) Cook, who spent their entire lives in the land of hills and heather, where the father devoted his attention to farming. In their family were the following children: Jane, Agnes, Margaret, William, Janet, Mary, James, Elizabeth and Robert.

James Cook spent his youthful days in his native land and assisted his father on the home farm until 1836, when at the age of twenty years he bade adieu to home and friends and sailed for the new world. He possessed a young man's ambition to make the most of life and believed that better opportunities would be offered him in the United States. He first made his way to Buffalo, New York, and thence to Canada, where he continued for a time. He afterward went to Ross county, Ohio, settling near Chillicothe, and for six years was engaged as a drover, driving cattle to New York and Philadelphia. The 1st of July, 1845, witnessed his arrival in Knox county, where he soon completed arrangements for the purchase of a farm near Rochester, becoming the owner of one hundred and twenty acres. After two years he sold that property and purchased eighty acres on section 16, Copley township, to which he added from time to time as his financial resources permitted until he became the owner of eight hundred acres of valuable Illinois farm land, all of which was in his possession at the time of his death. His last ten years were spent in honorable retirement from labor in the enjoyment of a rest which he truly earned and richly deserved.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES COOK

On the 3d of March, 1853, Mr. Cook was united in marriage to Miss Agnes Stein, a daughter of Andrew and Margaret (Carr) Stein, of Edinburgh, Scotland. Her father, who was born near that city, devoted his life to farming and died in 1829. His wife was also born in the vicinity of Edinburgh and died in May, 1867, at the age of seventy-five years. They were the parents of eight children: William, Mary, Isabelle, Janet and Margaret, all now deceased; Agnes, now Mrs. Cook; and John and Andrew, deceased. Of this family Agnes, the sixth in order of birth, became the wife of James Cook. She was born near Edinburgh, May 28, 1823, and was educated in her native country. She came to the new world to visit her sister who was living at Knoxville, and during her visit became acquainted with Mr. Cook, who sought her hand in marriage. She is now living with her daughter, Janet Cook, at No. 960 North Cherry street in Galesburg. By her marriage she became the mother of seven children. Isabelle, the eldest, is the wife of Nathan A. Milroy, of Copley township, and they have six children: Mary, the wife of Martin Gibbs, living in Victoria township; William; Samuel, living at home; Edna, the wife of Glenn Gibbs, of Victoria township; Archie and James Milroy, both at home. William, the second member of the Cook family, is living on North Cherry street in Galesburg. His wife died in October, 1888, and he subsequently married Miss Helen Stephenson and they had one child, Marion, deceased. Janet, the third of the family, is living with her mother. Margaret is the wife of Alexander Wylie, of Vinton, Iowa, and their children are: Mabel, James C., Jean, Agnes, Margaret, Effie and Isabelle. Mary A. became the wife of Houston Tait but both are now deceased. They had three children: Agnes, the wife of Louis Jarnagin, of Victoria township; Dwight Cook, living in Cascade, Montana; and Jennie Tait, whose home is in Copley township, this county. Agnes, the sixth member of the Cook family, is the wife of George M. Huston, of Miami, Florida, and their children are: Margaret, now deceased; Agnes; Georgine; and George. Elizabeth, the youngest member of the Cook family, died in infancy. Mrs. Cook now has four great grandchildren: Dale and Dean, sons of Martin Gibbs; and Helen and May Louise Tait.

The death of James Cook occurred February 12, 1887, when he was in his seventy-first year. After taking out naturalization papers, he became a supporter of the republican party and remained loyal to its interests. He served as school trustee and as road commissoner, yet was never a politician in the sense of the office seeker. He was always however, mindful of his public duty and was faithful to every trust reposed in him. His widow remains a consistent and loyal member of the Presbyterian church to which Mr. Cook long belonged and in which he served as trustee. His was a well spent, useful life and at all times and in all relations his fellow townsmen found him an honorable man who held to high ideals and therefore commanded the respect and esteem of those who knew him. While more than a quarter of a century has passed since he was called from this life, he is yet remembered by many of the old settlers of the county who had for him warm esteem and the admiration which is always given to a successful man whose prosperity is well won.

JAMES S. PAYNE.

James S. Payne, who is at present engaged as carrier in the rural delivery department of the United States postoffice, is residing in Altona, Knox county. His birth occurred on the 17th of March, 1865, in Harrisonville, Missouri. He was the grandson of William and Susan (Stephenson) Payne, both natives of Kentucky, and was the son of William B. Payne, a native of Lexington, Kentucky, who is at present living in Virginia, Illinois, at the age of eighty-nine years. William Payne started in life on his own account by accepting a clerical position and subsequently went to Harrisonville, Missouri, where he interested himself as partner with his former employer and engaged in the mercantile business for three years before removing to Virginia, Illinois, where he conducted a store. These various enterprises were both agreeable and profitable, and desiring to continue in the same line of business, Mr. Payne opened stores in Chandlersville and Ashland, Illinois. He was conducting these establishments at the time the new bankruptcy law became effective. This law affected his resources so badly that he lost practically all he had accumulated, and in 1898 was forced to retire. He was married to Hannah E. Allender, whose death occurred in 1895, and who was the daughter of Hiram Allender. To Mr. and Mrs. Payne eleven children were born, eight of whom are now living: John W., a resident of Kansas City; Eva, the wife of J. Chapman of Birmingham, Alabama; Richard and Wm. G., both of whom are residents of Kansas City, Missouri; Charles F., who is living in Hot Springs, Arkansas; Henrietta, who is married to D. Crum, a resident of Virginia, Illinois; Miranda, who is the wife of A. M. Thompson of Washington; and James S., the subject of this review.

After finishing his education in the common schools, James Payne attended Brown's Business College at Jacksonville, and Illinois College of Jacksonville, Illinois, from which he was graduated and prepared to enter upon a business career. His first position was in Oberlin, Kansas, where he was a clerk in the government land office for two years. Subsequently he left for Tecumseh, Nebraska, and engaged in the abstract business in Johnson county. Returning to Illinois he was employed in Virginia as a department commercial clerk for a short time previous to leaving for Beatrice, Nebraska, where he was engaged as express and baggage man for the Burlington & Missouri River Railway, now a part of the Burlington system. Again returning to Virginia he served in the capacity of deputy sheriff and ex-officio tax collector for three years and then left for Topeka, Illinois, where he purchased a drug store previous to going to Altona in 1896. Later he moved his drug store and, in 1901, entered the United States mail service as rural delivery man. At the present time he is serving in that capacity and is also interested in western real estate and other business enterprises. In all these positions Mr. Payne has shown a true regard for the essentials and principles of business and has been an accurate and reliable employe.

Mr. Payne was united in marriage to Anna A. Buckman, who is the daughter of C. F. and Mary E. (Mauck) Buckman, and was born on the 5th of August, 1870. The parents are both living and are very active in their home duties. Mr. Buckman was a soldier in the Civil war. To Mr. and Mrs. Payne three children have been born: Marie, who is twenty-two years of age; Cal C., who is twenty years of age; and Doris, who is fourteen years of age.

Mr. Payne gives his political support to the democratic party and, although he has never sought office, he has been very active in promoting the policies of the party he thinks will be the most effective in producing good government. Recently he was elected police magistrate but could not accept the office because of his official position in the United States postoffice. Both he and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian church and he is also a member of the Knights of Pythias of Osceola, Iowa. At present he enjoys the confidence and respect of the members of his community, and both he and his wife are held in the highest regard because of their social characteristics and their sterling worth.

CHARLES H. RHODES.

For more than half a century Charles H. Rhodes has been a witness of the progress in the material and intellectual development of Knox county, having been born in Henderson, March 3, 1854. His father, William M. Rhodes, a native of Vermont, came to Illinois and settled in Henderson in the year 1851 or 52, plying his trade, that of wagon-making, which he had learned in the east. He had a shop of his own for a time and found much demand for his services in those days, when much of the transportation of farm products was done by wagon before the ramified system of local railroads was installed. He married Mary J. Brown, a native of Henderson township and a daughter of Wilson Brown who came to Knox county from Kentucky in pioneer days. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes, of whom Charles H. Rhodes was the eldest. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church which lost a loyal supporter at the death of Mr. Rhodes in 1882. In his political allegiance he was a republican.

Charles H. Rhodes was educated in the village school and became self-supporting at an early age choosing farming for his calling, not only for the invigorating and varied nature of the labors which this occupation involves but also for the promising future which he foresaw. His judgment proved right as his later prosperity showed. In the choice of his home he always confined himself to the immediate vicinity of Henderson, where he purchased a farm of one hundred and six acres after some time and for twenty years devoted himself to its cultivation and development. He retired a few years ago and now rents the land from which he makes a good income. During the period of his activities he was modern in the methods of farming which he employed, and progressive and alert in his administration of the place.

The marriage of Mr. Rhodes and Miss Frances Martin was solemnized February 18, 1880. She was born in Pennsylvania and was a daughter of William and Drusilla (Pope) Martin, natives of Pennsylvania, her father coming to Knox county in 1857, when he settled on a farm and followed agricultural pursuits throughout the remainder of his life. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes: Harry, who is married, a farmer in Ontario township, Knox county; Helen M., the wife of Fred Smith, a farmer, who has two children; and Margaret E., the wife of Harry L. Pople, employed in a general store in Monmouth, Illinois, who has one son, Irwin R. Dale.

Mr. Rhodes votes with the republicans and has been entrusted with the responsibilities of public office a number of times, serving as constable, justice of the peace and as school trustee, holding the latter office for a considerable length of time. With his family he worships in the Christian church of Henderson, believing in the doctrine of righteousness and truth as the basis upon which every religion and philosophy must be built. He is a man of serious mind and sterling traits of character devoted to his family and his friends.

IRVING W. DAVISON.

Irving W. Davison, who resides in Henderson township, was born in Henderson, March 31, 1877, his parents being Joseph and Isabella (Kilgore) Davison, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. The father, who had been a resident of Knoxville, came to Henderson and engaged in the shoe business prior to entering upon agricultural pursuits which he carried on extensively later in life, owning four hundred and forty acres of land and raising cattle for the western market until his death, October 27, 1910.

Irving W. Davison received a common-school education and then assisted his father on the latter's farm until he started out on his own account, in 1907, on the one hundred and forty-acre tract of land he now owns and devotes to general farming. Although he has been farming independently for only four years, he has already met with a good measure of success and has shown that long years of experience are not necessarily indispensable to success if energy and determination take their place.

On October 17, 1902, Mr. Davison was married to Emma J. Nelson and to this union five children have been born, namely: Mary L., Helen C., Evelyn M., Gertrude B., and Gladys Margaret, deceased. Mrs. Davison is the daughter of Nels and Hannah Nelson, who have been residents of Knox county for many years. Nels Nelson was born in Christianstad, Sweden, October 6, 1855, and received a common-school education in his native land, where he engaged in farming until 1877, when he came to America, there he has since carried on the same pursuit. He first settled in Henry county and was employed there for several years, although he resided in Knox county during the latter part of that time. After five or six years he began farming near Henderson and Wataga and, in 1898, located upon the forty-acre farm which he had recently acquired and upon which he now resides. In politics Mr. Nelson gives his support to the republican party and has served as road commissioner. He holds membership in the Swedish Lutheran church of Wataga, as well as Galesburg Camp, No. 667, M. W. A. On January 4, 1882, Nels Nelson was married to Mrs. Anna (Samuelson) Peterson, whose parents remained in Sweden, their native country. To Mr. and Mrs. Nelson six children have been born, of whom five are now living. The eldest, Christina, is married to Gust Malcolm, an agriculturist, who resides in Ontario township and has three children. Emil, who is an agriculturist in Henderson township, is married and is the father of two children. Emma is the wife of Irving W. Davison, of this sketch. George is married and is an agriculturist in Henderson township. Minnie, the youngest, is residing at home.

Mr. Davison gives his political support to the republican party, having a firm belief that its policies are most effective in securing good government. In this, as in his other relations, he is loyal and consistent, always acting according to his interpretation of the highest citizenship.

THOMAS CRAVER.

Thomas Craver, now deceased, who resided for many years in Walnut Grove township, was born May 26, 1824, in Hanover, Pennsylvania, and is a son of John and Christina (Stoekel) Craver, who were Pennsylvania Germans.

Thomas Craver, who was an undertaker by trade, spent his early life on the home farm, but after his marriage in 1851 came to Lynn township, Knox county, and settled in a little log house upon the farm which he cultivated for twenty-seven years previous to removing to Altona in 1885, where he lived retired until his death.

Mr. Craver was married September 17, 1851, to Miss Rebecca Cameron, who was a daughter of Angus Cameron and was born on September 14, 1832, in Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania. The father was a native of Scotland, his birth having occurred there in 1807, and he came to America with his brothers at the age of sixteen years. They located first in Canada but soon removed to Carbondale, Pennsylvania, with an uncle, where they remained throughout their lives. In Carbondale he followed the cabinet-maker's trade and showed a skill and ability which won him rapid promotion. He was married to Sabrina Snyder, whose birth occurred in New York state, May 31, 1812, and who passed away on the 17th of April, 1896. Mrs. Cameron was a daughter of Jacob and Margaret Snyder and a granddaughter of John and Mary Cameron, the former a shepherd boy in his youth. Mr. Cameron held membership in the Methodist church and his death occurred on September 29, 1896. To him and his wife nine children were born, six of whom are living. Mrs. Craver, the eldest, is the widow of Thomas Craver, the subject of this sketch. Duncan was born in Pennsylvania, October 3, 1834, and is at present residing with Mrs. Craver. At the age of twelve years he began assisting his father as a cabinet-maker and remained with him until 1859. In 1864 he removed to Iowa and again took up his trade, remaining in Cedar Falls for two years before removing to South Dakota. Subsequently he returned to Iowa and until 1905, when he came to live retired with his sister, was engaged as a millwright. He was twice married, his first union being to Harriet Hoadley, of Wayne county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Luther and Sophia (Sampson) Hoadley. To this union one child, Luther, was born, his death occurring when he was but one year old. Mrs. Cameron passed away in 1863, at the age of thirty years. His second marriage was to Mary M. Cockerell, a native of Wisconsin and a daughter of J. Cockerell, a native of England. Her death occurred in 1905, at the age of sixty years. Mr. Cameron has never given active support to any political party. He holds membership in the Baptist church and formerly was a member of the Knights of Pythias. Angus, the next in order of birth in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Cameron, resides in Carbondale, Pennsylvania. Libby is the wife of P. Gray and resides in Streator, Illinois. Anna is the widow of J. Scurry, of Carbondale. Emma is married to Charles Gray and is residing in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. Craver became the parents of eleven children. Mary E., the eldest, is the wife of John S. Collinson and resides in Galva, Illinois. They are the parents of three children: Dennis, who is married and has three children; Wiley, who is married and has one child; and Cora. William V. resides in Lynn township and married Jessie McClatchey, by whom he has two children, Glenn and Thomas. John A. is also a resident of Lynn township and is married to Jessie Cochren and has one child, Ira Ross. Harriet is the wife of E. Burkhart, of Nebraska, and has two children, Jennie and Jessie. Anna is married and resides in California. She has one daughter, Stella, who married Dr. Mills. Minnie is the wife of A. A. Scott, of Altona, and Judge T., who resides in Walnut Grove township, married Emma Kermode. Four, Flora, Ira, Florence and Emma, died early in life.

Mr. Craver was a member of Altona Lodge, No. 330, A. F. & A. M., of Altona, and also belonged to the Order of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Craver is a member of the Presbyterian church of Altona and is active in its Ladies Social Union Society. Industry and persistency were the salient features in his career and were potent elements in the acquirement of his success, which not only spoke in terms of material gain but also won him the regard and high esteem of his fellowmen.

N. B. IVES, Sr.

N. B. Ives, Sr., who is now living retired, owns a fine farm of two hundred and thirty-eight acres on section 7, Victoria township, where for many years he successfully engaged in general farming and stock-raising. He is one of the four children born of the marriage of Joshua and Katherine (Wilber) Ives, his birth occurring in Otsego county, New York, on the 9th of November, 1833. The parents passed their entire lives in Otsego county, the mother's death occurring at the age of twenty-three, when our subject was a child of two years, but the father lived to attain the venerable age of seventy-nine. They were members of the Lutheran church, while his political support Joshua Ives always accorded the republican party.

MR. AND MRS. N. B. IVES, SR.

live retired with his sister, was engaged as a millwright. He was twice married, his first union being to Harriet Hoadley, of Wayne county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Luther and Sophia (Sampson) Hoadley. To this union one child, Luther, was born, his death occurring when he was but one year old. Mrs. Cameron passed away in 1863, at the age of thirty years. His second marriage was to Mary M. Cockerell, a native of Wisconsin and a daughter of J. Cockerell, a native of England. Her death occurred in 1905, at the age of sixty years. Mr. Cameron has never given active support to any political party. He holds membership in the Baptist church and formerly was a member of the Knights of Pythias. Angus, the next in order of birth in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Cameron, resides in Carbondale, Pennsylvania. Libby is the wife of P. Gray and resides in Streator, Illinois. Anna is the widow of J. Scurry, of Carbondale. Emma is married to Charles Gray and is residing in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. Craver became the parents of eleven children. Mary E., the eldest, is the wife of John S. Collinson and resides in Galva, Illinois. They are the parents of three children: Dennis, who is married and has three children; Wiley, who is married and has one child; and Cora. William V. resides in Lynn township and married Jessie McClatchey, by whom he has two children, Glenn and Thomas. John A. is also a resident of Lynn township and is married to Jessie Cochren and has one child, Ira Ross. Harriet is the wife of E. Burkhart, of Nebraska, and has two children, Jennie and Jessie. Anna is married and resides in California. She has one daughter, Stella, who married Dr. Mills. Minnie is the wife of A. A. Scott, of Altona, and Judge T., who resides in Walnut Grove township, married Emma Kermode. Four, Flora, Ira, Florence and Emma, died early in life.

Mr. Craver was a member of Altona Lodge, No. 330, A. F. & A. M., of Altona, and also belonged to the Order of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Craver is a member of the Presbyterian church of Altona and is active in its Ladies Social Union Society. Industry and persistency were the salient features in his career and were potent elements in the acquirement of his success, which not only spoke in terms of material gain but also won him the regard and high esteem of his fellowmen.

N. B. IVES, Sr.

N. B. Ives, Sr., who is now living retired, owns a fine farm of two hundred and thirty-eight acres on section 7, Victoria township, where for many years he successfully engaged in general farming and stock-raising. He is one of the four children born of the marriage of Joshua and Katherine (Wilber) Ives, his birth occurring in Otsego county, New York, on the 9th of November, 1833. The parents passed their entire lives in Otsego county, the mother's death occurring at the age of twenty-three, when our subject was a child of two years, but the father lived to attain the venerable age of seventy-nine. They were members of the Lutheran church, while his political support Joshua Ives always accorded the republican party.

MR. AND MRS. N. B. IVES, SR.

The agricultural training of N. B. Ives was received under the supervision of his father on the old homestead in Otsego county, while pursuing his education in the district schools. He continued to follow farming in his native state until he was twenty-three years of age, when he decided that the west afforded better opportunities and greater advantages to the young man, so in 1856 he came to Illinois. Upon his arrival in Knox county he located in Victoria township and for two years thereafter worked as a farm hand by the month. At the end of that time he bought the place he now owns, which is located a mile northeast of Victoria. This was the property of the Force boys and was unimproved with the exception of forty acres. Mr. Ives was an enterprising, industrious young man, however, and had no hesitancy in undertaking the arduous task of placing the entire tract under cultivation. He was young, strong and full of ambition, and the thought of owning a farm proved an incentive to yet greater effort and the last forty acres of his land he broke entirely unassisted. Naturally he encountered the disappointment and discouragements common to pioneer life, but he never lost hope, possessing absolute confidence in ultimately attaining success. The operation of his farm was always given his personal supervision, the greater part of the work being done by him alone during the early years. His fields were devoted to the raising of such cereals as were best adapted to the soil, and under his capable direction annually yielded harvests that fully compensated for the labor expended in their cultivation. In connection with general farming he raised cattle, hogs and, on a smaller scale, horses all of a high grade, and attained lucrative results from these undertakings. Mr. Ives was actively engaged in the operation of his farm until fifteen years ago, when he had the misfortune to suffer a stroke of paralysis, and he has ever since been an invalid. He still resides on his homestead but the land is being cultivated by his son. It is a very attractive place, and has always been a source of great pride to its owner, representing as it does the self-denial, toil and struggles of his early manhood and middle age. All of the buildings now standing on the place have been erected during the period of his occupancy, the lumber for most of them having been hauled from Galva, this state, at that time the nearest trading post. His only prolonged absence from the farm since he settled upon it was during the war. As a member of Company K, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry he went to the front, proving as efficient a soldier as a farmer. He saw much active service but was never wounded or taken prisoner and was mustered out at Nashville, Tennessee, with the rank of sergeant, receiving his discharge at Chicago.

On the 2d of January, 1861, Mr. Ives was united in marriage to Miss Susan Clark, who was born in Otsego county, New York, on the 20th of May, 1842. She is a daughter of William P. and Dinah (Soules) Clark. The parents were also natives of Otsego county, but they later removed to Knox county, and here the mother passed away at the age of seventy years, while the father reached the patriarchal age of eighty-seven. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Ives numbers five, as follows: W. J., who is a resident of Chicago; Ola C., who married Frank M. Robinson and is living in Houston, Texas; N. B., Jr., who married Minnie Watson and is also a resident of Houston; Ulysses S., a resident of this township, who married Mabel Robinson; and Sherman, who married Miss Florence Craver, now operating his father's farm.

Ever since granted the right of franchise upon attaining his majority, Mr. Ives has given his unqualified indorsement to the principles of the republican party. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln and on each succeeding election has given his support to the candidates of the party of his early choice. Being a public-spirited man, he has taken an active interest in township politics and has served as collector, school trustee, director and pathmaster, the duties of which offices he discharged in a creditable manner. Mr. Ives is one of the honored members of the local post of the Grand Army of the Republic, and for many years held the chaplain's chair in this organization. He is highly regarded as a citizen of his township, in the development and upbuilding of which he has taken an active and helpful interest during the fifty-five years of his residence, and is numbered among its substantial agriculturists.

SAMUEL RANKIN.

One of the substantial citizens of Knox county and for many years a farmer of progressive ideals who occupied a place in the front ranks of the representatives of his calling, is Samuel Rankin, now living on his farm in Henderson township. His birth occurred in Uniontown, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, March 10, 1844. He was a son of William and Eliza (Junk) Rankin, both natives of Pennsylvania, the former of Scotch-Irish descent, born in 1800. His father, who was an active whig in politics, carried on agricultural pursuits in Pennsylvania until his death in 1877. His mother died in 1894.

During his boyhood and youth, Samuel Rankin remained with his parents in his native state, where he was educated, first in the elementary branches taught in the common schools, and then at Duffs College, in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated in 1861. This education, although much above the average advantages of the youth of his day, did not fully satisfy him and consequently he entered Madison Institute, in Uniontown, Pennsylvania, in order to have specialized training for a profession. At the close of the course he engaged in teaching and followed this calling for a number of years. In 1864 he went to Colorado and there spent some months in military service against the Indians. The following three years he spent at home in Pennsylvania and, in 1867, severed the last close ties that bound him to the scenes of his childhood and came to the middle west, settling in Henry county, Illinois. There he farmed for nine years on rented land and at the end of this period bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Henry county. This remained in his possession for two years, when he sold it and removed to Knox county, buying a farm in Henderson township. He carried on general farming and feeding cattle for market with much success. A few years ago he temporarily retired, turning over the management of the farm to his son, but returned to the same and is now carrying on general farming as before. He owns two hundred and seventy-four acres of land in this county and farms it all.

Mr. Rankin was twice married. His first wife was Mary D. Henderson, a daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Dunlap) Henderson. Her father settled in this county in 1855 and in his manhood engaged in farming. He died in 1873 and his wife died in 1869. Mrs. Rankin passed to her future reward in the year 1886. She was the mother of five children, one of whom died in infancy. W. F., who is married and living in Cleveland, is a general agent for the Collier's Works. Mary E., the wife of Thomas Marks, resides in St. Louis. Samuel, Jr., married, is a farmer in Orange township, Knox county. Horace A., who is living in Oklahoma, is married and the father of one child.

On December 3, 1889, Mr. Rankin was married to Miss Nancy A. Pitman, his present wife, at Henderson. Her parents, Gideon and Mary J. (Champion) Pitman, were old settlers in this county, where her father was a prosperous farmer. By his second marriage Mr. Rankin is the father of one child, Ralph E., living at home with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Rankin worship in the Methodist Episcopal church of Henderson. In his political views Mr. Rankin is a republican. He has given much of his efforts and time to public service and for three terms was supervisor, for two terms assessor, and for two terms highway commissioner. Mr. Rankin is a public-spirited man actively interested in the advancement of the intellectual and social growth of his community.

NEWTON McDOWELL MILROY.

Newton McDowell Milroy, who is engaged in farming and stock-raising in Copley township, was born July 27, 1867, on his present homestead, his parents being Alexander and Janette (McDowell) Milroy. The father came to his present home in 1848, when a young man, and passed his entire active life upon that place until his retirement a few years before his death which occurred in Oneida on August 26, 1890, when he was sixty-nine years of age. In addition to general farming he also engaged in general stock-raising. Mrs. Milroy was the daughter of John and Elizabeth (McCornack) McDowell and was born on the 5th of January, 1830. Her death occurred in March, 1908. They were the parents of eight children, of whom four survive: John P., a resident of Oneida; Maggie, who is the wife of N. Nish of Waukee, Iowa; Jennie, who is the wife of Charles Lansberry, of Iowa; and Newton M., who is the subject of this sketch. Mr. Milroy was a member of the John Knox church in which he took an active interest, and was also very active in the republican party.

Newton M. Milroy spent his boyhood and youth attending school until eighteen years of age, and then assisted his father on the home farm until he became of age. After that he farmed independently one hundred and forty acres of land which had been left to him by his father. So successful was this undertaking that he has since been able to add one hundred and forty acres of land, which adjoin the original farm. Upon this he is spending all his energy and labor. The farm is highly improved and well equipped with all the necessary buildings and machinery to carry on modern farming. By strict attention to business and employing modern methods his farming and stock-raising has become one of the most profitable undertakings of the kind in the township.

In 1891, Mr. Milroy was married to Sarah Lavina Olmsted, whose birth occurred May 28, 1869, near Altona, and who is the only child of William H. and Lavina (Youngs) Olmsted. Mr. Olmsted was born in Delaware county, New York, and removed to Knox county with his parents in 1856, settling in Victoria, where he spent his active career in farming. However, eighteen years previous to his death which occurred in 1899, he removed to a residence near Victoria. Mrs. Olmsted, whose birth occurred in Victoria in 1841, passed away in 1908, she being the daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Missmore) Youngs, natives of Ohio, the former born August 23, 1796. Her paternal grandfather, Stephen S. Olmsted was an agriculturist and cabinet-maker, and was married to Clarissa McMorris. His death occurred in 1897. To Mr. and Mrs. Milroy six children have been born: Newton L., whose birth occurred December 18, 1891; Leslie F., who was born August 18, 1893; Mary Ethelyn, born November 20, 1898; Lavina Jenette, born January 7, 1902; and Marietta Agnes and Bethea Margaret, who were born February 21, 1908, and March 22, 1911, respectively.

Mr. Milroy gives his political support to the republican party, and although he does not desire the reward of office he has served as school trustee because of his interest in the educational development of his community. Both he and his wife are church members. That Mr. Milroy is a member of a family who have long been landholders in the United States is attested by the fact that he has in his possession a deed of land title signed by President Van Buren in 1840, and also one signed by President Tyler. Mr. Milroy is a man of high morals, and it has been a feature of his life to devote much of his time to further the moral and social development of his community, and his high aims and industry have won for him the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens.

ROBERT DAVISON.

Among the younger agriculturists of Henderson township Robert Davison stands out prominently as one who has worked for success along the most progressive lines. He was born in Henderson township, November 26, 1872, and is the son of Joseph and Isabella (Kilgore) Davison, the former a native of England and the latter of Pennsylvania. The father came to America in 1853 and almost immediately settled in Knox county, where he spent the remainder of his life, engaging in the shoemaking trade in Knoxville at first and next conducting a shoe store in Henderson, in which he had some eight or nine employes at one time. He conducted this business successfully until he began his career as an agriculturist on a farm of forty acres situated west of Hendersonville. This land was the nucleus of the extensive farm of four hundred and fifty acres which he owned at the time of his death, October 27, 1910. His marriage occurred, in 1872, in Henderson township and his wife is still living, her present home being in Watertown. In politics Mr. Davison gave his support to the republican party and served as township clerk for many years. He was identified with the Masonic order, belonging to Lodge No. 264, F. & A. M., of Henderson.

Robert Davison received his education in the common schools and the Normal school at Abingdon, Illinois. Returning home after he had completed these courses, he assisted his father on the farm until he began his independent career in 1901, on the land which is his present home. This estate of one hundred and fifty acres shows how successful he has been as an agriculturist—the land yields abundantly, the buildings are modern and the machinery adequate for cultivation according to advanced and scientific methods. In addition to general farming Mr. Davison raises cattle and hogs for the eastern markets.

On November 28, 1901, Robert Davison was united in marriage to Mary E. Windom, the daughter of William and Mary (Folger) Windom, the former a native and lifelong resident of Ohio, where for twenty years he was engaged in agricultural pursuits in Monroe county. The mother was also born in Ohio and was a resident of Monroe county for twenty years, before she came to Henderson, where she passed away in 1904. She was one of the eight children of Robert and Nancy (Haines) Folger, natives of New Hampshire county, Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Davison are the parents of one child, Joseph E., who is living at home.

In politics Mr. Davison is a member of the republican party and has served as township collector. He holds membership in the Methodist church of Henderson. In both of these relations he is loyal and honorable and his example is one which has done much to further the integrity of his fellow citizens. He has earned for himself the name of a thorough and progressive agriculturist and has done much to develop his district and to raise its standard of cultivation and stock-raising.

WILLARD B. GOFF.

Willard B. Goff, who resides on a farm of his mother's in Henderson township, is the descendant of a family which has long been connected with agricultural pursuits. His parents, James F. and Mary J. (Baxter) Goff, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Ohio, carried on agricultural pursuits in Henderson township, Knox county. They had three children: Charles A., deceased; Willard B. Goff, who was born October 15, 1871; and Otis J., living in Galesburg. James Goff came to Knox county early in life and resided here almost continuously until his death in 1889. In 1851 he joined the great number of people going west to the California gold fields and the family still has in its possession the saddle he used when returning.

Willard B. Goff received his education in the common schools, the Abingdon Normal school and Brown's Business College in Galesburg. For the first three or four years after he had completed his education he was employed in a general store in Little York, Warren county, Illinois, and then went to Chicago and engaged in the commission business for six years. Returning to his father's farm when he gave up his Chicago business, he immediately took an active part in farming the home place and has continued it up to the present time. The farm consists of two hundred acres and is well adapted for raising cattle and hogs and also for general farming.

In February, 1903, Mr. Goff was married to Era Reynolds, the daughter of James and Mehitable (Smith) Reynolds. The father, a native of Sugar Grove, Illinois, was engaged in farming in Warren county until his death in 1889. In politics he was a prohibitionist, and in religious faith a member of the United Presbyterian church. Mr. and Mrs. Goff have one child, Willard Percy, born December 24, 1906.

Mr. Goff has proved his ability as an agriculturist by the success he has had in developing the farm he manages and his increasing returns show that a state of cultivation has been reached which could be attained only by careful application of scientific and progressive methods. He has been engaged in this pursuit for a comparatively few years and yet has had time to establish his reputation as one of the successful agriculturists of Henderson township.

MRS. ELIZA A. COLEMAN.

Mrs. Eliza A. Coleman, who resides on her farm of one hundred and twenty acres, on section 13 of Victoria township, was born in Stark county, Illinois, February 16, 1854. She was a daughter of Joseph Kane, who was a native of Beaver county, Pennsylvania, born June 9, 1812, and moved when a small boy with his parents to Ohio, where he was reared and educated. The family later came to Illinois and settled near Canton. In Fulton county, Illinois, in 1833 Mr. Kane was united in marriage to Miss Barbara Heckard, who was born near Baltimore, Maryland, July 2, 1818, and was a daughter of John Heckard, a native of that state. The parents resided in Fulton county for several years and then removed to Knox county, where they remained until December, 1858, when they repaired to Victoria township and spent the rest of their lives on the farm now owned by George Patty. The father was engaged in general farming and raised yearly a large number of hogs. He was a democrat in politics and much interested in education, serving many years as school director. He died April 13, 1895, and his wife, having preceded him by nearly fourteen years, died June 12, 1881, and they are both buried in West Jersey cemetery. In their family were thirteen children: Mary Ann, Jane, Charlotte, Samuel, John, James, Joseph, George and Miner, all of whom were born in Fulton county, Illinois; and Eliza A., William and Rosetta, who were born in Stark county; and an infant child, who was born and died in Knox county.

Eliza A. Kane was five years of age when her parents removed to Victoria township, where she was reared and educated. She was trained to the duties of the household and remained at home with her parents until her marriage, which occurred March 14, 1881. At that date she became the wife of James Coleman, who was born in Mercer county, Pennsylvania, December 27, 1830, the son of Samuel Coleman, a native of that state. James Coleman was reared under the parental roof and remained at home until 1858, when he came to Knox county, Illinois, arriving May 30. Shortly afterward he wedded Charlotte Kane, a sister of Eliza A. (Kane) Coleman. Charlotte (Kane) Coleman, who was a member of the Methodist church at West Jersey, Illinois, died at the age of thirty-nine years and is buried in West Jersey cemetery. She left

MR. AND MRS. JAMES COLEMAN

In February, 1903, Mr. Goff was married to Era Reynolds, the daughter of James and Mehitable (Smith) Reynolds. The father, a native of Sugar Grove, Illinois, was engaged in farming in Warren county until his death in 1889. In politics he was a prohibitionist, and in religious faith a member of the United Presbyterian church. Mr. and Mrs. Goff have one child, Willard Percy, born December 24, 1906.

Mr. Goff has proved his ability as an agriculturist by the success he has had in developing the farm he manages and his increasing returns show that a state of cultivation has been reached which could be attained only by careful application of scientific and progressive methods. He has been engaged in this pursuit for a comparatively few years and yet has had time to establish his reputation as one of the successful agriculturists of Henderson township.

MRS. ELIZA A. COLEMAN.

Mrs. Eliza A. Coleman, who resides on her farm of one hundred and twenty acres, on section 13 of Victoria township, was born in Stark county, Illinois, February 16, 1854. She was a daughter of Joseph Kane, who was a native of Beaver county, Pennsylvania, born June 9, 1812, and moved when a small boy with his parents to Ohio, where he was reared and educated. The family later came to Illinois and settled near Canton. In Fulton county, Illinois, in 1833 Mr. Kane was united in marriage to Miss Barbara Heckard, who was born near Baltimore, Maryland, July 2, 1818, and was a daughter of John Heckard, a native of that state. The parents resided in Fulton county for several years and then removed to Knox county, where they remained until December, 1858, when they repaired to Victoria township and spent the rest of their lives on the farm now owned by George Patty. The father was engaged in general farming and raised yearly a large number of hogs. He was a democrat in politics and much interested in education, serving many years as school director. He died April 13, 1895, and his wife, having preceded him by nearly fourteen years, died June 12, 1881, and they are both buried in West Jersey cemetery. In their family were thirteen children: Mary Ann, Jane, Charlotte, Samuel, John, James, Joseph, George and Miner, all of whom were born in Fulton county, Illinois; and Eliza A., William and Rosetta, who were born in Stark county; and an infant child, who was born and died in Knox county.

Eliza A. Kane was five years of age when her parents removed to Victoria township, where she was reared and educated. She was trained to the duties of the household and remained at home with her parents until her marriage, which occurred March 14, 1881. At that date she became the wife of James Coleman, who was born in Mercer county, Pennsylvania, December 27, 1830, the son of Samuel Coleman, a native of that state. James Coleman was reared under the parental roof and remained at home until 1858, when he came to Knox county, Illinois, arriving May 30. Shortly afterward he wedded Charlotte Kane, a sister of Eliza A. (Kane) Coleman. Charlotte (Kane) Coleman, who was a member of the Methodist church at West Jersey, Illinois, died at the age of thirty-nine years and is buried in West Jersey cemetery. She left five children, the oldest of whom, a daughter, is now deceased. After their marriage James and Eliza A. (Kane) Coleman lived on the farm on which Mrs. Coleman now resides and there Mr. Coleman was actively engaged in general farming. His business insight, energy and perseverance brought to him a goodly measure of success and Mrs. Coleman is now comfortably situated in life. They were the parents of four children. Clyde, who is a graduate of Toulon Academy and of Williams College at Williamstown, Massachusetts, is now a graduate student in the chemistry department of the University of Chicago. In 1910 he was a teacher in the Military Academy at Culver, Indiana. Francis J. resides at home with his mother and operates the home place. Ada and Susie I., who complete the family, are both living at home. The death of the husband and father occurred on November 20, 1904, and he is buried in West Jersey cemetery. His death was deeply regretted by his many friends and was an irreparable loss to his immediate family. He was a republican in politics, a citizen of progressive spirit, who was much interested in all that pertains to the public welfare. He gave much attention to the cause of education and served as school director throughout most of the time of his residence in Knox county. He attended the Methodist Episcopal church of West Jersey, services of which organization, Mrs. Coleman, who is a lady of many good traits of heart and mind, and whose life is in harmony with her Christian profession, also faithfully attends. She has passed much of her life in Victoria township and has a large circle of friends, in whose regard she stands very high.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES COLEMAN

WILLIAM SNIDER.

One of the substantial citizens of Abingdon and of prominent standing in his community is William Snider, whose birth occurred in Clermont county, Ohio, November 4, 1835. His parents, Abraham and Elizabeth (Meyers) Snider, both died of the cholera, in 1849, leaving their son William an orphan at the age of thirteen years. Thrown wholly upon his own resources in the tender years of his youth, he cast about for a suitable occupation. Farming lay nearest at hand, and this he pursued for some little time. He then went to Goshen, where he found employment, dividing his time between farm work and, for a time, work in a cabinet-maker's shop. He continued as a farm hand in the summer and a teamster in the winter months. In 1855 and the year following he operated a threshing machine.

William Snider was married to Miss Angelina C. Harvey of Clermont county near Goshen. Two weeks after their marriage, the bridal couple set out in a wagon overland for Knox county, Illinois, where they began housekeeping and spent the winter. In the spring of the following year Mr. Snider bought a farm in Chestnut township, seven miles southeast of Abingdon. There they lived for seven years. In the spring of 1864 he returned to Abingdon and bought a home on the site where his present residence stands, living there for the following two years. He then bought what is known as the Mound farm, a tract of one hundred and eighty acres, two miles east of Abingdon, where the family lived for another period of two years. In 1868 he yearned again for the comforts of town life, so he repurchased his former residence and property in Abingdon, living there for a brief period. The year 1869 he spent in the Rocky mountains, and on his return in the spring of 1870 purchased a one hundred and sixty-acre farm, one and one-half miles east of Abingdon, where he built a home, residing there until the spring of 1875. At this time he again repurchased and occupied his former town home. The spacious colonial house in which he is now living was built in 1884 and was the first handsome residence erected in Abingdon.

In business enterprises William Snider has always dealt on a large scale. For more than forty years he was an extensive cattle buyer and shipper, doing the greater part of the cattle shipping of this section. He was, besides, one of the most extensive stock men in Knox county, feeding, on an average, a thousand head of sheep, one hundred and fifty head of cattle and between three and four hundred head of hogs annually. As a necessary adjunct to his cattle-breeding industry he invested heavily in farm lands at various times. In 1878, he bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres and, in 1880, another farm of two hundred and forty acres, both in Indian Point township. These he operated with hired help for a number of years, using the produce of the same for feeding his stock. During this period he also acquired three farms in Iowa. Two of these were in Taylor county, one consisting of two hundred acres and the other of one hundred and forty acres. The third was a tract of two hundred acres in Van Buren county. In 1909, however, he disposed of the last of his farm holdings, having retained his two farms in Indian Point township up to that time.

To Mr. and Mrs. Snider no children were born. Mr. Snider has always been actively interested in politics and served on the republican county central committee for a period of about sixteen years. Beyond this honor, however, he always consistently refused to consider public preferment of any kind. Since 1864 he has been a member of the Abingdon Lodge, No. 184, I. O. O. F. Throughout his life Mr. Snider has met with more than the average degree of success, due to his daring enterprise and his untiring application to his duties. He thinks and acts in large units, but never to the neglect of the important details which are essential in the conduct of every business. In his own community he is highly esteemed and claims many friends, and few men of this vicinity enjoy a wider acquaintance in the adjoining counties.

CLARK ANDREW MAIN.

Clark Andrew Main, who is an agriculturist in Walnut Grove township, was born December 18, 1879, upon the farm on which he is now residing. He is the grandson of Peter and Jane (Ferguson) Main, the former having come to America with his three children after the death of his wife in Scotland. After arriving in Chicago they proceeded directly to Knox county, but subsequently went to Minnesota for a short residence before returning to this county, where his death occurred May 1, 1878, at the age of sixty-nine. Clark Main is the son of Andrew and Ellen (Moore) Main, the former having been born December 6, 1846, in Mothler, Ayrshire, Scotland, and the latter in Rio township, on the 13th of March, 1848. Mr. Main arrived in America when he was but seven years of age, and was in Chicago during the time of the cholera epidemic, which caused the death of his only sister. Mrs. Main was the daughter of Lyman K. and Mary S. (Woodman) Moore, the former a native of New York state and the latter of Massachusetts. The paternal grandfather, Holland Moore, of New York, was married to Sarah Kendall. Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Moore came west early in life and located in Rio township, where they were engaged in agricultural pursuits until their death, Mr. Moore passing away in 1885 at the age of seventy-one years and his wife dying the same year. Mr. and Mrs. Main were the parents of three children: J. Edwin, who is an agriculturist residing at Altona; Kate, who is married to Walter D. McMasters, a resident farmer of Walnut Grove township; and Clark A., the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Main never took an active part in politics but was a prominent member of the Presbyterian church in Altona.

Clark Main's boyhood and youth were spent in a way common to the youth born and reared on the farms in the Mississippi valley. After laying aside his text-books at an early age, he took up farming upon his father's farm, and there gained his first experience in the occupation he was to follow throughout his active career. After his father's death he took full charge of the homestead, and showed his early training had given him the ability to execute the work which was entrusted to him. In addition to general farming he also engaged in stock-raising.

Mr. Main was married on the 18th of January, 1905, to Kate Rhodes, whose birth occurred February 12, 1883, and who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs E. B. Rhodes. Her grandparents were Edwin R. and Sarah (Bartlett) Rhodes. E. B. Rhodes is a resident of Mason City, Iowa, and was married to Mary L. Epperson, whose death occurred in 1884, when she was twenty-one years of age. She was the daughter of William D. and Mary Jane (Westfall) Epperson, originally of Madison county, Kentucky, but who were residents of Knox county after 1836.

In politics Mr. Main gives his support to the republican party, but has never sought office as a reward for party fealty. In religious faith he is a member of the Presbyterian church of Altona, and lives in accordance with its teachings. By his devotion to his farm and by his life, which has been spent in accordance with the highest ideals of citizenship, he has won for himself the respect and esteem of all.

JOHN JUNK.

John Junk, an octogenarian living in peaceful retirement in Henderson township, Knox county, was formerly closely associated with the agricultural interests of this locality. Born in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, May 6, 1827, he was a son of James and Elizabeth (Lincoln) Junk. On his paternal side he was of German descent, his grandfather having been born in Germany and settled in New Jersey on coming to this country, in the middle of the eighteenth century. From there he went to Pennsylvania, in 1765, where he engaged in farming on a large scale, owning over two hundred acres of land. There his son James, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born. On coming of age James Junk engaged in agriculture, the calling which he followed throughout his life. His death occurred in 1877. Mrs. Junk, the mother of John, was a relative of Abraham Lincoln.

In the days when John Junk was a boy, the advantages of schooling were meager indeed, he was, however, given the best education that the limited opportunities of his remote rural locality afforded, which was at that time a subscription or private school presided over by a curiously interesting Irish schoolmaster. When grown to manhood John Junk learned the carpenter and millwright trades. He came west and settled in Galesburg, Illinois, in 1855. There he was about to enter upon a business career with G. W. Brown, who had a corn-planter factory, but he had no sooner begun his new work than he was given a contract from ex-Governor McMurtry to work on the new buildings which he was erecting on his farm. Next he built a schoolhouse and thereafter other contracts followed, so that he never lacked employment in carpentering. He worked as an artisan three or four years when his wife, disliking his long absences from home since his work often took him to distant parts of the county, prevailed upon him to settle on a farm and cultivate the soil. Accordingly he commenced farming. In 1865, he bought the farm in Henderson township which he still owns but which his son is managing for him. It is a very fine tract of land comprising four hundred and thirty acres. His son is continuing the work in which he was so successful, that is, general farming and stock-raising. He also made a specialty of breeding shorthorn cattle, for which he won a considerable reputation.

On November 28, 1855, John Junk was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Robertson, a daughter of Alexander and Narcissa (Ferguson) Robertson, pioneers of Knox county, who settled here in 1828 when her father purchased a farm. Mr. and Mrs. John Junk are the parents of one child, Alexander, who lives at home and operates his father's farm. Mr. Junk gives his political sympathies to the democratic party. He has at different times served as supervisor, assessor, road commissioner and as town clerk. Now, within sight of the fields that have grown very dear to him through the passing years, Mr. Junk is living in comfort, looking back upon his life with the calm serenity of one who has performed his duty well.

DAVID WOOLSEY.

Like a patriarch of old, David Woolsey, who is in his eighty-fourth year, presides at the head of a family of eight children and thirty-three grandchildren, but unlike his forefathers of Biblical days he governs them only in spirit and by the noble example of his own life. David Woolsey's residence in Knox county covers a period of sixty-three years, and for the past forty-six years he has lived on his present farm of three hundred acres on section 13 in Haw Creek settled in New Jersey on coming to this country, in the middle of the eighteenth century. From there he went to Pennsylvania, in 1765, where he engaged in farming on a large scale, owning over two hundred acres of land. There his son James, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born. On coming of age James Junk engaged in agriculture, the calling which he followed throughout his life. His death occurred in 1877. Mrs. Junk, the mother of John, was a relative of Abraham Lincoln.

Daniel Woolsey

In the days when John Junk was a boy, the advantages of schooling were meager indeed, he was, however, given the best education that the limited opportunities of his remote rural locality afforded, which was at that time a subscription or private school presided over by a curiously interesting Irish schoolmaster. When grown to manhood John Junk learned the carpenter and millwright trades. He came west and settled in Galesburg, Illinois, in 1855. There he was about to enter upon a business career with G. W. Brown, who had a corn-planter factory, but he had no sooner begun his new work than he was given a contract from ex-Governor McMurtry to work on the new buildings which he was erecting on his farm. Next he built a schoolhouse and thereafter other contracts followed, so that he never lacked employment in carpentering. He worked as an artisan three or four years when his wife, disliking his long absences from home since his work often took him to distant parts of the county, prevailed upon him to settle on a farm and cultivate the soil. Accordingly he commenced farming. In 1865, he bought the farm in Henderson township which he still owns but which his son is managing for him. It is a very fine tract of land comprising four hundred and thirty acres. His son is continuing the work in which he was so successful, that is, general farming and stock-raising. He also made a specialty of breeding shorthorn cattle, for which he won a considerable reputation.

On November 28, 1855, John Junk was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Robertson, a daughter of Alexander and Narcissa (Ferguson) Robertson, pioneers of Knox county, who settled here in 1828 when her father purchased a farm. Mr. and Mrs. John Junk are the parents of one child, Alexander, who lives at home and operates his father's farm. Mr. Junk gives his political sympathies to the democratic party. He has at different times served as supervisor, assessor, road commissioner and as town clerk. Now, within sight of the fields that have grown very dear to him through the passing years, Mr. Junk is living in comfort, looking back upon his life with the calm serenity of one who has performed his duty well.

DAVID WOOLSEY.

Like a patriarch of old, David Woolsey, who is in his eighty-fourth year, presides at the head of a family of eight children and thirty-three grandchildren, but unlike his forefathers of Biblical days he governs them only in spirit and by the noble example of his own life. David Woolsey's residence in Knox county covers a period of sixty-three years, and for the past forty-six years he has lived on his present farm of three hundred acres on section 13 in Haw Creek township. His grandfather, William Woolsey, remained a resident of his native state, New York, until middle life, when he removed his family to Sandusky Plains, Ohio, where he lived until his death at the age of about eighty years, his wife departing this life at an earlier date. His father, Hezekiah Woolsey, was born and brought up in Ulster county, New York, and was there married to Miss Hannah Cutler, likewise a native of Ulster county, where her father, David Cutler, was born. During Mr. and Mrs. Hezekiah Woolsey's residence in Ulster county, New York, two children came to gladden their home, a son named William, who died in Pennsylvania at the age of eight years, and David Woolsey, born January 3, 1828. The family then removed to Pennsylvania, following Mrs. Woolsey's father thither, and lived there a year during which time their daughter Elizabeth was born. She is the wife of Daniel McHenry of the state of Washington and has five children. At the end of their year's residence in Pennsylvania the family left that state for Sandusky Plains, Ohio, where the parents remained until their death. There the following children were born: Sarah Jane, deceased, the wife of Stephen Longnell; Martha, deceased, the wife of William Talent; Mary, deceased; Walter, deceased, a former resident of Knox county, married to a Miss Leighbarger; Isaac, deceased, also a former resident of Knox county, living at Gilson; Silas residing in the state of Washington; and two children, a girl and a boy, who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Hezekiah Woolsey were members of the Methodist Episcopal church, the former dying in Ohio at the age of sixty years and the latter in Knox county, Illinois, at the age of fifty-six years.

David Woolsey

David Woolsey obtained his education in Ohio and when twenty years of age came to Knox county, Illinois, having a capital of ninety dollars on which to make his start in life. After living here five years he returned to Ohio with a team, in order to bring his widowed mother to live with him in Knox county. Soon after this he was married and settled on a farm which he rented in Maquon township, continuing in the cultivation of this land and in performing job contracts for his neighbors for ten years, removing thereafter to a farm which he rented in Haw Creek township. In the spring of 1865 he bought with the money he had laboriously saved up to this time the farm on which he now lives retired, and which he bought of Jacob Wolf. He moved onto the new place on April 5th, at which time the house was not yet completed nor a single fence was up. Undaunted in his determination not to lose the opportunity of the first year's harvest he set about the task of doing his spring sowing while attempting to finish his home, to build the necessary farm buildings and to put up the fences. He was successful in this ambitious undertaking and when the summer crops were gathered, was richly rewarded with an abundant yield, being obliged to hire help for only five days during that time. He devoted himself to general cultivation of the soil and to stock-raising for shipment and from time to time added to his holdings by further purchases until he became the owner of more than a section of land. This he has since largely divided among his children keeping the title to three hundred acres of land and residing there while it is being operated by several of his sons. He was likewise a stockholder in the Maquon National Bank but has transferred his bank stock to his wife, who is now the owner of it.

Mr. David Woolsey was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Frye, a native of Ohio, who died in Maquon township at the age of thirty-five years. To this marriage were born three children, Leta, William and one who died in infancy.

Mr. Woolsey was again married, in 1856, his second union being with Miss Mildred Logan, a native of Virginia and a daughter of Alexander Logan. Of this union there were born ten children, five of whom are living. They are: Alva, residing in Haw Creek township, who is married to Flora Hall and has four children, Myrtle, Mabel, and twins, Carter and Chester; Lenora, the widow of William Chase, who resides in Haw Creek township and has four living children, Nina, Doris, Wayne and Paul; Julia, the wife of Milton Sherman, residing in Oklahoma, who has six children, Harold, Everett, Clyde, Mildred, Carl and Mabel; Charles, operating his father's farm, who is married to Bell Phillips and has three children, Lloyd, Percy and Opal; and Clyde, sharing the management of the homestead farm with his brother Charles, who is married to Lulu Phillips and has two children, Mabel and Ethel. The deceased children are: Alonza, who died when two years of age; Arzella, who passed away in January, 1912, and was the wife of Frank Nelson, residing in Elba township, leaving five children, Floyd, Blanche, Warren, Russell and Selma; Louisa, who died at the age of seven months; William, who was married to Nora Taylor, and had two sons, Harley and Taylor; and Deborah, who died at the age of twenty years.

Mr. and Mrs. David Woolsey belong to the United Brethren church. Fraternally Mr. Woolsey is connected with the Odd Fellows, of Maquon. Since the origin of the republican party he has been one of their loyal followers, supporting their men and measures and the principles for which they stand, but he has always declined the honor of public office, knowing that his time belonged to his family and to the perplexing problems involved in the management of a large estate. This single-minded devotion to his duties and to the goal which he set himself at the outset of his career has been richly rewarded, so that he is now numbered among the substantial men of Knox county who have built their fortune by arduous labor, keen judgment and careful management.

CHARLES E. WEECH.

Charles E. Weech, who is a farmer residing in Walnut Grove township, was born in Knox county, on the 13th of June, 1869. He is a son of Joseph S. and Nancy E. (Cox) Weech, the former a native of Somersetshire, England, and the latter of Knoxville, Illinois. The father was a son of Joseph and Martha (White) Weech, the former of whom died in 1871, at the age of fifty-seven years. Joseph Weech left England with his wife and ten children, in 1859, and at once settled in Oneida, Illinois. Later he purchased the present Weech homestead and until the end of his active career engaged in farming. Mrs. Weech's parents were also natives of England; her death occurred in 1892, at the age of seventy-seven years. The great-grandfather of our subject, Stephen Weech, was also an agriculturist and his death occurred in 1846, at the age of eighty-five years, his wife passing away at the age of eighty-seven.

Joseph S. Weech, the father of our subject, was born January 16, 1842, and came with his parents to the new world in 1859. Here he engaged in farming at home until he was twenty-four years of age but after his marriage, at that time, he purchased a small farm of forty acres in Walnut Grove township, which he cultivated for three years before disposing of it and purchasing the property upon which the homestead now stands. At this time the place comprised eighty acres and was the property of a brother before Joseph S. Weech acquired title thereto. Since 1901 he has been living retired. He was married to Nancy E. Cox, whose birth occurred in Knoxville and who is sixty-seven years of age. Her parents, David and Hannah (Wooley) Cox, are among the oldest settlers of the county. To Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Weech ten children were born: Charles, the subject of this sketch; Rosa, residing at home; Alice, the wife of E. Fudge; Ida May, who is married to Amos Beard, of Jefferson county, Illinois; Joseph, who is wedded to Emma Fuchs and is residing in Walnut Grove township; Martha, who is living at home; Nora, who is the wife of Arthur Reece, of Walnut Grove township; Arthur, who married Mabel White and is a resident of Idaho; Winnie, who is the wife of Enos Devore, and is residing in Cass county, Iowa; and Etta, living at home. Joseph S. Weech is a member of the Methodist church of Oneida, which he has supported by his liberal donations both at the time of the erection of its new building and annually toward its current expenses and he has held the office of township road commissioner for several terms.

As a boy Charles E. Weech left school when but twelve years of age and began working on his father's farm, on which he continued until he was twenty-one years of age, after which he farmed on the Joseph Weech property for six years and then, in 1895, removed to his present home, where he has engaged in general farming and stock-raising ever since. His success in this undertaking is due to the untiring energy and persistent labor which he has displayed in cultivating the property. His farm comprises eighty acres in Knox county, and he also owns two hundred and forty acres in Canada.

On the 12th of December, 1889, Charles E. Weech was married to Miss Anna May Davey, a daughter of Edwin Procter and Emily H. (Wagner) Davey, the former a native of Somerset, Somersetshire, England, born March 8, 1828, and the latter of Norwich, New York state. Mrs. Charles E. Weech was born on the 30th of September, 1870, in Walnut Grove township. Her father came to America as a young man and located at once in Knox county, where he devoted his life to agricultural pursuits, dying at Oneida when seventy years of age. Mrs. Davey, whose birth occurred June 11, 1844, a daughter of J. H. and Amanda (Walworth) Wagner, the family being of German descent, passed away August 22, 1899, when fifty-five years of age. Her great-grandfather, Wagner, served in the Mexican war and Thomas Davey, her grandfather on the paternal side, was a native of England, as was his father, Samuel Davey. Mrs. Charles E. Weech was one of four children, the others being: Nellie, the wife of J. Sheffield, of Campbell, Nebraska; Emma, who is married to George Sloan, a resident of North Dakota; and George Thomas, of Yates City. To Mr. and Mrs. Weech seven children have been born: Ethel, who died at the age of five years; Eva Adelia, who is nineteen years of age and is teaching school; and Florence, Charles Edward, Hazel Leonora, Clarence Davey and Fern Martha, who are seventeen, fifteen, twelve, eight and six years of age, respectively, and are all residing at home.

Mr. Weech gives his political support to the republican party and has served as school director for twenty-two years. He holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America of Oneida. He is a lifelong resident of Knox county and because of his success in his agricultural pursuits he has become one of its well known and much respected citizens.

WILLIAM MAIN.

William Main, who is now living retired in Altona, has been closely identified with the agricultural development of Knox county. He is one of the sturdy and thrifty natives of Scotland whose natural characteristics so well fitted them to achieve successful careers in the west, and although his life record is not marked by exciting events, there is in his history much that is worthy of contemplation and of emulation, for he has ever been loyal to duty, discharging faithfully the tasks that come daily to his hand. He was born May 12, 1844, in Blackhill on the banks of the Ayr river in Ayrshire, Scotland, and is the son of Peter and Jane (Ferguson) Main and grandson of Peter and Elizabeth (McKuan) Main, agriculturists who originally come from the Scotch Highlands. The father, whose birth occurred in Galloway, Scotland, in 1809, came to the United States in 1855, going directly to Chicago, where occurred the death of one of his daughters who had contracted cholera. After a brief stay in that city he removed to Millers Station and subsequently settled in Oneida, where he worked by the month until 1857. In that year he removed to Minnesota, but in the fall of 1857 returned to Oneida, and for the next eight years was engaged in agricultural pursuits in Copley township. In this he met with a good measure of success but retired to the home of his son, where on May 1, 1878, his death occurred. His wife died in Scotland in 1848 at the age of twenty-eight years. Of his family of three children William Main, the subject of this sketch, is the only surviving member. He was a member of the Presbyterian church, and lived in accordance with its teachings.

William Main spent his early years attending the common schools until he reached the age of twelve years. At that time he began active labor and did a man's work on a farm, hiring out for board and clothes. Subsequently, as he became more proficient, he earned ten dollars a month, and after working for two years, he enlisted in Ontario township, in 1862, at the age of eighteen years, in Company I, One Hundred and Second Illinois Infantry, under the command of Captain F. C. Smith. Mr. Main has a wonderful war record and served in the Western army under Sherman and Gordon Granger for three years, and later under Sherman in the Atlanta campaign. He participated in the battles from Chattanooga to Atlanta but was never wounded and, more remarkable yet, never attended sick call. He accompanied Sherman on his march to the sea, in which the hardships incident to fighting were even more bearable than those caused by the swamps to be passed. On the 6th of March, 1865, he was mustered out, marching through Washington in the grand review. He immediately returned home and hired out on a farm until, in partnership with his brother, he rented land and began farming independently for two years, at the end of which period they were able to purchase a tract of their own. Since that time his life has been devoted to agricultural pursuits until his retirement in 1909, when he removed to Altona. After 1873 he purchased the farm which his son now occupies, and devoted over thirty-five years to its cultivation. In this undertaking he displayed many of the characteristics of the Scotch,—thrift, perseverance and energy. He has always been recognized as one of the leading business men of his community, and his ability as such has been clearly seen in his service as director of the Altona Bank.

In 1873 Mr. Main was married to Anna Andrews, whose birth occurred March 15, 1849, in Ayrshire, Scotland, and who was a daughter of Hugh and Margaret (Wilson) Andrews. The former passed away in 1878 at the age of sixty-one years, and the latter, who was the daughter of John and Anna Wilson, died in 1892 at the age of seventy-five years. Mr. Andrews came to Knox county in 1855 and resided on a farm which was situated in Ontario and Walnut Grove townships during the remainder of his life. Mrs. Main was one of five children born to her parents, the others being: John Andrews, a stock buyer of Altona; Thomas Andrews, an agriculturist; Grace, who is the wife of Thomas Hobbs, a farmer; and Mary, who died in 1880 at the age of twenty-one years. To Mr. and Mrs. Main three children have been born: Thomas P., who is residing on the old homestead and is married to Patience Jarman and has one child, Clara; May, who is the wife of J. E. Hubble of Philadelphia, and has two children, Mary and John; and Jennie S., who became the wife of A. Johnson of Galesburg and has three children, Erwin, Helen and Robert.

Mr. Main has always enjoyed excellent health and is a remarkably young-looking man. He gives his political support to the republican party. He has served as road commissioner for many years and has also been an active member of the school board. Both Mr. and Mrs. Main hold membership in the Presbyterian church and she is active in the Ladies' Social Union and the Missionary Society of that church and also holds membership in the county kindergarten board. Throughout their community Mr. and Mrs. Main are held in high esteem and regard by all who know them and are numbered among Altona's most representative and worthy citizens.

JOHN EMERY McMASTER.

John Emery McMaster, who owns and operates a farm in Walnut Grove township, Knox county, was born in that township on the 6th of August, 1873, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. John McMaster of Altona, of whom a sketch appears elsewhere in this volume.

John E. McMaster spent his early days at home attending school and assisting his father on the farm, but in 1898 he started upon his independent career and on September 8 of that year was engaged as fireman by the Chicago & North Western Railway and subsequently in 1903 passed the examinations qualifying him to act as engineer on that railroad, he being one of the five that passed their tests with credits of one hundred per cent, chosen out of two hundred and fifty applicants. During the next three years he was thus employed but at the end of that time he entered upon agricultural pursuits and for the past five years has been engaged in farming and stock-raising, meeting with the success which his persistency, industry and progressiveness merit.

On April 20, 1903, Mr. McMaster was married to Miss Minerva Locke, whose birth occurred August 17, 1879, in Jewell county, Kansas, and who is a daughter of Clinton and Nettie (Clark) Locke, the former a native of Davis county, Iowa, where he was born in 1851. He was a son of John and Mary (Miller) Locke, the former coming to America when he was twelve years of age and settling near Nashville, Tennessee. Later he removed to North Carolina and his death occurred when he was ninety years of age. Mrs. Locke died in 1898, at the age of eighty-four years. Mrs. Clinton Locke was born March 6, 1855, in Sacramento, California, her parents being Frank and Catherine (Vanderford) Clark, the former having been engaged in the mercantile business. The Clark family settled in California in 1852 but later removed to Iowa, where the father died January 17, 1866, at the age of forty-four years, the mother still residing in Swan, Marion county. When Mr. Clark crossed the plains from Red Rock, Iowa, he was one of a family of fifteen, who were making the journey. It took them five months to reach the coast and the entire trip was fraught with many dangers, the Indians met en route being particularly hostile. To Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Locke four children were born, namely: Floyd, a resident of Clinton, Iowa; John, who is living in Reno, Nevada; Mrs. Minerva McMaster; and Rea, of Rock Island. After finishing school Mrs. McMaster was employed in a clerical position until her marriage. To Mr. and Mrs. McMaster two children have been born: Lola Mae, who is seven years of age; and Bequerth, who is five years of age.

In politics Mr. McMaster is a republican although he has never sought or desired the honors or emoluments of office. He holds membership in Lodge No. 330, A. F. & A. M., of Altona, Illinois, and both he and his wife belong to the Baptist church of Boone, Iowa. Mr. McMaster has always been a resident of the county and has given practically his whole attention to farming, today being recognized as one of Walnut Grove township's progressive and able agriculturists.

ELIAS C. CALL.

Elias C. Call, who is now living retired in Altona, Knox county, was born in Rutland county, Vermont, on the 22d of June, 1835, his parents being Osman and Olive (Clark) Call. His grandfather, Isaiah Call, was the first member of the family to leave his native state and locate in this county. He came here at the time the Mormons had extensive settlements in this locality. After settling in Walnut Grove township he devoted his entire life to agricultural pursuits and the brickmaking trade, he being the first brickmaker in this county. Osman Call was born at Woodstock, Vermont, in 1808, and followed the brickmaker's trade until he removed to Illinois in January, 1855, and settled in Knox county.

MR. AND MRS. ELIAS C. CALL

with credits of one hundred per cent, chosen out of two hundred and fifty applicants. During the next three years he was thus employed but at the end of that time he entered upon agricultural pursuits and for the past five years has been engaged in farming and stock-raising, meeting with the success which his persistency, industry and progressiveness merit.

On April 20, 1903, Mr. McMaster was married to Miss Minerva Locke, whose birth occurred August 17, 1879, in Jewell county, Kansas, and who is a daughter of Clinton and Nettie (Clark) Locke, the former a native of Davis county, Iowa, where he was born in 1851. He was a son of John and Mary (Miller) Locke, the former coming to America when he was twelve years of age and settling near Nashville, Tennessee. Later he removed to North Carolina and his death occurred when he was ninety years of age. Mrs. Locke died in 1898, at the age of eighty-four years. Mrs. Clinton Locke was born March 6, 1855, in Sacramento, California, her parents being Frank and Catherine (Vanderford) Clark, the former having been engaged in the mercantile business. The Clark family settled in California in 1852 but later removed to Iowa, where the father died January 17, 1866, at the age of forty-four years, the mother still residing in Swan, Marion county. When Mr. Clark crossed the plains from Red Rock, Iowa, he was one of a family of fifteen, who were making the journey. It took them five months to reach the coast and the entire trip was fraught with many dangers, the Indians met en route being particularly hostile. To Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Locke four children were born, namely: Floyd, a resident of Clinton, Iowa; John, who is living in Reno, Nevada; Mrs. Minerva McMaster; and Rea, of Rock Island. After finishing school Mrs. McMaster was employed in a clerical position until her marriage. To Mr. and Mrs. McMaster two children have been born: Lola Mae, who is seven years of age; and Bequerth, who is five years of age.

In politics Mr. McMaster is a republican although he has never sought or desired the honors or emoluments of office. He holds membership in Lodge No. 330, A. F. & A. M., of Altona, Illinois, and both he and his wife belong to the Baptist church of Boone, Iowa. Mr. McMaster has always been a resident of the county and has given practically his whole attention to farming, today being recognized as one of Walnut Grove township's progressive and able agriculturists.

ELIAS C. CALL.

Elias C. Call, who is now living retired in Altona, Knox county, was born in Rutland county, Vermont, on the 22d of June, 1835, his parents being Osman and Olive (Clark) Call. His grandfather, Isaiah Call, was the first member of the family to leave his native state and locate in this county. He came here at the time the Mormons had extensive settlements in this locality. After settling in Walnut Grove township he devoted his entire life to agricultural pursuits and the brickmaking trade, he being the first brickmaker in this county. Osman Call was born at Woodstock, Vermont, in 1808, and followed the brickmaker's trade until he removed to Illinois in January, 1855, and settled in Knox county.

MR. AND MRS. ELIAS C. CALL

Later in life he became an authority on arithmetic and was the author of a well known text-book on that subject. Mrs. Call was a daughter of J. Clark, a native of England, and her death occurred in Altona in 1895, at the age of eighty-five years and six months. Of this union three children survive: Elias, the subject of this review; Roenna Seymore, who is residing in Indianapolis, Indiana; and Loyal, who is living in California and who served in the Civil war.

Elias C. Call received his early education in the common schools, after which he accepted employment by the month on various farms and subsequently worked in a sawmill in New York state previous to coming to Altona in 1854. On the 22d of April, 1861, he enlisted for service in the Civil war, joining Company F of the Twenty-second New York Infantry under Colonel Phelps, serving in the Army of the Potomac near Washington. Because of severe illness contracted during the service he was mustered out in 1863, the same year in which his brother, who served in the Chicago Battery of Artillery, was made a prisoner at Andersonville. After Elias Call's honorable discharge he went to New York state and was again employed for a short time in a sawmill, but in 1864 he removed to Altona, making the trip by way of Canada. From that time he engaged in agricultural pursuits and, although he is now living retired, he still manifests an active interest in the farming problems of the county. In the cultivation of his property he met with the success which is usually gained in this rich agricultural district by the farmer who shows persistent and unremitting energy and who is willing to engage in constant labor.

Mr. Call has been twice married. His first union was to Miss Olive Haines, and to them two sons were born: William H., who is a teacher in Utah; and Charles W., who is residing in Hubert, Crow Wing county, Minnesota. Mr. Call's second union was to Mrs. Mary Huntly White, who was the widow of Peter White and whose birth occurred in 1836 in McConnellsville, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Call is the mother of two children by her first husband, Joseph Stillwagon, namely, Alice Stillwagon and Elizabeth Stillwagon. Of her union to Peter White there were born eight children, Sadie, George, Levi, Henry, Ida, Mary, Della and David.

Without desire for office as a reward for party fealty Mr. Call gives his unfaltering allegiance to the democratic party. He was a representative farmer and by his application and sturdy character has gained many friends, and he and his wife are held in high regard by all who claim the honor of their acquaintance.

HON. EDWARD J. KING.

In legislative service, to which he has three times been called by popular suffrage, and in the practice of law Hon. Edward J. King has given evidence of strong mentality, keen insight, a public spirit and devotion to duty that rank him with the representative and valued citizens of Galesburg. He was born in Springfield, Massachusetts, July 1, 1867, and in both the paternal and maternal lines is a representative of old New England families. The line of descent in the King family can be traced back in this country to about 1660, when the American progenitor settled in Suffield, Connecticut. Captain Thaddeus King, the great-great-grandfather, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. The great-grandfather was John King, also a native and resident of Connecticut. The grandparents of our subject, Albert and Louise (Leavitt) King, were natives of Connecticut, where the former followed the occupation of farming to the age of sixty-five years, when his life's labors were ended in death. His wife long survived him and reached the remarkable old age of ninety years. They were the parents of two sons and a daughter: John A.; Francis, who died at Suffield, Connecticut; and Mrs. Julia Randall.

John A. King, the father of Edward J. King, was born in Connecticut, spending his youthful days in Suffield, whence in early manhood he removed to Springfield, Massachusetts, where he carried on business as a contractor and builder. In that state he wedded Alice L. Houghton, a native of Massachusetts, and a daughter of Albert and Louise (Rolph) Houghton. Her father was born in Connecticut and was an engineer on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. His wife was a descendant of a British officer. Mr. and Mrs. Houghton made their home in Springfield, Massachusetts, for many years but afterward went to Windsor, Connecticut. Mrs. Houghton is still living in Suffield, Connecticut, at the unusual old age of ninety years. They were the parents of the following children: Edward, who died at Sacramento, California, about 1906; Alice L., the wife of John A. King; Elizabeth, who married Charles Mead, of Springfield; Mrs. George Duncan, afterwards intermarried with Frank Fisher, a widow; Annie, the wife of Walter Fogg, of Springfield, Massachusetts; Emma, the wife of Frank Leonard; and Martha, the wife of George Wallace, of Suffield, Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. King began their domestic life in Springfield, Massachusetts, and about 1870 removed to Hamburg, Iowa, whence in 1877 after residing in various places, the father came to Galesburg, where for a number of years he engaged in the livery business. During the past ten years, however, he has conducted a grain business in Chicago. He was a soldier of the Civil war, serving as a private in Company A, of the Forty-sixth Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry. His political allegiance has always been given to the republican party and his membership relations are with the Odd Fellows society. His wife, who was a member of the Baptist church, died in Springfield, Massachusetts, in the opening decade of the twentieth century at the age of fifty-seven years. They had but two children and the daughter, Louise, died at the age of seventeen years. Mrs. Alice L. King, the mother of our subject, married a second time, becoming Mrs. Lombard, of Springfield, Massachusetts, and there were children of that union.

Edward J. King spent his early boyhood in Springfield, Massachusetts, and in Windsor and Suffield, Connecticut, on New England farms and in attending the common schools there. He has been a resident of Illinois since 1880, at which time he took up his abode in Galesburg and was a pupil in the public schools until graduated from the high school in 1886. Later he entered Knox College and is numbered among its alumni of 1891. He taught for one year before entering college and after the completion of his course at Knox took up the study of law and was admitted to the bar in 1893, since which time he has followed his profession in Galesburg, having here an extensive practice that connects him with much of the important litigation tried in the courts of the district. He always prepares his cases with great thoroughness and care and his careful analysis enables him to present his points in logical form and to draw therefrom correct conclusions.

On the 1st of January, 1895, Mr. King was married to Miss May B. Roberts, a daughter of Rev. H. P. and Anna (Blanchard) Roberts. Mrs. King was born in Cairo, Illinois, where her father, a Congregational minister, was preaching. He served throughout the Civil war as a lieutenant and chaplain and died while on a visit in Colorado in 1887. He was, however, a resident of Galesburg at the time. His wife survived until September, 1896, and passed away at the age of sixty-four years. They were the parents of but two children, the elder daughter being Nellie A., who is now the widow of Fred S. Rockwell and resides in Denver with her son, Robert B. Rockwell. The younger daughter, May B., became the wife of Mr. King and they now have one son, Ivan R. King. The mother is a member of the Central Congregational church. Mr. King is well known in fraternal circles of this city, belonging to Alpha Lodge, No. 155, A. F. & A. M.; to the Odd Fellows society, the Knights of Pythias and the Elks. Since age conferred upon him the right of franchise he has been a stalwart advocate of the republican party and is a recognized leader in its ranks, thoroughly conversant with the vital questions and issues of the day and working along practical lines to secure the adoption of its principles. In 1893 he was elected city attorney and served for one term. In 1907 he was again called to office in his election to the house of representatives of the Forty-fifth Illinois general assembly and indorsement of his first term came to him in his reelection to the Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh general assemblies as a member of the house. Mr. King was the republican caucus nominee for speaker of the house of the Forty-sixth general assembly being defeated by Edward D. Shurtleff through a combination of democrats and republicans, who afterward elected William Lorimer United States senator. As a member of the state legislature he has carefully considered questions which have come up for action and neither fear nor favor can swerve him in his support of a cause which he believes to be just and right. He also holds to a high standard of professional ethics, ever treats the court with that courtesy which is its due and never indulges in malicious criticism because it arrives at a conclusion in the decision of a case different from that which he hoped to hear. He gives to his clients the service of well developed talent, unwearied industry and wide learning, but he never forgets that there are certain things due to the court, to his own self-respect and above all to justice and the righteous administration of the law which neither the zeal of an advocate nor the pleasure of success permits him to disregard.

JOHN S. MATHEWS.

John S. Mathews is the owner of a fine farm of three hundred and forty acres, to the further development and improvement of which he devotes his attention in connection with stock-raising, and is meeting with excellent success in both. He was born on his present homestead located on section 22, Salem township, on January 6, 1859, a son of William and Mary Jane (Montgomery)

Mathews, the father a native of Ireland and the mother of Pennsylvania. William Mathews emigrated from the Emerald isle to America in his early manhood, locating in Knox county, where he acquired one hundred and sixty acres of land. Being both ambitious and diligent he intelligently applied his energies to the cultivation of his land, his efforts meeting with such lucrative returns that he was later able to extend his holdings until he had acquired the title to three hundred and forty acres of land, now the homestead of his son John S.. To Mr. and Mrs. William Mathews there were born seven children, one of whom died at the age of four months. The others are as follows: Sarah N., the wife of Joseph W. Maxwell, of Yates City; John S., our subject; William C., who is living north of Douglas; Minerva Jane, the wife of Thomas Andrews, also residing north of Douglas; Robert T. a minister in the Presbyterian church, located at Louisville, Kentucky; and Clara B., now Mrs. Nixon of Yates City. The parents are now both deceased, the father having passed away at the age of seventy-seven and the mother at eighty-one, and are buried at Yates City. They were charter members of the Presbyterian church of that city and always took an earnest and helpful interest in all religious work, having given much assistance in building the church at Farmington. Mr. Mathews was a republican in politics and for many years held the office of school director in Salem township. He engaged in general farming and stock-raising during the entire period of his active career and met with success, being numbered among the prosperous agriculturists of the county. A man of high principles, his upright conduct and unquestionable integrity won him the esteem of all with whom he had transactions.

Together with his brothers and sisters John S. Mathews attended the common schools of Knox county in the acquirement of an education. They all terminated their student days with the completion of the high school with the exception of the brother Robert T., who was graduated from Knox College and afterwards attended the McCormick Theological Seminary. When his school days were ended John S. Mathews gave his undivided attention to the cultivation of the fields and care for the stock on the homestead, and many improvements upon the place were instituted by him. After his marriage Mr. Mathews brought his bride to the home of his childhood and here they have spent the entire period of their domestic life. Until the last two years he has operated his entire holdings, but he is now renting forty acres. Beside the cultivation of his fields he raises high-grade cattle, hogs and horses, making a specialty of Hereford cattle which are nearly all on the Wisconsin register, and Percheron horses.

In 1890 Mr. Mathews was married to Miss Clara Mabel Emery, born October 22, 1869, who is a native of Lynn township, Knox county, and a daughter of David and Amelia (Brooks) Emery. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Mathews there have been born four children: David W., Helen B., Amber G. and Bernard Emery.

The family are members of the Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Mathews has been a member of the board of trustees for eighteen years and is also an elder. He is also a director of the Farmers Telephone Company, and was formerly president, and is a member and secretary of the Percheron Horse Company. His political affiliations are with the republican party and he has been called upon to serve for four years as township assessor, while he has satisfactorily filled the position of school director for twenty-one years, a record which bespeaks the confidence of his fellow citizens. His entire life has been spent in the immediate vicinity of his present homestead, which is located on sections 21 and 22 of Salem township, and among his closest friends he numbers the comrades of his boyhood, this in itself being a tribute to his character.

GEORGE W. DAVIDSON.

George W. Davidson formerly associated with the agricultural interests of Knox county is now living retired in the village of Henderson. His father, Robert Davidson, born in Ireland in 1817, was the son of Hans and Jane Davidson of Ireland, who came to this country in November, 1817, bringing with them their son Robert who was then a babe six months old. They settled in Ohio, where they lived for many years. When Robert was of age he went to Maryland and there met Julia Ann Elishier whom he made his wife. At this time the great influx of settlers was beginning to invade Illinois, chiefly attracted thither by the promising agricultural prospects. Robert Davidson, too, followed the throng and, accompanied by his bride, settled near Springfield. There they lived for a little time during which period George W. Davidson, their first child, was born December 28, 1846. Their next home was Peoria, Illinois, where they remained until 1851, when they took up their residence in Galesburg. Mr. Davidson opened a plow shop in Henderson, and for four or five years made plows, which he sold in distant as well as neighboring localities, often hauling his iron and plows across the whole state to Iowa and other states. In 1856 he commenced farming and built a sawmill and in 1860 bought a farm, to which he removed his family. Here he devoted himself to agriculture, operating three hundred and fifteen acres of land. He was a man of marvelous physique and great endurance, only once in his life being so ill, as to necessitate a doctor's call. He continued in his farm work up to the time he was eighty-three years old and passed away three years later in 1903. His wife died in 1891, at the age of sixty-five years. She belonged to the Methodist Episcopal church. They were the parents of two other children, daughters, one of whom died in 1855. The other daughter is Mrs. Anthony Smith, of Henderson. Mr. Robert Davidson was a democrat in politics and for many years served his county in the capacity of road commissioner. He was not a member of any church but gave liberally to the advancement of any worthy religious cause.

George W. Davidson had a common-school education and when old enough engaged in agriculture. Ill health, however, followed him for many years. During the year 1873 he resided in Galesburg and at the end of this time returned to his farm, where he stayed until 1880, when he again resided in Galesburg for a brief period, only to return to the farm and once more pursue his agricultural labors. He was engaged in general farming, raised hogs and stock and had some reputation for breeding blooded Norman and trotting horses. He gave up farming permanently October 20, 1907, when he retired to Henderson, where he is now living.

The marriage of Mr. Davidson and Miss Serepta J. Baer was celebrated October 7, 1869. She was a daughter of Rev. D. E. and Susan (Ryan) Baer, who came originally from Germany but lived most of their lives in Spring Run, Franklin county, Pennsylvania, where Mr. Baer was a minister in the United Brethren church. Serepta (Baer) Davidson's grandfather and two of her brothers were also preachers of the same faith.

Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Davidson. Minnie, the wife of William Ward, a real-estate agent in Galesburg, is the mother of two children, Geneva and Lucile. Robert, is a merchant in Henderson. David Earl, a wholesale coal dealer in Galesburg, by his first wife, Mamie McDermott, has one child, Leonora. His second wife was formerly Miss Lucile McCune.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Davidson are ardent workers in the United Brethren and Methodist churches in Henderson. They have a large circle of friends, who esteem them highly for their progressive interest in every measure contributing to the moral and spiritual welfare of the community.

FRANK STEWART STEPHENSON.

Frank Stewart Stephenson, who owns and operates a farm in Walnut Grove township, was born July 21, 1866, in Oneida, Illinois, his parents being George L. and Grace (Stewart) Stephenson of Oneida, where the former is a prominent representative of mercantile interests.

In the public schools of Oneida Frank S. Stephenson acquired his education. After he had finished his school course he accepted a clerical position in his father's store at Oneida, and remained there until 1903, when he removed to the farm upon which he has since resided. His land is highly developed and well equipped with buildings and machinery, adequate for carrying on its cultivation according to the most advanced and most profitable methods. In addition to general farming he is also extensively engaged in stock-raising.

It was while he was residing in Oneida that Frank Stephenson was married on the 30th of September, 1891, to Miss Cummings, whose birth occurred October 21, 1869, on the Cummings homestead, her parents being Leonard B. and Celinda (Bulkeley) Cummings. The father was born in Union, Maine, near the Atlantic seacoast, June 28, 1823, his parents being Suel and Sophia (Barnard) Cummings, the former also a native of Maine, where he engaged in farming, having passed away in 1866 at the age of seventy-seven years, the latter having died in 1890 at the age of ninety-two years. Leonard Cummings, their son, left school at an early age so as to give his time and attention to his father's farm. Later he was employed at logging in a lumber camp for two winters, and subsequently, at the age of twenty-three years, he and his brother were employed in a trunk factory in Boston, but this work was discontinued when he enlisted in the Mexican war. His service covered a period of eighteen months, and after being mustered out he joined the great army of gold seekers going to California in 1849. He made the trip by water, sailing in a sloop around Cape Horn. For three years he remained in the mining district and then returned home, coming to Galesburg in 1853. Subsequently he purchased the farm which has since been the Cummings homestead. Mrs. Cummings was born on the 22d of August, 1838, in Lyme, Connecticut, and was the daughter of A. W. and Margaret Ann (Covenhoven) Bulkeley, the former having been born October 18, 1805, in Colchester, Connecticut, and the latter, September 28, 1805, in New York city. Mr. Bulkeley followed the carpenter, contractor and cabinet-maker's trade throughout his life. He removed to Fulton county in 1839, and in 1851 came to Copley township, Knox county, where his death occurred in 1879, his wife dying in 1886. Mrs. Bulkeley was the daughter of James and Elizabeth (Demorist) Covenhoven, who were of Dutch ancestry, but the family had long resided in this country, James Covenhoven having been a soldier in the Revolutionary war, as were many other members of the family. Mr. L. B. Cummings was a member of the Masons belonging to the A. F. & A. M. lodge, of Altona, Illinois, and although he was never active in politics he was wide awake to the issues of the day, and used what influence he could to promote measures which would tend to public improvement. Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson have become the parents of five children: Maude Aurelia, whose birth occurred July 28, 1892, and who is at present a student at the Illinois Woman's College at Jacksonville; Frank Stuart, Jr., whose birth occurred, May 25, 1895, and who is a student in the Oneida high school; George Cummings, born June 4, 1898, and attending school at present; Ruth Celinda, whose birth occurred August 29, 1899; and Robert Bulkeley, whose birth occurred December 11, 1901.

Mr. Stephenson is not interested in politics, but because of his interest in the moral condition and the development of the community he has served as a member of the school board of Oneida for five years. Fraternally he is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America, of Oneida, Illinois, and lodge No. 576 of the Knights of Pythias of Oneida, an organization of which he is a charter member, and of which he is now chancellor commander.

A. C. WILLIAMS.

A. C. Williams resides on section 4 of Victoria township, where he and his brother Walter engage in general farming and stock-raising on a farm of one hundred and fifty-four and three-fourths acres, that was formerly the property of their father. He was born in England on the 12th of May, 1850, and is a son of Thomas and Emma Williams, who emigrated to the United States with their family in 1852. Upon their arrival in this country they came directly to Knox county, where the father acquired the farm now owned by his sons. This was partially improved but Mr. Williams made many changes during his life time, erecting some new buildings and bringing the fields under higher cultivation. Here he engaged in general farming and stock-raising until his death, which occurred at the age of sixty-three years. He was survived for several years by the mother, who had passed the sixty-seventh anniversary of her birth at the time of her demise. They were both buried on the family lot in the cemetery at Galva. His political allegiance Mr. Williams accorded the democratic party and in matters of faith he and his wife were Episcopalians. He always took much interest in all public affairs, particularly those of a governmental nature, but never held any office save that of postmaster, the duties of which he discharged at Milroy for twenty years. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Williams, of whom our subject is the youngest. In order of birth the others are as follows: George, who married Miss Azelia Annis and resides at Galva; Mary Ann, the wife of John Freed, of California; Thomas, who married Mary Starboard and is now living in Missouri; Walter, who was born on the 27th of October, 1845; and Emily, the wife of L. D. Blackwood, of Missouri.

As he was only a child of two years when he accompanied his parents on their emigration to the United States, A. C. Williams was reared and educated in Victoria township. He received his agricultural training on the farm, where he now resides, under the capable direction of his father, during his boyhood and youth. After the latter's death the three sons, George, Walter and A. C., continued to operate the farm but the two latter subsequently bought the interest of their brother and have ever since continued alone. They have directed their operations along the lines generally adopted by the modern agriculturist and their efforts have been correspondingly rewarded. Their fields are carefully tilled and devoted to those cereals that are best adapted to the soil, and they annually reap abundant harvests. During the period of their ownership they have installed many modern conveniences and improvements and now have one of the well equipped farms of the township. In 1905 they tore down the old house that had done service for many years, and erected a comfortable country-residence, that has greatly added to the general appearance of the place. They keep the fences and buildings in good repair, ample sheds are provided for their implements and machinery and their stock is well housed, in short everything about their farm evidences capable management and thrift.

Mr. Williams married Miss Sarah J. Sornborger and they have become the parents of seven children, as follows: E. B.; Helen, who is deceased; and Altha, Alfred, Bertha, Ruth and Bryan. He accords his political support to the democratic party, as does also his brother, but they have never aspired to the emoluments of office or public honors. Mr. Williams has passed fifty-nine of the sixty-one years of his life in Victoria township, where both he and his brother are widely known and held in high esteem, by reason of their upright principles and honorable business methods, manifested in all of their transactions.

FRANK H. OLSON.

Frank H. Olson, who is proprietor of one of the leading mercantile establishments of Altona and also the postmaster of the town, was born in Ontario township, Knox county, November 25, 1873. His father, Peter Olson, who died December 12, 1911, in Walnut Grove township, reached the age of eighty-one years. He came as a young man to America and took up farming, which he followed for some time but later turned his attention to merchandising at Woodhull, Illinois. For a number of years he carried on business with a fair measure of success and eventually sold out. He lived up to his death retired near Altona, making his home upon a farm which he owned. His only surviving brother is a resident of Seattle, Washington. Peter Olson married Hannah Matson, who is also deceased. They became the parents of seven children: Oscar, who is now living in North Dakota; Edith, the wife of Charles Johnson, of Ontario township; Frank H., of this review; Emma, the wife of H. L. Peterson, a merchant of Altona; Hilda, at home; Arthur, who is following farming in Canada; and Harry, who has charge of the old home farm.

After his school days were over, Frank H. Olson engaged in clerking in Oneida, Illinois, for J. N. Conger, spending two years in that way. He afterward entered the Burlington Business College, where he studied for a term and then went to Chicago, where he was employed by Marshall Field & Company. He afterward returned to Oneida, where he embarked in business on his own account, becoming a partner with Metcalf Brothers in the ownership and conduct of a grocery store. After three years he sold out and removed to Altona, where he joined C. J. McMaster in the conduct of a grocery and hardware business. Three years later he became connected with C. E. Cowles in a business that was carried on for two years and later he formed a partnership with G. A. Johnson, which association was maintained for three years. Mr. Olson then purchased his partner's interest in the business and is now conducting a hardware and grocery store, carrying a well selected line of goods in each department and meeting with success in their sale. His business is well managed and his familiarity with the trade enables him to buy judiciously and sell at a fair profit, thus gaining the success which is the legitimate reward of all honorable endeavor.

Mr. Olson was united in marriage to Miss Bessie Bristol, a daughter of Frank Bristol, who was a carriage manufacturer of Oneida but is now deceased, as is his wife, Mrs. Emma Bristol. They were early residents of Oneida and were widely and favorably known there. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Olson has been born a son, Frank Bristol, now fourteen years of age. The parents are members of the Presbyterian church, in the work of which they are actively and helpfully interested, Mr. Olson serving as one of the church trustees. Fraternally he is connected with the Woodmen of America as a member of Camp No. 3737. His political support is given to the republican party and he held the office of town clerk until appointed postmaster of Altona on the 16th of March, 1908. He is still filling that position and in office has made as creditable a record as he has in business. He is justly accounted one of the representative and public-spirited citizens of Altona, accomplishing what he undertakes whether for his own benefit or for the progress and welfare of the community at large.

JOHN H. SHEAR.

John H. Shear, who is residing on his farm in Walnut Grove township, was born on the 22d of April, 1847, in Otsego county, New York, and is a son of Henry D. Shear, whose father was the first of the family to come to America from Holland. The father was born in New York state, April 10, 1813, and after he finished his early schooling learned the carpenter's trade. Subsequently he came with his brother to Illinois, locating in 1857, near Galesburg, Knox county, Illinois. After farming for ten years near Galesburg he purchased the farm upon which William McMaster is now residing. His death occurred upon this place, September 22, 1901. On the 30th of November, 1834, he was married to Eliza A. Multer, of Summit, New York. She was born April 6, 1813, and her death occurred on the 10th of September, 1895. They were the parents of seven children, four of whom are now living: Joseph, of Buxton, North Dakota; Moses Aaron, of Clay county, Nebraska; Julia, the wife of George McMasters, of Walnut Grove township; and John H., who is the subject of this sketch. Two sons, Cyrus M. and George A., died during the Civil war while enlisted in Company F, One Hundred and Forty-eighth Regiment of Illinois Infantry.

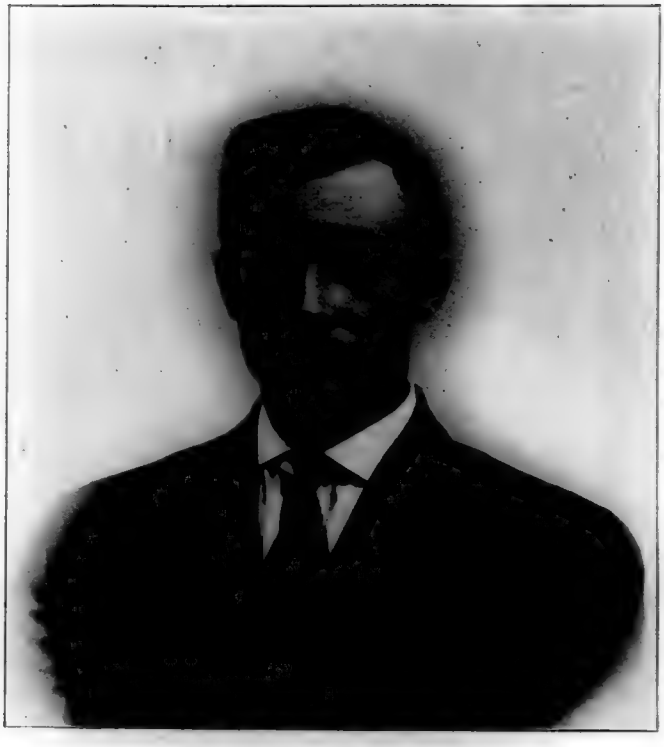
John H. Shear began his active career at the early age of twelve years, when he began assisting his father on the home farm. He remained there until his marriage, when he removed to the farm upon which he is now residing and engaged in general farming and stock-raising. For a few years following 1876, he also conducted a mercantile business in Altona, Illinois, but soon gave this up to devote his whole attention to agricultural pursuits.



On the 5th of August, 1891, Mr. Shear was married to Miss Maud White, whose birth occurred June 16, 1871, in Belmont county, Ohio. She was a daughter of Philander and Hannah Jane (Roby) White, the former having passed away on the 16th of March, 1900, and the latter living in Altona. The parents came to Knox county in 1890 and settled near Altona, where Mr. White was engaged in farming until his retirement a short time previous to his death. Mrs. Shear's grandfather, Thomas White, was one of the early settlers of Ohio. To Mr. and Mrs. White six children were born, four of whom survive: Edwin, of Newton, Kansas; Alice, who is the wife of O. McGrew, of Altona; Sally, who is the widow of F. Lester and is residing with her mother; and Mrs. Shear. Mr. and Mrs. Shear are the parents of three children: Walter W., whose birth occurred July 31, 1892; John Wesley, who was born on December 1, 1896; and Bertha, whose birth occurred April 1, 1900.

In politics Mr. Shear gives his allegiance to the republican party and has been elected to office by that party. In religious faith he is a member of the Methodist church of Altona and is at present serving as one of its trustees. His success in life has been due entirely to his own efforts and to diligent and persistent labor. He has displayed many of the praiseworthy traits which he has inherited from his stalwart Dutch ancestry and stands as one of the substantial and valued citizens of his community.

AUGUST PETERSON.

August Peterson, who has been engaged in agricultural pursuits in Knox county and is at present conducting a livery stable, was born in Altona, on the 21st of July, 1887, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. Victor Dahlgreen. The father's death occurred in 1905 and the mother passed away when her son was but four years of age.

From that time August Peterson was reared in the home of N. A. and Christina (Lundgren) Peterson, of Galva. August Peterson remained there until farm upon which William McMaster is now residing. His death occurred upon this place, September 22, 1901. On the 30th of November, 1834, he was married to Eliza A. Multer, of Summit, New York. She was born April 6, 1813, and her death occurred on the 10th of September, 1895. They were the parents of seven children, four of whom are now living: Joseph, of Buxton, North Dakota; Moses Aaron, of Clay county, Nebraska; Julia, the wife of George McMasters, of Walnut Grove township; and John H., who is the subject of this sketch. Two sons, Cyrus M. and George A., died during the Civil war while enlisted in Company F, One Hundred and Forty-eighth Regiment of Illinois Infantry.

AUGUST PETERSON

John H. Shear began his active career at the early age of twelve years, when he began assisting his father on the home farm. He remained there until his marriage, when he removed to the farm upon which he is now residing and engaged in general farming and stock-raising. For a few years following 1876, he also conducted a mercantile business in Altona, Illinois, but soon gave this up to devote his whole attention to agricultural pursuits.

On the 5th of August, 1891, Mr. Shear was married to Miss Maud White, whose birth occurred June 16, 1871, in Belmont county, Ohio. She was a daughter of Philander and Hannah Jane (Roby) White, the former having passed away on the 16th of March, 1900, and the latter living in Altona. The parents came to Knox county in 1890 and settled near Altona, where Mr. White was engaged in farming until his retirement a short time previous to his death. Mrs. Shear's grandfather, Thomas White, was one of the early settlers of Ohio. To Mr. and Mrs. White six children were born, four of whom survive: Edwin, of Newton, Kansas; Alice, who is the wife of O. McGrew, of Altona; Sally, who is the widow of F. Lester and is residing with her mother; and Mrs. Shear. Mr. and Mrs. Shear are the parents of three children: Walter W., whose birth occurred July 31, 1892; John Wesley, who was born on December 1, 1896; and Bertha, whose birth occurred April 1, 1900.

In politics Mr. Shear gives his allegiance to the republican party and has been elected to office by that party. In religious faith he is a member of the Methodist church of Altona and is at present serving as one of its trustees. His success in life has been due entirely to his own efforts and to diligent and persistent labor. He has displayed many of the praiseworthy traits which he has inherited from his stalwart Dutch ancestry and stands as one of the substantial and valued citizens of his community.

AUGUST PETERSON.

August Peterson, who has been engaged in agricultural pursuits in Knox county and is at present conducting a livery stable, was born in Altona, on the 21st of July, 1887, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. Victor Dahlgreen. The father's death occurred in 1905 and the mother passed away when her son was but four years of age.

From that time August Peterson was reared in the home of N. A. and Christina (Lundgren) Peterson, of Galva. August Peterson remained there until he was eighteen years of age. In his youth he attended the common schools and also assisted his foster father in agricultural pursuits. Subsequently he was employed by a railroad for two years and during that time, on the 18th of March, 1908, he met with an accident which incapacitated him for further manual labor of that sort. Having been trained to habits of thrift, he had by this time accumulated sufficient money that on the 12th of October, 1908, he was able to engage in the livery business at Altona. He conducts a modern establishment and his treatment of his patrons and his reasonable prices have secured him a good patronage.

AUGUST PETERSON

In the family of August Peterson were two brothers, George and David. George was brought up by a Mrs. Smith, of Altona, but he died in 1905. David, the other brother, was reared by a Mrs. Krohnland, who lived in Altona. Later the family removed to Colorado and David accompanied them to that state. He has now established his permanent residence in Denver and is still living with the Krohnland family.

Mr. Peterson is not particularly interested in politics, having given the greater part of his attention to his business undertakings. His religious faith is indicated in his membership in the Lutheran church of Altona. He is well known in business and social circles and has many warm friends, whose high regard has been gained by reason of his sterling worth.

CHARLES WESLEY MAIN.

Charles Wesley Main, who is a resident agriculturist of Altona, Knox county, was born on the 21st of March, 1856, his parents being Elias and Mary Ann (Huntington) Main. The father, who was born in Otsego county, New York, was a son of Peter Main, and came to Illinois for the first time in 1847, locating at Belvidere, where he engaged in farming for two years before returning to New York state. His trip westward, which was made in company with a brother, was taken over the Great Lakes route to Fort Dearborn, Chicago. When they arrived in Chicago they were offered fifteen acres of land where Lake street now is, for fifteen dollars per acre. This instance shows how remarkable the growth of Chicago has been, and how little investors realized its future greatness. The return trip eastward was also made on ship board, and one of its interesting incidents was the race which took place between two vessels during a heavy storm. So great was the interest in the contest that even a wagon belonging to Mr. Main was used for firewood in order to keep up the necessary amount of steam. His brother, a sailor, attended to the sounding of the depths of the water. After a short visit to the east the father returned west, to Altona, and at that time built the home in which he is now residing, having procured the lumber in Rock Island. The trip from Belvidere to Victoria was made in wagons at the time the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway was being graded. In his early days he had learned the wagon-maker's trade, and throughout the greater part of his life he was engaged in various kinds of wood construction work. In addition to building wagons he also made caskets. As he was the only manufacturer of these in his district he received a large patronage and usually charged fifteen dollars apiece for them. He was married to Mary Ann Huntington, whose birth occurred July 7, 1817, in Otsego county, New York. Her death occurred on the 11th of July, 1887, in the old homestead, and Mr. Main passed away in 1901 at the age of eighty-six years. He held membership in the Methodist church, being one of the original members and founders of this church at Altona. Throughout its existence he was one of its most generous and enthusiastic supporters. So great was his interest in its welfare and progress that, at the time of his death, he left a provision in his will which stated that the Methodist church of Altona was to receive an annual contribution of one hundred dollars to be used toward the pastor's salary, this provision to be operative for ten years. His charitable spirit was also shown by the fact that he also provided for a three hundred dollar annual donation to Abingdon College. To Mr. and Mrs. Main the following children were born: David E. and Dewitt C., both deceased; Delos S., who is living in Lebanon, Illinois; Mary J., deceased; Ella, a widow, who was the wife of William Stockdale, a pharmacist of Altona, Illinois; Emma L., who is married to R. Henderson, a resident of Houston, Texas; Joseph T., who is living in Galesburg; and Charles W. Main, who is residing in Altona and is the subject of this sketch.

Charles Wesley Main has lived an active and useful life, and has done his share in developing the agricultural interest of Knox county, a county which depends so greatly upon its soil for its resources. His spirit of citizenship has been such that he has won the regard and respect of his fellow citizens.

SAMUEL V. STUCKEY.

Samuel V. Stuckey, cashier of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank, to which position he was called in December, 1908, was born in Altona, this county, September 6, 1865. His father, John A. Stuckey, was a native of Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, born in April, 1832, and in his youthful days he came to Illinois, settling in Knoxville, where he engaged in farming. A few years later he became connected with the hardware business in Altona and was prominently associated with its commercial interests for an extended period, occupying an enviable position as a reliable merchant and progressive business man. He is also prominent in local political circles and, in 1880, was elected sheriff of Knox county, to which position he was reelected, serving in all for six years. He afterward went west to California and is now engaged in business in Rosemond, Kern county. His fraternal relations are with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In his political views he is a republican and in addition to the office of sheriff he filled a number of township positions, discharging his duties with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. In early manhood he wedded Margaret Norris, who was born near Baltimore, Maryland, about 1835. She died in 1899 in the faith of the Congregational church of which she had long been a faithful member. In their family were four children: George N., now a resident of Minneapolis, Minnesota; Samuel V.; Nellie, the wife of William T. Walsh, of Los Angeles, California; and John H., who is living in the same city.

Samuel V. Stuckey pursued his education in the schools of Altona and Galesburg, supplementing his early school course by study in Brown's Business College. In 1883 he was appointed deputy sheriff under his father, being at that time a youth of eighteen years, and continued in the office until the 9th of February, 1890. On that day he became clerk of the circuit court, which position he filled until December, 1908. In the previous February he had entered financial circles, having accepted the position of cashier of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank, with which he is still connected. He had previously been a director of the bank for ten years and was then called to the office of cashier, which position he has since capably filled, proving a popular bank official, always courteous in his treatment of the bank's patrons and at the same time careful in protecting the interests of the institution which he represents.

On the 22d of September, 1887, Mr. Stuckey was united in marriage to Miss Martha M. Clay, a daughter of Alonzo C. and Lovina M. (Derby) Clay, of Galesburg, both of whom were natives of Andover, Vermont, and in 1836 the father came to Knox county with his father, John T. Clay. He became a farmer and in 1849, during the gold excitement, was one of the originators of the party that left Galesburg, in January, 1849, overland by ox wagon, for the gold fields of California, crossing the great American desert, but in a few years returned, devoting many years to general agricultural pursuits. His wife came to Knox county in January, 1850, and died in February, 1890. Mr. Clay gave his political allegiance to the democratic party, filled a number of township offices and was also county supervisor, serving as chairman of its building committee at the time of the erection of the county jail. He was a Universalist and both he and his wife displayed many sterling traits of character. His death occurred December 27, 1898. Their daughter, Mrs. Stuckey, was born in Galesburg, June 9, 1863. The other member of the family was Charles C. Clay, who died May 5, 1909. Mr. and Mrs. Stuckey are well known in Galesburg where they have an extensive acquaintance. He has made a creditable record in office and in financial circles and his ability constitutes one of the factors in the capable management and successful control of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank.

LEO PRESTON BAIRD.

Leo Preston Baird, general manager and principal stockholder of the Abingdon Light & Power Company, who is also successfully conducting a thriving insurance agency, is one of the most enterprising and progressive young business men of the town. He is a native of Knox county, his birth having occurred in Elba township on the 15th of July, 1885, and a son of B. P. and Josie (Gray) Baird, who are mentioned at greater length elsewhere in this work. The father, who is one of the prominent and influential residents of Abingdon, is a native of Clinton county, Pennsylvania, while the mother was born and reared in Knox county. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Baird, our subject being the second in order of birth. The others are as follows: William Lemuel, who was educated in Hedding College, now engaged in agricultural pursuits in this county; Lois Irena, a graduate of Hedding College, who for the past three years has been teaching in the high school at Winfield, Iowa; Eva Lena, also a graduate of Hedding College, now principal in the schools at Whitehall, Michigan; and Forest Gray, who is a senior at Hedding. Mr. Baird had one son by a previous marriage, Newton Homer, who was educated at Knox College and is now conducting a cattle ranch in the vicinity of Denver, Colorado, where he owns twenty-four hundred acres of land.

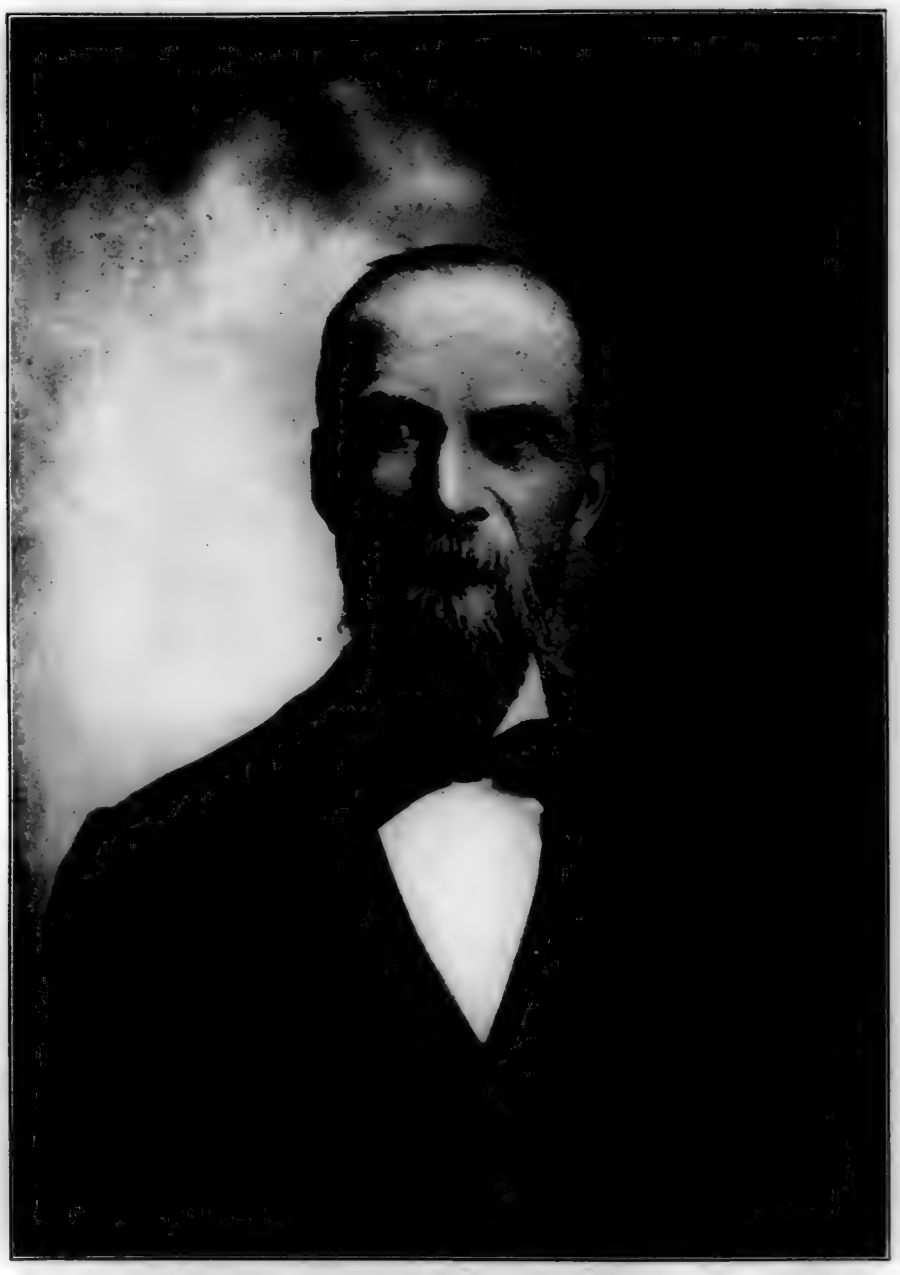
Reared amid the refining influences of a cultured home, Leo Preston Baird was given the social and educational advantages that prove most helpful, if they are not essential, in the successful pursuit of any vocation. He received his introduction to the elements of English learning in the district school in the vicinity of his boyhood home, continuing to pursue his studies through the public schools of Abingdon until his graduation from the high school with the class of 1902. In the following autumn he matriculated at Hedding College, where he studied for two and a half years, then entered the Illinois State University at Urbana, being awarded the degree of B. A. with the class of 1907. After the completion of his collegiate course he turned his attention to teaching, his first position being that of assistant principal in the schools of Atwood, Illinois. He remained there only one year, then took the principalship of the schools at Princeville, which he resigned at the end of two years. In the Autumn of 1910 he announced his candidacy for the office of superintendent of schools in Peoria county, receiving the nomination on the republican ticket. Although Mr. Baird was only twenty-five years of age, and was not very widely known in the county, during the brief period of his connection with the profession he had manifested those qualities that made him recognized as one well qualified for the office. His opponent on the democratic ticket was a man much his senior, who was not only widely known in the county but had the additional advantage of being connected with several influential families. Nevertheless, although he was the youngest candidate who ever sought the office, Mr. Baird carried Peoria by five hundred majority, and lost the election by only ninety-one votes, which were cast in precincts in the outlying country where he was not known. Despite the fact that he lost the office it was such a close contest in face of his opposition that Mr. Baird's friends looked upon it almost as a victory, having felt from the first that his chances of winning were very small. His opponent later told him that had he been better known he would have carried the vote by a large majority. Following this episode Mr. Baird returned to Abingdon and purchased a third interest in the Abingdon Light & Power Company, of which he has ever since been general manager. Feeling that he wanted to further extend his activities he later bought the insurance business of Strawther Givens and is conducting this in connection with his other duties. A young man of high principles and engaging personality, Mr. Baird has the happy faculty of successfully carrying through anything he undertakes, his affability and enthusiasm no less than his integrity and keen sense of honor winning him recognition among all classes. He has not only succeeded in retaining the many patrons of Mr. Givens, but has increased his business until his clientage is second to that of no other agency in the city. He is one of the more recent acquisitions to the business circles of Abingdon, where he is making marked progress, and although his father's influence has unquestionably been of assistance to him he possesses the faculties that would attain success despite obstacles and defeats.

On the 31st of July, 1907, Mr. Baird was united in marriage to Miss Gertrude Perle Edwards, a daughter of W. F. Edwards of Galesburg, and to them has been born one child, Richard Bruce, whose natal day was the 19th of June, 1908.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Baird attend the Methodist Episcopal church, toward the support of which organization he is a liberal contributor, and fraternally he is affiliated with Princeville Lodge, No. 360, A. F. & A. M. He also belongs to the Gamma Zeta Chapter of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, which he joined while at the university. Mr. Baird has a large circle of friends, who are watching with interest the progress of his career, feeling assured of his success.

GRANT GIBBS.



Grant Gibbs, whose death occurred April 21, 1911, in the Augustana Hospital, Chicago, was for many years a resident agriculturist of Sparta township. His birth occurred in Knox township, on the 27th of February, 1867, his parents being Nelson and Sarah (Henshaw) Gibbs, formerly residents of Athens county, Ohio. Subsequently they removed to Adams county and later to Knox county, where they purchased a farm, upon which they resided for a short time. After disposing of this they located in Knox township and engaged in agricultural pursuits until their deaths, which occurred in Knoxville. The paternal grandfather, Simeon Gibbs, also settled in Knox township, where he spent the greater part of his active life in agricultural pursuits.

Grant Gibbs was married to Nettie Amanda Lane, who is a daughter of Inman Herbert Lane and was born on the 27th of November, 1867, in Linn county, Kansas. Her paternal grandfather, Lorenzo Lane, of Ohio, was married to Julia Ann Wise, of New York, and they were among the early settlers of Persifer township. The father was born in Persifer township and spent his early life on the farm previous to enlisting for service in the Civil war. After four years' service he returned home and left for Linn county, Kansas, immediately after his marriage, where he farmed for five years previous to removing to Rice county and engaging in stock-raising for five years. Subsequently he went to Linn county and then to Edwards county, where he conducted a grocery and meat market. After a short residence in Hutchinson, Kansas, he removed to California and entered upon agricultural pursuits, giving the greater part of his attention to stock-raising. His death occurred in February, 1910, and was due to the effects of injuries received in a train wreck. He was married to Miss Lamonia Celissa Eldridge, a daughter of Gardner and Parmelia (Meecham) Eldridge, the latter of Scotch-Irish descent. The Eldridge family were among the early settlers of Copley township, Gardner Eldridge being its first representative, residing there until his death. Mrs. Eldridge died on the 21st of April, 1876, at the age of thirty-three years. Mr. Lane was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and also the Grangers lodge in Rice county, Kansas. To Mr. and Mrs. Lane five children were born, Mrs. Gibbs being the only one surviving. At the age of eight years, after her mother's death, she removed to the home of her grandfather, Lorenzo Lane, until she went to live with her father in Kansas, when she was fourteen years of age. She resided there for four years previous to returning to Illinois, where she was married in 1888 to Grant Gibbs. To this union five children were born, the only surviving one being Charles William, of Wataga, whose birth occurred August 21, 1893. Mr. Gibbs was an active and enthusiastic republican and held many offices in this district, being constable and village police of Wataga for four years previous to his death. He also held membership in the Congregational church of Wataga, the Modern Woodmen of America of Wataga, the Royal Neighbors of Wataga and the Yeomen of Galesburg. Mrs. Gibbs holds membership in the Royal Neighbors of Wataga, the Yeomen of Galesburg and the Ladies Aid Society of the Congregational church of Wataga. Mr. Gibbs' career was a commendable one and was one of the many evidences of what patience and perseverance can do in overcoming difficulties, surmounting discouragements and achieving success. He was an upright man, interested not only in the agricultural but also in the social standing of his community, and he acquired the confidence and respect of his neighbors both as a substantial farmer and a useful citizen.

EDWARD W. GOLDSMITH.

Edward W. Goldsmith, a well known agriculturist of Sparta township, was born on the place, where he now resides, on the 20th of October, 1867. He is a son of Edward H. and Ann Maria (Whiteford) Goldsmith, both natives of the state of New York. The father was born in Orange county on December 22, 1834, but at the age of twenty years he came to Illinois with his father, who located in Knox county. The paternal grandparents of our subject were Schuyler H. and Katherine (Howell) Goldsmith; the former passed away in Knox county and the latter in New York, where she was also buried. In later years her son brought the body to Knox county and placed it in the family lot in the Robbins cemetery. Schuyler H. Goldsmith subsequently married Mary Carley, and to them were born two children: Helen, the wife of A. McGill, of Kansas; and Schuyler, who is a resident of Corning, Kansas. Schuyler H. Goldsmith, Sr., came to Illinois with his family in 1854, locating in Sparta township, where he followed farming until his death in 1861. Having been given the advantages of a very good education, after leaving school Edward H. Goldsmith taught during the winter months in the various districts in this vicinity until 1877, devoting his summers to agricultural pursuits. During the early years of his domestic life he settled on the farm, now operated and owned by his son, and here he passed away on July 7, 1900, at the age of nearly sixty-six years. The mother of our subject was born at Lodi, Seneca county, New York, on the 12th of June, 1834, a daughter of William and Margaret (Williams) Whiteford. The father, who was a farmer, passed away when he was fifty and when his daughter Ann Maria was a child of but four years. She was reared by B. C. Osborn, a merchant of Burdett, New York, and his wife, Malinda (Winter) Osborn, a native of New Jersey, continuing to make her home with them until her marriage. Of the six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Whiteford two are now living: Mary E., the widow of Lynn E. Harris, of Nevada; and James, who is a resident of Elmira, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Goldsmith were to returning to Illinois, where she was married in 1888 to Grant Gibbs. To this union five children were born, the only surviving one being Charles William, of Wataga, whose birth occurred August 21, 1893. Mr. Gibbs was an active and enthusiastic republican and held many offices in this district, being constable and village police of Wataga for four years previous to his death. He also held membership in the Congregational church of Wataga, the Modern Woodmen of America of Wataga, the Royal Neighbors of Wataga and the Yeomen of Galesburg. Mrs. Gibbs holds membership in the Royal Neighbors of Wataga, the Yeomen of Galesburg and the Ladies Aid Society of the Congregational church of Wataga. Mr. Gibbs' career was a commendable one and was one of the many evidences of what patience and perseverance can do in overcoming difficulties, surmounting discouragements and achieving success. He was an upright man, interested not only in the agricultural but also in the social standing of his community, and he acquired the confidence and respect of his neighbors both as a substantial farmer and a useful citizen.

EDWARD H. GOLDSMITH

EDWARD W. GOLDSMITH.

Edward W. Goldsmith, a well known agriculturist of Sparta township, was born on the place, where he now resides, on the 20th of October, 1867. He is a son of Edward H. and Ann Maria (Whiteford) Goldsmith, both natives of the state of New York. The father was born in Orange county on December 22, 1834, but at the age of twenty years he came to Illinois with his father, who located in Knox county. The paternal grandparents of our subject were Schuyler H. and Katherine (Howell) Goldsmith; the former passed away in Knox county and the latter in New York, where she was also buried. In later years her son brought the body to Knox county and placed it in the family lot in the Robbins cemetery. Schuyler H. Goldsmith subsequently married Mary Carley, and to them were born two children: Helen, the wife of A. McGill, of Kansas; and Schuyler, who is a resident of Corning, Kansas. Schuyler H. Goldsmith, Sr., came to Illinois with his family in 1854, locating in Sparta township, where he followed farming until his death in 1861. Having been given the advantages of a very good education, after leaving school Edward H. Goldsmith taught during the winter months in the various districts in this vicinity until 1877, devoting his summers to agricultural pursuits. During the early years of his domestic life he settled on the farm, now operated and owned by his son, and here he passed away on July 7, 1900, at the age of nearly sixty-six years. The mother of our subject was born at Lodi, Seneca county, New York, on the 12th of June, 1834, a daughter of William and Margaret (Williams) Whiteford. The father, who was a farmer, passed away when he was fifty and when his daughter Ann Maria was a child of but four years. She was reared by B. C. Osborn, a merchant of Burdett, New York, and his wife, Malinda (Winter) Osborn, a native of New Jersey, continuing to make her home with them until her marriage. Of the six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Whiteford two are now living: Mary E., the widow of Lynn E. Harris, of Nevada; and James, who is a resident of Elmira, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Goldsmith were married in New York, in March, 1859, but later settled on the farm now owned and operated by their son, Edward W. They were the parents of two daughters and one son, but the former are both now deceased. In matters of faith they were Congregationalists and for twenty-four years Mr. Goldsmith was secretary of the church at Wataga. In politics he was a republican, but he never held office. The later years of his life were entirely devoted to agricultural pursuits, in which he met with a goodly degree of success.

EDWARD H. GOLDSMITH

Reared on the farm, where he is now living in the acquirement of his early education, Edward W. Goldsmith attended the schools of the vicinity. After mastering the common branches he enrolled in the academy of Knox College at Galesburg, where he studied for three years. Upon laying aside his textbooks he returned to the farm, assisting his father in its further improvement and cultivation until he attained his majority, when he was taken into partnership, receiving a share of the yearly dividends. This arrangement continued until the death of Edward H. Goldsmith when the son came into the property, being his father's sole heir. Enterprising and progressive in whatever he undertakes, Mr. Goldsmith has met with more than average success in his farming and stock-raising, and now owns one of the attractive and well equipped farms of the community.

For his life companion Mr. Goldsmith chose Miss Minnie L. French, who was born in Sparta township, on the 11th of January, 1868, and is a daughter of Hugh and Louisa (Schroeder) French. Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith have three children: Frank F., who is now seventeen years of age, attending Galesburg high school; Anna L., who is fifteen and a student of the Galesburg high school; and George S., aged twelve years.

His political support Mr. Goldsmith accords to the republican party, and for twenty-two years he has served as school director, having taken an active interest in all matters of an educational nature. He is one of the public-spirited citizens and capable business men of Sparta township, where he represents the third generation of his family, whose various members have always been held in high esteem.

JESSE WILMOT.

A well known agriculturist of Sparta township, who has passed practically his entire life in the vicinity of his present farm is Jesse Wilmot. Brought here as an infant during the early pioneer days he has watched with interest the development of the country, as the vast forests and prairies have been converted into productive farms, and thriving towns and villages have sprung up where the Indian's tepee used to stand.

He is a native of New York, his birth having occurred in Steuben county, on the 17th of February, 1836, and a son of Amos and Betsey (Crawford) Wilmot. His father was born in Connecticut in 1803, and there he was reared and educated. In his early manhood Amos Wilmot went to New York, locating in Brown county, where he followed the shoemaker's trade until his marriage. Soon after this event he located on a farm in Steuben county, and assiduously applied himself to its further improvement and cultivation for seven years. At the expiration of that period, in 1836, together with his wife and family he came to Illinois, locating in Sparta township, which at that time contained scarcely an inhabitant. Here he erected a log cabin and he and his family assumed the hardships and privations of pioneering. About them were vast forests and great expanses of unbroken prairie, the woods abounded with game of all kind and now and then an Indian was seen prowling about. Their nearest neighbors were located a mile away and Peoria was the most convenient trading post, while theirs was the first log house erected in the township and they were likewise its first citizens. But both Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot were young and full of courage, and cheerfully bore the many privations and discomforts that devolved upon them, passing the remainder of their lives on the farm, where they reared their family. The mother, who was a native of the state of New York, had attained the age of seventy years at the time of her death in 1878. Their family was as follows: Sidney L., the eldest, who is mentioned at greater length elsewhere in this volume; Sarah, the wife of Thomas Manfield, both now deceased, who celebrated their golden wedding on the 17th of February, 1902; Hannah, the wife of Elmer Bennett, both of whom are now deceased; Jesse, our subject; Emma, the deceased wife of Edward Taylor; Bradley, who is living in Carroll county, Missouri; Rebecca, who married J. R. Shull of Carroll county, Missouri; and Lydia, the wife of J. Rogers, of Lincoln, Nebraska. The father was a member of the Congregational church of Ontario, and his political allegiance he gave to the whigs until that party was merged into the republican, after which he gave his support to their candidates. He was a public-spirited man with high standards of the duties of citizenship and always took an active interest in all township affairs.

Jesse Wilmot was only an infant when brought to Sparta township by his parents on their removal to this county, and the greater part of his life has been passed in the immediate vicinity of his present home. Educationally he was afforded only the meager advantages of the district schools of that period, and at the age of ten years assumed his share of the duties connected with the operation of the farm. He remained at home with his people until he was twenty-one years of age, when he began working for himself. Having been reared in the country, remote from a town or settlement of any kind, he had been given little choice in selecting a vocation, so naturally he continued to follow agricultural pursuits, which was the only career with which he had a chance to become acquainted. He first settled on a place west of Wataga, but two years later he came to his present place and here he has ever since resided. Farming fifty years ago involved much more drudgery and hard, wearing labor than today, when machinery at à comparatively small outlay will do in a few hours the work that formerly consumed days to accomplish, and it is that period which Mr. Wilmot recollects so vividly. In 1864, with his wife and family he started across the country in an emigrant wagon to the eastern border of Kansas, but as the Indians were giving considerable trouble upon their arrival in Worth county, Missouri, they changed their course, going to Council Bluffs, Iowa. From there they went to Webster City, that state, but after two years residence there returned to Knox county.

Mr. Wilmot established a home for himself when he married Miss Eliza

Firkins, who was born at old Henderson, this county, on the 6th of March, 1842. She is a daughter of Russell and Margaret Jane (Teller) Firkins, natives of the state of New York, the father's birth having occurred in 1810, and that of the mother in 1816. They came to Illinois in 1837 and were among the first settlers of Henderson. From there they later removed to Sparta township, but subsequently settled in Warren county, later coming again to Knox county, where the father passed away in 1857. He was long survived by the mother, whose death occurred in 1890. Thirteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Firkins, who are, with the exception of two sons and four daughters, deceased. In the paternal line Mrs. Wilmot is of English extraction, her grandfather, George Firkins, a tailor by trade, having come to this country during the early days of the Revolution. He was seized as a British subject by the English soldiers, who found him concealed in a barrel on the vessel, but he managed to make his escape and came to America, where he enlisted in the army. He passed away in 1858, at the venerable age of ninety-three years, and his wife, whose maiden name was Lydia Titus, died in 1859. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot numbers nine, as follows: Elizabeth, who first married George Williams, by whom she had one daughter, Minnie, and after his death became the wife of John Peterson, of Henry county, and the mother of four children; Hattie, the wife of George Howland, of Abingdon, this state; Sidney, of Sparta township, who married Ella Dobson and has seven children; Almeda, the wife of James Dobson, a street car conductor, of Galesburg, who has four children; Milton J., who married Della Salsbury and has five children, now a resident of North Dakota; Winfield, of Sparta township, who married Fay Bloomfield and has three children; Harry, also of Sparta township, who married Della Swadley and has one son, George; Laura, the wife of Edward Frampton, of Rio township, by whom she has had two children; and Olive E., the deceased wife of Wallace Stanard, who left one child, Francis, who is living with Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot. They also have three great-grandchildren, Laura and Carl Peterson, the daughter and son of Minnie Williams, who married Emil Peterson, and Virgil Miller. On the 6th of September, 1909, Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot celebrated their golden wedding, at which occasion there were present ninety-two members of the family.

In his political views Mr. Wilmot is a stanch republican, but he has never held an office, having preferred to give his attention to the development of his personal interests. He is one of the well known representatives of a highly respected pioneer family and has many friends in Sparta township, who accord him the regard his high principles and substantial qualities well merit.

THOMAS McCLURE.

Thomas McClure, who is a well known agriculturist of Lynn township, Knox county, was born on the 25th of July, 1852, at Stranraer, Scotland. He is a son of Andrew and Jane (Carnahan) McClure, the former of whom passed away in Scotland. Subsequently the mother came to America in 1867 with her three children, Thomas, Robert and John, and settled in Walnut Grove township, this county, where she entered upon agricultural pursuits. Later she married Simeon Collinson, who died in 1895, at the age of eighty years. To their union one child was born, Ernest Collinson, who is in the insurance business in Galva.

Thomas McClure attended the district schools for a short time and subsequently was bound out to Henry G. Collinson, until he became of age, when he started out for himself on his mother's farm, upon which he now resides. He has been engaged in agricultural pursuits throughout his active career and has met with the success which the persevering, energetic farmer wins in this rich agricultural district. He possesses the salient characteristics of the Scotch race which form such a valuable asset to the enterprising citizen of this country. In addition to general farming he also engages in stock-raising to a considerable extent, and this undertaking has become as profitable as farming.

On the 10th of March, 1880, Mr. McClure was married to Miss Louise Collinson, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Collinson of this county. To their union eight children have been born: Henry Franklin, born October 3, 1880; Bell, whose birth occurred on the 25th of December, 1881, and who is the wife of Albert Clark, of Oklahoma; John, born February 21, 1884, who is a bank cashier at Oklahoma; Andrew Thomas, born May 27, 1886, who is married to Myrtle Callahan, and is residing in Walnut Grove township; Arthur Earl and Clara May, born February 12, 1891, and August 19, 1893, respectively; and Ernest and Mary Jane, born April 28, 1895, and March 31, 1898, both of whom are residing at home and attending school.

Mr. McClure is a democrat, giving his support to the democracy because of his firm belief that its platforms are best suited for producing a practical and able government. He has held the office of highway commissioner for three years. Both he and his wife hold membership in the Methodist church of Victoria, and he is one of its trustees. He is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America of Victoria and of the Fraternal Reserve Life Association of Galesburg, of which his wife is also a member. He has never regretted the fact that he left Scotland to make his career in a country which offers equal opportunities to all its citizens, and he has become a most loyal citizen to the country of his adoption.

JOHN C. NELSON.

John C. Nelson, who follows farming on section 32, Knox township, is one of the substantial citizens that Sweden has furnished to this country and in his life he exemplifies many of the sterling traits of his race. He was born in Sweden, October 29, 1841, and his parents, Carl and Hannah (Ingeman) Nelson, were natives of the same country. With their family, numbering five children, they came to America and made their way at once across the country to Knoxville, where Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nelson resided until called to the home beyond. The father was one of the cholera victims of 1854 and the mother, long surviving him, passed away in 1891. Their children were: Olie C.; Swan, who died in Jefferson City, Indiana, in 1862; John C.; Mrs. Sarah Peterson; and

Carl, who died in infancy. The father was a carpenter by trade and built the first Swedish church in Knoxville but his active life was cut short not long after the arrival of the family in the new world.

John C. Nelson began his education in the schools of his native country and afterward continued his studies in the public schools of Knox county. He has always followed farming and gardening and now devotes his attention largely to horticultural pursuits, conducting a berry and fruit farm and also raising much garden produce. He plans not only to produce fruit of excellent size but also of superior flavor and the fine varieties which he raises insures for him a ready sale on the market.

In March, 1872, Mr. Nelson was united in marriage to Miss Inga Rumbeck, who was born in Sweden, April 9, 1848, a daughter of Carl and Johanna Rumbeck, who came to America in 1869, while Mrs. Nelson arrived the following year. They settled in Knoxville, where the father later passed away but the mother now lives with her son in Kewanee, Illinois. Their family numbered seven children, of whom four are living: George, who makes his home in Elsmore, Kansas; Olaf, of Kewanee; John, who is living in Amherst, Nebraska; and Mrs. Nelson. By her marriage Mrs. Nelson became the mother of eight children, of whom one died in infancy. The others are: Amanda, now the wife of Oscar Hoarven, of Galesburg, by whom she has two children, Arnold and Edna; Clara, who is the wife of Alden Carlson, of Knoxville, and has six children, Hazel, Ralph and Harold, twins, Raymond, Sullivan and Dorothy; William H., who married Julia Carlson, of Knoxville, and has two children, Clifford and Roland; Minnie; Carl; Eben; and Nellie, all yet at home. The parents are members of the Swedish Lutheran church, in the work of which they take an active and helpful part, Mr. Nelson now being trustee and treasurer of the church. He has occupied his present farm since 1854 and his residence was erected by his father. His land is valuable because of its high cultivation and the improvements he has made upon it. It constitutes one of the fine and well developed farms of Knox township and the passing years bring him good harvests as the reward for the care and labor he bestows upon his fields.

ROBERT E. DAVIDSON.

Robert E. Davidson is identified with the business interests of Henderson through his conduct of a general merchandising establishment, in which he is meeting with merited success. He is a native of Knox county, born in Henderson township, March 18, 1876, a son of G. W. and Serepta (Baer) Davidson, the former of Irish descent, born near Springfield, Illinois, and the mother also born near that city. The father was for many years engaged in farming but he is now living retired in Henderson. More extended mention of him is made on another page of this volume.

Robert E. Davidson acquired his education in the common schools and when he reached years of manhood engaged in farming, the occupation to which he had been reared. After a few years, however, he abandoned agricultural pursuits and opened a general merchandising establishment, which has claimed his time and attention to the present time. He carries a stock of goods of the best quality and this, combined with his moderate prices and courteous treatment of his patrons, has built up a good business and made this one of the best known enterprises in this section of the county.

Mr. Davidson was married, September 29, 1898, to Miss Lola Dunbar, a daughter of G. W. and Eva (McElheny) Dunbar, old settlers of Knox county, the father being engaged in farming and he also operates a threshing machine in the summer seasons. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Davidson has been born one daughter, Doris.

Politically Mr. Davidson is independent. A public-spirited citizen, he has been called by his fellow townsmen to fill various positions of trust and responsibility, having served two terms as supervisor of the township, while he has also acted as township and village clerk of Henderson. Although yet a young man he has already achieved success in his chosen field of labor and undoubtedly the future holds in store for him still greater success.

JEPTHA BEALS HATHAWAY.

Jeptha Beals Hathaway, who is one of the most progressive agriculturists of Lynn township, was born March 23, 1860, in Galva, Illinois, his parents being Arthur Fields and Jane (Mowatt) Hathaway, the former a native of Berkshire county, Massachusetts, and the latter a native of Dundee, Scotland. The father's birth occurred on the 21st of October, 1820, and he came west at the early age of fifteen years with the intention of living with his brother in Michigan. Upon his arrival there he engaged in various occupations until 1850. In that year he left St. Joseph, Missouri, on the 8th of May with several friends from Pennsylvania for the west, arriving at Weavertown, California, on the 8th of August, 1850. In 1852, however, he returned east, going by way of the isthmus of Panama to New York city. Subsequently he went to Michigan, where he engaged in the lumber business with the J. Beidler & Brother Lumber Company, with headquarters at Muskegon. It was while he was thus engaged in business that on the 10th of May, 1855, he married Jane Mowatt and, on January 12, of the following year, left for Galva, Illinois. Here he engaged in the lumber business for eighteen years previous to removing with his family to Lynn township, Knox county, in 1874, where he farmed until 1883, when he returned to his late residence at Galva, where he spent the remainder of his life, his death occurring August 13, 1894. Mrs. Hathaway left her native country with her parents when she was but one year old and settled in Brockville, Canada. She was a daughter of John and Mary Mowatt and her death occurred at the age of sixty-five years, December 28, 1890. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway three besides the subject of this sketch survive: Celinda, who is the wife of Amos Barlow; Abbie; and Jane. All are residents of Galva.

After laying aside his text-books Jeptha B. Hathaway worked for his father on the home farm until the latter's death and subsequently, with Amos Barlow, his brother-in-law, he continued the cultivation of the home place. After his marriage he removed to the old loghouse which still exists on the father's farm time and attention to the present time. He carries a stock of goods of the best quality and this, combined with his moderate prices and courteous treatment of his patrons, has built up a good business and made this one of the best known enterprises in this section of the county.

MR. AND MRS. J. B. HATHAWAY

Mr. Davidson was married, September 29, 1898, to Miss Lola Dunbar, a daughter of G. W. and Eva (McElheny) Dunbar, old settlers of Knox county, the father being engaged in farming and he also operates a threshing machine in the summer seasons. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Davidson has been born one daughter, Doris.

Politically Mr. Davidson is independent. A public-spirited citizen, he has been called by his fellow townsmen to fill various positions of trust and responsibility, having served two terms as supervisor of the township, while he has also acted as township and village clerk of Henderson. Although yet a young man he has already achieved success in his chosen field of labor and undoubtedly the future holds in store for him still greater success.

JEPTHA BEALS HATHAWAY.

Jeptha Beals Hathaway, who is one of the most progressive agriculturists of Lynn township, was born March 23, 1860, in Galva, Illinois, his parents being Arthur Fields and Jane (Mowatt) Hathaway, the former a native of Berkshire county, Massachusetts, and the latter a native of Dundee, Scotland. The father's birth occurred on the 21st of October, 1820, and he came west at the early age of fifteen years with the intention of living with his brother in Michigan. Upon his arrival there he engaged in various occupations until 1850. In that year he left St. Joseph, Missouri, on the 8th of May with several friends from Pennsylvania for the west, arriving at Weavertown, California, on the 8th of August, 1850. In 1852, however, he returned east, going by way of the isthmus of Panama to New York city. Subsequently he went to Michigan, where he engaged in the lumber business with the J. Beidler & Brother Lumber Company, with headquarters at Muskegon. It was while he was thus engaged in business that on the 10th of May, 1855, he married Jane Mowatt and, on January 12, of the following year, left for Galva, Illinois. Here he engaged in the lumber business for eighteen years previous to removing with his family to Lynn township, Knox county, in 1874, where he farmed until 1883, when he returned to his late residence at Galva, where he spent the remainder of his life, his death occurring August 13, 1894. Mrs. Hathaway left her native country with her parents when she was but one year old and settled in Brockville, Canada. She was a daughter of John and Mary Mowatt and her death occurred at the age of sixty-five years, December 28, 1890. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway three besides the subject of this sketch survive: Celinda, who is the wife of Amos Barlow; Abbie; and Jane. All are residents of Galva.

After laying aside his text-books Jeptha B. Hathaway worked for his father on the home farm until the latter's death and subsequently, with Amos Barlow, his brother-in-law, he continued the cultivation of the home place. After his marriage he removed to the old loghouse which still exists on the father's farm and after nine years' residence there spent a year at Galva until the family estate was settled. At that time he came to his present farm, which is one of the most completely and modernly equipped and cultivated farms in this section. Among the many unusual improvements which he has added is his own electric power plant.

MR. AND MRS. J. B. HATHAWAY

On the 2d of March, 1886, Mr. Hathaway was married to Miss Edith Jones, whose birth occurred June 15, 1862, and who died March 30, 1902. She was a daughter of Walter N. and Adeline (James) Jones, both natives of England. The father, who is now deceased, after arriving in this country spent his life in Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Jones were the parents of seven children: Charles, an agriculturist of Galva; James, who is residing on his farm in Lynn township; Lotta, the wife of C. Mason, of St. Joseph, Missouri; George N., an auctioneer and stock-raiser of Lynn township; Hortense, who married F. Mason, of St. Joseph, Missouri; William, also residing in St. Joseph; and Edith, who was Mrs. Hathaway.

Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway were the parents of three children: Alta Adeline, whose birth occurred July 1, 1894; Howard Raymond, who was born August 27, 1899; and Walter Field, whose death occurred in infancy. Mr. Hathaway gives his political support to the republican party and, although he is thoroughly alive to the issues of the day and interested in all the measures and policies of his party, he has never desired office. He holds membership in the Knights of Pythias, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Yeomen, all of Galva. He has persevered in the pursuit of a persistent purpose and has gained a satisfactory reward. His life is exemplary in all respects and he has ever supported those interests which are calculated to uplift and benefit humanity, while his own high moral worth is deserving of highest commendation.

C. W. ROBERTSON.

One of the moving spirits in the commercial and industrial life of Abingdon is C. W. Robertson, vice-president of the American Sanitary Factory, in which he is a heavy stockholder. He is also director of the Abingdon State Bank, having been one of the original organizers of this institution. His investments in other local concerns testify to his progressive spirit toward the upbuilding of his home manufactories and his loyalty to the community ideals of growth and prosperity. Like many a successful man in our nation he began his career as a farmer, thus securing sufficient means to retire and live in ease on the proceeds of his toil.

Mr. C. W. Robertson was born in Warren county, Illinois, May 18, 1858. His ancestors were Scotch, having came from Scotland to the Carolinas and later settled in Kentucky, where his father, Isom Robertson, was born in Warren county. August 29, 1825, the latter came to Illinois with his people, who located in Warren county which remained his home until his removal to Abingdon in 1878. After that he resided for a time in Galesburg, but returned to Abingdon, where he now lives. The story of Mr. Robertson's rise is the story of many a pioneer who came to this raw prairie with determination to wrest from its soil the tribute that patient industry demands. In retrospect it seems comparatively easy to consider the laying out of a farm, where the soil is rich, and of improving the land and reaping rich harvests, but those who faced the problem in the days, when lack of good roads and facilities for transportation were huge obstacles to contend with, will appreciate the tremendous efforts attending the success of the early farmer. Mr. Robertson, however, had an added obstacle to handicap him early in his struggle, one that might have disheartened many a young man. Beginning with nothing he worked his way up until at length he was able to acquire possession of a farm of one hundred and sixty acres of land. After making his last payment on this, he had to forfeit the same for no fault of his own except over-confidence in a friend who betrayed his trust. Several other experiences of a similar nature taxed his courage and patience, but in the end success came to him and today his income permits him to live not only comfortably but in affluence. He spends his winters in California and his summers in Abingdon. He is a member of the Christian church and in politics is a stanch republican. Because of unforeseen circumstances that made it difficult for him to leave home, he did not enlist during the Civil war but hired a substitute who served for him. His wife, formerly Miss Louisa Richie, of German and French parentage, was born in New York city. Coming west she was married in Warren county, where she resided up to her death. She died in 1879 and was buried at Meriden. Eleven children were born by this union: Elizabeth, wife of Clinton Scoby, of St. Frances, Kansas; Emma F., the wife of Donald Lyman, of Abingdon; C. W. Robertson; Bailey, whose tragic death occurred in the Indian Territory, where his boat capsized while crossing the Spring river on a hunting and fishing trip and he was drowned; Glen I., who was kicked by a horse and killed, when only five years old; E. B., a ranchman in St. Frances, Kansas; L. H., a stockman living in Abingdon; Etta, the wife of G. B. Walker, of Warren county, Illinois; Lena, wife of Frank Marks, of Abingdon, Illinois; Alta, wife of Howard Smith, of Long Beach, California; and one child who died in infancy.

C. W. Robertson received his education in the district schools of Warren county and remained at home until he was twenty-four years of age. He then engaged in farming in Warren county, first on Pretty Prairie, where he remained six years; from there he went to Floyd township; and lastly settled on a farm in Berwick township. In 1900, he came to Abingdon to reside and now lives here during the winter, spending part of his summers on the Berwick farm. This is a large tract of valuable farm land consisting of four hundred and ninety acres utilized for purposes of raising stock and grain. In the summer of 1910, Mr. Robertson was cited to appear, in Washington, D. C., before the senatorial committee, headed by Senator Lodge, which was investigating the high cost of living. His testimony was desired in regard to the comparative cost of producing beef and pork during the last ten years, and, beside himself, there was only one other cattle feeder from Illinois invited before the committee. The senators were greatly appreciative of Mr. Robertson's clear and concise answers and figures, pertaining to the subject under investigation and heartily complimented him thereon.

In 1883, C. W. Robertson was united in marriage to Miss Addie Murphy, a native of Warren county. They are the parents of one son, born October 7, 1894, who is attending high school in Abingdon. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson are members of the Christian church. Mr. Robertson is actively interested in politics being a zealous republican. He has the distinction of being the only republican supervisor ever elected in Berwick township, Warren county, and has held other offices. He was elected mayor of Abingdon for one term, was for nine years a member of the school board, and for eight years has served on the Knox county republican central committee. In fraternal circles he is very popular being affiliated with numerous lodges. He has passed through all the chairs of the Odd Fellows in Abingdon; he was a trustee of the Abingdon Knights of Pythias; is a Mason, a member of the local lodge, in which he has held the office of treasurer; a worthy patron of the Order of the Eastern Star, of which his wife is an active member; and belongs to the Dramatic Order of the Knights of Khorassan and to the Elks lodge of Galesburg. In social as well as business circles his genial personality and spirit of good fellowship have won for him many warm friends.

GEORGE M. COLLINSON.

George M. Collinson, who is engaged in general farming and stock-raising in Lynn township, Knox county, was born on the 12th of April, 1846, in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania. His grandparents also were residents of that state for a long time and there their deaths occurred. The grandfather was killed by a stranger whom he was entertaining in his home, when he was ninety-nine years of age. This incident occurred near Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, where he was residing. After the murder the citizens took the matter in hand, and as a result of a careful search the guilty party was captured and made to pay the penalty for his crime. The parents of Mr. Collinson were Thomas and Hannah (Kirby) Collinson, both of whom were born in England, the former's birth occurring in Billington, East Redding, Yorkshire, on the 2d of May, 1798. He came to this country with his wife and two children, accompanied by his brother, on the 4th of January, 1830, locating in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, where he farmed until 1852, when he came to Knox county and settled upon a farm which adjoins that which his son now owns. He spent the remainder of his life in this county and died on the 28th of January, 1881. George Collinson was one of ten children born to his parents, three of whom are now living, the others being Benjamin F., of Page county, Iowa, and Louise, who is the wife of Thomas McClure. The youth and boyhood of George M. Collinson were marked by hard labor begun at an early age. When he was a lad of but nine years he was engaged by his father to drive the team and did general farming work which he continued until he was twenty-one years of age. On his eighth birthday he assisted his father in building the hedge fence which still surrounds the old farm. When he reached his majority he came to the farm upon which he is now living, and in the cultivation of which he has constantly been engaged. In addition to farming he carries on general stock-raising, and because of his hard work, scientific management and enterprising spirit, he has become one of the most prominent farmers in this section. The well equipped buildings with which he has supplied his property and the adequate machinery to carry on modern agricultural pursuits attest to some degree the prosperity which he is now enjoying.

Mr. Collinson is married to Miss Mary A. Murray, whose birth occurred on the 14th of March, 1852, in Abingdon, Illinois. She is a daughter of George W. and Eliza (Thompson) Murray, the former of whom was killed in the battle of Stone River in 1862, while he was serving as a member of Company G, in the Eighty-ninth Illinois Regular Volunteer Infantry. The mother's death occurred in 1907 when she was seventy-two years of age. They were the parents of one child, Mrs. Collinson. To Mr. and Mrs. Collinson five children have been born: Nettie B., who is the wife of John Keck, of Oklahoma, and who is the mother of three children; Mrs. Myrtle Riner, who is now the wife of John Goff of Lynn township, and who has three children; Isabell, who is married to George Goff, of Copley township and who has two children; Nellie, who married Phil Weinrich, of Winfield, Kansas; and Pearl, who is residing at home.

Mr. Collinson gives his political allegiance to the democratic party and he has been one of its active members and enthusiastic supporters since the rights of franchise were bestowed upon him. He held the office of assessor for two terms, being first elected in 1878, and he has served for three terms as justice of the peace of Lynn township. The prosperity which he now enjoys is due to his own untiring efforts and to his substantial industrious habits. He is known among his neighbors as a man who is ever willing to do not only that which will increase his own prosperity, but also that which will aid in the development and general welfare of the community.

P. E. TENNERY.

P. E. Tennery, who is one of the capable agriculturists of Elba township, Knox county, owns and operates a fine farm of two hundred and forty acres located four and a half miles northeast of Yates City. His birth occurred on this place in 1869, his parents being N. H. and Samantha (Williams) Tennery. The father was one of the pioneer settlers having located in Knox county in 1852, and here he engaged in farming during the entire period of his active life. During the early years of his residence he operated a place a little below the homestead of our subject. Subsequently he located here and spent the remainder of his life on this place, his death occurring on the 15th of February, 1911, at the age of eighty-eight years. He met with gratifying success in his undertakings and made many and extensive improvements on his property, while he brought the land under high cultivation. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Tennery there were born ten children, six of whom are living.

The education of P. E. Tennery was obtained in the common schools of Yates City, and while pursuing his studies he was also assisting with the work of the farm. After leaving school he gave his entire attention to the cultivation of the home farm, first under the supervision of his father, but later he assumed the management of the place, which he subsequently purchased. He now owns two hundred and forty acres of productive land that he devotes to general farming, and as he is practical and progressive in his methods he is meet-modern agricultural pursuits attest to some degree the prosperity which he is now enjoying.

MR. AND MRS. P. E. TENNERY

Mr. Collinson is married to Miss Mary A. Murray, whose birth occurred on the 14th of March, 1852, in Abingdon, Illinois. She is a daughter of George W. and Eliza (Thompson) Murray, the former of whom was killed in the battle of Stone River in 1862, while he was serving as a member of Company G, in the Eighty-ninth Illinois Regular Volunteer Infantry. The mother's death occurred in 1907 when she was seventy-two years of age. They were the parents of one child, Mrs. Collinson. To Mr. and Mrs. Collinson five children have been born: Nettie B., who is the wife of John Keck, of Oklahoma, and who is the mother of three children; Mrs. Myrtle Riner, who is now the wife of John Goff of Lynn township, and who has three children; Isabell, who is married to George Goff, of Copley township and who has two children; Nellie, who married Phil Weinrich, of Winfield, Kansas; and Pearl, who is residing at home.

Mr. Collinson gives his political allegiance to the democratic party and he has been one of its active members and enthusiastic supporters since the rights of franchise were bestowed upon him. He held the office of assessor for two terms, being first elected in 1878, and he has served for three terms as justice of the peace of Lynn township. The prosperity which he now enjoys is due to his own untiring efforts and to his substantial industrious habits. He is known among his neighbors as a man who is ever willing to do not only that which will increase his own prosperity, but also that which will aid in the development and general welfare of the community.

P. E. TENNERY.

P. E. Tennery, who is one of the capable agriculturists of Elba township, Knox county, owns and operates a fine farm of two hundred and forty acres located four and a half miles northeast of Yates City. His birth occurred on this place in 1869, his parents being N. H. and Samantha (Williams) Tennery. The father was one of the pioneer settlers having located in Knox county in 1852, and here he engaged in farming during the entire period of his active life. During the early years of his residence he operated a place a little below the homestead of our subject. Subsequently he located here and spent the remainder of his life on this place, his death occurring on the 15th of February, 1911, at the age of eighty-eight years. He met with gratifying success in his undertakings and made many and extensive improvements on his property, while he brought the land under high cultivation. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Tennery there were born ten children, six of whom are living.

The education of P. E. Tennery was obtained in the common schools of Yates City, and while pursuing his studies he was also assisting with the work of the farm. After leaving school he gave his entire attention to the cultivation of the home farm, first under the supervision of his father, but later he assumed the management of the place, which he subsequently purchased. He now owns two hundred and forty acres of productive land that he devotes to general farming, and as he is practical and progressive in his methods he is meeting with good results. In connection with the cultivation of his fields he is breeding and raising stock, which undertakings result in remunerative returns.

MR. AND MRS. P. E. TENNERY

For his wife and helpmate Mr. Tennery chose Miss Minnie Phares of Brimfield township, Peoria county, and they have become the parents of two children, George Edgar and Geneva May.

Fraternally Mr. Tennery is a member of the Woodmen and his wife attends the Methodist Episcopal church. In his political views he is a democrat, and is now discharging the duties of clerk of the school board. He has spent his entire life in the community where he is now residing and is held in the highest respect both as a business man and a citizen, as the principles governing him in both his public and private relations have ever been found to be above question.

ANDREW MAHOLLAND.

Among the foreign-born residents of Knox county, Illinois, who during the dark days of the Civil war came loyally to the support of their adopted country is numbered Andrew Maholland, who throughout the period of his residence in the United States has ever manifested the same loyalty to her welfare in his citizenship. He is a native of Ireland, his birth occurring in Port Stewart, County Derry, and his parents were Andrew and Jane (Stewart) Maholland. At an early day the family emigrated to Glasgow, Scotland, and there four members of the family, the mother, two daughters and a son, passed away as the result of cholera. Shortly afterward the father with his three remaining sons crossed the Atlantic to America, landing at Quebec, Canada, where they resided for a year. At the expiration of that period they crossed the border into the United States and came direct to Knox county, Illinois, where Andrew Maholland, Sr., carried on farming until his death.

When yet a lad in years Andrew Maholland, of this review, took up farming on his own account and he was thus engaged until the outbreak of the Civil war, when, on the 10th of August, 1861, he enlisted for service as a private in Company D, Seventh Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, with which he served until February 14, 1863, when he was honorably discharged and returned home. Not content to remain there, however, while the country still needed his services, he reenlisted in the same company in January, 1865. He continued with his command until, being wounded, he was taken to the hospital, and was finally mustered out at Nashville, Tennessee. He had served in many important engagements, including the battle of Corinth, and his was a most honorable and creditable military record.

After the close of his military service Mr. Maholland returned to Knox county, and with the exception of five years spent in Missouri has since continued to make this county the field of his business activity. His entire attention has been given to agricultural pursuits, and that substantial success has attended his efforts is indicated by the excellent condition of his home place which, under his wise direction and capable management, has been brought under a high state of cultivation. He has equipped his farm with modern conveniences and accessories and the up-to-date and progressive methods which he employs is an indication of the fact that he keeps abreast of the advancement which is being made in this line of activity as well as along other lines of business endeavor.

On the 7th of November, 1881, Mr. Maholland was united in marriage to Sarah Ogden, who was born in Ohio, a daughter of David and Rachel (Freeze) Ogden. The parents, who are both deceased, came to Illinois at an early day and here the father was engaged as a millwright throughout his remaining days. The religious belief of Mr. Maholland is that of the Methodist church, while his fraternal relations are with Abingdon Post, No. 58, G. A. R. In politics he has ever been a republican, remaining a strong advocate of the party which was the support of the nation during the dark days of the Civil war. His life has been actuated by a public-spirited interest in his adopted country and its welfare, and in all matters pertaining to the upbuilding and development of the immediate community in which he resides, his influence is ever upon the side of progress and advancement. With him industry, diligence and perseverance have constituted the guiding posts of life, bringing him to the creditable position which he now occupies among the prosperous and substantial residents of Cedar township.

MRS. ANNA O. BRINK KRANS.

Mrs. Anna O. Brink Krans is the widow of George E. Krans, who was a farmer of Walnut Grove township, where he died January 13, 1908. The family has long been prominent in this part of the county and Mrs. Krans is well known here. She was born September 19, 1851, in Uggelbo, Sweden, and came to America when eighteen years of age, taking up her abode upon the farm on which she now resides. She was employed as a domestic in the neighborhood until her marriage and in 1869 she became the wife of George E. Krans, who was born in Uggelbo, Sweden, August 19, 1847, a son of Eric and Anna (Olson) Krans. It was in the year 1855 that his grandfather came with his wife and family to Illinois, settling first in Wataga. The members of the family followed farming all their lives, first at the little town then called Log City. They later came to Walnut Grove township in 1864, settling upon a tract of land which was then improved with a small log house. A short time later he replaced this by a frame residence, to which he afterward added and further improved. In time he converted his land into rich and productive fields and resided upon that place almost to the time of his death. He was born June 13, 1807, and died in 1897 at the venerable age of ninety years. On the 4th of March, of the same year, his wife passed away, being then eighty-five years of age. Both were members of the Lutheran church and they were honored and respected because of their sterling worth and also by reason of the fact that they were numbered among the pioneer settlers of the township, who contributed much to its development and improvement.

Their son, George E. Krans, shared with the family in the usual experiences, hardships and trials of pioneer life and aided in the arduous task of developing new land. He had had broad and practical experience as a farmer, when he was married and began farming on his own account. He and his wife began housekeeping upon what is still known as the Krans homestead with the grandparents, who two years before their death removed to Altona, where they passed away, being laid to rest in Walnut Grove cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Krans worked earnestly, diligently and indefatigably to gain a start, and success eventually crowned their labors, making them owners of one of the fine farms of the northern part of the county. As the years passed by, several children were added to the household. The first son, Victor, born March 11, 1871, is now manager of a creamery at Victoria, Illinois. He married Esther Carlson and they have two sons, Carl and Paul. Theodore Charles, born March 6, 1873, is a carpenter of Victoria. John Alf, born February 25, 1875, in Lynn township, married Emily Hallerstrum and they have three children, Harold, Donald and Franklin. Oscar Peter, born October 7, 1877, manages the home farm. He is well known in the community as an enterprising young business man, also as a faithful member of the Methodist church of Victoria and as a stalwart supporter of the republican party. David and Jonathan were twins, born April 23, 1881; the former a resident of Wheaton, Minnesota, was married in 1911. Julius, born July 11, 1888, Lawrence Otto, born March 25, 1890, and Laura Ottilia, the twin sister of Lawrence, are all at home and the last named is managing the household for her mother. She is a member of the Epworth League. One child, Mandel R., born May 25, 1893, died on the 8th of August of the same year.

George E. Krans gave his political allegiance to the republican party and held some of the township offices. He was very active as a worker for his party, for he believed firmly in its principles and earnestly sought its success. He served for three terms as a member of the school board and was a stalwart champion of the cause of education. The greater part of his life was passed in Illinois, for he was only eight years of age when brought to Knox county. For fifty-three years he lived to witness its growth and development and was always interested in what was accomplished and in as far as possible aided in the work of progress and improvement. He was always straightforward and honorable in his business dealings and his fellow townsmen learned to know that what he promised he would do. The Krans family has long been a leading one in the northern part of the county and their friends are many.

SILAS POTTS.

Silas Potts, one of the very successful agriculturists of Indian Point township, was born in Fulton county, Illinois, on May 10, 1859. He is a son of Lewis and Emily (Bodwell) Potts, natives of Ohio, who were married in Illinois. When he first came to this state Mr. Potts located in the vicinity of London Mills, Fulton county, where he engaged in farming until his death in 1895. The mother passed away in 1903. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Potts numbered eight children: Alexander and Caroline, both of whom are deceased; Silas and Cyrus, twins, the former our subject, and the latter a resident of Abingdon, Illinois;

Florence, the wife of Sidney Smith, of Fulton county, Illinois; Cora, who is unmarried and living at London Mills; and two who died in infancy.

The early years in the life of Silas Potts were passed in the unvaried routine that characterizes the rural districts. His winters were largely devoted to pursuing his education in the common schools located in the vicinity of his home, while the summer months were occupied with such tasks as devolve upon the farmer lad, his duties and responsibilities increasing with the passing years. Having mastered the common branches and being familiar with the methods of practical farming when he had attained his majority, he left the parental roof and began to make his own fortune. For nine years thereafter he followed the vocation of farming in his native county and then removed to Knox county. He first located near Abingdon, where for eleven years he farmed as a renter. Under his capable supervision and intelligent application financial returns mounted up and at the expiration of that period his circumstances were such, that he could purchase a place of his own and he bought his present homestead. This property contains one hundred and forty acres of land on section 28, Indian Point township. The value of the farm, which is in a high state of cultivation, has been greatly enhanced by the substantially constructed and well kept buildings erected upon it and is one of the most attractive farms in the township. Progressive in his methods, yet conservative in his ideas, Mr. Potts' efforts have always been so intelligently directed that he has succeeded in realizing substantial returns upon the expenditure of his energies. He is now recognized as one of the prosperous and capable agriculturists of the community, whose success is the well merited reward of personal endeavor.

Mr. Potts' plans for a home of his own had their consummation in his marriage in 1888 to Miss Mary C. Childs, who is a native of Fulton county, this state. One son, Raymond, now twenty-two years of age has been born of this union. After completing the common-school course, he entered Brown's Business College of Galesburg, from which institution he was subsequently graduated. His attention has been directed to commercial pursuits and he is now a resident of Abingdon.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Potts hold membership in the Christian church, and fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, being affiliated with the St. Augustine Lodge, and the Royal Americans. His political rights Mr. Potts has always exercised in support of the men and measures of the democratic party, but he has never been an office seeker. During the twenty-two years of his residence in Knox county he has become quite well known and numbers among its citizens many loyal friends.

EDWARD DAVISON.

The superiority of business opportunities and advantages in America is fully realized by Edward Davison, who, on coming to the new world when a young man, worked earnestly and persistently and eventually gained a competency that now enables him to live in honorable retirement in a comfortable home in Henderson. Mr. Davison was born in Northumberland county, England, September 9, 1839, a son of Robert and Mary (Charlton) Davison, who were likewise natives of that country, where the father was engaged in the shoe business.

Edward Davison acquired his education in the common schools of his native country and after completing his studies began learning the shoemaker's trade, which he followed there for some time. When a young man, foreseeing that there was no future for him in England, and having heard and read a great deal about the freedom and the opportunity for advancement in this country, he decided to try his fortune in the new world. Accordingly he set sail for America and soon after coming to this country he located in Henderson in 1864, where he resumed his work at the shoemaker's trade. In 1871, having saved a sum of money, he purchased ninety acres of land, which he improved and cultivated during the remainder of his active life. He has now put aside all business cares, however, and is living retired in a pleasant home in Henderson, surrounded by the comforts of life and a host of warm friends.

Just prior to his emigration to the new world, Mr. Davison was married, in June, 1864, the lady of his choice being Miss Jane Davison, a daughter of John and Alice (Stobert) Davison, both natives of England. The former was a blacksmith by trade, following that pursuit throughout his entire life. Both he and his wife are now deceased. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Davison of this review have been born eight children but only five now survive. Minnie, the eldest, has passed away. John is the next in order of birth. Joseph has also departed this life. Alice is the wife of James A. Miller, a farmer of Seward county, Nebraska, by whom she has two children, Glen and Harvey. Lizzie remains at home with her parents. Edward is deceased. Nellie is the wife of E. G. Pitman, a farmer of Kansas and they have four living children, Fannie, Phillip, Helen, and Alice, while Gladys, the fourth of the family, is deceased. Ray, the youngest of the family, and now following railroading, lives in Galesburg, is married and has two children, Theodore and Wilmarth.

Mr. Davison has always given his political support to the men and measures of the republican party. He has taken an active part in public affairs, having for more than thirty years served as township treasurer, a fact which is indicative of his honesty and trustworthiness. He also filled the office of supervisor for more than five years and served as highway commissioner for a decade, while at the present time he is serving as assessor for the town. Through his public and private life he has exerted an immeasurable influence in the community in which he has so long made his home and to know him is to respect and honor him, for he possesses those sterling qualities of manhood which never fail to command the highest regard.

CHARLES ABRAHAMSON.

Charles Abrahamson, foreman for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, residing at Altona, was born November 20, 1851, in Jönköping län, Sweden. His grandfather, Swan Abrahamson, was a miller by trade and also served as custodian of the parish church and leader of the church choir. His father, Swan Abrahamson, Jr., was born in Sweden in 1805 and there learned the miller's trade, but during the greater part of his life followed farming in Sweden and also acted as custodian of the Swedish Lutheran church. He married Tina Morganson, who was born in 1810 and was a daughter of Swan Morganson. The death of Swan Abrahamson, Jr., occurred in 1874, while his wife survived him until 1879. In their family were eight children, of whom three are now living: Charles; John, who is a resident of Kewanee, Illinois; and Stena, the wife of John Johnson, of Iowa.

The educational opportunities of Charles Abrahamson were quite limited owing to the necessity of providing for his own support at an early age. He followed the miller's trade for four years, working in the employ of others, and in 1872, upon attaining his majority, came alone to the new world, making his way to Bureau county, Illinois, where he engaged in farming for three years. He then took up railroading, which he followed for seven years, and in 1882 he came to Altona. He has been in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad for thirty-six years and has been foreman for twenty-nine years. He is one of the oldest in the service of the company on the Illinois division and his faithfulness and capability are indicated in his long retention by the company.

Mr. Abrahamson was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Swanson, who was born in the same part of Sweden as her husband, her natal day being May 4, 1847. She was a daughter of Swan Peterson and came to America a year after the arrival of Mr. Abrahamson, settling in Bureau county, Illinois, where they were married. Unto them have been born six children. August, who is now a train dispatcher at Aurora, Illinois, married Teckla Thumrod, of Sterling, Illinois, and has two children, Ruth and Malcolm. Helma is the wife of Alf Norene and has three children, Edna, Theodore and Harold. Oscar, an operator at Galesburg, lost his first wife, Mrs. Grace Abrahamson, who died leaving a son, Clarence, who has been reared by his grandfather, while the father married again, Frances Winrod, of Galesburg, becoming his wife. Herbert, who is an operator on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy at Galesburg, married Delia Hanson and has three children, Arthur, Delos and Erma. Albert, the youngest of the family, is now nineteen years of age. Emma died when but nine months of age.

The parents are members of the Swedish Lutheran church of Altona and are prominent representatives of the people of their nationality who have done so much for the upbuilding and improvement of the northern part of the county.

EDWIN P. WILLIAMSON.

Equally capable of pursuing business enterprises and farming, Edwin P. Williamson has established for himself a reputation that is known throughout Knox county. Agriculturists know him for his success both in general farming and stock-raising. He was born March 13, 1870, on the old homestead, where he now resides and where the old home still stands. His father, William Williamson, was a native of Sweden, born October 10, 1833. When seventeen years old he accompanied his parents, Olof and Margaret Olofson to America.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM WILLIAMSON

miller's trade, but during the greater part of his life followed farming in Sweden and also acted as custodian of the Swedish Lutheran church. He married Tina Morganson, who was born in 1810 and was a daughter of Swan Morganson. The death of Swan Abrahamson, Jr., occurred in 1874, while his wife survived him until 1879. In their family were eight children, of whom three are now living: Charles; John, who is a resident of Kewanee, Illinois; and Stena, the wife of John Johnson, of Iowa.

The educational opportunities of Charles Abrahamson were quite limited owing to the necessity of providing for his own support at an early age. He followed the miller's trade for four years, working in the employ of others, and in 1872, upon attaining his majority, came alone to the new world, making his way to Bureau county, Illinois, where he engaged in farming for three years. He then took up railroading, which he followed for seven years, and in 1882 he came to Altona. He has been in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad for thirty-six years and has been foreman for twenty-nine years. He is one of the oldest in the service of the company on the Illinois division and his faithfulness and capability are indicated in his long retention by the company.

Mr. Abrahamson was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Swanson, who was born in the same part of Sweden as her husband, her natal day being May 4, 1847. She was a daughter of Swan Peterson and came to America a year after the arrival of Mr. Abrahamson, settling in Bureau county, Illinois, where they were married. Unto them have been born six children. August, who is now a train dispatcher at Aurora, Illinois, married Teckla Thumrod, of Sterling, Illinois, and has two children, Ruth and Malcolm. Helma is the wife of Alf Norene and has three children, Edna, Theodore and Harold. Oscar, an operator at Galesburg, lost his first wife, Mrs. Grace Abrahamson, who died leaving a son, Clarence, who has been reared by his grandfather, while the father married again, Frances Winrod, of Galesburg, becoming his wife. Herbert, who is an operator on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy at Galesburg, married Delia Hanson and has three children, Arthur, Delos and Erma. Albert, the youngest of the family, is now nineteen years of age. Emma died when but nine months of age.

The parents are members of the Swedish Lutheran church of Altona and are prominent representatives of the people of their nationality who have done so much for the upbuilding and improvement of the northern part of the county.

EDWIN P. WILLIAMSON.

Equally capable of pursuing business enterprises and farming, Edwin P. Williamson has established for himself a reputation that is known throughout Knox county. Agriculturists know him for his success both in general farming and stock-raising. He was born March 13, 1870, on the old homestead, where he now resides and where the old home still stands. His father, William Williamson, was a native of Sweden, born October 10, 1833. When seventeen years old he accompanied his parents, Olof and Margaret Olofson to America.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM WILLIAMSON

William Williamson was one of six children that grew up, namely: Jonas, who died in 1893; Peter, who lives at Chariton, Iowa; Margaret, the wife of W. C. Olson; Moses, who lives in Galesburg; and John, who died in the Civil war, a soldier from Knox county. They located in Sparta township, Knox county, Illinois, in 1850, where the father engaged in farming. In 1854 William Williamson bought a part of the farm on which his son Edwin now lives and which has remained in the family ever since. He was a remarkable man, a fact patent enough, when one considers the manifold business and commercial enterprises in which he was the prime initiator and which were closely connected with the development and growth of the economic life of varied and widely scattered communities at various times. He conducted a general mercantile business in Moline, Illinois; he owned a flour mill at Clay Center, Kansas; in partnership with his brother he owned the Wataga Flour Mill, one of the oldest flour mills in Knox county; he was a stockholder in the Galesburg National Bank and in the Bank of Galesburg; with his son, L. O. Williamson, he managed a store at Galesburg and gave liberally for the encouragement of other business enterprises. He was a charter member of the Swedish Lutheran church at Wataga. In politics he was a loyal worker for the republican party and served as school trustee and as commissioner of highways. In 1903 he removed from the farm in Sparta township to Wataga, where he died on February 13, 1906. His wife, the mother of Edwin P. Williamson, was formerly Katharine Olson, who was born in Sweden, April 7, 1836, and died December 11, 1908. Her father, Lars Olson, brought his family to America in 1849 and settled in Sparta township. Mrs. Williamson was one of a family of four, namely: Martha, the wife of Oliver Stream, of Sparta township; Lars W. Olson, who died in 1907; and William, who died in the Civil war, a soldier from Knox county.

On September 28, 1855, William Williamson married Katharine Olson, a daughter of Lars and Katharine Olson, and to them were born ten children, of whom only five are living at the present time. Mary J. was married to A. B. Danielson on October 22, 1875. She died on the 5th of February, 1885, leaving three children, Arthur, William and George. J. Henry married Natalie Byloff on March 22, 1894, and in their family are five children, George, Grace, Raymond, Harold and Louise. M. Amelia was united in marriage on September 3, 1885, to the Rev. A. F. Nelson. Her demise took place on the 26th of January, 1890, and she is survived by two children, Blenda and Ernst. Lars O. married Mary C. Swanson on September 17, 1885. He died December 30, 1891, and his widow survived him until June 16, 1902. Amanda C. is the fifth in order of birth. Martha E. passed away January 5, 1882. The next in order of birth is Edwin P., whose name appears at the head of this review. George E. died February 12, 1894. Frederick L. was married on April 11, 1900, to Miss Daisy V. Wickstrom and they are the parents of three children, Maurice, Martha and Ingaborg. Alvin L., the youngest member of the family, married on December 1, 1909, Miss Lena McKee. On September 28, 1905, Mr. and Mrs. Williamson celebrated the fiftieth Anniversary of their wedding. The immediate family and a number of distant relatives and devoted friends gathered at the old farm home round the festive board and later on a group picture of the golden wedding guests was taken, which appears in connection with this sketch. Later in the afternoon two receptions were held at the town home by the worthy couple, which were largely attended.

After the usual schooling in the elementary branches taught in the district schools, Edwin P. Williamson began his career as a clerk in his father's store in Moline. He remained there two years and in 1889 went home and farmed for the next four years. At the death of his brother George he took charge of the Wataga Flour Mill, which he managed successfully for two years. He then engaged again in farming in Henderson township, where he remained four years, until in 1903 he removed to the old homestead in Sparta township. Here he has lived since that time, taking charge of the management of the farm when his father retired and continuing the work after his death. His agricultural labors have met with unusual success, a fact attested by the flourishing condition of the farm and the generous profits which accrue therefrom. He is also a director of the Wataga State Bank.

On March 22, 1899, Miss Lavinnie E. Olson gave her hand in marriage to Edwin P. Williamson. She was born in 1871, in Sparta township, Knox county. Her father was Jonas Olson, a native of Sweden, who came to this country in 1856 and made his home in Sparta township, east of Wataga. His death occurred in 1909. His wife, the mother of Mrs. Williamson, was Anna Catherine Danielson before her marriage. She was born May 22, 1852, and died in 1881. She is a daughter of Andrew and Betsy (Brita) Danielson, of whom the latter is still living, being in her eighty-sixth year.

To Mr. and Mrs. Williamson were born the following children: Eva Catherine and Andrew William, twins, deceased; Ruth Amelia, born January 27, 1907; and Amanda Pauline, born May 16, 1909. Mr. Williamson and his wife are members of the Swedish Lutheran church of Wataga, in which he holds the office of trustee. His political preference is for the republican party. He has served as a member of the school board two terms and for two years was highway commissioner. Ever interested in the welfare of the community, he spares no efforts in promoting its advancement and encouraging its progressive spirit, which is one of its marked characteristics.

PETER McKISSOCK.

Peter McKissock is a farmer and mail agent of Walnut Grove township. He was born in Wistonshire, Scotland, on November 24, 1848, and traces his ancestry back to David McKissock, his great-grandfather, who was a farmer of that county. He married a member of the McGaw family and they became parents of Hendry McKissock, who was cavalryman during the Napoleonic wars. He, too, followed farming as his life work and passed away in 1870 at the advanced age of eighty-four years. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Jeanette McWilliam, died in 1856 at the age of sixty-five years. Their son, James McKissock, father of Peter McKissock of this review, was engaged in the dairy business and in farming. He married Elizabeth Hogg, who died in 1850, when but twenty-two years of age, leaving Peter McKissock an only child. The father afterward married again, his second union being with Sarah Pringle, who is still living in Scotland. By the second marriage there were two sons and one daughter, all of whom yet reside in the land of the heather. The father, James McKissock, passed away in 1880 at the age of sixty-six years.

Following his mother's death Peter McKissock went to live with his grandmother and after her demise spent his days with a cousin until he came to America in 1871. He made his way first to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where he was employed at general work in a lead factory. He was next engaged in a glass warehouse, where he continued until he came to Knox county, Illinois, in 1876. He located at Altona as manager of the McIntosh farm, remaining in charge for two years. He afterward rented a part of the farm and cultivated it for five years and later he came to his present home farm, where he now carries on general agricultural pursuits. It is a well developed property of one hundred acres and he has brought his fields under a high state of cultivation.

In 1877 Mr. McKissock was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Lawrence, who was born in Beaver, Pennsylvania, and is a daughter of Dr. Milton Lawrence, who served several terms as associate judge of Beaver county, Pennsylvania, and was married to Miss Sarah McFerran.

Mr. McKissock is a member of the Presbyterian church of Oneida and a very active worker thereof. For years he has served as one of the elders of the church and was formerly clerk of the sessions of the Presbyterian church of Altona. For nine years he has been superintendent of the Sunday school of Walnut Grove township and he does everything in his power to promote the growth of the church and its kindred interests. In 1910 he made a visit to his old home in Scotland, where he remained for a period of two months. While en route he visited the world's Sunday school convention at Washington, to which he was sent as a delegate, having been appointed by the state committee of the state association. In politics he is a republican and on the 16th of November, 1902, he was made rural mail carrier out of Altona and has since served in that connection. He was also elected justice of the peace of Walnut Grove township, which position he filled for four years, and he has also served on the Altona library board, having been one of its first directors and was one of the book committee that put in the first books for the library. His cooperation can always be counted upon to further any progressive public movement and his labors are a substantial element for growth and improvement. His own life is actuated by high ideals and those who know him entertain for him the warm regard which is ever given in recognition of honorable, upright manhood

---

DR. FRANK CHAPMAN.

Dr. Frank Chapman, who for the past twelve years has been successfully engaged in the practice of osteopathy in Galesburg, was born in Spring Grove township, Warren county, Illinois, on the 5th of May, 1871. He is a son of A. A. and Ann M. (Buck) Chapman, natives of the state of New York and the parents of three children: Norman Ward, who is living in Portland, Oregon; Isa, the wife of Dr. Charles Owens of Chattanooga, Tennessee; and Frank, our subject. A. A. Chapman was reared in Cayuga county, New York, and there he engaged in agricultural pursuits, after leaving school, until he was twenty-two years of age. In 1856 he left the Empire state and came to Illinois, locating in Warren county, where for many years he was actively engaged in farming. He passed away in Galesburg in 1908, at the age of seventy-four years, but the mother is still living although she has celebrated the seventy-fifth anniversary of her birth. The paternal grandparents were Orson and Rebecca (Gifford) Chapman, whose family numbered eight: Orson G., Olean, Alexander A., Harriet, Sophia, Kate, Abbie and Esther. The grandfather was a native of Connecticut, but he subsequently removed to the state of New York, where he engaged in farming until age compelled his retirement. He passed away when he was seventy-six, but the grandmother was eighty-eight at the time of her death. The maternal grandparents were Norman and Maria Buck, and to them were born six daughters: Adeline, Allura, Emily, Ann M., Elizabeth and Ellen. Mr. Buck was in middle life when called to his final rest, but she lived to attain the venerable age of seventy-five years.

The youthful years of Dr. Frank Chapman were passed upon the farm, where he was born in Warren county. At the usual age he entered the district schools but later went to Lombard College, where he was prepared for the State University. After leaving the latter institution he returned to the farm, devoting his entire time and attention to agricultural pursuits until 1897. In the latter year together with his wife he went to Kirksville, Missouri, where they studied osteopathy. They were awarded their degrees in February, 1899, and immediately thereafter returned to Illinois, establishing an office in Galesburg that they have ever since maintained. Both Dr. Chapman and his wife are very well equipped for their work in every way, their preliminary preparation having been most thorough as well as their professional course. They are practical and also progressive in their ideas, and have most ably and satisfactorily demonstrated their skill during the period of their residence in Galesburg. Their efforts have met with very good results and they have succeeded in building up a large and lucrative practice, many of their patients representing the best families of the city.

On the 6th of November, 1895, Dr. Chapman was married to Miss Ada P. Hinckley, a native of Galesburg and a daughter of Charles A. and Clarissa N. (Root) Hinckley. Dr. Ada Chapman was reared in this city, and after completing the public schools she entered Knox College, from which institution she was graduated in 1891. She subsequently taught in the training school of Galesburg and also in the country schools until her marriage. Her parents were natives of the state of New York, her father having come from Elmira and her mother from Camden. Mrs. Hinckley was one of the pioneers of Galesburg, having accompanied her father on his removal here in 1836. She has now attained the age of eighty years, and has passed practically her entire life in this city. Mr. Hinckley came west in 1846, locating in Knoxville. He was a well known farmer of Knox county, but was living retired at the time of his death, which occurred on the 15th of October, 1910, in Galesburg, at the age of eighty-five years. The paternal grandparents of Dr. Ada Chapman were Alfred and Eliza (Stanley) Hinckley, who migrated here in the pioneer period and lived to attain a ripe old age, he being eighty-seven at the time of his death. Six children were born to them: Charles A., Mary E., George W., William S.,

Harriet and Francis E. The maternal grandparents were Riley and Lavinia (Butler) Root. They were natives of the state of New York, and resided at Camden, that state, until her death, when he removed to Knox county, where he passed his latter years. She was quite young at the time of her death, but he lived to the age of seventy-six. Five children were born to them, but only two lived to attain maturity: Clarissa Noble and Dency E.

Fraternally Dr. Frank Chapman is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, while his political allegiance is given to the republican party. Although Dr. Frank Chapman is one of the public-spirited and progressive citizens of Galesburg, always being ready to assist in forwarding every movement that he deems at all likely to redound to the benefit of the community at large, he does not prominently participate in political affairs. He feels that the duties and responsibilities of his profession make it practically obligatory for him to devote his entire time and attention to his practice, in which he is meeting with such excellent success.

SUMMERFIELD MOATS.

Summerfield Moats, who for the past fifteen years has been living retired in Hermon, has since his early youth been identified with the agricultural interests of Knox county. His birth occurred in Clinton county, Ohio, on the 8th of July, 1845, his parents being Joseph and Hannah (James) Moats, natives of Maryland, the father having been born in 1794 and the mother in 1801. Agricultural pursuits always engaged the attention of Mr. Moats, who took up his residence in Ohio with his family during the pioneer days. After living there for some years he again started westward, Illinois being his destination. Knox county was then but sparsely settled, and contained large tracts of government land, covered with native timber, while there were acres of prairie still unbroken. Mr. Moats bought one hundred and ninety-three acres of land, erecting thereon the necessary buildings and together with his wife began the hardships and privations of pioneer life. Their courage never faltered and while he was busily engaged in converting his place into a productive farm, she was lending him every assistance by her capable direction of the household affairs and the rearing of her children. They continued to live on their homestead until their death, having wielded an influence in the community that forwarded its permanent development toward the highest standards of citizenship and social life. In their family were thirteen children, five of whom are still living. The youngest member of the family is the son Summerfield, our subject, and the eldest now living the daughter, Cordelia, who makes her home in Hermon. The others in order of birth are as follows: Bennett, who is a resident of Colorado City, Colorado; Josephus, also living in Hermon; and Martin, who makes his home in Iowa. One son, Luther, now deceased, was a soldier in the Civil war.

It was in the district schools of his native county that Summerfield Moats received his introduction to the elements of English learning. The work there begun was completed after the family located in Knox county, following which he turned his entire attention to farming. From his earliest boyhood he was trained for the work which he so successfully followed during the entire period of his active career. About fifteen years ago he withdrew from the work of the fields, to the plowing, planting and harvesting of which he had for more than a quarter of a century devoted his energies. A man of determination and purpose his sound judgment and practical methods enabled him to retire, and he and his wife are now living in Hermon, enjoying the comfort and ease to which their early toil so justly entitles them.

Knoxville was the scene in 1871 of the marriage of Mr. Moats and Miss Emma Pettingill, who was born in Iowa, a daughter of Horace Pettingill, a farmer. He is now deceased as is also the mother, Mrs. Moats being the only surviving member of her family with the exception of a half-brother. To Mr. and Mrs. Moats were born six children, as follows: L. C., of Colorado City, Colorado; S. E., of Monmouth, Illinois; L. Edna Nelson, of Los Angeles, California; Blanche Kinney, of Galesburg, Illinois; N. S.; and R. L., who is connected with the Galesburg Cornice Works, of Galesburg, Illinois.

His political allegiance Mr. Moats has always accorded to the democratic party, but he never actively participated in township governmental affairs. Mrs. Moats is a member of the Christian church, but he is not identified with any denomination. He was a member of the Odd Fellows fraternity, belonging to Hermon Lodge, No. —, I. O. O. F., the principles of this organization always having served as a guide in the direction of his life.

ALECK O. DONASON.

Aleck O. Donason was one of the well known and highly successful agriculturists of Maquon township, owning at the time of his death four hundred acres of fine land. He was born in Belmont county, Ohio, on the 10th of October, 1834. When a lad of six years he accompanied his parents who removed from Ohio to Illinois, locating in Knox county in 1840. Here he spent the remainder of his life with the exception of one year when he was in Ohio.

In the acquirement of an education Aleck O. Donason attended the common schools, after the completion of which he entered Lombard College at Galesburg. Reared on a farm, naturally he chose agriculture for his vocation when ready to begin his independent career. His first purchase of land was an eighty-acre tract, upon which he subsequently erected a fine brick residence, where he lived until his death. A man of tireless energy and keen judgment he so intelligently directed his operations, that he met with good financial returns and extended his holdings from time to time until they aggregated four hundred acres.

On the 11th of March, 1853, Mr. Donason was united in marriage to Miss Ann M. Barbero, a daughter of Nathan and Calista (Loomis) Barbero, natives of New York. Mrs. Donason was also a native of the Empire state, her birth having occurred in Onondaga county, on the Erie canal, on June 9, 1833. Mr. and Mrs. Barbero came to Illinois in 1839, locating in Maquon township, where he passed away in January, 1885. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Barbero there were born four children: Ann M., who became Mrs. Donason; Lodema; Henry; and John J. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Donason numbered seven: Nathan, who is the eldest member of the family, is a resident of Maquon.

Jack married Minnie Sylvester and lives in Mills, Nebraska. Charles married Ada D. Simpkins and is living in Spokane, Washington. Calista G. became the wife of Samuel Love and is now residing in Idaho. Fred, who is living on the old homestead, married Mattie Simpkins and they have had nine children, six of whom are living as follows, Carl, Aleck, Ada, Kozel, Mattie and Calista; those deceased are Edith, Emma and Florence. Frank married Arra Holloway and lives north of town. Katie, the youngest of the family, is deceased. Mrs. Donason is still living and is the owner of four hundred acres of land, one and a half miles south of Maquon.

Mr. Donason was a member of the Masonic fraternity, while his political support he gave to the democratic party. He was a public-spirited man and always took an active and helpful interest in governmental matters and at one time most efficiently filled the office of county supervisor. He was of an inventive turn of mind and quite an adept in machinery, being the first to construct a road grader in this county. He passed away at Eureka Springs, October 6, 1880, and was laid to rest in Maquon cemetery, deeply mourned not only in his immediate family but by a large circle of acquaintances, who held him in high esteem.

ELIAS J. KJELLANDER.

Representatives of foreign countries are doing much toward peopling the great middle west and among them are many Germans and Swedes who, by their energy and industry, have developed productive farms and have thereby added greatly to the country's wealth. Among this number is Elias J. Kjellander, whose name indicates his foreign origin. He was born in Sweden, on the 7th of February, 1844. In his native land Mr. Kjellander was reared and educated in its public schools, also attending college for a time, and there continued to dwell until 1881, in which year he came to the United States, determined to seek here the opportunities which he had heard were open to those possessing ambition, industry and perseverance. That these qualities were not foreign to his nature was soon manifest in the determination with which he at once set himself to earning his livelihood in a strange land, amid strange people and customs. He labored for some time and the spirit of thrift, which is the birthright of the Swedish nation, was strong within him and eventually he succeeded to establish himself independently as a farmer. He purchased a tract of one hundred and twenty acres on sections 14 and 15, Cedar township, and to its development and improvement he has since devoted his energies. As the years have passed prosperity has attended his efforts and he now has well cultivated fields which annually return abundant harvests as a reward for the care and labor expended upon them.

In 1884 Mr. Kjellander was united in marriage to Miss Antoinette Johnson, a native of Sweden, who in 1864 came to America in company with her parents, both of whom are now deceased. They located in Galesburg, Knox county, Illinois, where their remaining days were devoted to agricultural pursuits. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Kjellander have been born four sons, as follows: Everett and Anton, both residing in Canada; Justus, who lives in Warren county, Illinois; and Frederick, who resides at home and assists his father in his farming interests. The family are all members of the Swedish Lutheran church, and are highly respected throughout the community in which they live, for their many excellent traits of character. Since naturalization bestowed upon Mr. Kjellander the privileges of citizenship he has given his political allegiance to the republican party and of the interests and institutions of his adopted country he has ever been a stalwart supporter. He has had no occasion to regret his determination to seek his fortune in this country, for here he has found the opportunities which he sought and in their wise utilization has won creditable success.

THOMPSON L. ROUTH.

Included in the number of Illinois' prosperous husbandmen is Thompson L. Routh, an inhabitant of Knox county for many years. His grandparents, John and Nancy (Moon) Routh lived in Ohio, where his father, Joseph M. Routh, was born, January 22, 1813, and where Thompson L. was born, April 21, 1850. In the general emigrations from Ohio westward during the middle decades of the nineteenth century the Routh family joined the moving current of population. The grandfather had died of the cholera in Ohio, but the grandmother, Nancy Morris, the mother of Mrs. Joseph M. Routh, with the others, traveling in wagons, came to Knox county. They paused for awhile in Hermon and then settled on a farm which the father, Joseph M. Routh, purchased on section 19 of Chestnut township in the fall of 1852. There he lived all his life with the exception of a few years when he made London Mills, Illinois, his home. His wife, the mother of Thompson L. Routh, in her maidenhood bore the name Rutisha Morris. Her people lived in Virginia at the time of her birth. Her marriage to Mr. Routh was blessed with the birth of four children, of whom Thompson L. is the only one surviving. The others were: Cornelius, who died in 1868; Thomas James, who served one year in the Seventh Illinois Cavalry and died in 1896; and an infant child that died in its first year. The mother lived to be eighty-seven years old, passing away at the home of her son in 1904. Her husband had attained nearly the same age, his death having occurred in 1899 at the age of eighty-six years. They are buried side by side in the Hermon cemetery.

Thompson L. Routh was reared upon the home farm, working in the fields from the time he was old enough to handle a plow. He attended the district schools of the vicinity. When he was twenty-one years old he located on section 19, where he devoted himself to thorough farming according to the efficient methods in which his father had trained him. He chose for a helpmate Miss Mary C. Leigh, to whom he was married the following year, in 1872. She was born August 6, 1853, on the place where she now resides. Her parents were Clark and Sally (Long) Leigh, the father a native of Gallia county, Ohio, where he was born March 2, 1831. In 1836 his father came to Knox county, Illinois, on horseback to look over the ground with the view of locating here. Being impressed with the promising growth of the agricultural prospects of this region, he returned to Ohio and brought his family by wagon to Illinois. They settled near Hermon. They were accompanied thither by the Leigh family whose ancestors had been English. Archibald Long, Mrs. Thompson's maternal grandfather, was an exhorter and had a church in his home until the small congregation which came to worship there had raised the means with which to erect a church, when he contributed the lot upon which it was built,—the Methodist Episcopal church at Hermon,—and where it still stands. He also laid out the town of Hermon. Here her father grew to manhood and after his marriage set up his household in a cottage on the site, where Mr. and Mrs. Thompson L. Routh now live. Later they built a large, comfortable home, living in this until their deaths. Mr. Clark Leigh's death occurred in 1866 and his wife passed away on April 2, 1911, having on March 7, 1888, married D. W. Shaffer. Mr. and Mrs. Clark Leigh are buried at Hermon. They had two children, Curtis A., a merchant tailor in Chicago and Mary C., the wife of the subject of this sketch. Mary C. Leigh received her education in the country schools near her home and at Hedding College, and after completing her schooling she remained at home until her marriage. She became the mother of two children: J. Arthur, whose sketch is included in this volume; and Bessie Leigh, born February 14, 1886, and died August 20, 1896.

For the past two years Mr. and Mrs. Thompson L. Routh have been living in the home once occupied by the latter's father. They began their married life on section 19, Chestnut township, where they lived in a modest cottage for several years. The farm on section 19, consisting of eighty acres of valuable land is still owned by Mr. Routh. His wife owns a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, as well as forty acres in Fulton county, Illinois.

Mr. Routh and his wife are both faithful church workers, the latter is the treasurer of the Methodist church and for years was steward; the former is elder and deacon in the Christian church. Mr. Routh is a republican. For four years he served as town clerk and at present is assessor of his township. For his adherence to high moral principles and his uprightness in his business dealings he is regarded as one of the exemplary men of his community.

N. JOHN LARSON.

N. John Larson, who is engaged in farming on section 32, Knox township, where he owns and cultivates a good tract of land, was born in Sweden, May 7, 1843, and his parents, Lars Frederick and Johanna (Nelson) Larson, were also natives of that country. The hope of finding better conditions of life and broader opportunities led them to the new world and their last years were spent in America. Their family numbered two sons and three daughters, namely: Mrs. Emily Walters, a resident of Fort Madison, Iowa; Mrs. Clara R. Johnson, whose home is in this county; N. John, of this review; Franz A., a resident of Oregon, and Mrs. Augusta M. Benkson, whose home is in Dorchester, Nebraska.

N. John Larson acquired his education in the schools of Sweden and in the school of experience has also learned many valuable lessons. He worked on a farm in his native land until 1869 and then came to America, landing at New York, whence he made his way direct to Chicago. There he continued for a short time but afterward went to Quincy, Illinois, and later removed to Missouri, where he worked as a farm hand for several years and was also employed on the railroad. Since 1875 he has resided continuously in Knox county, and his time and energies have been largely devoted to general agricultural pursuits, his labors being crowned with a substantial measure of success.

On the 1st of June, 1876, Mr. Larson was united in marriage, in Knoxville, to Miss Emma Gustine, who was born in Sweden, November 25, 1854, and came to the new world in 1859. Mr. and Mrs. Larson have become parents of eleven children, of whom ten are yet living, their second daughter, Clara L., having passed away. The others are John Albert, Louise, Olivia, Esther, Edith, Gertrude, Frank, Herman, Carl and Marie. Of these, John Albert is married and lives in Des Moines, Iowa, with his wife and three children, Edna, Louise and Marion. Olivia is the wife of George Peterson, of Galesburg. Edith became the wife of Titus Endburg, of Galesburg, and they have one child, Herman. Esther is the wife of Clarence Johnson, also of Galesburg.

In religious faith Mr. Larson is a Lutheran, holding membership in the Swedish Mission church of Galesburg. He has never had occasion to regret his determination to come to America, for while earnest labor has been his lot, he here found the opportunities which he sought and through their improvement has worked his way steadily upward until he now occupies a creditable position in agricultural circles and is the owner of a valuable farm, which in its neat and thrifty appearance indicates the careful supervision and practical methods of him who cultivates it.

WILLIAM M. STOCKDALE.

William M. Stockdale had a wide acquaintance in Altona and throughout the part of the county in which he had lived and all recognized in him a man of substantial character, straightforward in his acts and honorable in his purposes. His sterling characteristics won him high and sincere regard and his death on July 22, 1904, caused deep regret throughout the community. He was born in Elkhart, Indiana, on the 7th of January, 1844, his parents being Thomas and Catherine (Mannington) Stockdale, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Ohio. The paternal grandfather, Hugh Stockdale, was a native of Ireland.

Very early in life William Stockdale removed to Goshen, Indiana, with his parents and on August 6, 1861, at the age of seventeen years, he enlisted for service in the Twenty-ninth Indiana Infantry but was later transferred to the Military Band and at the close of the war was in Company D, Second Indiana Cavalry, and was in all the regular battles in which it engaged. In 1865 he was mustered out of service and came direct to Altona, his parents having removed to that town in the meantime. His first duties as a boy were as a painter and decorator. In Altona, however, he took up the study of pharmacy while he was employed for four years in a clerical capacity by C. Ward. During this time, because of his quick and active mind, Mr. Stockdale acquired a fair knowledge not only of the science of drugs but also of the art of salesmanship. Sub-short time but afterward went to Quincy, Illinois, and later removed to Missouri, where he worked as a farm hand for several years and was also employed on the railroad. Since 1875 he has resided continuously in Knox county, and his time and energies have been largely devoted to general agricultural pursuits, his labors being crowned with a substantial measure of success.

WILLIAM M. STOCKDALE

On the 1st of June, 1876, Mr. Larson was united in marriage, in Knoxville, to Miss Emma Gustine, who was born in Sweden, November 25, 1854, and came to the new world in 1859. Mr. and Mrs. Larson have become parents of eleven children, of whom ten are yet living, their second daughter, Clara L., having passed away. The others are John Albert, Louise, Olivia, Esther, Edith, Gertrude, Frank, Herman, Carl and Marie. Of these, John Albert is married and lives in Des Moines, Iowa, with his wife and three children, Edna, Louise and Marion. Olivia is the wife of George Peterson, of Galesburg. Edith became the wife of Titus Endburg, of Galesburg, and they have one child, Herman. Esther is the wife of Clarence Johnson, also of Galesburg.

In religious faith Mr. Larson is a Lutheran, holding membership in the Swedish Mission church of Galesburg. He has never had occasion to regret his determination to come to America, for while earnest labor has been his lot, he here found the opportunities which he sought and through their improvement has worked his way steadily upward until he now occupies a creditable position in agricultural circles and is the owner of a valuable farm, which in its neat and thrifty appearance indicates the careful supervision and practical methods of him who cultivates it.

WILLIAM M. STOCKDALE.

William M. Stockdale had a wide acquaintance in Altona and throughout the part of the county in which he had lived and all recognized in him a man of substantial character, straightforward in his acts and honorable in his purposes. His sterling characteristics won him high and sincere regard and his death on July 22, 1904, caused deep regret throughout the community. He was born in Elkhart, Indiana, on the 7th of January, 1844, his parents being Thomas and Catherine (Mannington) Stockdale, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Ohio. The paternal grandfather, Hugh Stockdale, was a native of Ireland.

Very early in life William Stockdale removed to Goshen, Indiana, with his parents and on August 6, 1861, at the age of seventeen years, he enlisted for service in the Twenty-ninth Indiana Infantry but was later transferred to the Military Band and at the close of the war was in Company D, Second Indiana Cavalry, and was in all the regular battles in which it engaged. In 1865 he was mustered out of service and came direct to Altona, his parents having removed to that town in the meantime. His first duties as a boy were as a painter and decorator. In Altona, however, he took up the study of pharmacy while he was employed for four years in a clerical capacity by C. Ward. During this time, because of his quick and active mind, Mr. Stockdale acquired a fair knowledge not only of the science of drugs but also of the art of salesmanship. Subsequently, after clerking for six years in Galva, Illinois, he returned to Altona and opened up a drug store on his own account, an undertaking in which he met with immediate success. He was well known as one of the oldest druggists in northern Knox county and also as one of the most reliable pharmacists in his section. He constantly applied himself to the study of his profession and kept up with its progress and the evolution of its science. In addition to this side of the business he carried a well selected line of goods and his success was largely due to his honorable methods, earnest effort to please his customers and the attractive display of the drugs and druggist's sundries which he carried. Mr. Stockdale was equally prominent in musical circles. He organized the first band of Altona and was its leader at the time of his death; he was a member of the orchestra of Altona and he was the cornetist of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which he held membership.

WILLIAM M. STOCKDALE

On the 24th of December, 1870, Mr. Stockdale was married to Miss Ella M. Main, a daughter of Elias B. and Mary Ann (Huntington) Main, who was born on the 18th of November, 1847. To Mr. and Mrs. Stockdale one child was born, Milo E., whose birth occurred September 29, 1879, and who passed away on the 12th of June, 1884. Mrs. Stockdale remained at home after her mother's death until her marriage. At the age of sixteen years she graduated from school and immediately began making practical use of her education by teaching in the district. She has always shown considerable interest in the educational and moral development of her community and has been actively connected with various organizations devoted to the furthering of these causes. At present she is serving as the treasurer of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal church of Altona, in which she holds membership and to which her husband devoted much of his time, being trustee and financial secretary at the time of his death. He also was a member of Lodge No. 360, A. F. & A. M., of Altona, having served as secretary for fifteen years, and he belonged to the Grand Army post of Altona. His was a well spent life and he became prominent and well known in his district, where his many substantial qualities were both recognized and appreciated by all who knew him. He performed his duties faithfully and efficiently, was thoughtful of the rights of others and never neglected his obligations to his fellow citizens.

ISAAC CHEYNEY PRESTON.

Isaac Cheyney Preston is a retired farmer residing at No. 409 West North street. He was born in Harford county, Maryland, November 9, 1841, a son of Edmond and Phoebe (Hoskins) Preston, both of whom were natives of Maryland. The former was a son of David and Judith (Hollingsworth) Preston, who were natives of Pennsylvania and of Delaware respectively. He sat at the head of his meeting—the Friends Society—in his locality for many years. He passed away at the age of seventy-two and his wife died when well advanced in years. They had five children, namely: Isaac, Sylvester, Hannah, Edmond and Deborah. Their son, Edmond Preston, was born in Maryland, devoted his life to farming and spent his last days in Harford county of his native state, his remains being interred in the old Friends cemetery there, he and his wife being consistent members of the Society of Friends. He married Phoebe Hoskins, a daughter of Nathaniel Hoskins, whose wife in her maidenhood bore the family name of Cheyney. Both lived to old age and reared a large family, including Cheyney, Jesse, Eliza, Hiram, Edith, Sarah, William, Phoebe and Joseph. The youngest daughter became the wife of Edmond Preston and unto them were born eight children: Isaac C.; David, who is deceased; Louis H., living in Brush, Colorado; Henry C., who resides on the old home place in Harford county, Maryland; William S., who has passed away; Judith, the deceased wife of Joseph T. Hoopes; Robert S., of Harford county, Maryland; and Edmond, who is deceased.

Isaac C. Preston was reared in Harford county, Maryland, on the old home farm and after laying the foundation for his education in the Friends' school, attended the public schools and afterward spent a year in the Union Chapel Academy of Harford county, at which time his instructor was a Massachusetts man. About that time his father purchased an interest in a business and drove meat wagons in Harford and Baltimore counties. Isaac C. Preston became driver of one of these wagons and was so employed for four years and at the same time engaged in buying stock. He then came to the middle west in company with Elijah Lancaster. They took this step because their parents did not wish them to go to war and after reaching the Mississippi valley they enlisted in Company G, of the First Wisconsin Cavalry under Colonel LaGrange, serving during the last year of hostilities. Mr. Preston participated in the battle at Hopkinsville, Kentucky, and for twenty-four days and nights, in December, 1864, was with his command in pursuit of General Lyons. The regiment then went into winter quarters at Waterloo, Tennessee, where they remained for four weeks. They afterward marched through Alabama and Mr. Preston was in one of the last battles of the war, at West Point, on the Chattahoochee river. He joined the army as a private, was made corporal and was afterward promoted to the rank of sergeant. He contracted typhoid fever on the march from Macon, Georgia, to Chattanooga, Tennessee, and from there was sent to Nashville and on to Louisville, where he was placed in the Brown Hospital. He remained there until he became convalescent, when his father went for him and took him home to Harford county, Maryland.

Following his recovery Mr. Preston purchased a new threshing machine from his father and operated it for two years. He then sold out and began shipping fertilizer from the west, having in the meantime made a trip westward to Illinois and Iowa. In 1870 he settled in Page county, Iowa, where he resided until 1895, when he came to Galesburg for the purpose of educating his daughter and here he has since lived retired. He purchased a good lot and built his present home at No. 409 West North street, where he is now pleasantly located, having in the meantime secured a handsome competence that now supplies him with all the necessities and many of the luxuries of life.

On the 7th of December, 1871, Mr. Preston was united in marriage to Miss Jennie C. Logan, a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Bowling) Logan and a granddaughter of Michael and Margaret Logan, who were natives of Kentucky. Her grandfather lived to the advanced age of eighty-five years. In his family were eight children. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Preston were Purton

James and Margaret (Jones) Bowling, both of whom lived to old age. The former was a native of Virginia. Their family numbered seven children: Elizabeth, John, Alvira, Armiza, Jane, Julia and Elvira. The father of Mrs. Preston was born in Kentucky and her mother in Illinois. They were early settlers of Springfield. Mr. Logan died in 1880, at the age of sixty-eight years, and his wife passed away in 1893 at the age of seventy-six. They were very active and faithful members of the Christian church. They had five children: William; Nannie; James C. and Jennie C., twins; and Josephine. The daughter Jennie became the wife of Isaac C. Preston. She was born in Springfield, June 2, 1848, and by her marriage had one daughter, Nannine Wren Preston, who was graduated from Knox College under Dr. John Finley and has been a teacher in the schools of Galesburg for about twelve years.

Mr. Preston still holds his membership with the Society of Friends in the city of Baltimore, while his wife and daughter are members of the First Presbyterian church of Galesburg. In his political views he is a republican and has filled a number of local offices, the duties of which he has discharged with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. He was a member of the board of supervisors of Page county, Iowa, for six years, was justice of the peace for several terms and was postmaster of Essex, Iowa, for three years. Fraternally he is connected with James T. Shields Post, No. 45, G. A. R., and was its commander in 1890. He has thus kept in touch with the boys in blue of the Civil war and he is as true and loyal to his country today as when he followed the old flag on southern battlefields and thus gave proof of his advocacy of the Union cause. He has ever been faithful to duty, whether in days of war or days of peace, and his has at all times been an honorable record, his upright life commanding for him the confidence, good-will and friendship of the great majority of those with whom he has come in contact. In business, too, he displayed excellent ability as a manager and in the wise promotion of his interests won substantial and well earned success.

ERNEST THOMAS COLLINSON.

Ernest T. Collinson, who has been living at Galva since he gave up his farm in 1898, was born in Walnut Grove township, Knox county, on the old Collinson homestead, on the 17th of October, 1875. He is a son of Simeon L. and Jane (Carnahan) Collinson. The father was born in Yorkshire, England, on the 7th of July, 1806, and on the 4th of November, 1831, settled in Wilkes-Barre, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania. The trip from his native country took seven weeks and he was accompanied by his first wife, who passed away early in 1874, and two children. When he left Pennsylvania to settle in Illinois he made the trip with horse and wagon and was forced to undergo many of the hardships that awaited the traveler of that early day. In 1838 however, he arrived in this county and at once settled upon the property forming a part of the farm which he owned at the time of his death. His first task was to build a log cabin which served as their home until his farm proved sufficiently remunerative to permit him to build a larger and more substantial one. Subsequently he became one of the largest land owners in this section, and at one time held clear title to twenty-four hundred acres of land. He gave each of his children a quarter section of land as soon as they were old enough to handle it. His wife's death occurred on the 18th of April, 1874, when she was seventy-four years of age. To their union nine children were born: Thomas W., Lydia, Henry and Simeon, deceased; Mary, who is the wife of J. E. Durham, of Mendota, Illinois; Martha, who is the widow of James McLaughlin of Altona, Illinois; John C., a resident of Altona; Susan, who is married to J. McGaan of Altona; and one child who passed away in infancy. Mr. Collinson was again married in 1874, when he wedded Mrs. Jane (Carnahan) McClure, whose birth occurred in Scotland, on the 17th of September, 1837, and who settled in Altona immediately after her arrival in the United States in 1867. To their union one child was born, Ernest Thomas Collinson, whose name stands at the head of this review. Simeon L. Collinson gave his political support to the democratic party and was the first assessor of Lynn township after its organization.

Ernest T. Collinson acquired his education in the nearby district schools and subsequently resided upon the homestead with his mother. In the spring of 1898 he removed to Galva and has since made that town his home. After arriving there he engaged in the real-estate and insurance business for some time. In 1898 he was married to Miss Ada M. Craver, whose birth occurred in Lynn township, on the 26th of April, 1875. She is a daughter of George and Nancy E. (Heaton) Craver, the former of whom has passed away. To Mr. and Mrs. Collinson two children have been born: Harold E. and Willard C., aged ten and seven years respectively. Mr. Collinson holds membership in the Congregational church of Galva and also in the Woodman of America and the Knights of Pythias of which he has been trustee and is now vice chancellor. His entire life has been spent in this county and he enjoys a wide acquaintance which has been formed because of his genial and social nature. He is interested in all that tends to promote the welfare of his community, and any measure suggested for civic improvement or social development is sure to win his support and assistance.

EDWARD JOSEPH APPELL.

Edward Joseph Appell, who is engaged in general farming and stock-raising in Lynn township, Knox county, was born on the 23d of September, 1879, on the old Appell homestead in this township. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Appell, of whom mention is made elsewhere in this volume. To the parents eleven children were born: Lydia, who is the wife of the Rev. G. A. Brandell, of Colorado; Alfred, a minister of the Lutheran church at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Hanna, who is married to Gus Lilgiroot, of Henry county; Carl, who is practicing law in Chicago; Amanda, who is married to Otto Johnson, of Henry county; Louis A., who is justice of the peace of this township; Edward Joseph, of this review; Alfrieda and Ferdinand, both of whom are residing at home; Martin, who is an agriculturist of Henry county; and Edith, also at home.

The boyhood and youth of Edward J. Appell were spent attending school and assisting with the daily farm duties on the home place. At the age of seventeen he entered Augustana College, at Rock Island, Illinois, and in that institution pursued the commercial course. Subsequently he remained at home and farmed for his father for ten years. He has followed agricultural pursuits throughout his active career and, although still a young man, has met with a good degree of success and has won an enviable reputation among his fellow agriculturists.

In 1905 Mr. Appell was married to Miss Ruth Caroline Krantz, whose birth occurred on the 3d of July, 1883, in Jönjöping, Sweden. She is a daughter of P. A. and Ida (Magnuson) Krantz, both of whom are residing in Sweden and who are the parents of ten children: Anna, who is the wife of Harry Cox, of Rockford; Herman, who is a resident of Victoria, Illinois; Ellen, the wife of Elias Rodine, of Sweden; Mrs. Appell; Peter, who is still living in Sweden; Oscar, a resident of Victoria, Illinois; Abbie, who is married to Martin Appell, of Lynn township; Gustav, also living in Victoria; and Fabian and Leona, both of whom are residing in Sweden. Mrs. Appell came to America with E. Magnuson when she was but eighteen years of age. Upon her arrival in Illinois she lived with the Appell family until her marriage. To Mr. and Mrs. Appell one child has been born, Virgil Edward, whose birth occurred on the 3d of May, 1911.

Mr. Appell gives his political allegiance to the republican party and, although he is interested in its success and in the policies of its platforms and earnestly desires their success at the polls, he has never sought nor desired office as a reward for party fealty. Both Mr. and Mrs. Appell are members of the Swedish Lutheran church, of which he is a trustee. The improved and well equipped condition of his farm indicates his thrift, industry and scientific management, all of which are tending to bring him a good degree of success.

JOHN JOHNSON.

John Johnson, who is conducting a meat market in Altona, Knox county, was born in that town on the 5th of October, 1863, his parents being Louis and Carrie (Marsh) Johnson, both natives of Ockelbo, Sweden. The father was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Johnson, who came to America in 1857, and after the cholera removed to Altona. Mrs. Jonas Johnson is perhaps the oldest resident of Illinois, her birth having occurred on the 15th of July, 1808, and she and her husband were among the early settlers who took up their residence in Altona. Their first home adjoined the present site of the high school, but later they removed to a farm north of the town, and a short time afterward they entered the Swedish colony settled on Bishop Hill. They were the parents of three children: Andrew, who is residing in Sioux City, Iowa; Margaret, who is the wife of Fred Spiegel, and with whom the mother resides; and Louis, who died December 25, 1907, at the age of seventy-four years. Louis Johnson came to Altona with his father and spent nearly his entire life in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway. Mrs. Louis Johnson, who is eighty-two years of age, is the daughter of John and Christine Marsh, of Sweden. The Johnsons were the first members of the Swedish Lutheran church here and were most active in the support of that church at the time it was founded. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Johnson were the parents of nine children, seven of whom are now living: Betsy, who is the wife of C. Carlson of Walnut Grove; Margaret, the wife of Olof Peterson, of Altona; John, who is the subject of this sketch; and Louis, Frank, George and Nellie, all residing in Altona.

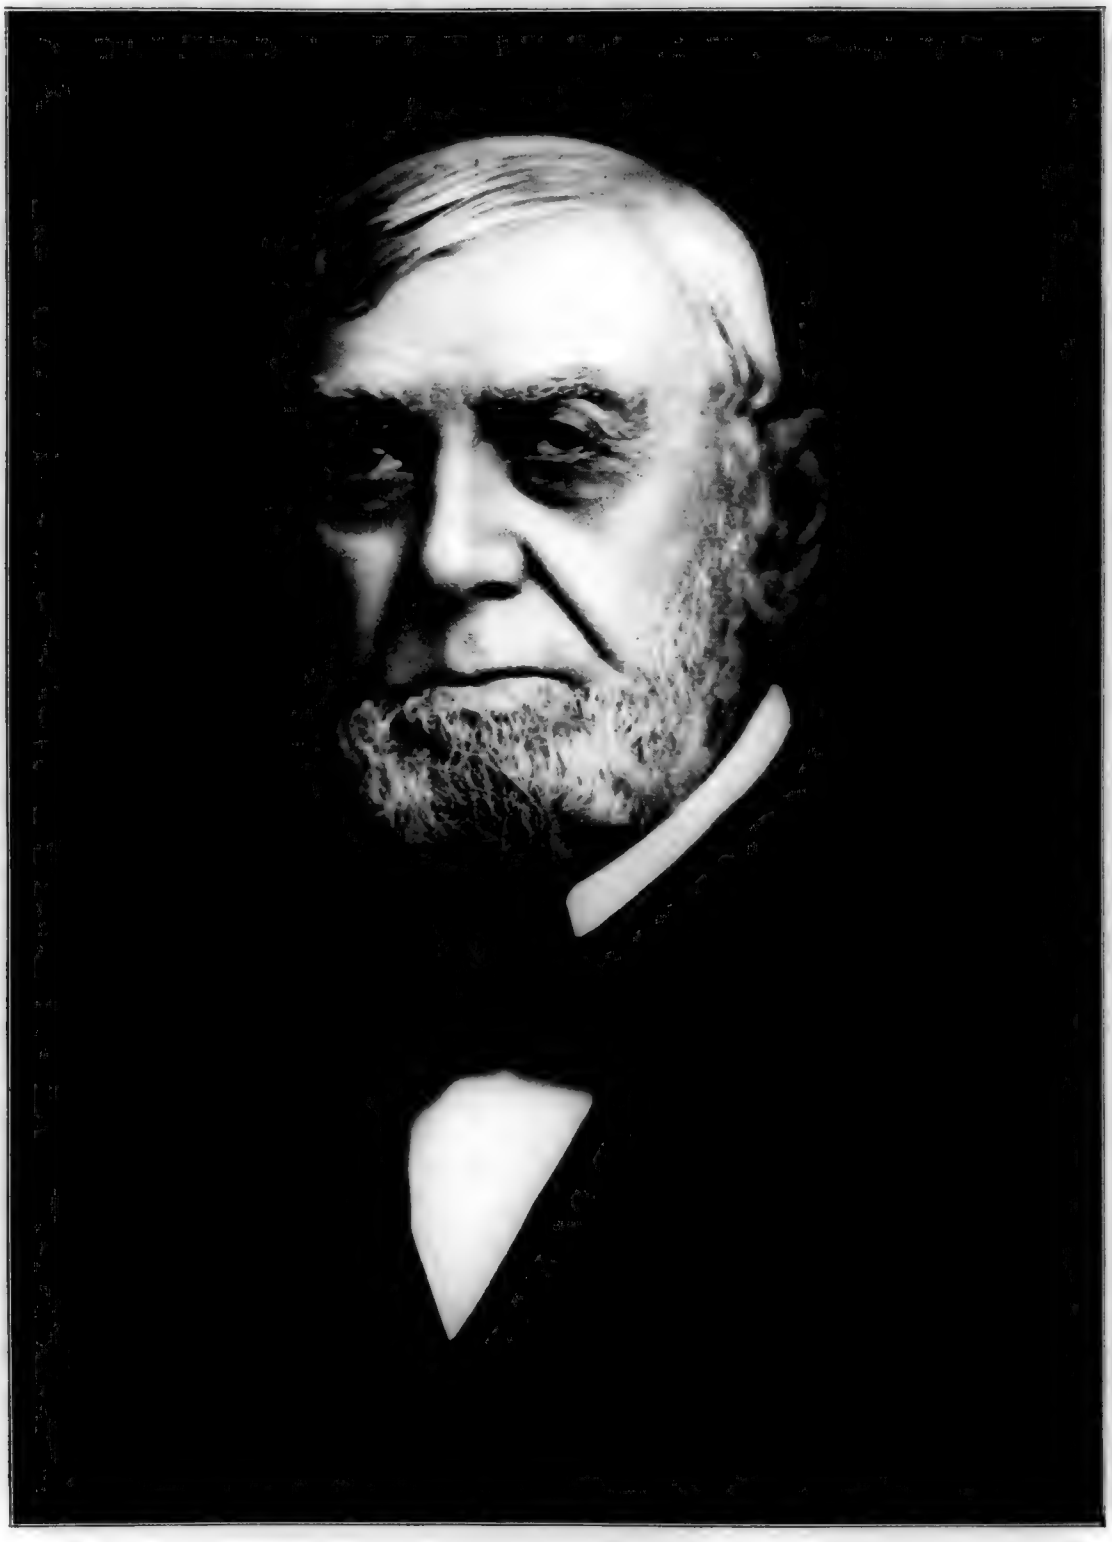
Leaving school at the early age of fourteen years John Johnson entered the employ of his father on the home farm, and for the next ten years was actively engaged in assisting in its cultivation. After that time, however, he entered the meat market of Whiting-Van Scoyk at Galesburg, but later returned to Altona, and since 1907 has been in partnership with Mr. Whiting, of the firm of Whiting & Johnson, of Altona. His market is ably managed, and, realizing that satisfied customers are the best advertisement for future business Mr. Johnson aims at treating all who may patronize him with the respect and courtesy due them. Mr. Johnson was married to Nellie Neilson, whose birth occurred November 4, 1865, at Kylinge Point, in southern Sweden. She is the daughter of Nels and Anna Swenson, both of whom are still living. The grandmother died, in 1909, at the age of ninety-two years. Mrs. Johnson came to America in 1885 with friends and settled at once in Altona, where she was married. She was one of two children, her sister residing in Sweden at present. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnson eight children were born: Emma, whose birth occurred February 24, 1889, and who is the wife of Roy Rankin, an agriculturist of Media, Illinois, and has one child, John Robert; Anna, born on the 25th of November, 1890, who is engaged in teaching school; Minnie, Inez and Bessie, whose births occurred November 12, 1893, December 23, 1895, and October 5, 1897, respectively; and George, Theora and Vivian, whose births occurred January 20, 1902, October 10, 1903, and August 15, 1906, respectively. With the exception of Mrs. Rankin they are all residing at home.

Mr. Johnson is an active member of the republican party, and since he cast his first vote has always voted for the men and measures of the party whose policies he considers the most conducive in promoting good government. He has served as alderman of Altona for four years and is now serving his second term and is also a member of the school board. He holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America of Altona. As a life-long resident he has been a witness to much of its development, and has been influential in promoting its business interests. Because of his strict integrity and high principles he holds the respect of his fellow citizens.

JOHN W. STEPHENS.

In days of old, before the chronicler of events appeared to write the story of his nation's greatness, people drew their inspiration from the past by hearkening to the tales the old men told, by listening to the song of the bard, by scattered reminiscences of the aged nurse, handed down from generation to generation. Then the romance of history was not entombed within the covers of a book, it was graven on the minds and living in the hearts of the people. To-day much of that old-time poetry has gone out of our lives. We are too preoccupied with the demands which our severely competitive mode of living has thrust upon us. Too late, perhaps, when the last pioneers of our western civilization will have passed from among us, we will come to realize what we have lost in their pic-

J. W. STEPHENS



who is the wife of C. Carlson of Walnut Grove; Margaret, the wife of Olof Peterson, of Altona; John, who is the subject of this sketch; and Louis, Frank, George and Nellie, all residing in Altona.

Leaving school at the early age of fourteen years John Johnson entered the employ of his father on the home farm, and for the next ten years was actively engaged in assisting in its cultivation. After that time, however, he entered the meat market of Whiting-Van Scoyk at Galesburg, but later returned to Altona, and since 1907 has been in partnership with Mr. Whiting, of the firm of Whiting & Johnson, of Altona. His market is ably managed, and, realizing that satisfied customers are the best advertisement for future business Mr. Johnson aims at treating all who may patronize him with the respect and courtesy due them. Mr. Johnson was married to Nellie Neilson, whose birth occurred November 4, 1865, at Kylinge Point, in southern Sweden. She is the daughter of Nels and Anna Swenson, both of whom are still living. The grandmother died, in 1909, at the age of ninety-two years. Mrs. Johnson came to America in 1885 with friends and settled at once in Altona, where she was married. She was one of two children, her sister residing in Sweden at present. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnson eight children were born: Emma, whose birth occurred February 24, 1889, and who is the wife of Roy Rankin, an agriculturist of Media, Illinois, and has one child, John Robert; Anna, born on the 25th of November, 1890, who is engaged in teaching school; Minnie, Inez and Bessie, whose births occurred November 12, 1893, December 23, 1895, and October 5, 1897, respectively; and George, Theora and Vivian, whose births occurred January 20, 1902, October 10, 1903, and August 15, 1906, respectively. With the exception of Mrs. Rankin they are all residing at home.

Mr. Johnson is an active member of the republican party, and since he cast his first vote has always voted for the men and measures of the party whose policies he considers the most conducive in promoting good government. He has served as alderman of Altona for four years and is now serving his second term and is also a member of the school board. He holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America of Altona. As a life-long resident he has been a witness to much of its development, and has been influential in promoting its business interests. Because of his strict integrity and high principles he holds the respect of his fellow citizens.

JOHN W. STEPHENS.

In days of old, before the chronicler of events appeared to write the story of his nation's greatness, people drew their inspiration from the past by hearkening to the tales the old men told, by listening to the song of the bard, by scattered reminiscences of the aged nurse, handed down from generation to generation. Then the romance of history was not entombed within the covers of a book, it was graven on the minds and living in the hearts of the people. To-day much of that old-time poetry has gone out of our lives. We are too preoccupied with the demands which our severely competitive mode of living has thrust upon us. Too late, perhaps, when the last pioneers of our western civilization will have passed from among us, we will come to realize what we have lost in their picturesque recital of the events of the early days, of the white man's struggle for supremacy in a new country.

J. W. STEPHENS

There is still dwelling in Knox county a man whose life links us with that past of mystery and charm. His name is John W. Stephens, son of one of the early settlers and, for a period of more than seventy-four years, intimately associated with the rise and growth of Knox county. Those who have had the privilege of listening to his reminiscences will remember with a thrill the story of his father's experiences with the Indians, and of the winter of the heavy snow when the settlers were in danger of perishing. They will listen with delight to the description of the district school, where Mr. Stephens found his only opportunities for an education. It was a typical old log schoolhouse with split log benches and a puncheon floor. A fire in the huge fireplace at one end supplied the heat. Across square openings cut in the walls paper was stretched to serve as windows. These were the primitive surroundings amid which the boys and girls of those days were given that stern training that prepared them for a life of hardship and toil.

John W. Stephens was born in Warren county, New Jersey, on the 6th of June, 1825. He was the son of Richard and Eleanor (Addis) Stephens, both natives of New Jersey, where they were reared and married. In 1830 they came to Illinois locating in Fulton county, but the difficulties with the Indians and other unforseen trials compelled them to give up their residence in this state. They therefore went to Ohio and lived in Warren county for seven years. In 1838, however, seeking solace after the crushing blow he received in the loss of his wife, Mr. Stephens again set his face westward, retracing his way to Illinois. This time he chose Cedar township, Knox county, for the family abode, continuing to live there until his death in April, 1854.

John W. Stephens was nurtured at home and availed himself of the meager educational advantages that pioneer life afforded. Among his companions who helped to make his school days a pleasant memory, was Mary H. Stephens whom he later chose for a helpmate. They were married on October 29, 1848, coming directly to Cedar township, Knox county, Illinois, where they established their new home on a farm of one hundred and sixty acres on section 4. Mr. Stephens had just purchased this farm a short time before at five dollars an acre. After living here five years he sold this piece of land and bought the farm on which his father had first settled on his advent in Knox county. There Mr. and Mrs. Stephens lived until 1894 when they removed to Abingdon, which they have made their home ever since. The old farm of one hundred and forty acres about which all the family traditions center since 1839, that his father had owned before him and that he had tilled for thirty-nine years, he now gave over to the management of his son. He owns, furthermore, a farm of eighty-three acres on section 16 in Cedar township.

In 1890 Mr. Stephens' wife died and three years later, on October 11, 1893, he married again. It is a curious and interesting coincidence that the second Mrs. Stephens, whose given name is Mary C., and the first Mrs. Stephens both bore the name "Stephens" before their marriage and there was no relationship between them. Of Mr. Stephens' first marriage there were four children. Only one survives, Charles E., who married Miss Harriet Latimer, of Abingdon. Mr. Stephens is a republican and during the war served for three years as member of the board of county supervisors. The office of justice of the peace which he held at one time he resigned at the end of a year. Unwearied in his efforts for the improvement of his locality and the upbuilding of his community, he was for twenty years road commissioner of Cedar township and for a long period a member of the school board. Mrs. Stephens is a member of the Congregational church, in which her husband also worships. Mr. Stephens is still in the possession of excellent health and cheerful spirit and, looking back upon a long life nobly spent in usefulness to his family and community, he finds peace and contentment of mind, the richest rewards that can crown a man's declining years.

EBENEZER LASS.

Ebenezer Lass, president of the Lass & Larson Company of Galesburg, conducting a wholesale and retail business in wall paper, paints, oils and glass, has sought his success along the well defined lines of labor and has won his advancement through close conformity to a high standard of commercial ethics. At a time when many men put aside the more active and arduous pursuits of business life he is still busily engaged along commercial lines and his energy and persistency of purpose are those of a man of much younger years. He was born in Kent, England, October 11, 1839, his parents being William and Sarah (Eastes) Lass. The father was a confectionery manufacturer who conducted business for many years but ultimately retired. He died in England in 1883, when about seventy-nine years of age, his birth having occurred in 1804. His wife, who was born in Kent, England, in 1806, passed away in 1888, at the advanced age of eighty-two years. They were both members of the Wesleyan church, in the work of which they took active and helpful interest, Mr. Lass serving as one of the church officers. They were married at Deal, Kent, England, in 1827, and unto them were born twelve children: Elizabeth, now deceased; Francis, who is living at Sandwich, England; Sarah, the wife of William Ekins, of Riverside, California; Grove P., deceased; William, a resident of Galesburg; Laura, who has passed away; Ebenezer; Frederick and Benjamin, both deceased; John, living in this city; Thomas, still a resident of Deal, County Kent; and Mary, the wife of Theodore Baldwin, also of Deal.

Ebenezer Lass pursued his education in a private school of Deal and when fourteen years of age was apprenticed to learn the decorator's trade, at which he worked in that town until he had attained his majority. He then went to London, where he followed his trade for three and a half years, but, believing that better opportunities were waiting on this side of the Atlantic, he came to the United States in 1866, settling in Galesburg, where he followed his trade until 1884. He was ambitious, however, to engage in business on his own account and carefully saved his earnings until he felt that his capital justified him in starting in business on his own account. In partnership with C. T. Larson and J. G. Lafferty, he established a store and when two years later Mr. Lafferty sold his interest to the other partners the firm of Lass & Larson was organized. Under that name the business was conducted until 1905, when it was incorporated under the name of the Lass & Larson Company, its officers being Ebenezer Lass, president, and C. T. Larson, secretary, treasurer and manager. They now handle wall paper, paints, oils and glass, selling to the wholesale and retail trade. They employ twenty people in their establishment in Galesburg and also have salesmen on the road. Their business has grown year by year and, carrying a large and well selected line of goods, they have every reason to feel that their trade will still further increase.

On the 4th of July, 1868, Mr. Lass was married to Miss Emma Pittock, a daughter of William and Elizabeth (Bailey) Pittock, of this city. Unto them were born seven children: Grace, now the wife of Francis Sisson, of Yonkers, New York; Charles, living in Galesburg; Effie, Kate and Mamie, all deceased; William, of Treadwell, Alaska; and Edith, at home. The wife and mother passed away February 22, 1882, and on the 26th of May, 1886, Mr. Lass was again married, his second union being with Miss Lucy M. Jerrauld, a daughter of Harvey and Maria Jerrauld, of Galesburg. There was one child of this union, George, now deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. Lass hold membership in the Central Congregational church and his fraternal relations are with the Odd Fellows lodge of Galesburg. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and he is interested in all that pertains to general progress and improvement, finding time to cooperate in measures for the general good while carefully managing his business affairs. He early learned the fact that diligence and industry must determine the success to which one can achieve. He has, therefore, persevered and his capable management, added to his thorough early training, has been a salient feature in gaining him the success which now classes him with Galesburg's substantial and progressive merchants.

MARY ARNOLD TEMPLETON.

Mary Arnold Templeton, who is residing in Altona, Illinois, was born on the 7th of April, 1846, in Victoria township, Knox county. She is a daughter of John and Nancy (Herman) Arnold, whose births occurred in 1810 and 1812 respectively, the former being a native of Dayton, Ohio, and the latter of Tennessee. John Arnold was a blacksmith by trade, and from early youth took up this occupation. Later he worked on a canal as boss of a gang, and subsequently traveling through Alabama he followed the carpenter's trade. After his marriage, however, in 1836 he came to Victoria township by way of Peoria and Kickapoo creek, and took up farming. He made the trip by team and when he arrived at the land for which he had set out he found it already sufficiently cleared and immediately built a log cabin upon it. He resided there until 1853, following his trade for a livelihood, when he removed to Victoria. In that town he engaged in horse-shoeing and blacksmithing until his death, which occurred on the 8th of December, 1864. His wife was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steven Herman, agriculturists. They removed to Alabama at the time they were early settlers. The mother's death occurred there in 1887. Mr. Arnold was one of the most prominent democrats in his region and held many local offices. His parents were Ephraim and Elinor Arnold. To Mr. and Mrs. John Arnold ten children have been born, four of whom survive: Robert H., a resident of Peoria, who is married and has two children; Mrs. Templeton, who is the subject of this review; Jane, of Victoria, who is the wife of Irving Norton, a shoemaker, and who has two children; and Eliza, who is residing with Mrs. Templeton.

In April, 1869, Mary Arnold was married to Thomas Foster Templeton, whose birth occurred in 1830, and who was a son of John and Nancy (Foster) Templeton, whose deaths occurred in Princeton, Illinois, and in Pennsylvania respectively. Thomas F. Templeton was born in Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, but removed to Knox county when a child, where he engaged in farming until he entered the hardware business in Altona in 1862. For ten years he was thus engaged with his brother-in-law. At the end of that time he disposed of this business and took up agricultural pursuits in Victoria township. On account of ill health, however, he soon disposed of his farm and lived retired until his death which occurred on the 10th of January, 1907. He was a stanch republican and for many years held office on the school board. In religious faith he was a Presbyterian and was an elder in the Presbyterian church of Altona for several years. He also held membership in Masonic Lodge, No. 330, of Altona.

To Mr. and Mrs. Templeton three children were born. Maude Alberta, the eldest died in 1904, at the age of thirty-six years. She is survived by her husband, E. H. Mason, of Galesburg, and three children, namely, Donald, who is eighteen years of age and teaching school in Victoria township; Marjory, who is sixteen years of age and attending high school; and Nanny B., who is fifteen years of age. Nanny B., the second, in order of birth, whose death occurred in 1893 when she was twenty years of age, was the wife of William Gehring, of Galesburg. The youngest child died when very young.

Eliza Arnold, who is residing with her sister, Mrs. Templeton, was born on the 8th of February, 1840. At the age of twenty-three years she attended Knox College for one year, having taught previously for six years. After leaving college she again engaged in teaching, and for twenty years was connected with the schools of Victoria township. She is one of the oldest teachers in this county, and all through her career was most successful in her pedagogical pursuits. She holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mrs. Templeton is one of the active workers in her community in all organizations which are formed to promote the public good. Charitable and kindly, her home is always open to those who need her assistance or to whom she can prove a faithful friend. Her life has been spent in the interests of others, and she is now one of the most esteemed residents of Altona.

BURRELL N. CHAPIN.

Burrell N. Chapin, seventy-seven years of age, has spent his entire life in Illinois and the record he has made is a most creditable one, for his success has never been gained at the sacrifice of others' interests and at no time has he refused to give his aid and support to those movements which have been instituted for the public good. In business affairs, too, he has shown sound judgment and capable management and by wise investments has secured a competency and has become one of the substantial citizens of Knox county. He was born in Fulton county, Illinois, August 4, 1834, a son of Moses B. and Irenia (De Maranville) Chapin. The father was born in Massachusetts and was a son of Consider and Esther (Wallace) Chapin. The grandfather was likewise a native of Massachusetts and was a descendant of Deacon Samuel Chapin, who was one of the Puritan fathers who came to America about 1640.

B. H. Chapin

MRS. BURRELL N. CHAPIN

He was one of those to whom a monument has been erected in front of the public library at Springfield, Massachusetts, being a founder of that city. Esther (Wallace) Chapin, the grandmother of Burrell N. Chapin, was a native of Scotland and is a descendant of Sir William Wallace. The Chapins are also related to a number of distinguished Americans. Captain Caleb Chapin, the great-grandfather, was a soldier of the Revolutionary war, valiantly aiding the colonies in their struggle for independence. His son, Consider Chapin, was a gifted poet of his day. Moses Chapin, born and reared in Massachusetts, came to Illinois in 1832, the year of the Black Hawk war, in which he took an honorable part. He made the journey overland from Pennsylvania on horseback and settled in Fulton county. He was a cooper by trade and established a shop in Lewiston, Illinois, where he resided until 1840. He then removed to Farmington, where he also built a shop, there residing for five years, or until 1845, when he purchased some land near Farmington and turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He continued to live upon that place until his death, which occurred in 1872. When he came to Illinois his family numbered three children, and eight were born after the arrival in this state. The eldest of the family was Sylvia, who died at the age of twelve years, and Minerva and Gorham are also deceased, the former passing away at the age of two years. The latter was a soldier of the Civil war, serving as a lieutenant in the One Hundred and Third Illinois Volunteer Infantry. The others of the family were: Sophronia, who became the wife of Lyman Sanders, both now deceased; Burrell N.; Cornelia, the wife of Captain Francis M. Taylor, of the One Hundred and Third Illinois Infantry, but both have passed away; Ivory, who was a soldier of the One Hundred and Third Illinois Volunteer Infantry during the Civil war but is now deceased; Pausinia, the deceased wife of Enos Kelsey who went to the front with the One Hundred and Third Illinois Volunteer Infantry; Flora, a resident of Farmington, who is the widow of Joseph Routson, who was likewise a soldier of the One Hundred and Third Illinois; Ora H., who served in the One Hundred and Third Illinois Infantry and was killed by the Indians in Arizona in 1871; and Marshall D., a resident of Monmouth, being the youngest of the family. Mr. Chapin has, on the maternal side, a number of illustrious ancestors. His grandfather, Jabez De Maranville, served on the Lake Erie under Perry in the war of 1812, whose father, Charles De Maranville, marched on the "Lexington Alarm" of April 19, 1775, from Freetown, Massachusetts. Robert and Tamsine (Bacon) Buffum, who were among the first to espouse the Quaker religion and were persecuted for their faith, were ancestors, as were also William White, the eleventh signer of the Mayflower Compact, and who was the father of Peregrine White, the first child born of English parents in America; another ancestor was John Vassall, alderman of London in 1588, who fitted out, at his own expense, two ships of war, with which he joined the royal ships to oppose the "Spanish Armada." His son William Vassall came to America with Winthrop in 1630 and was a founder of the Massachusetts Bay colony, and was a member of the "Council of War" in 1642. All the above being lineal ancestors of the mother, Mrs. Irenia Chapin. The mother passed away in Farmington in 1900 at the advanced age of ninety-two years. For eighty years representatives of the name have not only taken an active part in promoting the development and progress in pioneer days, but also in bringing about the present-day growth and prosperity of Illinois.

Burrell N. Chapin spent his youthful days in Fulton county, where he attended the country schools, pursuing his studies in one of the old-time log schoolhouses in Farmington. At the age of eighteen years he spent one term in an academy. Subsequently he engaged in teaching school in the winter and worked at farm labor during the summer months. His time was thus passed until his marriage. He was only thirteen years of age when, in 1847, he was appointed to deliver the mail from Farmington to Macomb, Illinois. This was known as the pony mail and the distance covered was fifty miles each way. As the years passed Mr. Chapin resolved to become owner of a farm and the year 1860 saw the realization of his hope in his purchase of a tract of land in Oneida, Knox county, where he carried on general agricultural pursuits. He afterward purchased a tract of eighty acres near Farmington, Fulton county, Illinois, which he continued to cultivate until 1872, and then disposed of that property to purchase a farm near Knoxville, which he conducted until 1878. He then bought another farm in the vicinity of Knoxville, devoting his energies to the cultivation of the fields until 1892, when he took up his abode in the town of Knoxville and has since lived retired. As the years passed he kept adding to his landed possessions until he owned three hundred acres, most of which, however, he has since disposed of, and from his interests he derives a substantial annual income that relieves him from the necessity of further labor save the supervision of his investments.

It was on the 22d of September, 1857, that Mr. Chapin was united in marriage to Miss Cynthia J. Culver, who was born near Buffalo, Erie county, New York, June 24, 1838, a daughter of William and Susan W. (Kirby) Culver. The father was born near Auburn, New York, in 1802, and the house in which he first saw the light of day is still standing. The mother's birth occurred near New Bedford, Massachusetts. The father of Mrs. Chapin was a son of Joseph Culver, who was a soldier of the Revolutionary war, as was his father, Samuel Culver, and the family was of English descent. The mother of Mrs. Chapin was a daughter of Silas Kirby, a native of Dartmouth, Massachusetts, whose father, Silas Kirby, Sr., bravely defended the cause of liberty in the Revolutionary war. Mrs. Chapin, therefore, is qualified for membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution in both the paternal and maternal lines. Her father followed the occupation of farming in the Empire state and on coming to Illinois settled in Salem township, Knox county, where he purchased a tract of land upon which he resided until the spring of 1861. He next purchased a farm near Henderson, Knox county, but afterward took up his abode on a farm near Wataga, where he resided until his retirement, after which he resided in Knoxville until his death, which occurred March 5, 1881. His widow long survived him, and died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chapin on the 7th of December, 1895. They were the parents of five children: Caroline, who became the wife of Joseph Ross, both of whom are now deceased; Elizabeth, who married Burton Miller and they are also deceased; Joseph W., who has passed away; Cynthia J., who became Mrs. Chapin; and William E., a resident farmer of Knox county.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Chapin were born four children. Edith A., who was born July 9, 1858, is now the wife of John D. McClure, of Knoxville, and they have one daughter, Edith M., who is the wife of Merrill Young and resides upon a farm east of Knoxville. Ida died at the age of three years. Eva J. married Charles Maple, of Maquon, who is postmaster of that place, and they have two children, Newton M. and Ora S. Maple. Mr. Chapin's youngest child, Ora Eugene, who is a distinguished lawyer of Chicago, is also prominent in Masonic circles. He was born May 30, 1870, and married Miss Camilla Capps, of Farmington, by whom he has one child, Minor J.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Chapin are consistent members of the Presbyterian church and are also members of the Knox County Mayflower Society, while Mrs. Chapin and her two daughters hold membership with the Lucretia Leffingwell Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. On the 22d of September, 1907, Mr. and Mrs. Chapin celebrated their golden wedding, on which occasion the ladies of the Presbyterian church of Knoxville served an excellent dinner while all the members of their family, their sons, daughters and grandchildren, were present—one hundred and forty in all. They have now traveled life's journey together for fifty-four years, their mutual love and confidence increasing as time has passed on. They are regarded as one of the most highly esteemed and worthy couples of the county, for their lives have ever been well spent in the faithful performance of duty and have been characterized by many good deeds. Mr. Chapin deserves much credit for the success which he has won, bringing him at last to a prominent position among the substantial residents of his adopted county.

REV. FREDERICK J. DUNN.

It has been said "Not the good that comes to us but the good that comes to the world through us is the measure of our success," and judged in this way the life of Rev. Frederick J. Dunn has been a most successful one, for as a minister of the gospel he has carried the glad tidings to many who have sat under his preaching and has influenced many lives for good. At the age of ninety-three years he is now living retired, an honored and venerable citizen of Knoxville. He was born in Oneida county, New York, May 22, 1819, a son of David and Philinda (Cady) Dunn, both of whom were natives of Oneida county, the former born November 14, 1791, and the latter August 5, 1796. In his early life the father worked as a farm hand but afterward learned the trades of a cooper and brick mason and worked along those lines in Oneida county and also in Herkimer and St. Lawrence counties. Subsequently he returned to Oneida county and after a short time removed to Lewis county, New York, where he made his home with his son Frederick and later also lived with his son Frederick in Illinois, passing away in Galva, Henry county, on the 28th of November, 1884, at the ripe old age of ninety-three years. He had long survived his wife who passed away at the home of her son, Frederick, on the 18th of January, 1858, when sixty-one years of age. The Rev. Dunn was at that time a resident of Rio, this county. The family included five daughters: Rhoda, now the deceased wife of Thomas Watson, of Knox county; Olive, who became the wife of Caleb H. Gates Brayton of St. Lawrence county, New York, who is now deceased; Cornelia P., the widow of Thomas Homiston; Jane Ann, who died in infancy; and Sarah Jane, who married John Gibbs. She resided in Lewis county, New York, for a time and afterward removed to Cherokee county, Kansas, where both passed away.

The Rev. Frederick J. Dunn was the third in order of birth in the family. He acquired his preliminary education in the public schools of Herkimer county, New York, and afterward attended the Free Will Baptist Seminary at Clinton, Oneida county, New York. The founder of that college was Mr. Kellogg, who afterward became the first president of Knox College at Galesburg. In further pursuit of his education Mr. Dunn attended Whitesboro Academy in Oneida county, New York, and subsequently took up the profession of teaching, which he followed through the winter seasons while in the summer months he worked at farm labor. In June, 1853, he arrived in Knox county, Illinois, first settling in Ontario, where he remained for ten years. On the expiration of that period he removed to Rio township and in company with Michael Metcalf built a sawmill in Henderson Grove which they conducted for one summer and then sold. Mr. Dunn next purchased a farm and continued to engage in the cultivation of the fields for several years. In 1858 he was licensed to preach as a minister of the United Brethren church and much of his life has been devoted to this holy calling. He was never absent from an annual conference during fifty-one years and is widely known to the membership of his denomination. He preached for four years at Mount Chappel, being there when the church was built. He has acted as minister in different churches in the county and other parts of the state and is now the oldest living minister in Knox county. For the past five years, however, he has lived retired in Knoxville and can look back over the past without regret and forward to the future without fear because his life has been an element for good in the communities, where he has resided. His zealous support of the cause of Christianity has aroused the interest and cooperation of others and his work has been of no restricted order.

On the 4th of March, 1846, in Oneida county, New York, the Rev. Dunn was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Susan P. Wetmore, who was born in that county July 13, 1823, and was a daughter of Ezra and Susan Wetmore, natives of Rhode Island, who removed to New York in early life. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Dunn were the following children. Lucia is the wife of Theo. Madison, a resident of the state of Washington, and they have one son, Frederick. William E., now living in Rio township, married Miss Addie Haskins and has two children, Roswell E. and Clark. Marian is the wife of William Wilson, of Kansas City, Kansas, and they have six children, May, Eva, George, Lucia, Nina and William. Roswell died June 3, 1882. The mother of these children passed away March 24, 1864, and in Henderson, Illinois, the Rev. Dunn was again married, on the 15th of February, 1865, his second union being with Maria Ryan, a native of Franklin county, Pennsylvania. They had two children: Frank A., deceased; and Frederick, a resident of Chicago who married Elsie Naly and has one child, Dorothy. Again Mr. Dunn was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, who died February 22, 1895, and on the 23d of September, 1897, he married Margaret E. Wallich, who was born in this county, April 16, 1854, and is a daughter of Jacob and Martha Wallich, natives of Pennsylvania, the former of German and the latter of Irish descent. Such in brief is the life history of Frederick J. Dunn, a man widely and favorably known in Knox county and honored wherever known. By precept and example he has taught the better things of life and his influence and teaching have led many to choose those things which are worth while and have actual value as factors in character building.

ALBERT WILLIAM HAMERSTRAND.

The agricultural interests of Lynn township have a worthy representative in Albert William Hamerstrand, who was born in that township on the 5th of February, 1878, his parents being John and Anna (Collison) Hamerstrand. The father was born in Småland, Sweden, May 29, 1840, and until he came to America at the age of twenty-eight years, was engaged in the carpenter's trade in Stockholm. Upon arriving in America he went directly to Altona, where he was employed by a railway but subsequently took up farming for Robert Wilber near Victoria. Later he was with C. Appell, but after seven years' employ rented the farm upon which his son Albert was born. He erected the house upon this place, and its substantiability attests his ability as a carpenter. Having in the course of eight years rented three different farms, he then purchased the farm on which they lived for twenty-three years, until the spring of 1909, when they retired and purchased a residence in Galva, Illinois, where they now reside, leaving the cultivation of the farm to their son, Albert William, who has now made it his home for over twenty-six years. Mrs. Hamerstrand was born the 3d of August, 1858, at Vester, Götland, Sweden, and came to this country with her parents at the age of ten she being the oldest of eight children, and a daughter of Andrew Magnus Collison. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Hamerstrand are: Albert William, who is the subject of this sketch; Elma, who is the wife of Nels Henrikson, an agriculturist of Lynn township and who has one child; and Fern, who is residing with her parents.

After finishing his common-school education Albert Hamerstrand assisted his father in the cultivation of the home farm but subsequently attended the Galva high school for one year, and later the Augustana Business College of Rock Island, from which he was graduated. After finishing these various courses he took up active farming and remained at home. His ability and progressiveness were of great value to his father, and together they cultivated one of the most profitable and highly productive farms in the township. On the 11th of January, 1905, Mr. Hamerstrand was married to Emily Elizabeth Johnson, the daughter of Hans and Betsy Johnson, born on the 24th of March, 1882. Hans and Betsy Johnson were the parents of three children: Arthur and Emanuel, who are residing at home, and Mrs. Hamerstrand. Mr. and Mrs. Hamerstrand are the parents of one son, Maurice William, born October 25, in 1905.

The republican party, with its progressive and successful measures of prosperity, and its ardent support of many of the policies which have brought about our national welfare, has won Mr. Hamerstrand's allegiance. He is at present serving as township clerk, an office which he has held for eleven years. He also holds the office of school director and telephone director. Both he and his wife are members of the Swedish Lutheran church of Galva, in which the former has served as auditor for many years and the latter has been an active member of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Sweden has frequently sent men to Knox county whose thrift, industry and progressiveness have aided materially in developing the natural resources of the county. Of these none have been more active than the Hamerstrands, who have always been energetic, diligent and untiring in their efforts to fulfill the duties which lay before them in their agricultural pursuits. By his close application to work and living in accordance with the strictest principles of integrity and honor, Mr. Hamerstrand has won for himself the respect and esteem of his fellow citizens.

ALBERT LENG.

One of the thoroughly progressive and enterprising agriculturists of Truro township is Albert Leng, who owns and operates two hundred and ninety-five acres of land, located three miles north of Williamsfield. He was born in Scarborough, Yorkshire, England, on July 2, 1841, and is a son of John and Ann (Woodall) Leng, who always made their home in the mother country, the father having passed away when our subject was a child of three years.

Albert Leng was educated in the common schools of England, where he resided until he had attained the age of twenty-nine years. Being an enterprising and ambitious young man, America had always appeared very attractive to him, as he felt convinced from the reports he had received, that better opportunities must be afforded for advancement here than in his native country, so in 1870 he took passage for the United States. When he arrived in this country he came directly to Illinois, first settling in Scott county, where he remained from June to October, when he went to Peoria county. He worked out as a farm hand for a time, thus acquiring sufficient capital to purchase eighty acres of land that he operated with excellent success until 1885. In the latter year he again changed his location, this time becoming a resident of Knox county, purchasing a place in the vicinity of Rochester. He owned this and also the farm in Peoria county until 1892, when he disposed of both places and bought the property where he now lives. During the period of his ownership he has placed many improvements on his farm, including a commodious country residence, suitable barns and substantial outbuildings. He is a man of progressive ideas and practical methods and as his circumstances have permitted has added to the comfort and convenience of his homestead by the introduction of various modern appliances and

RESIDENCE OF ALBERT LENG

Emanuel, who are residing at home, and Mrs. Hamerstrand. Mr. and Mrs. Hamerstrand are the parents of one son, Maurice William, born October 25, in 1905.

The republican party, with its progressive and successful measures of prosperity, and its ardent support of many of the policies which have brought about our national welfare, has won Mr. Hamerstrand's allegiance. He is at present serving as township clerk, an office which he has held for eleven years. He also holds the office of school director and telephone director. Both he and his wife are members of the Swedish Lutheran church of Galva, in which the former has served as auditor for many years and the latter has been an active member of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Sweden has frequently sent men to Knox county whose thrift, industry and progressiveness have aided materially in developing the natural resources of the county. Of these none have been more active than the Hamerstrands, who have always been energetic, diligent and untiring in their efforts to fulfill the duties which lay before them in their agricultural pursuits. By his close application to work and living in accordance with the strictest principles of integrity and honor, Mr. Hamerstrand has won for himself the respect and esteem of his fellow citizens.

ALBERT LENG.

One of the thoroughly progressive and enterprising agriculturists of Truro township is Albert Leng, who owns and operates two hundred and ninety-five acres of land, located three miles north of Williamsfield. He was born in Scarborough, Yorkshire, England, on July 2, 1841, and is a son of John and Ann (Woodall) Leng, who always made their home in the mother country, the father having passed away when our subject was a child of three years.

Albert Leng was educated in the common schools of England, where he resided until he had attained the age of twenty-nine years. Being an enterprising and ambitious young man, America had always appeared very attractive to him, as he felt convinced from the reports he had received, that better opportunities must be afforded for advancement here than in his native country, so in 1870 he took passage for the United States. When he arrived in this country he came directly to Illinois, first settling in Scott county, where he remained from June to October, when he went to Peoria county. He worked out as a farm hand for a time, thus acquiring sufficient capital to purchase eighty acres of land that he operated with excellent success until 1885. In the latter year he again changed his location, this time becoming a resident of Knox county, purchasing a place in the vicinity of Rochester. He owned this and also the farm in Peoria county until 1892, when he disposed of both places and bought the property where he now lives. During the period of his ownership he has placed many improvements on his farm, including a commodious country residence, suitable barns and substantial outbuildings. He is a man of progressive ideas and practical methods and as his circumstances have permitted has added to the comfort and convenience of his homestead by the introduction of various modern appliances and inventions. His fields are devoted to the raising of such cereals as are best adapted to the soil, all of the work on the fields now being done by Mr. Leng's sons. In addition to general farming he has made a specialty of stock-raising, both branches of the business having brought him very satisfactory returns. Furthermore, Mr. Leng is the owner of one hundred and forty acres near Milbank, South Dakota. His son, Luther E., recently bought two hundred and sixteen acres in Truro township, having sold his holdings in Peoria county to his brother E. G. Leng.

RESIDENCE OF ALBERT LENG

In Peoria county, on the 5th of February, 1874, Mr. Leng was united in marriage to Miss Mary Frances Aby, who was born on the 2d of September, 1851, and is a daughter of Elder and Mary Ann (Murphy) Aby. Nine children have been born of this marriage, as follows: Luther E., who was born on the 25th of February, 1875; James E., born November 23, 1876, now deceased; Mary S., born on the 23d of December, 1877, the wife of H. Spencer, of this county, and the mother of five children, three daughters and two sons; Lyman W., born on December 23, 1880, who married Jessie Keneer and has one child, that is now deceased; Lulu O., who was born October 17, 1882, and died January 15, 1908, the wife of W. F. Porter of Victoria, by whom she had two sons and one daughter; Robert N., born September 17, 1884; Ewart Gladstone, born on the 28th of December, 1887, who married Anna Rich, of Peoria county, and has two children; Edna E., born on October 6, 1889, the wife of George Keneer and the mother of one child; and Carl E., whose birth occurred on February 24, 1892.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Leng hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, among the congregation of which they number many friends, and his political support he accords to the populist party. He has always taken an active interest in township affairs and has served as road commissioner and school director and at the present time is justice of the peace. Much credit is due Mr. Leng for the prosperity he has achieved, as he came to this country with no capital save the strength and optimism that accompanies youth and tireless energy. He has directed his undertakings in an intelligent manner, manifesting rare business sagacity and foresight in the development of his interests and as a result has realized good dividends on the investment of his labor.

JOHN HAMILTON PATTERSON.

Although thirty-seven years have elapsed since John Hamilton Patterson passed away, he is still well remembered by many of the older citizens of Knoxville, as one of the promising agriculturists of his township. He was born in Adams county, Ohio, on the 14th of April, 1840, the only child of Alexander and Hannah (Smith) Patterson, who were natives of Dayton, Ohio. The father, who was an agriculturist, was engaged in farming in his native state for many years, but he and his wife later removed to Decatur, Indiana, where they both passed away.

John Hamilton Patterson was educated in the district schools, and while pursuing his studies also assisted his father with the work about the farm. At the age of sixteen, self-confidence asserted itself and he left the paternal home and came to Illinois, at that time considered a western border state. He located in Knox county in 1856 and engaged in farming, ultimately acquiring property of his own. Enterprising and ambitious, he applied himself energetically to whatever he undertook, directing his endeavors with foresight and intelligence. Just when his efforts began reaping financial returns and the future gave every assurance of promise his endeavors were terminated by death. He was accidentally killed by the falling wall of a burning building on the 18th of December, 1874, being at the time but thirty-four years of age.

On the 15th of February, 1861, Mr. Patterson was united in marriage to Miss Mary M. Brashear, whose birth occurred in Ohio, on the 6th of August, 1839. Her parents were Bazil and Eleanor (Shaw) Brashear, natives of Fayette county, Pennsylvania, where they were also married. During the early years of their domestic life they removed to Ohio and there the father engaged in farming for a time but he subsequently came to Knoxville, and here both parents passed away. Their family consisted of the following children: Elizabeth, who married a Mr. Engle and has passed away; John and Plaford, both of whom are also deceased; Bazil, who is a resident of Bond county, this state; Ruth, the widow of Robert Patterson, who served for four years in the Union army; and Mary M., the widow of John H. Patterson. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Patterson. Ira E., the eldest, who resides in Orange township, this county, married Miss Flora Thomas, of Springfield, Illinois, and they have two daughters, Edna and Frances. Harvey D., who is a resident of Missouri, married Mae Thomas of Springfield, this state, and they have three sons, Roy A., Fred L. and Harvey E. Frank A., who lives in Fulton county, Illinois, married Bessie Church of Cambridge and they have one child, Glendora, Emma M. has passed away.

In matters of citizenship Mr. Patterson was public-spirited and progressive, but he never sought political preferment, although he discharged his civic duties by appearing at the polls on election day, casting his ballot in support of the candidates of the republican party. During the period of his residence in Knox county, which covered eighteen years, he won and retained the friendship of many of its citizens, who held him in high esteem by reason of his many fine sterling qualities.

GEORGE F. HILTON, M. D.

Dr. George F. Hilton, engaged in the practice of medicine at St. Augustine, Knox county, Illinois, his recognized ability winning him a liberal patronage, was born in Fulton county, this state, December 8, 1855, his parents being David and Sarah A. (Bishop) Hilton. The ancestry can be traced back to several generations in this country and it is well known that the first of the name came from England. The great-great-grandfather was a native of Maine and William Hilton, the great-grandfather, was born in Wiscasset, Maine, August 15, 1759, and died July 14, 1846. His wife, Catherine B. Hilton, was born May 24, 1764, and died July 8, 1816. Their children were: David, who was born September 10, 1782, and died January 13, 1838; Hannah, who was born January 27, 1784, and died September 18, 1844; Martha, who was born February 9, 1786, and died May 6, 1819; Jessie, who was born May 1, 1788, and died in March, 1862; Joshua, who was born March 15, 1790, and died December 27, 1876; Nancy, who was born September 30, 1792, and died November 24, 1861; Thomas, who was born February 28, 1795, and died September 16, 1862; Oliver, who was born March 24, 1797, and died in May, 1877; Emma, who was born October 2, 1799, and died in February, 1875; Helen, who was born January 3, 1802, and died in August, 1883; Daniel, who was born July 19, 1804, and died in December, 1873; and Martha, who was born July 25, 1807, and died March 28, 1877.

Of this family Joshua Hilton was the grandfather of Dr. Hilton. He was born, as previously stated, March 15, 1790, and died December 27, 1876. His wife, Sally Hilton, was born June 1, 1794, and died March 21, 1881. Their children were: McKenney, who was born September 22, 1814; Catherine, who was born August 27, 1816, and died December 16, 1878; Asa, who was born December 22, 1819, and died February 3, 1820; Sarah, who was born March 10, 1821; Amos, who was born April 26, 1823, and died January 5, 1885; David, the father of our subject; Caroline, who was born August 27, 1832, and died May 5, 1836; and Joshua, who was born August 27, 1835.

David Hilton, the father of our subject, was born in Maine, June 24, 1827, and in early life removed to Ohio. In the late '50s he became a resident of Fulton county, Illinois, and spent his remaining days there upon a farm, his death occurring July 9, 1896, when he had reached the age of sixty-nine years. In early life he engaged in the butchering business in California, having made the trip to that state with ox teams, spending three years upon the Pacific coast. He married Sarah A. Bishop, who was born February 26, 1831, and died February 26, 1903. In their family were the following children. Jasper, who was born October 14, 1851, passed away on the 5th of October, 1852. Cyrus, the next of the family, was born on the 24th of February, 1853. George F., of this review, is the next younger. Henry W., born September 15, 1857, married Mary A. Maranville, who was born in 1861, and they became the parents of eleven children: Lola, who was born October 30, 1876, and died November 19, 1876; Orpha Bell, who was born May 24, 1879, and died March 20, 1910; Fannie, born April 21, 1881; David, who was born September 13, 1883, and died February 5, 1904; Dayton, born August 22, 1885; Ethel V., born December 29, 1887; Harley, born in March, 1889; Jesse, born May 7, 1890; Elra Ray, born July 6, 1892; Skeet, born September 19, 1895; and Ina, born October 28, 1897. Mary, the daughter of David and Sarah A. Hilton, was born August 19, 1859, and married Lewis K. Hoar, a resident of Vandalia, Illinois, who is known throughout the state as a very successful contractor and business man. Six children were born to them, namely: Effie May, who was born November 4, 1879, and died February 26, 1881; Bertha Estella, who was born October 27, 1881, and died August 9, 1889; Sarah Ellen, who was born August 12, 1884; Edna Fern, who was born June 15, 1887, and died July 12, 1910; Martha Lutta, who was born November 23, 1890, and died January 29, 1891; and Jesse Daniel, who was born November 21, 1891, and died October 21, 1892. John W., born March 13, 1862, passed away on the 13th of February, 1898. Stephen Leonard, born December 21, 1863, married Serilda Ann Moon, who was born January 18, 1868, and they became the parents of six children, namely: Ina May, born February 7, 1888; Charles David, who was born May 9, 1889, and died September 29, 1910; William Wesley, who was born November 2, 1890, and died November 8, 1895; Sarah Pearl, born February 28, 1896; Mabel Frances, born November 22, 1902; and Velva Dora, born September 4, 1904. Of this family Charles David was married, his wife being Alice Holman, who was born May 12, 1886, and they had one daughter, Helen J., born March 24, 1910. Jessie was born May 21, 1865. Martin L. was born September 12, 1867. Sarah E. was born January 12, 1870, and died on the 9th of February, 1871.

Dr. Hilton acquired his education in Cuba, Illinois, being graduated from the high school with the class of 1875. During his high-school days he also took up the study of medicine and in 1875 entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Keokuk, Iowa, from which he was graduated in 1879. Immediately afterward he began the practice of medicine in St. Augustine, Illinois, where he has since continued. He has practiced with phenomenal success here, his labors being attended with results that indicate his comprehensive knowledge of the science of medicine and his correct application of its principles. He has written many valuable articles on medical science pertaining to pathology and the treatment of disease and he always maintains that there are two important principles in medicine—first, the diagnosis of the case and second, the application of the remedy. He is now the owner of a fine office building and an attractive residence in St. Augustine and has also invested in railroad stock.

In 1881 Dr. Hilton was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Louise Supple, who was born in St. Augustine, June 15, 1858, and died November 28, 1890. They became the parents of three children: Leo, who was born May 22, 1882, and died April 20, 1884; Irene Frances, who was born May 22, 1885; and Charles Demott, who was born April 1, 1887, and is now in the employ of a railroad company, living in Kansas City, Missouri.

Dr. Hilton holds membership in the Catholic church and also belongs to the Modern Woodmen camp, No. 4234, and to the Royal Neighbors, No. 395. In politics he has been a lifelong democrat and, while he has never been a politician in the sense of office seeking, he has labored effectively in behalf of the cause of education during his nine years' service as school director. His professional relations are with the Knox County and Illinois State Medical Societies and at all times he keeps in touch with the advanced work, thought and purposes of the profession.

PROFESSOR GEORGE HOWARD BRIDGE.

Professor George Howard Bridge, supervisor of manual training, in the high school of Galesburg, was born in De Kalb county, Illinois, May 27, 1857. He is descended from English ancestry but comparatively little is known back of the last generation. His father, George Bridge, was a native of Dorchester, England, and was reared in Dorchester, where he afterward learned and followed the butcher's trade, continuing in that pursuit until he came to America about 1855. After establishing his home in DeKalb county, he there opened a butchering business which he continued until 1864, when he came to Galesburg and for a number of years was proprietor of a meat market here. He married Hannah (Read) Leggett, also a native of Suffolk and a daughter of Stephen and Mary (Howard) Read, who were likewise natives of England. Her father who was a farmer died in middle life and her mother reached an advanced age. In their family were twelve children including Mrs. Bridge. George Bridge spent the last years of his life in Nebraska and his widow is now living with her son George H. She was twice married, her first husband being Isaac Leggett, by whom she had one child, Walter, who is now deceased. The seven children born unto Mr. and Mrs. Bridge are: George H.; Everetta, the wife of William Putnam, of Kansas; Clara L., the wife of S. C. Greaves, of Harrison, Arkansas; Emma J., the wife of W. C. Whitmore, of Surprise, Nebraska; John R., of Galesburg; Mae, the wife of William Warren, of Monmouth, Illinois; and one who died in infancy.

Professor Bridge spent the first seven years of his life in the county of his nativity but has been a resident of Galesburg for forty-seven years, largely acquiring his education in the public schools of this city and in the Western Business College of Galesburg, from which he was graduated in 1879. For a time he was one of the proprietors of a commercial college at Lawrence, Kansas, in partnership with M. H. Barringer under the firm name of Bridge & Barringer, the connection being maintained for two years. He then returned to the Galesburg public schools as supervisor of penmanship in all of the schools, continuing to occupy that position for ten or fifteen years, during which time he had charge of the commercial work. In 1887, however, he organized the manual training department of which he is still the supervisor and under his direction there are now about four hundred and thirty boys pursuing the course. The Galesburg schools were among the first in the state to introduce manual training as well as to establish an elective course and were also among the first to introduce the practical phase of manual training. The boys are given instruction in all kinds of wood work and recently iron work has also been introduced. This is of marked assistance to the public-school pupils, preparing many of them for the practical and responsible duties which come later in life. Professor Bridge holds to high ideals and attempts to establish a standard that will produce thoroughness, efficiency and reliability. More than one man now successful in a chosen field of labor received the impetus for his progress in the instruction of Professor Bridge.

The 5th of April, 1881, was the wedding day of Professor Bridge and Miss Minerva I. Olin, who was born in Aurora, Kane county, Illinois, April 4, 1857. Her parents, Edwin C. and Cyntha Olin, however, were natives of New York, who became early residents of Aurora, coming to Illinois in 1853. In 1855 Mr. Olin entered the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, with whom he continued for nearly forty-five years, during most of the time in the capacity of bridge superintendent. The family removed to Galesburg in 1873. In 1902 Mr. Olin went to Conway, Iowa, to look after his farming interests, but about a year later passed away there on May 3, 1903. Mrs. Olin died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bridge, in Galesburg in 1908. In the family were two children, Minerva and Ida, the latter the wife of C. U.

Goldsmith, of Lincoln, Nebraska. Unto Professor and Mrs. Bridge have been born seven children. Glenn F., who was a graduate of the Galesburg high school and also attended the State University at Champaign, Illinois, for two years, died of mountain fever when twenty-two years of age, at Salida, Colorado. Earle R., who is a graduate of the high school and of Knox College, has taught for six years in the Galesburg high school and is now assistant supervisor of manual training. Arthur H., who, following his graduation from high school, spent two years in Knox College, is now managing a large farm in Cass county, North Dakota. Irene O. is a graduate of the high school and of Knox College, and Gordon H., Ruth J. and Edna are all pupils of the high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Bridge are members of the Baptist church, in the work of which they are actively and helpfully interested, contributing in many ways to various branches of the church work. For several years Professor Bridge was chairman of the board of deacons, is now chairman of the board of trustees and for two years was superintendent of the Sunday school. He votes with the republican party, but has never sought nor desired office, preferring that his public service should be of another character. A resident of Galesburg for forty-seven years, he has been connected with its public schools for thirty-one years of that time and his work in behalf of public instruction has been of a practical character and of far-reaching benefit. He is now the president of the Sixth Ward Improvement Society and vice president of the Galesburg Improvement Association. In other ways he has taken an active and helpful interest in the general welfare of this city and his cooperation can be counted upon to further any movement for the public good. His residence is at No. 1590 West Main street, where in 1900 he erected an elegant home, one of the finest in the city.

MRS. LYDIA M. HALL.

Mrs. Lydia M. Hall, who is now living in Yates City, has been a resident of Knox county since she was a child of nine years. She was born in Erie county, New York, and is a daughter of James and Sarah J. (Candee) Jobes, natives of Onondaga county, New York, where they were also reared and educated. After their marriage they located in Erie county, twenty miles south of Buffalo, whence they removed to Illinois. They first located in Kendall county and after residing there for seven years came to Knox county, settling in Salem township, in 1854, where they spent the remainder of their days, the father passing away at the age of eighty-five and the mother at ninety-one. Both were laid to rest in the cemetery at Uniontown. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Jobes there were born ten children. Wallace, a veteran of the Civil war, now residing in Tecumseh, Nebraska, married Amanda Buffin, who was reared in Knox county. Newton married Margaret Russell, who was born and reared in Salem township, this county, a daughter of Nicholas and Sarah Russell. Irvin, also a Civil war veteran, married Lucinda Lewis, now deceased, and is living in Seattle, Washington. Candee is married and resides in Abingdon, Illinois. Julia became the wife of Peter Cassler and now resides in New Jersey. Mary married Walter Faxom.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES JOBES

Goldsmith, of Lincoln, Nebraska. Unto Professor and Mrs. Bridge have been born seven children. Glenn F., who was a graduate of the Galesburg high school and also attended the State University at Champaign, Illinois, for two years, died of mountain fever when twenty-two years of age, at Salida, Colorado. Earle R., who is a graduate of the high school and of Knox College, has taught for six years in the Galesburg high school and is now assistant supervisor of manual training. Arthur H., who, following his graduation from high school, spent two years in Knox College, is now managing a large farm in Cass county, North Dakota. Irene O. is a graduate of the high school and of Knox College, and Gordon H., Ruth J. and Edna are all pupils of the high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Bridge are members of the Baptist church, in the work of which they are actively and helpfully interested, contributing in many ways to various branches of the church work. For several years Professor Bridge was chairman of the board of deacons, is now chairman of the board of trustees and for two years was superintendent of the Sunday school. He votes with the republican party, but has never sought nor desired office, preferring that his public service should be of another character. A resident of Galesburg for forty-seven years, he has been connected with its public schools for thirty-one years of that time and his work in behalf of public instruction has been of a practical character and of far-reaching benefit. He is now the president of the Sixth Ward Improvement Society and vice president of the Galesburg Improvement Association. In other ways he has taken an active and helpful interest in the general welfare of this city and his cooperation can be counted upon to further any movement for the public good. His residence is at No. 1590 West Main street, where in 1900 he erected an elegant home, one of the finest in the city.

MRS. LYDIA M. HALL.

Mrs. Lydia M. Hall, who is now living in Yates City, has been a resident of Knox county since she was a child of nine years. She was born in Erie county, New York, and is a daughter of James and Sarah J. (Candee) Jobes, natives of Onondaga county, New York, where they were also reared and educated. After their marriage they located in Erie county, twenty miles south of Buffalo, whence they removed to Illinois. They first located in Kendall county and after residing there for seven years came to Knox county, settling in Salem township, in 1854, where they spent the remainder of their days, the father passing away at the age of eighty-five and the mother at ninety-one. Both were laid to rest in the cemetery at Uniontown. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Jobes there were born ten children. Wallace, a veteran of the Civil war, now residing in Tecumseh, Nebraska, married Amanda Buffin, who was reared in Knox county. Newton married Margaret Russell, who was born and reared in Salem township, this county, a daughter of Nicholas and Sarah Russell. Irvin, also a Civil war veteran, married Lucinda Lewis, now deceased, and is living in Seattle, Washington. Candee is married and resides in Abingdon, Illinois. Julia became the wife of Peter Cassler and now resides in New Jersey. Mary married Walter Faxom.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES JOBES

She is living in Salem township and Mr. Faxom, who died in 1897, was both a farmer and mason by profession. The next in order of birth are Casper, who is a retired farmer, residing at Yates City, and Mrs. Hall. Sarah died at the age of six years. Emma, the youngest in this family, died in infancy. Mrs. Jobes was a member of the Presbyterian church. Politically Mr. Jobes was a republican, but never filled or sought public office. They were most estimable people and had a wide circle of acquaintances, who held them in the highest regard.

Mrs. Lydia M. Hall, the youngest now living, was but two years of age, when she accompanied her parents on their removal from New York to Illinois. She began her education in the district schools of Kendall county, supplementing the knowledge therein gained by further study in the schools of Salem township, where she was reared to womanhood.

In 1864, while yet in her early girlhood, Mrs. Hall, who has been married twice, became the wife of Matthew Buffum, who was born and reared in Ohio, a son of Stephen and Esther Buffum. They began their domestic life on a farm of three hundred acres in Salem township, where they made their home until Mr. Buffum's death. After his demise the greater part of the property was sold, but Mrs. Hall still owns one hundred and twenty acres located on sections 19 and 20 in Salem township. Mr. Buffum passed away in 1891 and was laid to rest in the Uniontown cemetery. He was a democrat in politics and always took an active interest in township affairs, having served both as road commissioner and school director.

Following the death of her first husband, Mrs. Hall removed to Yates City, where she has ever since resided, her farm being operated by tenants. Her second marriage was with Cyrus Hall, who was a native of Ohio and a son of Chauncey Hall. Mr. Hall died in 1906, and was at that time a retired farmer.

Mrs. Hall is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, in the work of which she takes an active and earnest interest. She is also a member of the Ladies' Aid Society and holds the office of treasurer in that organization. For a period of eighteen years Mrs. Hall has been a resident of Yates City, and numbers among its citizens many warm friends, to whom she has endeared herself through the kindly, helpful spirit and gracious manner that enable her to win and retain the high regard of those with whom she comes in contact.

MRS. CATHERINE U. GREEP.

Mrs. Catherine U. Greep, who is the widow of Hans Greep, formerly a well known agriculturist of Lynn township, is still residing upon the homestead. She was born February 14, 1851, in Galesburg, and is the daughter of Joel and Julia (Annis) Starboard. Joel Starboard was the son of John Starboard, an efficient carpenter and cabinet worker who passed away when his son was ten years of age, the mother having died six years previous. The orphaned son was reared by an aunt and came to Galesburg in 1842, where he followed the plow-makers' and shingle-makers' trade. Eleven years later, in March 1853, he removed to the present homestead in Lynn township, where he lived out an active and successful career. Mr. and Mrs. Starboard were the parents of four children:

Martha A., who is the wife of H. Lyke, of Iowa; Mary, who is married to Thomas Williams of Missouri; Ella N.; and Mrs. Catherine U. Greep, the subject of this review.

Until her marriage Mrs. Greep remained at home and assisted with the duties which come to hand on every farm. In 1873 she was married to Hans Greep, who was born in May, 1844, and who was a native of Sweden. When three years of age he came to America with his parents and settled with the Bishop Hill colony. His father, John Eric Greep, was a tailor by trade and was married to Catherine Johnson. His death occurred April 18, 1899, when he was eighty-two years of age, and his widow passed away in February, 1908, at the age of eighty-eight years. During his active career Mr. Greep was engaged in agricultural pursuits, first assisting his father and later farming independently in Lynn township. After his marriage he purchased the present Greep homestead in 1882, and twelve years later removed to Galva, Illinois, where he died in 1905. After the death of her husband Mrs. Greep returned to the farm, where she is now residing. They were the parents of three children: Orpha E., who is a home missionary in North Dakota; Theodore W., who has assumed the management of the home farm; and Olive S., who is residing with her mother.

Mrs. Greep traces her ancestry on the maternal line back to Samuel and Johanna (Thorndyke) Annis, the former a native of Maine who died in Victoria in 1854 at the age of ninety years and the latter, of Scotch-Irish descent, passed away in the same town. Their son, Ellison Annis, was born in 1792 in Waldo county, Maine. In early life he left his native state and crossed the country to the Illinois river on July 4, 1837, settling in Victoria on the 28th of July of that year. He was married to Catherine Maro, whose birth occurred, in 1796, in Boston and who passed away in 1871, while her husband died at the age of about eighty-nine years in July, 1880. He began life as a sailor and was in the war of 1812 drawing a land warrant for his service. During this service he first became acquainted with the western country.

Mrs. Greep's life has been devoted to her home duties and to the interests of her church. She holds membership in the Second Adventist church, and aims to live in accordance with the high principles of its teachings. Both she and her husband have been useful citizens in their community, because of their substantial moral worth and because of their constant devotion to duty.

GEORGE W. WITHERELL.

George W. Witherell is the owner of the Spring Brook Stock Farm, in the operation of which he is meeting with a gratifying degree of success. He is a native of Indiana, his birth having occurred in Washington county, on the 8th of September, 1845, and a son of Ephraim H. and Rebecca (Donaldson) Witherell. Mr. Witherell traces his ancestry back to the colonial days, his great-grandfathers in both lines having participated in the Revolution, while his grandfather, Witherell, was a captain of artillery in the war of 1812, and his grandfather, Donaldson, a captain of infantry. The paternal ancestors came from Vermont, where his father was born in 1816, but when a child of two years he was taken to Pennsylvania by his parents and there he was reared and educated. After leaving school he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed during the greater part of his active life. The mother of our subject was born in Erie county, Pennsylvania, in 1818, and it was there she and Mr. Witherell were married and spent the early days of their domestic life. In 1840 they removed to Washington county, Indiana, where for five years he followed his trade and also that of shoemaker. At the expiration of that period they again started westward, this time settling in Peoria county, Illinois, continuing to make their home there until 1851, when they came to Knox county. There they settled on a farm in Kickapoo township, but at the end of two years located in Knoxville, and here the father passed away in 1908, at the age of ninety-two years, while the mother was seventy-one at the time of her demise. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Witherell consisted of one daughter, Ursula, who died in 1861, and six sons, who are as follows: Loren R., who is a resident of Knoxville; George W., our subject; Willard, who is living in California; Erie, whose home is in Missouri; Silas, who is a resident of Springfield, Missouri; and Oscar, who passed away in 1905.

Practically the entire life of George W. Witherell has been spent in Knox county, as he was only a child of six years when he came here with his parents. He obtained his education in the common schools and when old enough to become self-supporting decided to take up agriculture for his life vocation. He located on his present farm just after his marriage in 1866, and has devoted his entire attention to its cultivation and the raising of stock for forty-five years. It contains one hundred acres of fertile land, that is devoted to such cereals as are best adapted to the soil and climate, and pasturage for the stock. As his means have permitted Mr. Witherell has improved his place by the addition of many modern conveniences, characteristic of the spirit of progress he has ever manifested in his undertakings. He has a fine grade of cattle, mostly Shorthorns and Jerseys, of which he makes a specialty, and is constantly improving the line by careful breeding. In the administration of his affairs he evidences the clear judgment, discretion and intelligence that ultimately bring prosperity, particularly when united with enterprise and diligence.

Mr. Witherell was united in marriage on the 17th of May, 1866, at Knoxville, to Miss Martha A. Stolloper, who was born in Washington county, Maryland, on February 28, 1847. The parents of Mrs. Witherell were Henry and Harriet Stolloper, also natives of Maryland, whence they removed to Knox county fifty years ago. The mother is still living but the father passed away when Mrs. Witherell was a child. Eight children were born of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Witherell, as follows: Flora, who is the wife of George Breedlaugh, of Knox county; Minnie, who married John Dredge, also of Knoxville; Etta, the wife of Harry Woolsey, likewise of Knoxville; Daisy, who became the wife of James Ferrell, of Galesburg; Clara, who married Ray Howser, of Galesburg; Harmon, who married Lola Myers, now residing in Kingston, Kansas; Arthur, whose wife was Miss Mamie Peterson of Knoxville, a resident of this county; and Clyde, who married Miss Mae Dawson, of Dahinda, now a resident of Knoxville.

Mr. Witherell is a veteran of the Civil war, having enlisted in Company A, Seventy-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and gone to the front on the 11th of February, 1863, where he remained until the close of hostilities. He saw much active service, having participated in fourteen battles, the most important being those of Vicksburg and Cross Roads, and he was also present at the siege of Mobile. On the 15th of August, 1865, he was mustered out at New Orleans, receiving his discharge at Springfield, this state, on the 2d of September, 1865. He is a charter member of Post No. 239, of the Grand Army of the Republic, in which he has held all of the chairs. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America, being a charter member of the Knoxville camp, with which he has been identified for twenty-four years and has held all of the chairs, and he also belongs to the Fraternal Reserve Association. In matters of faith both he and Mrs. Witherell are Methodists, and take an active interest in the work of their church, among the membership of which they number many friends.

JAMES W. COX.

James W. Cox, a prominent and respected resident of Abingdon, has for more than two decades served as president of the Globe Shirt & Overall Company, one of the leading manufacturing enterprises of Knox county. His birth occurred in Indian Point township, this county, on the 12th of May, 1855, his parents being John and Rebecca (Bellwood) Cox, both of whom were natives of Ohio. The father came to Knox county, Illinois, in early manhood, about the year 1850, while the mother was brought here by her parents when a little maid of about six. Following his marriage John Cox located on a farm in Indian Point township, residing thereon until called to his final rest in 1893, when about sixty-five years of age. His widow still survives and makes her home with our subject. She has spent practically her entire life in Knox county and is well known and highly esteemed within its borders.

James W. Cox was reared under the parental roof and supplemented his preliminary education, obtained in the district schools, by a course of study at Hedding College. Subsequently he followed the profession of teaching for five years, imparting clearly and readily to others the knowledge that he had acquired. In 1880 he turned his attention to merchandising, first conducting an establishment at Albert Lea, Minnesota. A short time afterward he came to Abingdon, Illinois, and opened a store here, being one of the leading general merchants of the town for about five years. After abandoning mercantile pursuits he was not connected with business interests for about a year. In 1889, however, in association with S. T. Mosser, he established the Globe Shirt & Overall Company. Business was begun on a modest scale on the site now occupied by the Mercantile, but these quarters were soon found inadequate and a removal was made to the present location. The rapid growth of the business required frequent enlargements of the plant, which today is a modern structure of two stories and covers a quarter of a block. Employment is furnished to from one hundred and seventy-five to two hundred operatives. Mr. Cox is a man of excellent executive ability and sound judgment, carrying forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes. In addition to his manufacturing interests he is also a factor in financial circles as a director of the First State & Savings Bank of Abingdon.

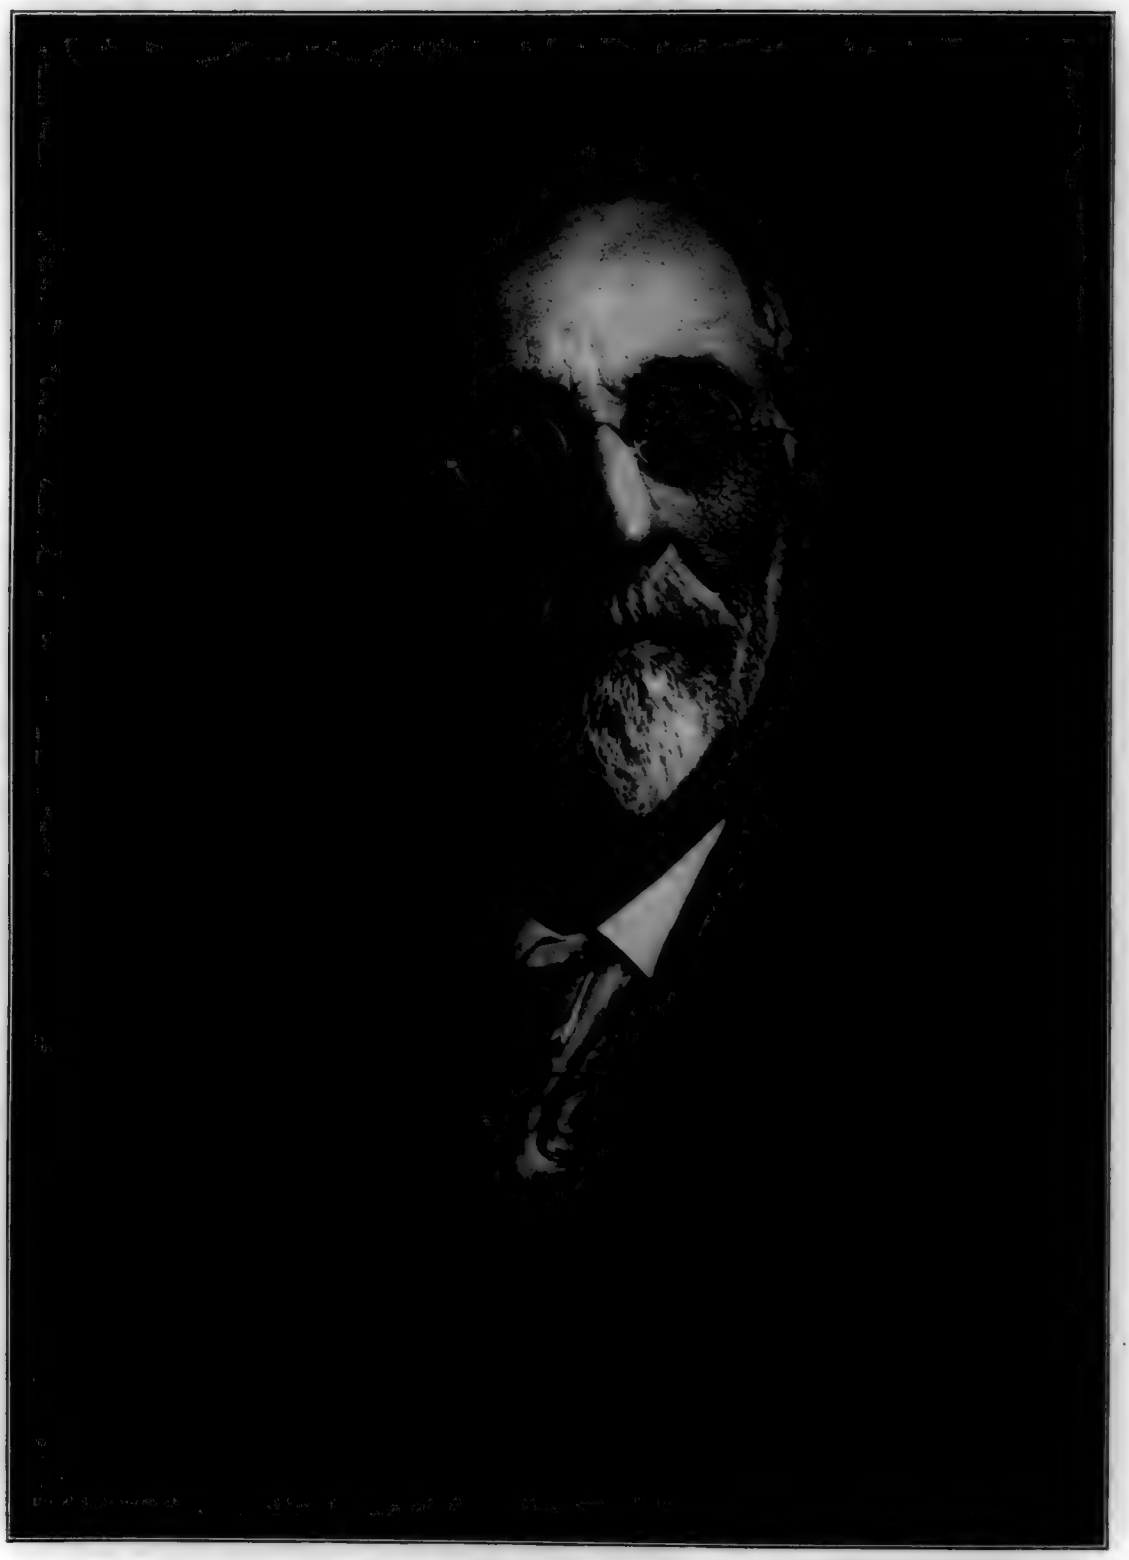
In politics Mr. Cox is independent, supporting men and measures rather than party. A stanch friend of the cause of education, he has served as a member of the board of education for the past ten or twelve years and is now acting as its president. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to Abingdon Lodge, No. 184. He has spent almost his entire life within the borders of Knox county and is widely recognized as one of its representative and esteemed citizens.

ANDREW JACKSON ROSS.

Andrew Jackson Ross is one of the well known retired farmers of Lynn township who has taken an active part in the agricultural development of this section and who is now enjoying the fruits of his former labor. He was born on the 14th of April, 1835, in Camden county, New Jersey, and is a son of Benjamin and Nancy (Norcross) Ross. He is a grandson of Andrew Ross, who was a native of Scotland and came to New Jersey when but a young man. He was engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred in 1839. Benjamin Ross was also a native of Camden county, New Jersey, and was an agriculturist throughout his entire active career. His death occurred in 1856, when he was fifty years of age. In politics he gave his support to the democratic party and held various township offices. The mother's birth occurred in 1806 and she passed away in her native state, New Jersey, in 1895. She was a daughter of Joseph and Martha (Sloan) Norcross, the former of whom was an agriculturist and of English descent. To Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Ross eleven children were born, five of whom survive: Joseph, who is residing in Camden, New Jersey; Hannah, the wife of Thomas McCann, of New Jersey; Andrew J., of this review; Edward, who is also living in New Jersey; and Patience, who is the widow of J. T. Howard, of New Jersey.

After finishing his education in the district schools near his home, Andrew J. Ross worked out by the month until 1859, when he removed to Knox county and located upon the farm which is now known as the Gibbs farm. Subsequently he came to Victoria township and from 1870 until 1894 resided there. After he left that township he removed to the property upon which he is now living retired. In addition to general farming he also engaged in stock-raising and in both of these undertakings his labor and efforts were amply rewarded by the increasing returns which were annually yielded to him. He instituted many reforms as fast as they were advanced by leading agriculturists in the country and in this way raised the standard of the science of farming in this township. Because of his long experience in agricultural pursuits his advice is frequently asked and always heeded, his judgment being based upon the results which he received by careful and untiring efforts.



On the 5th of September, 1858, Mr. Ross was married to Miss Mary Ann Downs, whose birth occurred in 1824 and who passed away in 1901. She was a daughter of Charles and Patience (Chew) Downs, both of whom were natives of Ireland. The father was engaged in farming and in the sawmill business. Their deaths occurred in 1867 and 1871 respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Ross were the parents of two children. Ella, the eldest, was born June 26, 1859, and is at home. Elizabeth, born May 3, 1867, is the wife of John R. Goff and the mother of two children: Ford, who is married to Ora Todd and has one daughter, Lillian; and Grace Mildred, whose birth occurred October 31, 1886, and who became the wife of David Craig, a son of David and Mary (Cowell) Craig, of Missouri. To Mr. and Mrs. David Craig, Jr., three children were born, Howard, Mildred and Lucille. The death of Mrs. Ross occurred on the 17th of May, 1901.

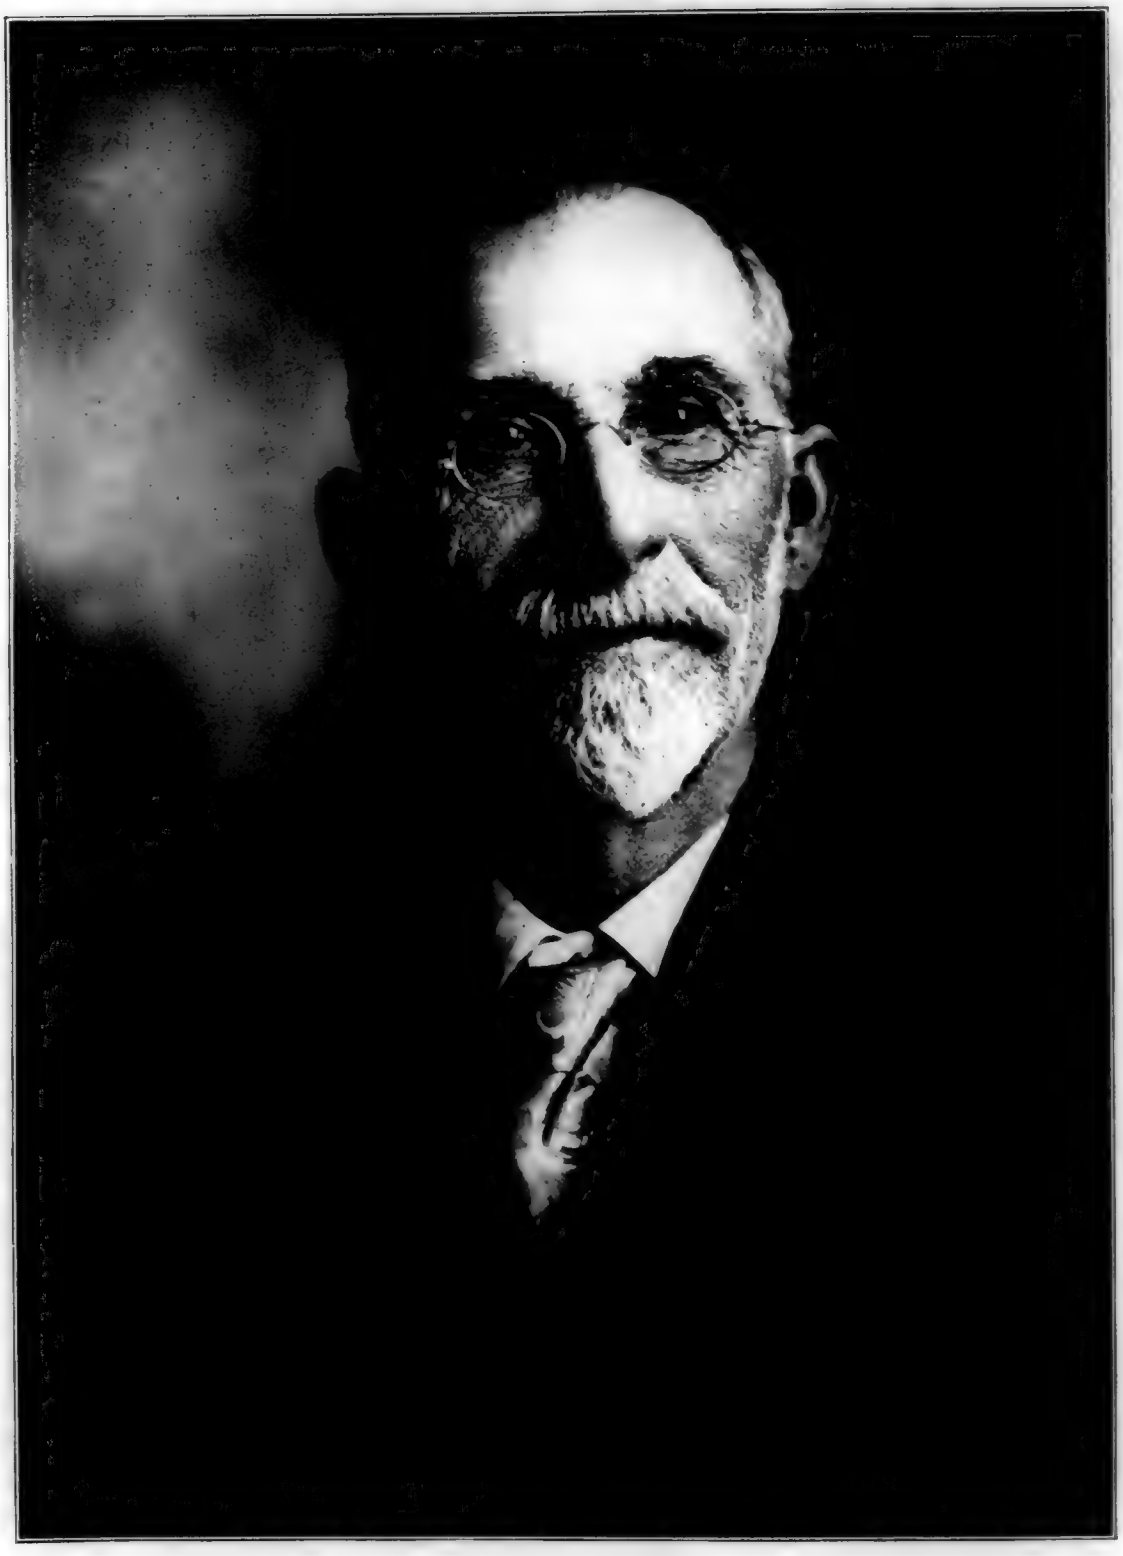
Politically Mr. Ross is affiliated with the republican party, by whom he was elected to the office of roadmaster of the township. In religious faith he is affiliated with the Christian church of La Fayette. For more than fifty years Mr. Ross has been a resident of Knox county and during this period he has made his influence felt in the circles with which he has been connected and has performed a citizen's duty in the development of the township. He is a man of noble qualities of character, of strong and resolute purpose, industrious and enterprising, and, well known throughout the community for his uprightness and honesty, he merits and enjoys the respect and confidence of his neighbors and many friends.

CHARLES D. NORTH.

Prominent in financial as well as agricultural circles in Knox county, Charles D. North, president of the Bank of Yates City and owner of one of the finest farms in Elba township, resides four miles north of Yates City. Born in Pendleton county, Virginia, October 8, 1844, he was a son of Thomas J. North, whose birth occurred in 1801, in Loudoun county, Virginia, whither Caleb North, the great-grandfather of our subject, had come from Ireland, leaving there May 1, 1729, and landing here July 20. George North, the grandfather, was born in 1751 and was an officer in the Revolutionary war. Thomas J. North was a miller by trade and followed this occupation in Virginia until 1875, when he removed to Yates City, Illinois, and lived retired, dying here several years later. He married Eliza Hinkle, who was a daughter of Jesse Hinkle, a Methodist Episcopal preacher. The Hinkle family are of Dutch origin and the first ancestor to come to this country was Anthony Jacob Hinkle, who settled in Virginia. To Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. North fourteen children were born, of whom three are now living, Sarah K., Thomas G. and Charles D.

Charles D. North obtained his education in Virginia and on leaving school enlisted in the army with the Sixty-second Virginia Cavalry, under the command of Fitzhugh Lee, and served during the last three years of the war. He took part in some of the important engagements and was wounded three times. When the war was over, he settled in Knox county in 1866 and engaged in the

CHARLES D. NORTH



On the 5th of September, 1858, Mr. Ross was married to Miss Mary Ann Downs, whose birth occurred in 1824 and who passed away in 1901. She was a daughter of Charles and Patience (Chew) Downs, both of whom were natives of Ireland. The father was engaged in farming and in the sawmill business. Their deaths occurred in 1867 and 1871 respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Ross were the parents of two children. Ella, the eldest, was born June 26, 1859, and is at home. Elizabeth, born May 3, 1867, is the wife of John R. Goff and the mother of two children: Ford, who is married to Ora Todd and has one daughter, Lillian; and Grace Mildred, whose birth occurred October 31, 1886, and who became the wife of David Craig, a son of David and Mary (Cowell) Craig, of Missouri. To Mr. and Mrs. David Craig, Jr., three children were born, Howard, Mildred and Lucille. The death of Mrs. Ross occurred on the 17th of May, 1901.

Politically Mr. Ross is affiliated with the republican party, by whom he was elected to the office of roadmaster of the township. In religious faith he is affiliated with the Christian church of La Fayette. For more than fifty years Mr. Ross has been a resident of Knox county and during this period he has made his influence felt in the circles with which he has been connected and has performed a citizen's duty in the development of the township. He is a man of noble qualities of character, of strong and resolute purpose, industrious and enterprising, and, well known throughout the community for his uprightness and honesty, he merits and enjoys the respect and confidence of his neighbors and many friends.

CHARLES D. NORTH.

Prominent in financial as well as agricultural circles in Knox county, Charles D. North, president of the Bank of Yates City and owner of one of the finest farms in Elba township, resides four miles north of Yates City. Born in Pendleton county, Virginia, October 8, 1844, he was a son of Thomas J. North, whose birth occurred in 1801, in Loudoun county, Virginia, whither Caleb North, the great-grandfather of our subject, had come from Ireland, leaving there May 1, 1729, and landing here July 20. George North, the grandfather, was born in 1751 and was an officer in the Revolutionary war. Thomas J. North was a miller by trade and followed this occupation in Virginia until 1875, when he removed to Yates City, Illinois, and lived retired, dying here several years later. He married Eliza Hinkle, who was a daughter of Jesse Hinkle, a Methodist Episcopal preacher. The Hinkle family are of Dutch origin and the first ancestor to come to this country was Anthony Jacob Hinkle, who settled in Virginia. To Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. North fourteen children were born, of whom three are now living, Sarah K., Thomas G. and Charles D.

Charles D. North obtained his education in Virginia and on leaving school enlisted in the army with the Sixty-second Virginia Cavalry, under the command of Fitzhugh Lee, and served during the last three years of the war. He took part in some of the important engagements and was wounded three times. When the war was over, he settled in Knox county in 1866 and engaged in the cultivation of the soil, first renting land and, later on, purchasing a tract of his own. He made a number of purchases at various times and now he and his wife own three hundred and twenty acres, upon which their home is situated, and another tract of three hundred and twenty acres six miles north of Yates City, besides thirty acres located six miles north of Yates City and thirty-six acres three miles from the home place. Mr. North is the president of the Bank of Yates City, of which L. A. Lawrence is the vice president and Jack Mason the cashier, and he is likewise the owner of a one-fourth interest in the National Coal Company of Middle Grove, which is capitalized for fifty thousand dollars.

CHARLES D. NORTH

Charles D. North came to Yates City on the 20th of March, 1866, and there was married, on the 22d of December, 1875, to Mary Sophia Nicholson, the only child of James H. and Catharine (King) Nicholson. They have resided on their present farm near Yates City since 1877. In their family were the following children: Adah Katharine, born September 15, 1877; Ralph Nicholson, born August 20, 1879; Earl James Hasbrouck, born January 25, 1881; Carl Clinton, born May 25, 1882, who was married to Edith Victoria Slayton, January 26, 1910; Harold Edward, born July 25, 1884; and Elsie Louise, born June 9, 1889. All of the sons are engaged in agricultural pursuits with the exception of Harold, who is bookkeeper in the Bank of Yates City.

Since exercising the right of franchise Mr. North has been affiliated with the democratic party and has served as road commissioner and for twenty-five years as school director. He is a member of the Universalist church and in the conduct of his life exemplifies its principles of open-mindedness and truth as well as the lofty ideals of the Masonic order to which he belongs, being a member of the blue lodge and the chapter of Yates City and of the commandery at Galesburg. Mr. North possesses singular force of will and the power to execute whatever enterprises he chooses to undertake, and it is his determination and his fearlessness in meeting obstacles that have won for him his remarkable success in life.

HEMAN P. SMITH.

Heman P. Smith, who is living retired upon his farm in Lynn township, Knox county, has devoted almost his entire life to agricultural pursuits. He was born in Cortland county, New York, on the 14th of November, 1833. His paternal grandfather, Robert Smith, was a native of England, having come to America in 1775, when George Washington was organizing his army at White Plains. Robert Smith immediately enlisted and served through the entire war, being a subordinate officer under Washington. After the war he was given a patent to land in Cortland, New York. During the political organization of New York state he was the first town clerk elected in Schenectady, and during his services the township offices were at his home and all the meetings were held there. Thereafter he moved onto the land granted him which he farmed for some time. Shortly after his election to the office of clerk his son, the father of the subject of this review, was sent to a neighbor's for a supply of dishes. Being delayed on his errand, he was severely punished by his father upon his return.

The reprimand seemed uncalled for to the boy and he replied to his father, that just because he had been elected town clerk he need not feel so big. This anecdote was subsequently repeated to Washington, who enjoyed it greatly. The grandmother was in her maidenhood Miss Grace Braithwait. Both the grandparents passed away before Heman P. was born. The parents, William and Lorinda (Badger) Smith, were natives of New York state and Ohio, respectively. William Smith came to Knox county in 1844 and located upon the property which is now known as the Smith farm. In New York state he engaged in milling but took up agricultural pursuits after his removal to Knox county. His death occurred in 1880, when he was ninety-two years of age. Mrs. Smith was a daughter of Edmond and Margaret Badger, who came to reside with their daughter after they left Ohio. Mrs. Smith passed away in 1890, when she was one hundred years of age. She had become the mother of eight children, three of whom survive: Heman P., who is the subject of this review; Austin, who is living in La Fayette; and Erastus, of Lynn township.

The boyhood and youth of Heman P. Smith were spent at home, his time and attention being divided between the duties of the schoolroom, the pleasures of the playground and the work on the home farm. When he was twenty-one years of age he taught school for a short time in Altona and attended Beloit College, of Beloit, Wisconsin, for some time, before locating permanently upon the family homestead. Agricultural pursuits formed his chief occupation during the remainder of his life excepting while he was in service in the Civil war. He enlisted on the 9th of August, 1862, at Altona, with Company G, Eighty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Thomas Whiting. For three years he served in the Army of the Cumberland, which was commanded by General Sherman, and during this time he saw active service at Nashville, Louisville, Chattanooga and Atlanta. He was taken ill and was in a hospital for nine months before being mustered out because of disability for further service. He immediately returned home and took up the cultivation of his farm, which he had left in charge of his brother. His hard labor, persistency and untiring energy won him a sufficient competence that now permits him to live retired and enjoy the comforts of life. His farm presents a neat and thrifty appearance and is one of the most highly productive in Lynn township. Because of his long identification with agricultural interests his advice is frequently sought and is always heeded in matters pertaining to farm development.

In 1865 Mr. Smith was married to Miss Harriet E. Thompson, whose birth occurred on the 4th of August, 1838, in Goshen, Connecticut, and is a daughter of John F. and Harriet E. (Reed) Thompson. Mrs. Thompson was a daughter of William and Amy (Crandall) Reed, who came to Knox county before the Smith family located here. Throughout his active career Mr. Thompson followed the blacksmith's trade. To Mr. and Mrs. Smith seven children have been born: Lemont, who is married to Minnie Short, by whom he has four children; Lethay, who is engaged as a hospital nurse; Fred, an engineer of Galesburg, who is married to Emma Blene and has seven children; Abbie and Addie, twins, the former being engaged in teaching school and the latter at home; Urban, of Lynn township, who is married to Myrtle Jones, and has two children; and Bertha, of Kansas City, Missouri.

In politics Mr. Smith has always given his support to the democratic party and has served as assessor of the township and for many years as member of the school board. He holds membership in the Grand Army post of Victoria and both he and Mrs. Smith are members of the Baptist church of Galva. Because of his long residence in this county he has been a witness of much of its development, in which he has taken more than a citizen's interest and share, and is a well known figure in social and agricultural circles.

ABRAM MYERS EIKER.

Abram Myers Eiker for many years closely identified with the agricultural interests of Knox county and now living retired on his farm of one hundred and seventy acres in Orange township, was born in Adams county, Pennsylvania, June 18, 1840. His father, Abram Eiker, a native of Pennsylvania, was a farmer and blacksmith by occupation and also for many years operated a gristmill. He was married to Josephine Myers, who was born in Maryland, and in 1861 removed his family—consisting of his wife, four sons and one daughter, of whom Abram M. Eiker, his brother Isaac and Elizabeth Anderson survive—to Knox county, Illinois, settling on a farm that he purchased in Orange township. There he lived until the death of his wife when he made his home with his two children, living a peaceful existence which was terminated eight years ago.

Passing his boyhood days in Adams county, Pennsylvania, Abram M. Eiker was reared and educated in that locality. On coming to Illinois at the age of twenty-one he entered the employment of his uncle on his farm in Knox county. Before long he was prepared to engage in farming for himself and forty-six years ago, in 1865, he bought the farm of one hundred and seventy acres on which he now lives. At that time the country was only wild prairie land and tangled underbrush, but this he cleared and developed, improving it until it is now one of the flourishing farms in this section. He built the present substantial house and the barns, and devoted himself to the various departments of general farming, making a specialty of raising cattle and horses. Some years ago he withdrew from active work on the place and now his son operates it continuing his father's wise administration and thorough-going methods of cultivation.

In 1861 Mr. Eiker was united in marriage, in Adams county, Pennsylvania, to Miss Martha Krise, a native of Pennsylvania and a daughter of George Krise, a farmer in Adams county. Mrs. Eiker passed away in 1905, leaving her husband and five children to mourn her loss. Their names are: George L., a farmer in Orange township; Flora B., the wife of Curt Clark of Orange township; Bert K., living on a farm in Chestnut township; Ross, who operates his father's farm; and Henrietta, the wife of Oren Smith, living in Kansas.

On January 15, 1906, Mr. Eiker was again married, the second union being with Miss Letitia Prushafer, born near Monmouth, Illinois, March 9, 1867. She was a daughter of Fred and Hannah Prushafer, natives of Germany who became pioneer settlers of Illinois, locating near Monmouth, where they lived for twenty-eight years when they removed to the county line and resided there until their death. The children of this marriage are: Mary, the wife of William B. Briggs, living near Victoria; Lucy, the wife of Alfred Myrick, living in Knox county northeast of Knoxville; Grant and Charles, living in Butte, Montana; and John, a farmer in the state of Washington.

Mr. Eiker votes with the republicans and has been county commissioner for a period of nine years and school director in Orange township for sixteen years. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church while Mrs. Eiker belongs to the Christian church. Their home is pleasant and hospitable, being always open to the many friends who often come to seek their generous and cordial welcome, and who pronounce Mr. and Mrs. Eiker a charming host and hostess.

JACOB M. OBERHOLTZER.

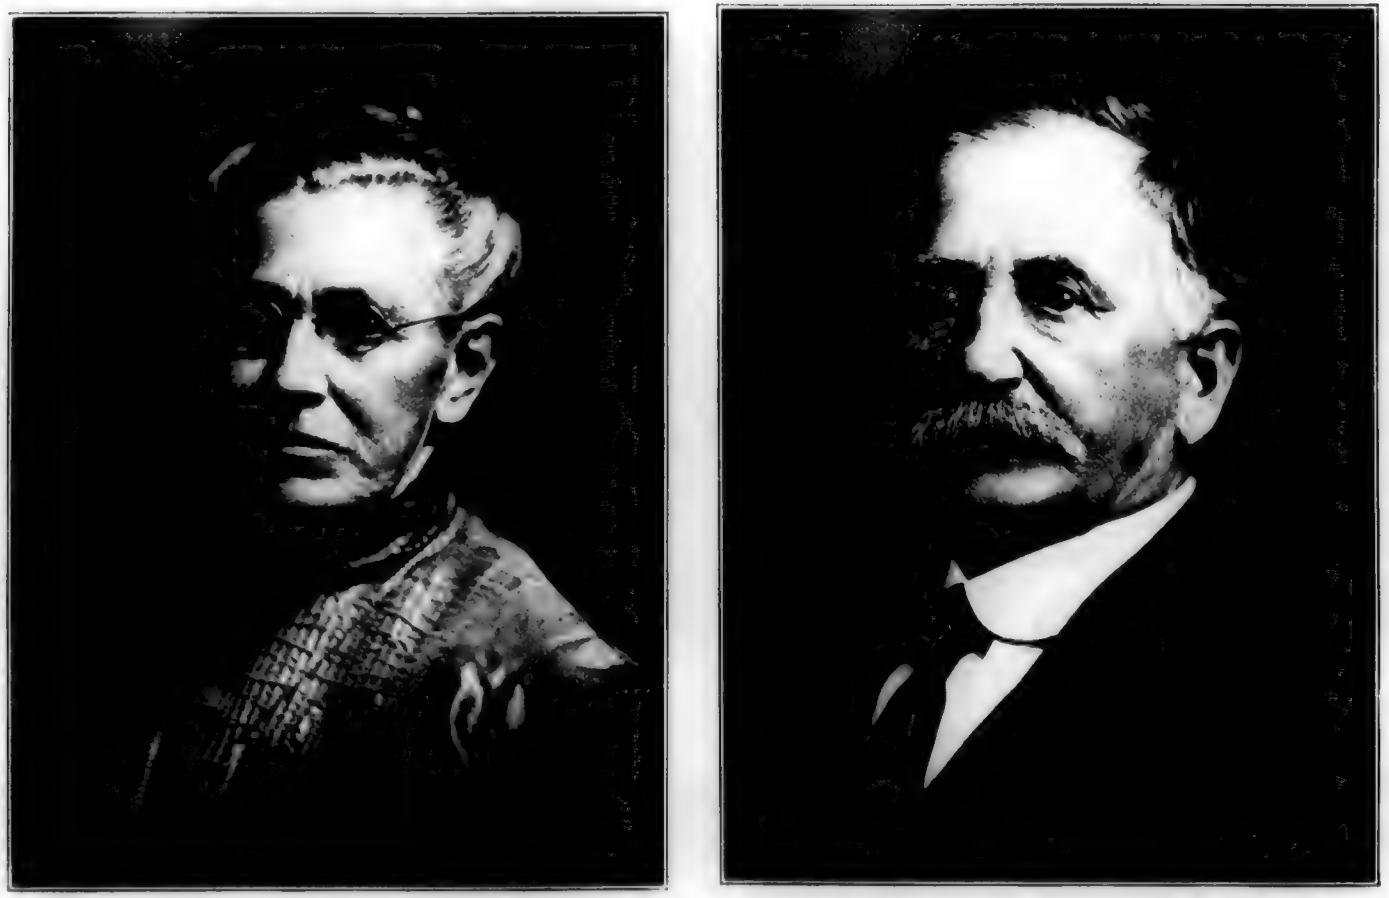
Jacob M. Oberholtzer is a retired farmer, living in Knoxville. He was for many years identified with general agricultural pursuits and is still owner of four hundred and sixty-eight acres in Elba and Truro townships. His birth occurred in the former township, March 14, 1845, his parents being Henry and Martha (Tucker) Oberholtzer, both of whom were natives of Ohio, whence they removed to Knox county between the years of 1838 and 1840. The family, as the name indicates, comes of German ancestry and was founded in America by Samuel Oberholtzer, the grandfather of J. M. Oberholtzer, who, upon crossing the Atlantic, settled in Ohio, where he followed the occupation of farming. He was married three times and had a family of twenty-one children. His death occurred near Findlay, Hancock county, Ohio. His son, Henry Oberholtzer, was born in the Buckeye state and came to Knox county with Samuel Tucker, settling in Elba township. The Tuckers were also early settlers in this part of the state, and on their removal from Ohio settled near Williamsfield. They were farming people, and Henry Oberholtzer was employed by Mr. Tucker, who afterward became his father-in-law. He wedded Martha Tucker in the early '40s, and their son, Jacob M. Oberholtzer, was the eldest of four children. Following his marriage Henry Oberholtzer began farming on his own account in Elba township, where he resided until the spring of 1865, when his life's labors were ended in death.

J. M. Oberholtzer, spending his youth on the home farm in Elba township, attended the common school throughout the winter months and worked in the fields during the summer seasons. The occupation to which he was reared he determined to make his life work, and continuously carried on farming until 1904, when he retired to private life, establishing his home in the village of Knoxville, where he is now resting from further labor. Throughout his well conducted business interests he acquired a substantial competence that now supplies him with all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. He is the owner of four hundred and sixty-eight acres of land in Elba and Truro townships, and the rental therefrom is the source of a gratifying income.

On the 28th of October, 1869, Mr. Oberholtzer was united in marriage to Miss Laura A. Wheeler, a daughter of Moses and Cynthia (Walker) Wheeler. The Wheeler family is of Swiss origin, and the great grandfather of Mrs. Oberholtzer, a native of Switzerland, was the first of the name to come to America.

MR. AND MRS. J. M. OBERHOLTZER

liam B. Briggs, living near Victoria; Lucy, the wife of Alfred Myrick, living in Knox county northeast of Knoxville; Grant and Charles, living in Butte, Montana; and John, a farmer in the state of Washington.



Mr. Eiker votes with the republicans and has been county commissioner for a period of nine years and school director in Orange township for sixteen years. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church while Mrs. Eiker belongs to the Christian church. Their home is pleasant and hospitable, being always open to the many friends who often come to seek their generous and cordial welcome, and who pronounce Mr. and Mrs. Eiker a charming host and hostess.

JACOB M. OBERHOLTZER.

Jacob M. Oberholtzer is a retired farmer, living in Knoxville. He was for many years identified with general agricultural pursuits and is still owner of four hundred and sixty-eight acres in Elba and Truro townships. His birth occurred in the former township, March 14, 1845, his parents being Henry and Martha (Tucker) Oberholtzer, both of whom were natives of Ohio, whence they removed to Knox county between the years of 1838 and 1840. The family, as the name indicates, comes of German ancestry and was founded in America by Samuel Oberholtzer, the grandfather of J. M. Oberholtzer, who, upon crossing the Atlantic, settled in Ohio, where he followed the occupation of farming. He was married three times and had a family of twenty-one children. His death occurred near Findlay, Hancock county, Ohio. His son, Henry Oberholtzer, was born in the Buckeye state and came to Knox county with Samuel Tucker, settling in Elba township. The Tuckers were also early settlers in this part of the state, and on their removal from Ohio settled near Williamsfield. They were farming people, and Henry Oberholtzer was employed by Mr. Tucker, who afterward became his father-in-law. He wedded Martha Tucker in the early '40s, and their son, Jacob M. Oberholtzer, was the eldest of four children. Following his marriage Henry Oberholtzer began farming on his own account in Elba township, where he resided until the spring of 1865, when his life's labors were ended in death.

J. M. Oberholtzer, spending his youth on the home farm in Elba township, attended the common school throughout the winter months and worked in the fields during the summer seasons. The occupation to which he was reared he determined to make his life work, and continuously carried on farming until 1904, when he retired to private life, establishing his home in the village of Knoxville, where he is now resting from further labor. Throughout his well conducted business interests he acquired a substantial competence that now supplies him with all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. He is the owner of four hundred and sixty-eight acres of land in Elba and Truro townships, and the rental therefrom is the source of a gratifying income.

On the 28th of October, 1869, Mr. Oberholtzer was united in marriage to Miss Laura A. Wheeler, a daughter of Moses and Cynthia (Walker) Wheeler. The Wheeler family is of Swiss origin, and the great grandfather of Mrs. Oberholtzer, a native of Switzerland, was the first of the name to come to America.

MR. AND MRS. J. M. OBERHOLTZER

Moses Wheeler, was born in Bradford county, Pennsylvania, September 27, 1810, and was a resident of that district until 1820, when he removed to Tioga county, Pennsylvania. There he made his home until 1845 when he removed to Bradford county, where he lived for eleven years. In 1856 he became a resident of Peoria, Illinois, and in 1857 removed to Knox county, where he took up the occupation of farming, owning and cultivating a tract of land of two hundred and sixty-seven acres in Elba township. He was a man of considerable local prominence and held a number of offices in the county. He was a member of the Baptist church and he gave his political support to the republican party. While living in Tioga county, Pennsylvania, he was married May 1, 1834, to Cynthia O. Walker, whose parents had removed from New Hampshire to Tioga county, following the birth of their daughter, who first opened her eyes to the light of day in the Old Granite state May 22, 1812, her life record covering the intervening years to the 4th of May, 1880, when she passed away in this county.

Mrs. Oberholtzer was the youngest of the children born unto Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, and by her marriage she has become the mother of six children. Elza, the eldest, is now living near Beardsley, Minnesota. Lloyd H., also residing near Beardsley, where he is engaged in farming, is married and has five children: Wilma; Vera; Lynn; Harley; and Lela. Oliver T., who carries on general agricultural pursuits near Beardsley, is married and has two children, Ora and Alto. Bertha Blanche is the wife of Frank C. Sherman of Beardsley, Minnesota, and unto them were born six children, Hubert, Laverne, Robert (deceased), Lyle, Chester and Carter. Forrest Earl, born in August, 1881, died in October, 1883. Hubert W. is living in Knoxville, but is employed as a bookkeeper by the Brereton Coal Company of Galesburg. He is married and has a daughter, Evelyn.

Mr. Oberholtzer has always exercised his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the democratic party, and has held the office of supervisor in both Elba and Knox townships. His religious faith is that of the Methodist Episcopal church to the teachings of which he has always been loyal. He is interested in the welfare of his community and has cooperated in many measures for the public good, but his time is given mostly to his business efforts which, capably conducted, have brought to him substantial success Year after year he carefully tilled the fields and cultivated his crops in such a manner that substantial harvests were gathered and his annual income was augmented. His life indicated what may be accomplished when energy and determination lead the way.

GEORGE K. SLOUGH.

George K. Slough, one of Abingdon's foremost citizens, is the cashier and secretary of the First State & Savings Bank of that town. His birth occurred near Peoria, Illinois, on the 30th of October, 1861, his parents being George W. and Anna M. (Kellar) Slough, who were also born near that city and came of Pennsylvania Dutch stock. The paternal grandparents were Jacob W. and Anna Slough, natives of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, who crossed the Atlantic to the United States some time in the '20s, locating in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

In 1834 they came west to Illinois, locating in Peoria, which was then a town of only sixteen cabins. They conducted the first tavern at that place and both he and his wife remained residents of Peoria until called to their final rest. Following his marriage George W. Slough, the father of our subject, located on a farm near Peoria, where his demise occurred about 1883. His widow subsequently took up her abode in Peoria, where she died about 1905, passing away in the faith of the Congregational church. George K. Slough now owns the old homestead which has been in possession of the family for about seventy years.

George K. Slough was reared under the paternal roof and obtained his early education in the public schools, later pursuing a business course in the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso. After putting aside his text-books he was employed for a short time as clerk and bookkeeper in Peoria. Subsequently he went to Burrton, Kansas, where he remained for six years, spending three years with a grain firm and three years as assistant cashier in the Bank of Burrton. In 1890 he returned to Peoria and entered the service of the Wilson Grocery Company, a wholesale grocery concern, having charge of their books for twelve years. In 1902 he came to Abingdon to accept the proffered position of cashier in the First State & Savings Bank, in which capacity he has since served in a most satisfactory and commendable manner. In 1908 he was one of the organizers of the Abingdon Sanitary Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of vitreous china plumbers' supplies, and was chosen treasurer of the concern, in which connection he has since contributed to its growth and success.

On the 2d of September, 1884, Mr. Slough was united in marriage to Miss Jessie Gordon, of Peoria county, by whom he has seven children, as follows: Charles G., who is engaged in the automobile business at Abingdon; Georgia K., a teacher by profession; Howard Austin, who is a senior in Knox College; and Ethel, Andrew, Theodore and Marjorie, all at home.

In politics Mr. Slough is a stanch republican but his aspirations are not in the line of public office. He is a worthy exemplar of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Abingdon Lodge, No. 185, A. F. & A. M., of which he is at present worshipful master. He is likewise identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Mystic Workers, while his wife is a devoted and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Upright character and sterling worth have gained him a favorable place in the regard of many friends, and Knox county numbers him among her valued citizens.

RICHARD F. GIBBS.

Agricultural interests in Lynn township, Knox county, are ably represented by Richard F. Gibbs, whose birth occurred on the Gibbs homestead August 14, 1850. His paternal great-grandfather was born in England and came to America about the time of the Revolutionary war. The grandparents, Martin and Hannah (Beck) Gibbs, were early residents of this county, where the former, whose death occurred in 1870 when he was eighty years of age, erected a sawmill on the only timber land in the northern part of Knox county. The parents of our subject were Jonathan and Tamer (Norcross) Gibbs, both of whom were born in New Jersey, where their marriage also occurred. In his native state the father had learned the glass-blowers' trade in Waterford, but after his removal to Lynn township, Knox county, he engaged in agricultural pursuits and made that his life's work. Mrs. Gibbs was a daughter of Joseph Norcross. To Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs six children were born, four of whom survive, namely: William H., a resident of Galva, Illinois; Phoebe, who is married to D. Bradley, of La Fayette, Illinois; Clayton A., who is living in Galva; and Richard F., the subject of this review.

Acquiring his education in a near-by district school and attending to many of the lighter duties on the farm occupied the youth and boyhood of Richard Gibbs. He remained with his father until the latter's death, and since that time has been the owner and manager of the home farm. His life has been marked by constant labor and conscientious attention to duty and the results of these are clearly shown in the improved condition of his property and the abundance of his harvest. In addition to general farming he is also engaged in stock-raising.

On the 30th of November, 1875, Mr. Gibbs was married to Miss Mary J. Reed, whose birth occurred on the 24th of September, 1852, near Newcastle, England, and who came to Galva, Illinois, with her parents, George and Jane (Cockburn) Reed, when she was but five years of age. Mr. Reed, who has now passed the ninety-first milestone on life's journey, his birth having occurred in August, 1820, is one of the most venerable citizens of the county. His wife, who was a daughter of George and Ann (Foster) Cockburn, passed away in 1857. George Reed is a son of Gabriel and Dorothy (Scipry) Reed, agriculturists, who died in 1857 and 1859, aged seventy-four and seventy-six, respectively. The mother's three brothers were soldiers in the English army and fought in the battle of Waterloo. When but fourteen years of age George Reed began earning his own livelihood. He learned the mining trade in Pennsylvania and began work at sixteen cents a day, furnishing his own clothes and working twelve hours. After he had saved thirty-five dollars he was married and took up his home with his wife's parents, but realizing, that if he were to win the success he desired, he must engage in a more lucrative work he came west, making the trip on a fishing vessel. The journey took seven weeks. He settled in Galva and again followed mining until 1863, his wife and three children following two years later. Subsequently he became overseer in a coal mine at Galva. After giving up mining he followed agricultural pursuits on a farm located at Centerville near Victoria.

To Mr. and Mrs. George Reed six children were born: Anna, of Copley township; Mary Jane, who is married to Richard F. Gibbs of this review; John Reed, who is living in Galesburg; George W., of Victoria; Joseph G., an agriculturist of this county; and Emma, also of Victoria. Mr. Reed is at present a member of the Christian church although he formerly held membership in the Methodist church. To Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Gibbs four children have been born: Grace, who died when but eight years of age; Aris, who is married to Joseph Leslie Haxton, of Lynn township; Laura E., who is the wife of Charles H. Baker, of La Fayette, and who has three children, J. Herbert, Harold F. and Dorothy; and Harry A., who is married to Myrtle Haxton and is residing at home.

In politics Mr. Gibbs gives his allegiance to the republican party but he has never sought nor desired office. In religious faith he holds membership in the Christian church of La Fayette. The greater part of his time and attention has been given to his various undertakings, and he has had little chance to affiliate with lodge or fraternal circles. By thus devoting himself constantly to his farm, he has proven his worth as a substantial, progressive agriculturist.

GEORGE A. SHIPPLETT.

George A. Shipplett, one of the leading and most progressive citizens of Abingdon, is a prominent factor in financial circles as the cashier of the First National Bank of Abingdon and as a member of the board of directors and cashier of the Bank of St. Augustine and an organizer and director of the Farmers State Bank of Ellisville. Of the last two named institutions he was one of the promoters, being one of four men who established the Bank of St. Augustine. His birth occurred in Mount Crawford, Virginia, on the 2d of October, 1871, his parents being John M. and Sarah E. (May) Shipplett, also natives of Mount Crawford, where they were reared and married. The mother there passed away on the 3d of August, 1911, when sixty-eight years of age. The father, who survives, yet makes his home at Mount Crawford, where he is now living retired. Throughout his active business career he was successfully engaged in general agricultural pursuits, the old homestead being near the town of Mount Crawford. For many years past he has done all in his power to advance the cause of prohibition, being a leading worker in the local ranks of the party. He has lived a clean, upright and honorable life and has always been among the first to support any movement or measure instituted to promote the general welfare. Both Mr. and Mrs. Shipplett took an active part in the work of the Methodist Episcopal church and gave liberally of their time and means in the interests of religion and charity. In December, 1911, John M. Shipplett celebrated his seventieth birthday.

George A. Shipplett was reared under the parental roof and supplemented his preliminary education by a course of study in the Mount Crawford high school and the Mossy Creek Academy. After putting aside his text-books he was associated with his father in the operation of the Buena Vista Mills in Rockingham county for two years. In 1891 he made his way to Illinois, locating in St. Augustine, where he secured employment in the mercantile establishment of Mills & Shipplett. At the end of a year, however, he came to Abingdon to accept the proffered position of bookkeeper in the First National Bank. After about two years, having demonstrated his faithfulness and ability in the discharge of the duties entrusted to him, he was made assistant cashier of the institution and sometime later was promoted to the position of cashier, in which capacity he has since ably served. He is a member of the board of directors of the First National Bank and is likewise a director and cashier of the Bank of St. Augustine. He assisted in the organization of the Farmers State Bank of Ellisville and has since been a director of that institution. Mr. Shipplett has been identified with the promotion and organization of practically all of Abingdon's industries. He is vice president of the Abingdon Sanitary Manufacturing Company, director and treasurer of the Abingdon Shirt & Overall Company and director and treasurer of the Abingdon Trap Company. In these various connections he has displayed excellent business ability and keen discrimination, carrying forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes.

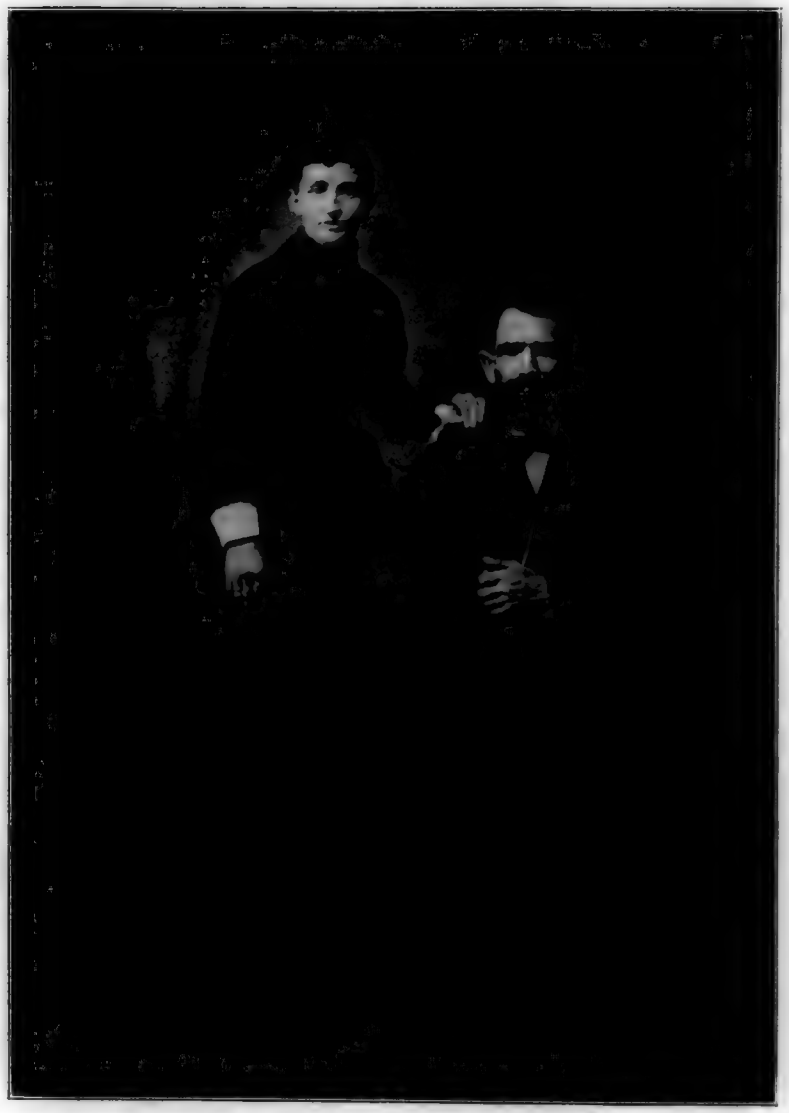
Mr. Shipplett gives his political allegiance to the democracy and his fellow townsmen, recognizing his worth and ability, have called him to several positions of public trust. He has served as a member of the town council, as township treasurer and also as mayor of Abingdon and at present is treasurer of both the town and township school board. He was one of the chief factors in establishing the public library in Abingdon, which was maintained by private subscription during the first two years of its existence but has since been maintained by taxation. At the time of its organization he was made treasurer and director, in which capacity he has served continuously since or for a period of fifteen years. Fraternally he is identified with the following organizations: Abingdon Lodge, No. 185, A. F. & A. M.; Achilles Lodge, No. 373, K. P.; the Supreme Court of Honor; Mystic Workers of the World; the Order of the Eastern Star; and Galesburg Lodge, No. 894, B. P. O. E. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Christian church. His unbending integrity of character, his fearlessness in the discharge of duty, in every relation in which he has been found, and his appreciation of the responsibilities that have rested upon him, have made him a citizen whose worth is widely acknowledged.

MANDIVILL JOHN.

Mandivill John, now living retired in Hermon, was for many years actively engaged in general farming in Knox county. He was born in Clinton county, Ohio, his natal day being the 2d of January, 1854, and his parents Elisha and Rachel (Lewis) John. The family removed to Illinois in 1856, locating in Knox county, where Elisha John later bought some land that he cultivated and improved until his death. When the Civil war broke out he enlisted in Company D, Seventh Illinois Volunteer Cavalry and went to the front, where he remained three years. He was wounded during the period of his service, having participated in twenty-seven engagements among them being some of the notable battles of the war. He always kept in touch with his comrades of the field, through the medium of his membership in Abingdon Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, to the interests of which he was ever loyal. Mr. John passed away in 1900, but the mother still survives at the advanced age of eighty years, and now makes her home in Hermon. Three sons were born of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. John, all of whom are living, those beside our subject being, Edwin and Samuel, both of whom are farmers in Indian Point township, this county.

When brought to Knox county by his parents, our subject was only a child of two years, so that practically his entire life has been spent in the vicinity where he is now residing. Reared in a home where much stress was laid upon the necessity of thrift and industry in recognition of the responsibilities of life, when still little more than a child he was assigned regular duties about the farm.

These increased with the passing years and when not engaged with his studies in the district school the greater part of his time was given to assisting his father in tilling the fields and caring for the stock. After leaving school he worked with his father until old enough to begin for himself. He then left the parental roof and began his independent career as an agriculturist, continuing to follow this vocation until 1908, when he retired and removed to Hermon. Mr. John was successful in his undertakings, and now owns eighty acres of land, which furnish him a competence that enables him to live in retirement, enjoying in the evening of life the ease and comfort that is the just reward of a well ordered and usefully spent period of activity.



Mr. John has been married twice. His first union was with Miss Mary Berry, their marriage occurring on the 24th of December, 1878. She was a daughter of Joseph and Martha Ann Berry and a native of Virginia, her birth there occurring on the 2d of October, 1858. In 1862 she accompanied her parents on their removal to Knox county, where the father engaged in farming. Later he went to Hermon and engaged in the manufacture of wagons, continuing to make his home there until his death. Mrs. John passed away in 1901, leaving one son, Everett Le Roy, the only child born of this union. On the 9th of February, 1908, Mr. John married Miss Hila Martin, who was born in Missouri on the 11th of August, 1881. Her mother is now deceased, but her father, William Martin, is still living in Missouri, where he located during the pioneer days, and engages in farming.

Both Mr. and Mrs. John are members of the Christian church and he votes the republican ticket, but has never taken an active part in local politics, as his own interests demanded all of his time and energies for their development.

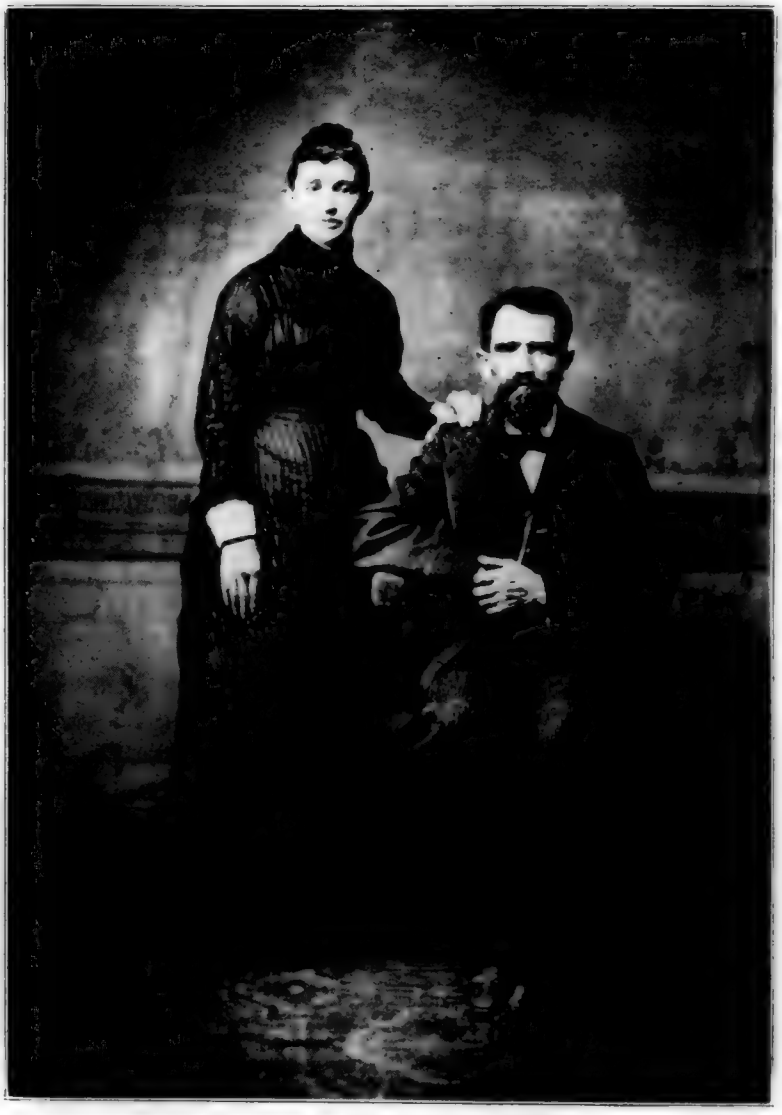
DEWITT SMITH.

Dewitt Smith, is one of the oldest residents of Maquon township, having spent seventy-five years in the immediate vicinity of his present homestead, which is located five miles from the town of Maquon. He was born in Pennsylvania, in 1833, and is a son of E. R. and Angeline (Catlin) Smith. The father, who was a native of Vermont, removed with his wife and family to Illinois in 1836, locating in Knox county. He purchased one hundred and thirty acres of land in Maquon township and began the life of a pioneer farmer. The country was largely in a wild state at that period, the government still owning vast stretches of uncultivated prairie and acres of native timber, while the streams and forests abounded in fish and game. The life of the settlers was very primitive, rude log cabins serving for homes, as well as schoolhouses and churches, while little time was left from the work of the fields and the care of the homes for social life. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were the parents of eleven children, five of whom are still living. The father lived to a ripe old age, being ninety-three years at the time of his demise.

As he was only a little lad of three years when he accompanied his parents on their removal from Pennsylvania, Dewitt Smith spent the greater part of his boyhood and youth amid the environment of frontier life. When old enough

MR. AND MRS. DEWITT SMITH

These increased with the passing years and when not engaged with his studies in the district school the greater part of his time was given to assisting his father in tilling the fields and caring for the stock. After leaving school he worked with his father until old enough to begin for himself. He then left the parental roof and began his independent career as an agriculturist, continuing to follow this vocation until 1908, when he retired and removed to Hermon. Mr. John was successful in his undertakings, and now owns eighty acres of land, which furnish him a competence that enables him to live in retirement, enjoying in the evening of life the ease and comfort that is the just reward of a well ordered and usefully spent period of activity.



Mr. John has been married twice. His first union was with Miss Mary Berry, their marriage occurring on the 24th of December, 1878. She was a daughter of Joseph and Martha Ann Berry and a native of Virginia, her birth there occurring on the 2d of October, 1858. In 1862 she accompanied her parents on their removal to Knox county, where the father engaged in farming. Later he went to Hermon and engaged in the manufacture of wagons, continuing to make his home there until his death. Mrs. John passed away in 1901, leaving one son, Everett Le Roy, the only child born of this union. On the 9th of February, 1908, Mr. John married Miss Hila Martin, who was born in Missouri on the 11th of August, 1881. Her mother is now deceased, but her father, William Martin, is still living in Missouri, where he located during the pioneer days, and engages in farming.

Both Mr. and Mrs. John are members of the Christian church and he votes the republican ticket, but has never taken an active part in local politics, as his own interests demanded all of his time and energies for their development.

DEWITT SMITH.

Dewitt Smith, is one of the oldest residents of Maquon township, having spent seventy-five years in the immediate vicinity of his present homestead, which is located five miles from the town of Maquon. He was born in Pennsylvania, in 1833, and is a son of E. R. and Angeline (Catlin) Smith. The father, who was a native of Vermont, removed with his wife and family to Illinois in 1836, locating in Knox county. He purchased one hundred and thirty acres of land in Maquon township and began the life of a pioneer farmer. The country was largely in a wild state at that period, the government still owning vast stretches of uncultivated prairie and acres of native timber, while the streams and forests abounded in fish and game. The life of the settlers was very primitive, rude log cabins serving for homes, as well as schoolhouses and churches, while little time was left from the work of the fields and the care of the homes for social life. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were the parents of eleven children, five of whom are still living. The father lived to a ripe old age, being ninety-three years at the time of his demise.

As he was only a little lad of three years when he accompanied his parents on their removal from Pennsylvania, Dewitt Smith spent the greater part of his boyhood and youth amid the environment of frontier life. When old enough to begin his education he entered the district schools of the vicinity, where he mastered the common branches. After laying aside his school books, he gave his attention to agricultural pursuits, under the direction of his father, until he was familiar with the practical methods of tilling the fields and caring for the stock. In 1859, he yielded to the longing of every ambitious young American and went west, spending three years amid the gold fields of California. Upon his return home he again turned his attention to farming and in 1877 bought his present place. Here for many years he engaged in general farming and stock-raising, both proving to be very lucrative, but the active operation of the fields is now left to his son, although Mr. Smith still gives the work his supervision. The buildings now standing upon the place were, with few exceptions, erected before Mr. Smith purchased it. They were substantially constructed and have always been kept in a good state of repair. In addition to his fine homestead he owns thirty-one and a half acres of land southeast of Maquon, that contains a vein of coal.

MR. AND MRS. DEWITT SMITH

Mr. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Phoebe Day, of Clermont county, Ohio, and unto them have been born three children: Robert D., who has passed away; one who died in infancy; and one son, Victor, who is unmarried. He attended the public schools and after the completion of his education undertook the operation of the homestead, to which activity he still devotes his energies. In 1907 Mr. Smith mourned the loss of his faithful helpmate and wife, having traveled life's path together for many years in joys and sorrows.

The political views of Mr. Smith coincide with the principles of the republican party, to whose candidates he gives his support. He served for six years as township commissioner and he also acted as school director. During the seventy-five years he has been a resident of Maquon township, Mr. Smith has witnessed many changes, the progress and development of the county having kept pace with the onward spread of a newer and higher form of civilization.

LEWIS EDWARD GIBBS.

Lewis Edward Gibbs, who is engaged in farming and stock-raising in Lynn township, Knox county, was born upon the farm upon which he is now residing on the 29th of June, 1863, his parents being Joseph and Elizabeth Ann (Goetzinger) Gibbs, the former of whom was a native of New Jersey. The father came to Knox county with his parents in 1837 and they located at once on the property, where the Gibbs family still reside. They made the trip from New Jersey by team, there being eight in their family. Mr. and Mrs. Martin Gibbs, the grandparents of our subject, were among the oldest settlers and were one of the Quaker families who settled in this county. They remained actively engaged in agricultural pursuits until Joseph Gibbs purchased the farm. He arrived in this county when he was twenty-one years of age but returned to Peoria shortly after, going down the Illinois river and up the Ohio river to the old home, where he was married and was engaged as a glass blower. He lived in Philadelphia for ten years and during that time operated a woodyard. In 1858 he came to the present homestead and resided there until two years before his death, when he removed to Galva, where he died when well advanced in years. His wife passed away on the 1st of March, 1911, when she was eighty-nine years of age. She was a daughter of Christopher and Jeannette (Altman) Goetzinger. To Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs ten children were born, of whom five are now living: Lewis E., who is the subject of this review; William H., who is in the insurance business at Galva; Joseph E., who is residing in Victoria township; Hannah V., a widow living in La Fayette; and Elizabeth A., who is married to Charles Howell, also of La Fayette. Mr. Gibbs was one of the leading republicans in his district and held many offices, among them being that of supervisor when the county seat was changed from Knoxville to Galesburg. He held membership in the Masonic lodge at Philadelphia.

Lewis E. Gibbs acquired his education in the district schools and assisted his father on the home farm until he was twenty-one years of age, after which he farmed on shares until he was twenty-five years of age, when he removed to Galva and engaged in the hardware business, which he conducted for three years before returning to Lynn township and operating a farm for five years, which his father gave to him. He then rented a farm from his mother for five years and it is still his home. He has engaged in stock-raising in addition to carrying on general farming. Almost his entire active career has been spent in agricultural pursuits and because of the thorough training which his father gave him, he has become one of the most successful agriculturists in Lynn township. The Gibbs family have contributed much to the development of the land of this region and have been among the most successful farmers who have ever resided here.

Mr. Gibbs was married on the 12th of December, 1888, to Miss Eva May Dudley, whose birth occurred on the 1st of January, 1867, and who is a daughter of Charles and Elizabeth C. (Bevier) Dudley, who are living in La Fayette at the ages of seventy-seven and sixty-six years respectively. They are both natives of Knox county and have spent their entire lives in this region. Mr. Dudley was born in Massachusetts on the 1st of October, 1834, and is a son of Stephen and Salome (Collins) Dudley. The father was born in Wallingford, Connecticut, in 1809, and passed away at the age of seventy-two years. Throughout his life he was an active farmer and blacksmith and removed to Knox county in 1854, when he settled in Lynn township upon the farm upon which he resided until he removed to Galva, where his death occurred. Charles Dudley, retiring from the farm, removed to Altona, where he remained five years, and then went to La Fayette. He was a soldier in the Civil war, having enlisted in 1861 for three years' service with Company D, Thirty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry. After he had completed his term of enlistment he joined Company G, One Hundred and Forty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, at La Fayette, under General White of Chicago. He served in the Western army and at one time was under Grant. He was mustered out at Springfield and immediately returned to his agricultural pursuits. Mrs. Dudley, whose birth occurred on the 16th of December, 1842, in Ulster county, New York, is a daughter of Abram and Adeline (Meisner) Bevier, whose deaths occurred on December 8, 1910, and in 1876, at the age of ninety and fifty-four, respectively. The grandparents, Moses and Elizabeth Bevier, were also agriculturists and Adeline Meisner, who became the wife of Abram Bevier, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Meisner. Of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Dudley four survive: Martha, who is the wife of J. A. Johnson, of La Fayette; Mrs. L. E. Gibbs; Minnie, at home; and Flossie, who became the wife of L. Hulick, of Neponset, Illinois. To Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs four children have been born, all of whom are residing at home. Elizabeth May, Lewis Edward, Jr., Charles D. and Hazel Bernice, aged twenty-two, twenty-one, eighteen and sixteen years, respectively.

Mr. Gibbs gives his political support to the republican party and has served as commissioner for his district. He has also held the office of assessor and is now serving his second term as justice of the peace. He has acted as clerk of the school board for several years and in 1909 was elected supervisor of Lynn township. He is one of the most active representatives in his district and has served as delegate to various conventions as a republican representative. Both he and his wife hold membership in the Christian church of La Fayette, Illinois, and he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of La Fayette, of the Mystic Workers of Galva and of the Modern Woodmen of America, of La Fayette, of which lodge he has served as clerk. He is popular with a large circle of friends and the public know him as a successful and enterprising agriculturist.

CARL LUTHER YOUNGDAHL.

Carl Luther Youngdahl, prominently identified, with the agricultural and stock-raising interests of Walnut Grove township, this county, where for a number of years he has kept an extensive farm under a high state of cultivation, was born February 18, 1869, in Wyanet, Illinois, a son of Nels S. and Bertha (Goerenson) Youngdahl. The paternal grandfather, Nels Swanson, was a soldier in Sweden, his native country. The father was a native of Crefanstad, Sweden, having been born September 17, 1832, and came to the United States in 1856, locating in Minnesota until 1863, when he removed to Princeton, Illinois, where he engaged in farming. In 1881 he removed to the present Youngdahl homestead and was engaged in its cultivation until his retirement in 1891, when he located in Altona, where his death occurred April 14, 1909, and where his widow is now living at the age of seventy-four years. He was a member of the Lutheran church of Altona and gave his political support to the republican party although he never sought office as a reward for party fealty. They were the parents of six children: Christina, the widow of P. A. Amenoff; George E. and Nels T., both deceased; Sophia, who is the wife of John Johnson, of Altona; Anthony C., who is a college professor in Michigan; and Carl Luther, who is the subject of this review.

In the common schools of Illinois Carl L. Youngdahl acquired his education and remained at home engaging in farm duties until he was twenty-one years of age, when he removed to his present home. He has cultivated and improved this property and today it is provided with all the conveniences necessary to the farming occupation and he has given his time to raising crops together with stock breeding. As a farmer he has been quite successful and, taking pride in the appearance of his property, he has added every improvement that might contribute to its neatness and utility.

Mr. Youngdahl has been twice married, his first union being to Miss Cora Anderson, a daughter of C. J. and Mary (Riegel) Anderson. To this union one child was born, Ruth, who is fifteen years of age. The mother died in 1901, at the age of twenty-seven years. Mr. Youngdahl was again married in 1906, his second union being with Miss Margaret Johnson, who was born in 1868 and is a daughter of Mons and Amelia (Ewalt) Johnson, the latter residing in Princeton, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were the parents of seven children: Mrs. Margaret Youngdahl; Ellen, who is the wife of William Linn, of Princeton; and Rachel, Matilda, Minnie, Hugh and Hattie, all residing at home.

Politically Mr. Youngdahl gives his support to the republican party. He is serving as highway commissioner of the township for a second term. He belongs to the Lutheran church of Altona and is a man whose high moral character, industry and straightforwardness, together with his interest in the general welfare of the community, have given him high standing in the township.

WILLIAM NICHOLAS BUCK.

William Nicholas Buck, who is successfully engaged in stock-raising in Haw Creek township, was born in the vicinity of Greenfield, Highland county, Ohio, on May 28, 1854. His father, Thomas Buck, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, but was reared in Highland county, Ohio, and there he married Miss Mary Lowman. Mrs. Buck was a native of Pike county, Ohio, and a daughter of Jacob Lowman. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Buck began their domestic life in the Buckeye state, where they resided until 1874 when they came to Illinois, first locating in Maquon township, Knox county, but later removing to Haw Creek township. The father, who had always engaged in farming, continued to devote his energies to agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred at the age of sixty-five years. The mother was sixty-three when she died and was laid to rest beside her husband in the Maquon cemetery. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Buck numbered six: William Nicholas, our subject; Edgar, who married Arzella McWilliams, now residing in Galesburg; Austin, who married Flora Smith, residing in Haw Creek township; Elmer, who married Alta Connor, living in Gilson, Illinois; Tillie, the wife of Charles Smith, of Maquon township; and Carrie, the wife of Amos McWilliams, of Elba township. The family was reared in the faith of the Presbyterian church, in which the parents held membership, while his political allegiance Mr. Buck gave to the republican party but has never sought public office.

As he was a youth of twenty when he removed to Illinois with his parents William Nicholas Buck had already acquired his education, in pursuit of which he attended the common schools of his native state. Reared on a farm, he was at that time familiar with practical agricultural methods as well as the care of stock. During the first year of his residence in Illinois he lived in Maquon township, but subsequently removed to Haw Creek township. After his marriage he began farming for himself as a renter on the Daniel Housh place, where he remained for three years. From there he went to the Mary Ann

West farm, the cultivation of which engaged his energies for eight years. His efforts had proven so lucrative that at the expiration of that period he had accumulated sufficient capital to buy eighty acres in this township. After cultivating this tract for four years, however, he disposed of it to Frank Nelson and removed to the T. Humsted farm, where he remained for a year. He again invested his capital in the purchase of his present farm, which contains eighty-two acres of fertile land, located on section 32, Haw Creek township, on the east and west road between that and Maquon township. Mr. Buck takes great pride in his homestead as well as its appearance, and during the period of his occupancy has erected a number of good, substantial outbuildings, at the same time putting those already on the place in repair. Everything about his farm suggests thrift and prosperity, the fences are in good condition, ample provision is made for housing both the stock and machinery, while the grounds about his residence are given careful attention. Stock-raising has always been Mr. Buck's specialty and he breeds and raises high-grade horses, cattle and hogs, and is meeting with success in his undertaking.

Mr. Buck married Miss Rozina Ouderkirk, whose birth occurred on the farm where she is now residing, on the 6th of September, 1861. She is a daughter of John Ouderkirk, who was born in New York state, whence he came with his parents to Maquon township, in 1835, when a child eight years of age. The paternal grandfather was a blacksmith, but upon locating here bought a quarter section of land that has ever since been in the possession of some member of the family. He paid for this one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and met with great difficulty in meeting his payments. It was here that John Ouderkirk was reared and educated, and upon attaining his maturity he married Caroline Jones, a native of the state of New York. Of this union there were born the following children: Mary, who married Milton Housh of Maquon township; Ellen, who became the wife of Leslie Howard, of the same township; Charles, who is deceased; Ada, who died when an infant; Rozina, now Mrs. Buck; Louisa, a resident of Maquon township, the widow of Philip Selby, who succumbed to typhoid fever; and Cassie, the wife of Silas Dennison, a resident of Maquon township. Grandfather Ouderkirk died in Haw Creek township, in 1846, and was buried in the cemetery at Maquon.

His political allegiance Mr. Buck has always accorded to the republican party and has served as school director and trustee in his township. The greater part of Mr. Buck's life has been spent in the vicinity where he is now residing and among the citizens of which he numbers many loyal friends.

FRANK POPLETT.

In the early development and improvement of Knox county the Poplett family has borne an active part and is numbered among the pioneer settlers. Here Frank Poplett was born on the 28th of May, 1851. His parents, John and Sophia (Davis) Poplett, were natives of Kentucky, the father settling in Knox county with his people in 1835, after having lived for some time in Indiana, the mother accompanying her people to Knox county when they settled here in 1834. The paternal grandfather, Thompson Poplett, bought one hundred and sixty acres of land in Sparta township on his arrival. This land he farmed for twelve years when he removed to Peoria county and lived there until his death in 1868. The grandmother died before Frank Poplett was born. John Poplett, the father, lived with his people in Peoria county assisting his father with the work on the homestead. He died leaving his son Frank, who was one year of age, and his widow to mourn him. Mrs. Poplett subsequently married David Henderson, of Henderson township, Knox county. She is still living on the farm, a widow, her husband having died some years ago.

At the usual age Frank Poplett entered the district school in the vicinity of his home and acquired a practical education. On leaving school he worked on the home farm until twenty-one years of age and then set out to cultivate the soil for his own benefit. For this purpose he rented eighty acres of land which he operated for three years. At the expiration of this time he engaged in mercantile life, conducting a store in Henry county. This he discontinued after three years and returned to farming. In 1883 he purchased the place on which he lives at present, eighty acres in Henderson township, Knox county. He was a practical farmer and during the twenty-eight years of his management of the homestead improved it greatly and was very successful in all departments of general farming. He was progressive in his methods and owns a farm of which he can be justly proud.

Mr. Poplett was married in July, 1872, to Miss Laura Rowe, a daughter of Laurenza and Narcissa (Goff) Rowe, who were natives of New York and Kentucky, respectively, but became residents of Knox county at an early date, where Mr. Rowe was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Mrs. Poplett lived to be forty-one years of age, her death occurring in March, 1890. Of the four children born of this union two died in infancy. Ella, the surviving daughter, is the wife of J. M. Findley, of Henderson township, where they rent a fine farm. They are the parents of six children, namely: Giles, Geneva, Edith, Inez, Frank and May. Elmer F. Poplett, the surviving son, is operating the home farm which he rents of his father. He is married and has two children, William and Dale.

Mr. Frank Poplett accumulated a sufficient income to enable him to withdraw from the management of his farm. He makes his home with his son, living retired on the place where his labors have borne their fruit for many years.

R. J. McKEIGHAN.

R. J. McKeighan, one of the successful representatives of the farming and stock-raising interests of Knox county, is the owner of a finely improved property of three hundred and twenty acres located on sections 21 and 22, Salem township, known as Willow Row Grain & Stock Farm. He was born in Fulton county, Illinois, on the 21st of March, 1849, and is a son of the late James McKeighan, one of the well known and successful agriculturists of Salem township. The father was born, reared and educated in the north of Ireland, remaining a resident of his native land until he had attained the age of thirty-three

MR. AND MRS. R. J. McKEIGHAN

1834. The paternal grandfather, Thompson Poplett, bought one hundred and sixty acres of land in Sparta township on his arrival. This land he farmed for twelve years when he removed to Peoria county and lived there until his death in 1868. The grandmother died before Frank Poplett was born. John Poplett, the father, lived with his people in Peoria county assisting his father with the work on the homestead. He died leaving his son Frank, who was one year of age, and his widow to mourn him. Mrs. Poplett subsequently married David Henderson, of Henderson township, Knox county. She is still living on the farm, a widow, her husband having died some years ago.

At the usual age Frank Poplett entered the district school in the vicinity of his home and acquired a practical education. On leaving school he worked on the home farm until twenty-one years of age and then set out to cultivate the soil for his own benefit. For this purpose he rented eighty acres of land which he operated for three years. At the expiration of this time he engaged in mercantile life, conducting a store in Henry county. This he discontinued after three years and returned to farming. In 1883 he purchased the place on which he lives at present, eighty acres in Henderson township, Knox county. He was a practical farmer and during the twenty-eight years of his management of the homestead improved it greatly and was very successful in all departments of general farming. He was progressive in his methods and owns a farm of which he can be justly proud.

Mr. Poplett was married in July, 1872, to Miss Laura Rowe, a daughter of Laurenza and Narcissa (Goff) Rowe, who were natives of New York and Kentucky, respectively, but became residents of Knox county at an early date, where Mr. Rowe was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Mrs. Poplett lived to be forty-one years of age, her death occurring in March, 1890. Of the four children born of this union two died in infancy. Ella, the surviving daughter, is the wife of J. M. Findley, of Henderson township, where they rent a fine farm. They are the parents of six children, namely: Giles, Geneva, Edith, Inez, Frank and May. Elmer F. Poplett, the surviving son, is operating the home farm which he rents of his father. He is married and has two children, William and Dale.

Mr. Frank Poplett accumulated a sufficient income to enable him to withdraw from the management of his farm. He makes his home with his son, living retired on the place where his labors have borne their fruit for many years.

R. J. McKEIGHAN.

R. J. McKeighan, one of the successful representatives of the farming and stock-raising interests of Knox county, is the owner of a finely improved property of three hundred and twenty acres located on sections 21 and 22, Salem township, known as Willow Row Grain & Stock Farm. He was born in Fulton county, Illinois, on the 21st of March, 1849, and is a son of the late James McKeighan, one of the well known and successful agriculturists of Salem township. The father was born, reared and educated in the north of Ireland, remaining a resident of his native land until he had attained the age of thirty-three years, when he emigrated to the United States. Upon his arrival in this country Mr. McKeighan made his way to Illinois, locating at Farmington, where he followed various occupations until he had acquired sufficient capital to begin business for himself. Believing that farming offered a safer investment and more lucrative returns than anything else, he then invested his small savings in some land three miles southwest of Farmington and industriously applied himself to its improvement and cultivation. He subsequently returned to the Emerald isle for a visit and while there was married to Miss Elizabeth Cunningham, also a native of northern Ireland. Returning to the United States with his bride he settled on his farm in Fulton county, continuing to live there until 1855, when he removed to a tract of one hundred and sixty acres of prairie land on section 22, Salem township, Knox county, which he and his brother, Alexander McKeighan, purchased in 1853 for one thousand dollars. In 1854 James McKeighan paid his brother a thousand dollars for his half interest in the property. Soon afterward he succeeded in selling his Fulton county farm and with the proceeds bought eighty acres of land on section 21, Salem township. As he was both capable and energetic he met with excellent success in his efforts and subsequently extended the boundaries of his farm by the addition of another eighty, making the aggregate of his holdings three hundred and twenty acres. This is now the property of his son R. J., having been in the family for over fifty-six years. Mr. McKeighan made a specialty of raising corn, and today our subject and his son are among the most noted raisers of seed corn in this part of the country. McKeighan's Golden Dent corn has many points of excellence, being a heavy yielder, of very deep grain, early maturing, shells high per cent of corn, has no superior for feeding purposes and is adapted to different soils and climatic conditions. James McKeighan always continued to be more or less actively connected with the operation of his farm until he passed away at the age of eighty-three years. He was laid to rest in the cemetery at Farmington, as was also his wife, who was seventy-seven years of age at the time of her demise. Their family numbered six, of whom our subject is the eldest. The others in order of birth are as follows: Rachel, the wife of Rev. W. H. Clatworthy, of Yates City; Elizabeth, who married Robert R. Steck, of Salem township; James and Margaret, who died in infancy; and Emma, the deceased wife of D. F. Lawrence, of Salem township. The parents were both earnest members of the Presbyterian church and the father gave his political support to the republican party but was never an office seeker. He was one of the prosperous agriculturists of the county and for a short time during the early days was identified with the Yates City Bank.

MR. AND MRS. R. J. McKEIGHAN

As he was only a child of six years when he removed with the family to Knox county, R. J. McKeighan obtained the greater portion of his early education in the district schools of Salem township, the course therein pursued being later supplemented by study in the schools of Farmington and Monmouth. Having been accustomed to agricultural pursuits from his earliest boyhood, upon attaining his majority he began operating the home farm on the shares, continuing this for two years. Following his marriage he located with his bride on a farm of one hundred and sixty acres on section 17, Salem township, which he cultivated for three years, at the expiration of that time returning to the old homestead, where he is now residing. During the period of his occupancy he has erected all of the buildings now standing upon his farm with the exception of the house and the horse barn, both of which were built by his father. Mr. McKeighan is one of the capable agriculturists of the county and annually reaps abundant harvests from his fertile fields, which are cultivated under his personal supervision. In connection with his general farming he has always made a specialty of raising Hampshire sheep, while he keeps a fine herd of thoroughbred Jersey cows for dairy purposes. His interests have spread beyond the boundaries of his farm and stock-raising and he was one of the organizers of the Ideal Telephone Company, of which he was president for about six years and likewise a member of the board of directors.

In 1877 Mr. McKeighan completed his plans for a home of his own by his marriage to Miss Ximena Corey, a native of Maryland and a daughter of J. M. and Martha Corey. To them were born two sons, the younger of whom, John, died in infancy. James Leslie, their surviving son, is residing on the home farm with his parents, assisting his father in its operation. He married Sarah Rice, a daughter of Amos Rice, of Mattoon, Illinois, and they have three children: Martha Lorene, James Rice and Anna Katherine.

The entire family affiliate with the Presbyterian church at Yates City, in the work of which they take an active and helpful interest. For over forty years Mr. McKeighan was an elder of the church, while for ten years his wife has been treasurer of the Home Missionary Society, and their son is now an elder in the church and superintendent of the Sunday school. Both father and son give their political support to the republican party, but they have never aspired to official honors although the former has for some years been a member of the board of school directors. Mr. McKeighan is not only one of the prosperous but one of the highly respected men of his community, ever having conducted his business transactions in a manner to preclude all possibility of adverse criticism, his honor and integrity being above question.

LEVI J. COX.

Levi J. Cox, deceased, who passed his life, spanning three score years and one, within the confines of Knox county, was born here January 1, 1849. His parents, James and Emma (Pittard) Cox, were both natives of Somersetshire, England, who lived there until after their marriage, Mr. Cox being engaged in farming as a tenant on an English estate. They crossed the Atlantic in 1848 and found their way to Ontario township, Knox county, where they settled on a farm. Later he removed to Oneida and since 1880 lived retired. In 1884 the mother passed away and eleven years later the father's death occurred, on May 13, 1895.

Reared at home Levi J. Cox obtained his education in the rural schools in the vicinity and in the Oneida high school. At the age of nineteen years he engaged in farming for himself but almost at the outset met with a serious accident that retarded his progress for a time in no slight degree. He was out hunting prairie chickens with a party of friends, when he was shot by the accidental discharge of a gun. For fourteen years he cultivated eighty acres of land on section 28, after which he purchased one hundred and sixty acres in Sparta township, operating this farm for a number of years. He disposed of this property and went east, remaining in Hartford, Connecticut, long enough to learn the butcher trade, which he followed on his return to Knox county. After a time he sold out his interests in this business and again took up farming, confining his labors first to a tract of forty acres and later increasing this to one hundred and sixty acres. He acted as poundmaster for a period of twelve years. On March 4, 1902, he retired to live a quiet life in Oneida village. He passed away just eight years from that time, dying from injuries received in an automobile accident in 1910. Mr. Cox was a man of industrious habits and by his thrift and good management was able to multiply his income and at his death bequeathed to his wife and children four hundred and ninety acres of land in the county. He belonged to Oneida Lodge, No. 337, F. & A. M.

Mr. Cox was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth West, a daughter of Samuel and Kathryn (Anderson) West, the father a native of England and the mother of Scotland. The story of the emigration of the West family from their native shores is a narrative filled with the most thrilling incidents. The grandfather, John West, was sold in Scotland to an American living near New York and when the Revolutionary war broke out he gave his services to the cause of freedom. He was shipwrecked on his voyage to America and passed sixteen years before he finally reached our shores. Mr. and Mrs. Cox were the parents of three children: Arthur B., who operates a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Ontario township, given him by his father, is married to Maude Houghton and has three children living, Laverne, Joseph Elishier and Levi Charles, while one child, Maude, is deceased. Stewart lives on a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, which his father gave him and is married to Mildred White. They have three children, Garrett, Minnie E. and James. Asa, the youngest in the family, has passed away.

Mrs. Cox gives her helpful support to the Presbyterian church and is also an enthusiastic worker in the Order of the Eastern Star of Oneida. She is a woman of much charm of manner and has many close friends to whom she has always been loyal.

SWAN J. THULINE.

Swan J. Thuline, who owns and operates a farm in Walnut Grove township, Knox county, was born in Kristianstad, Skona, Sweden, on the 9th of September, 1848, his parents being John and Lissa (Swanson) Olson. He was the grandson of Olaf Olson and Swan Peterson. In his early life he engaged in agricultural pursuits and continued in this industry for the greater part of his active career and was also employed in a gristmill. His birth occurred in 1813, and he was one of seven children, five of whom now survive: O. J., of Galesburg; Swan, who is the subject of this review; Ellen, who is the wife of Mr. Johnson of Chicago; Magdalena, who is living in Sweden; and Hannah, who married L. N. Lundgren of Chicago.

After attending the public schools and assisting his father in farm work Swan J. Thuline, desiring to start out upon his independent career in a country which offered great opportunities to all, set out for America at the age of nineteen years. He came direct to Knox county, and after residing in Galesburg, removed to Walnut Grove township, where in 1905 he purchased the property which is his present home. During these years he engaged in general farming and stock-raising and met with the success which has been the reward of so many of the thrifty sons of Sweden who have come to this rich agricultural district.

In 1882 occurred the marriage of Mr. Thuline to Thilda Johnson, whose birth occurred on the 23d of May, 1862, in Sweden. She was the daughter of Johann and Burgda (Nelson) Talkelson, who are agriculturists. Her grandfather was a soldier in his native country in the war of 1812 and died in 1872 at the age of ninety years. In addition to Mrs. Thuline one other daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson has come to America and is living in Galesburg. Mrs. Thuline came to America at the age of twenty years and went direct to Galesburg, where she met Mr. Thuline, who had sent for her. To Mr. and Mrs. Thuline the following children have been born: Joel, who is twenty-eight years of age and married to Jennie Plem, by whom he has had one child, Irene; David, aged twenty-seven, who is engaged in farming; Winfred, aged twenty-five, who is residing in Rock Island; Carl, who is twenty-four years of age and is farming; Edwin, Esther and Ruth, aged twenty-two, twenty and eighteen respectively, all residing at home; Mabel, aged seventeen, who is in Galesburg; Walther, Robert, Mary and Alice, aged sixteen, thirteen, eleven and ten respectively, all living at home; Roy, who is eight years old and residing at home; Lilly, who is also at home and seven years of age; and Gladys, who is a girl of but five years.

In politics Mr. Thuline gives his support to the republican party, and although he does not seek office for political reasons he is at present highway commissioner of the township because of his interest in the development of his home district. His parents were members of the Lutheran church and his family are being brought up in the same faith. He has never had occasion to regret leaving his native land, for in America he has found the opportunity for which he sought—the opportunity to win success by honorable and industrious methods.

E. H. BROADFIELD.

E. H. Broadfield, deceased, for many years well known in Peoria and Knox counties, where he was identified with agricultural interests, was a native of England, having been born in Stourport, Worcestershire, May 8, 1831. His father, Edward H. Broadfield, was born in Shropshire, England, February 21, 1810; his mother, whose maiden name was Ann Rowley, was a native of Worcestershire, England, born June 6, 1806, and died September 22, 1881.

A resident of England until he was twenty-four years of age, E. H. Broadfield acquired his education in the night schools of Manchester, where for four years he was employed in the lithographic and printing business. In 1855 he

MR. AND MRS. E. H. BROADFIELD

After attending the public schools and assisting his father in farm work Swan J. Thuline, desiring to start out upon his independent career in a country which offered great opportunities to all, set out for America at the age of nineteen years. He came direct to Knox county, and after residing in Galesburg, removed to Walnut Grove township, where in 1905 he purchased the property which is his present home. During these years he engaged in general farming and stock-raising and met with the success which has been the reward of so many of the thrifty sons of Sweden who have come to this rich agricultural district.

In 1882 occurred the marriage of Mr. Thuline to Thilda Johnson, whose birth occurred on the 23d of May, 1862, in Sweden. She was the daughter of Johann and Burgda (Nelson) Talkelson, who are agriculturists. Her grandfather was a soldier in his native country in the war of 1812 and died in 1872 at the age of ninety years. In addition to Mrs. Thuline one other daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson has come to America and is living in Galesburg. Mrs. Thuline came to America at the age of twenty years and went direct to Galesburg, where she met Mr. Thuline, who had sent for her. To Mr. and Mrs. Thuline the following children have been born: Joel, who is twenty-eight years of age and married to Jennie Plem, by whom he has had one child, Irene; David, aged twenty-seven, who is engaged in farming; Winfred, aged twenty-five, who is residing in Rock Island; Carl, who is twenty-four years of age and is farming; Edwin, Esther and Ruth, aged twenty-two, twenty and eighteen respectively, all residing at home; Mabel, aged seventeen, who is in Galesburg; Walther, Robert, Mary and Alice, aged sixteen, thirteen, eleven and ten respectively, all living at home; Roy, who is eight years old and residing at home; Lilly, who is also at home and seven years of age; and Gladys, who is a girl of but five years.

In politics Mr. Thuline gives his support to the republican party, and although he does not seek office for political reasons he is at present highway commissioner of the township because of his interest in the development of his home district. His parents were members of the Lutheran church and his family are being brought up in the same faith. He has never had occasion to regret leaving his native land, for in America he has found the opportunity for which he sought—the opportunity to win success by honorable and industrious methods.

E. H. BROADFIELD.

E. H. Broadfield, deceased, for many years well known in Peoria and Knox counties, where he was identified with agricultural interests, was a native of England, having been born in Stourport, Worcestershire, May 8, 1831. His father, Edward H. Broadfield, was born in Shropshire, England, February 21, 1810; his mother, whose maiden name was Ann Rowley, was a native of Worcestershire, England, born June 6, 1806, and died September 22, 1881.

A resident of England until he was twenty-four years of age, E. H. Broadfield acquired his education in the night schools of Manchester, where for four years he was employed in the lithographic and printing business. In 1855 he crossed the Atlantic, hoping to find larger opportunities for obtaining a livelihood in America. Settling in Peoria county he lived there until 1864, when he removed to Knox county, where he tilled the soil until his death December 19, 1903, having attained the age of seventy-two years, seven months and eleven days. Ever industrious and faithful in the performance of his duties, his labors were rewarded by an ample competence derived from his farm of a hundred and sixty acres, so that he was enabled to leave his family well provided for.

MR. AND MRS. E. H. BROADFIELD

Mr. Broadfield was united in marriage to Miss Mary J. Crandall, a daughter of Zane and Mary (Johnson) Crandall, at Peoria, Illinois, on April 12, 1864. Ten children were born of this union, Edward H., Walter, William R., Arthur. Frank, John, Lyman, George H., Ada, and Nellie. Mr. Broadfield was independent in his political convictions and served for a number of years as commissioner of highways. Mrs. Broadfield, who is in her sixty-eighth year, her birth having occurred in Peoria county on March 22, 1844, owns the farm of one hundred and sixty acres which her husband cultivated for many years. Here she lives a quiet life surrounded by her family and friends, ever occupied in the service of others believing that this is the only way to the attainment of true happiness.

ELIAS WILHELM NORENE.

Elias Wilhelm Norene, who is an agriculturist of Walnut Grove township, Knox county, was born May 29, 1868, on the old Norene homestead in this county, his parents being Hans and Anna (Erickson) Norene. The father was born in Sweden and came to America at an early age, settling in Knox county in 1856, where he spent practically his entire active career, with the exception of one winter, during which he followed agricultural pursuits in southern territory. He was a son of Hans and Kate (Olson) Johnson. He returned for a visit to Sweden, after which he rented a farm for a year and in 1866 purchased the homestead, where he resided until 1878. In that year he bought a farm, on which he lived until his retirement in 1895. He died February 3, 1907, at the age of seventy-five years, but Mrs. Norene is still living in Altona, being seventy-one years of age. She was born October 27, 1840, and came to America when she was twenty-four years of age, making the trip on the same steamer on which her husband was traveling. She is a daughter of Eric Pearson, an agriculturist of Sweden, who died in 1867, at the age of sixty-eight years. His widow, Mrs. Martha Olson Pearson, came to America and lived with her daughter until she returned to Sweden shortly before her death, which occurred at the age of eighty-six years. The grandfather, Peter Larson, was also an agriculturist. Mrs. Norene was one of six children, five of whom are living: Olaf Erickson, of Nebraska; Pear Erickson, of Sweden; Carrie, who is the wife of Peter Norborg, of Nebraska; and Martha, who is the wife of N. Nordestrom, also of Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Norene were married in Knoxville, Illinois, on March 15, 1865, but they later resided in Walnut Grove township on the farm, where the youngest son now lives. Subsequently he purchased the present home of his older son. Both Mr. and Mrs. Norene were members of the Swedish Lutheran church and were among the prominent citizens of Walnut Grove township. They were the parents of three children: Alfred T., an agriculturist; Josephine C., who is the wife of Carl A. Nybladh, of Galesburg; and Elias W., who is the subject of this review.

After attending school Elias W. Norene remained at home with his father assisting in the farm duties until he entered the Galesburg Business College. After completing his course in that institution he again returned home and has since been the manager of the property upon which he is now residing. He is one of the most modern and scientific farmers in Walnut Grove township and is winning profitable returns for the careful management and the industrious labor which he is giving to his undertakings.

On June 26, 1905, Mr. Norene was married to Miss Bertha S. Linderholm, a daughter of H. L. and Hedwig (Johnson) Linderholm, who are both residing in Altona and were among the pioneer settlers of Knox county. Mrs. Norene's birth occurred on the 15th of April, 1874, in Knox county. She is one of eleven children; the others are as follows: Latimer B., of Galesburg; Martin, of Farmington, Iowa; Otto Herman, deceased; Hannah, who is the wife of David Anderson; one, who died in infancy; Theresa Amelia, who is married to J. A. Boland; Harrison B. and Hattie P., twins, the former residing in Pomona, California, and the latter deceased; Ernest Arthur, of Chicago; and Lilly Cornelia, the wife of Thomas Chinn, a resident of Pasadena, California. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Norene: Lula Florinda, born May 4, 1896; Mabel Pemilla, born April 8, 1898; Frances Lilly Wilhelmina, born November 12, 1901; and Maurice Elias, born December 19, 1908.

Mr. Norene gives his political support to the republican party and is at present a member of the school board, having served for twenty-two years in that capacity. In religious faith he is a Lutheran, holding membership in the Swedish Lutheran church of Altona. He is one of the native sons of Knox county, who has made a successful career for himself in the new world by displaying the persistency, energy, industry and thrift which are so characteristic of the Swedish people.

NATHAN MILROY.

Nathan Milroy, who has been a lifelong resident of Knox county, is residing upon his farm in Copley township. His birth occurred on the 16th of December, 1851, in the old log cabin which is near his home today. He is a son of Samuel and Margaret (McNish) Milroy and a grandson of Samuel and Agnes (Forsyth) Milroy. The father was born in Wigtonshire, Scotland, and came to America with his family in 1851. Immediately upon their arrival in this country they settled in Copley township and were among the first settlers in this part of Knox county. His death occurred in 1887, at the age of sixty-nine years. He was one of three children born to his father's first marriage, his two sisters both having also passed away. Of a second union there was born to Samuel Milroy, Sr., one daughter, Isabel, who is the wife of Hugh McCormick, and living at Creston, Iowa. Mrs. Milroy, who was born January 22, 1815, and was a daughter of Nathaniel and Jane (McGoch) McNish, died October 3, 1903, at the age of eighty-eight years. Her brother is residing in Australia.

No event of special importance occurred to vary the routine of farm life for Nathan Milroy in his boyhood and youth. He attended school and assisted his father upon the farm until the latter's death, after which he continued the management of the home property and is still engaged in raising stock. He has given his whole attention to this work and has met with the success which is the reward of persistency, energy and diligent labor.

Mr. Milroy was married to Miss Belle Cook, whose birth occurred on the 2d of April, 1854, and who is a daughter of James and Agnes (Stein) Cook, the former having been born on October 24, 1815, and the latter now residing in Galesburg. The Cook family removed to Knox county in 1845, coming from Ross county, Ohio. The grandparents, Robert and Jeannette (Lochie) Cook, came originally from Roxburghshire, Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. Milroy were the parents of seven children, six of whom survive: Mary Ellen, who became the wife of M. Gibbs, of Victoria township, and is the mother of two children, Dale M. and Dean M.; William Morris and Samuel Stein, both of whom are residing at home; Edna Grace, who is the wife of G. Gibbs, of Victoria; and Archie Nathan and James N., both of whom are at home.

Politically Mr. Milroy gives his support to the republican party and has been most active in promoting its policies and working for its best interests. He has held the office of road commissioner for fifteen years and has been a member of the school board for the past twenty-one years, being one of the oldest school directors in the county and having succeeded his father to that office. He is a member of the John Knox church, as his father had also been, and has held the office of trustee for many years. During his residence here he has helped to improve the agricultural districts of the county and is justly accounted one of the progressive farmers of Copley township. His labors have been a cooperant factor in many movements which have been of value to the community, bringing Copley township from its position as an uncultivated prairie to a leading place among the developed agricultural regions of Illinois.

A. J. VICTOR JOHNSON.

A. J. Victor Johnson is engaged in general farming and stock-raising on the place, where he was born on the 2d of February, 1883. His father, Jonas Johnson, was born on the 1st of March, 1839, in Norbo-Ockelba-Soken Agevele-borg län, Sweden, where he spent his boyhood and youth. The grandparents were Jonas and Martha Johnson, the former dying in 1870, at the age of eighty years. They came to America in 1864 and lived with their son, Jonas Johnson, in Knox county until their death. Jonas Johnson left his native land in 1857 and came direct to Altona, where he resided until after his marriage to Christina Olson, whose birth occurred on the 25th of December, 1843. Subsequently he removed to Sparta township and later purchased the property which is the present homestead. Mrs. Johnson was a daughter of Olaf Peterson, who came to America with his family in 1857 and after residing in Altona removed to Moline, Illinois, where he died in July, 1858, at the age of sixty-three years, and the mother in 1870, at the age of seventy-nine years. Of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Johnson there are still living besides our subject, three daughters, as follows: Minnie, who married P. Stromberg, a farmer of Sparta township; Amanda, the wife of Andrew Lindstrom, of Altona, Illinois; and Rosa, who married Herman Smith, of Altona.

The business career of A. J. Victor Johnson was begun in a grocery store at Altona, where he accepted a clerkship soon after leaving school. He remained there for two years, then pursued a commercial course in Brown's Business College at Galesburg, after which he went to Aberdeen, Washington. There he successfully engaged in the grocery business for two years, but at the end of that time he returned to Galesburg, where for a year he was associated in business with J. A. Peterson. In 1908 he returned to the old homestead and has ever since devoted his attention to the tilling of the fields and the raising of stock. Mr. Johnson is directing his efforts along the more progressive methods and is meeting with success, his diligence and enterprise being prominent factors in promoting his prosperity.

On the 27th of April, 1904, at Altona, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Johnson and Miss Goldie Holmes. She was born in Galesburg, on September 18, 1885, the only child of H. H. and Mattie (Burkhard) Holmes. The father, who is an engineer on the Chicago & Rock Island Railroad, is still living but the mother passed away in 1892, at the age of twenty-six. Mrs. Holmes was a daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Rogers) Burkhard, who were among the pioneer settlers of Knox county. The father was a native of Pennsylvania. After their daughter died Mr. and Mrs. Burkhard brought up Mrs. Johnson, who made her home with them until her marriage. Her grandfather Holmes was killed in the Civil war, having enlisted and gone to the front from this state. Mrs. Johnson is connected with some of the oldest families of the county, her great-grandfather Rogers having erected the first frame house in Galesburg, which was located on the present square. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson there has been born one son, Freeman, whose birth occurred in Aberdeen, Washington, on January 29, 1905.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson belong to the Methodist Episcopal church of Altona, and she also belongs to the Ladies Aid Society. He does not take an active interest in politics and has never affiliated with any party, giving his support to the man he thinks is best qualified for the office.

FRANK U. DAUGHMER.

Frank U. Daughmer, who has been one of the road commissioners of Salem township for the past two years, is the owner of a fine farm of four hundred and thirty-seven acres located on section 5, where he engages in stock-raising in connection with his agricultural pursuits. He was born in Haw Creek township, on January 28, 1868, a son of N. George and Harriet (Lindzey) Daughmer. The former was a native of Pendleton county, Virginia, his birth occurring in 1830, but he was reared and educated in Ohio, having removed there when a child with his father, James Daughmer, who spent the remainder of his life in the Buckeye state. When he had attained the age of twenty-two years, N. George Daughmer left the parental roof and started westward, making the journey across the prairies to Illinois with a buggy and team of horses. He was accompanied by his first wife, Lamenta Huey, a native of Ohio. They located in the vicinity of Maquon, Haw Creek township, where Mrs. Daughmer subsequently passed away and was laid to rest in the cemetery at Maquon. Mr. Daughmer, who was married three times, took for his second wife Miss Harriet Lindzey, our subject's mother, who also passed away in Haw Creek township, while his third union was with Miss Hattie Lawrence. He disposed of his Haw Creek farm about 1874 and removed to Douglas, locating on the farm now owned by his son, Frank U., in Salem township. He industriously applied himself to the cultivation of this property which he improved by the erection of good, substantial buildings, making it one of the valuable places of this section. Much of his time and attention were directed to the raising of thoroughbred Polled Angus cattle, that he exhibited at the fairs and fat stock show in Chicago and also sold at public auctions in this vicinity. In connection with this he also raised and fed Shorthorn cattle for the market, but gave less attention to this during the latter years of his life. He passed away on his homestead on the 24th of May, 1908, and was buried in the cemetery at Maquon. In politics Mr. Daughmer was a republican, but he had never held any office in either the township or the county. He was one of the very prosperous farmers of Salem township and numbered among its residents many warm friends by whom he was held in the highest esteem.

Frank U. Daughmer was reared from the age of six years on the farm, where he now resides, attending the public schools of Douglas in the acquirement of his early education. He subsequently spent one year at Knox College and also attended the Agricultural College at the University of Illinois, at Urbana, for a similar period. At the expiration of that time he returned to Douglas and turned his attention to the cultivation of his father's homestead and to stock-raising. Following his marriage he located on the old home farm, where he has ever since resided. He has made quite extensive improvements during the period of his occupancy, having erected a number of new buildings and repaired and remodeled the old ones. The land, which is in a high state of cultivation was thoroughly drained during his father's lifetime and given the careful attention that has made it possible to keep it in its present state of productivity with comparative ease. He is conducting his operations very much as did his father, making a specialty of the breeding and raising of the thoroughbred Polled Angus cattle, always keeping a herd of about forty-five, and he also raises and feeds high-grade cattle for the market. Mr. Daughmer is meeting with a gratifying degree of prosperity in his undertakings and is recognized as one of the most capable and successful agriculturists and stockmen in Salem township. He is a progressive business man to whose practical ideas and well organized system of directing his energies must be attributed the success of his efforts.

On the 2d of September, 1902, Mr. Daughmer was united in marriage to Miss Bertha H. Bronson, who was born in Peoria county, Illinois, on the 6th of January, 1878. She was a daughter of D. L. T. and Nina (Gue) Bronson. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Daughmer there has been born one daughter, Bernice Violet, who is attending school in Douglas. The first year of their domestic life they spent in Douglas, but at the end of that time they located on the farm, where they now live.

Mr. Daughmer is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and a trustee of the Methodist Episcopal church of Douglas, in which his wife also holds membership. His political allegiance he gives to the republican party and has for several years been a member of the central committee, and he is also now serving as a school director. Mr. Daughmer leads a very busy life as is evidenced by the attractive and well kept appearance of his farm and the abundant harvests annually yielded by his fertile fields.

B. P. BAIRD.

B. P. Baird, a prominent and prosperous resident of Abingdon, has made extensive speculations in lands and now has large property holdings not only in Knox county but in the states of Iowa and Wisconsin. His birth occurred in Pennsylvania, on the 19th of March, 1855, his parents being William H. and Elizabeth J. (Farwell) Baird, who were born, reared and married in the Keystone state. The father, who was for some years engaged in the timber business, came west to Illinois in 1856, locating in Elba township, Knox county, where he turned his attention to general agricultural pursuits. In the conduct of his farming interests he won a gratifying measure of prosperity, owning three hundred and sixty acres of land at the time of his demise and after having given property to each of his sons. Conservative, reliable and honorable, he enjoyed the high esteem of all who knew him. Though a generous contributor in the interests of religion and charity, he was not identified with any denomination. Prior to the Civil war he gave his political allegiance to the democracy but after the close of the conflict championed the prohibition cause and was the first man in Elba township to vote that ticket. The cause of education also found in him a stanch friend and for possibly thirty years he served as a member of the school board. He acquired a good education in his youth and for about three years during his early manhood taught school in his home district in Pennsylvania. Throughout his entire life he read broadly, thus constantly augmenting his knowledge. He passed away in 1890, when seventy years of age, and his demise was the occasion of deep and widespread regret, for he was everywhere recognized as a man of sterling integrity and worth. His wife, whose natal year was 1830, was called to her final rest in May, 1906.

B. P. Baird was reared under the parental roof and supplemented his preliminary education, obtained in the district schools, by a course of study at Hedding College. In the spring of 1877, when twenty-two years of age, he began farming on his own account as a renter. In the following fall he was joined in wedlock to Miss Mary Ellen Oberholtzer, a daughter of Joseph Oberholtzer, one of the early settlers of Knox county. In the spring of 1878 Mr.

B. P. Baird

of January, 1878. She was a daughter of D. L. T. and Nina (Gue) Bronson. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Daughmer there has been born one daughter, Bernice Violet, who is attending school in Douglas. The first year of their domestic life they spent in Douglas, but at the end of that time they located on the farm, where they now live.

Mr. Daughmer is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and a trustee of the Methodist Episcopal church of Douglas, in which his wife also holds membership. His political allegiance he gives to the republican party and has for several years been a member of the central committee, and he is also now serving as a school director. Mr. Daughmer leads a very busy life as is evidenced by the attractive and well kept appearance of his farm and the abundant harvests annually yielded by his fertile fields.

B. P. BAIRD.

B. P. Baird, a prominent and prosperous resident of Abingdon, has made extensive speculations in lands and now has large property holdings not only in Knox county but in the states of Iowa and Wisconsin. His birth occurred in Pennsylvania, on the 19th of March, 1855, his parents being William H. and Elizabeth J. (Farwell) Baird, who were born, reared and married in the Keystone state. The father, who was for some years engaged in the timber business, came west to Illinois in 1856, locating in Elba township, Knox county, where he turned his attention to general agricultural pursuits. In the conduct of his farming interests he won a gratifying measure of prosperity, owning three hundred and sixty acres of land at the time of his demise and after having given property to each of his sons. Conservative, reliable and honorable, he enjoyed the high esteem of all who knew him. Though a generous contributor in the interests of religion and charity, he was not identified with any denomination. Prior to the Civil war he gave his political allegiance to the democracy but after the close of the conflict championed the prohibition cause and was the first man in Elba township to vote that ticket. The cause of education also found in him a stanch friend and for possibly thirty years he served as a member of the school board. He acquired a good education in his youth and for about three years during his early manhood taught school in his home district in Pennsylvania. Throughout his entire life he read broadly, thus constantly augmenting his knowledge. He passed away in 1890, when seventy years of age, and his demise was the occasion of deep and widespread regret, for he was everywhere recognized as a man of sterling integrity and worth. His wife, whose natal year was 1830, was called to her final rest in May, 1906.

B. P. Baird was reared under the parental roof and supplemented his preliminary education, obtained in the district schools, by a course of study at Hedding College. In the spring of 1877, when twenty-two years of age, he began farming on his own account as a renter. In the following fall he was joined in wedlock to Miss Mary Ellen Oberholtzer, a daughter of Joseph Oberholtzer, one of the early settlers of Knox county. In the spring of 1878 Mr.

B. P. Baird

Baird purchased a farm of eighty acres in Peoria county, residing thereon for three years. The demise of his wife occurred on the 13th of June, 1880. In 1881 he sold his property and purchased the James V. Rynerson farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Elba township, continuing to reside thereon for ten years. In the spring of 1891 he disposed of the place and bought the Charles farm of two hundred and eighty acres near Elba Center. In 1900 he purchased a farm of eighty acres near Abingdon and made that his home in order that his children might enjoy the advantages of the Abingdon schools. Fully appreciating the value of education as a preparation for the practical and responsible duties of life, he has provided his children with every advantage in this direction. In 1902 he built his present handsome residence in Abingdon and in December of that year took up his abode in the town where he has since lived. His property holdings in Knox county are extensive and he also owns large tracts in Iowa and Wisconsin, having speculated in lands on quite a large scale. He is likewise a stockholder and director in the First National Bank and for several years past has served as a member of the board of trustees of Hedding College.

In 1882 Mr. Baird was again married, his second union being with Miss Josie Gray, a daughter of Lemuel and Mary A. (Sweegle) Gray, who were natives of Ohio and New Jersey respectively and took up their abode among the early settlers of Knox county, Illinois, here celebrating their marriage. Mr. Baird is the father of six children, one of whom was born of his first marriage. Newton Homer, who was educated in Knox College and also pursued a business course in Denver, Colorado, now owns a cattle ranch of twenty-four hundred acres near that city. William Lemuel, who spent several years in Hedding preparatory school and Hedding College, is now engaged in general agricultural pursuits in this county. Leo Preston, who was graduated from the University of Illinois at Champaign with the class of 1906, winning the degree of Bachelor of Arts, served as superintendent of high schools for three years. In 1910 he was a candidate for the position of county superintendent of schools of Peoria and notwithstanding the fact that he was but a young man and a Knox county citizen, carried the city of Peoria by seven hundred votes and was defeated by only eighty-two ballots. At the present time he is superintendent of the electric light plant in Abingdon and is also engaged in the insurance business. Lois Irena, who was graduated from Hedding College in 1908, winning the degrees of B. A. and B. O., has for the past three years taught in the high school at Winfield, Iowa. Eva Lena, who was graduated from Hedding College in 1911 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, will teach as assistant superintendent in the schools at Whitehall, Michigan. Forest Gray is a senior in Hedding College. Mr. Baird indeed has reason to be proud of his children, all of whom have developed into splendid young men and women under the influence and training of a loving yet wise mother. He attributes his success in no small degree to his wife, who has ever proved a loyal and loving helpmate and companion to him. She is a woman of refinement and culture and presides with gracious hospitality over a charming home.

Mr. Baird gives his political allegiance to the republican party, believing that its principles are most conducive to good government. He is a worthy exemplar of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Abingdon Lodge, No. 185, A. F. & A. M.

He is a steward and trustee of the Methodist Episcopal church, to which his wife and children also belong. Mr. Baird is a man of undoubted integrity in business, of progressive spirit and marked enterprise, a man whose popularity and prosperity have been won through his many good qualities and his well directed effort.

SAMUEL ROBERT PARKINSON.

Samuel Robert Parkinson, a resident of Wataga, early recognized the fact that success has its foundation in persistent, honorable and intelligently directed labor and has worked his way upwards until he is now one of the largest landowners in Knox county and is also well known as a prominent representative of its agricultural, stock-raising and banking interests. He was born on the 3d of November, 1866, in Sparta township, Knox county and is the son of John Parkinson. The father, born in 1828, is a native of England and in 1856 came to America locating in Knox county, where he has since resided, giving his time and attention to farming and mining. He gives his political allegiance to the republican party and is conversant with the leading issues of the day. He has served as road commissioner and also as a member of the school board and is a man of strict integrity and worth, and has the confidence and regard of the entire community. He was married to Ann Taylor, who was also a native of England and the daughter of James Taylor. Although she has reached the advanced age of eighty-six years she is still enjoying life and is a comfort to her family. They became the parents of seven children, namely: Elizabeth, the wife of M. Gehring, of Sparta township, Knox county, Illinois; Ellen, who is married to A. Simmons of Adair county, Nebraska; Mattie, who is the wife of Arthur Mayse, a resident of Greenfield, Iowa; James, who is a resident of Morris county, Kansas; Sadie, the wife of Elder Ecknam, of Morris county, Kansas; Samuel R., the subject of this sketch; and Frank E., of Sparta township.

After spending a few years in the near-by district schools he remained at home till twenty-one years of age. He began farming and continued in this occupation for five years, when he engaged in the meat-market and grocery business. He conducted this enterprise for seventeen years, at the same time looking after the farm, which he had previously acquired. Because of his close application and his persistent effort to develop his business along lines of modern improvements abreast of the times, Mr. Parkinson secured an extensive patronage and realized a success which was as remunerative as it was gratifying. In 1909 he purchased a one-half interest in the Bank of Wataga, of which he is now ably serving as vice president. In this as in his previous undertakings the accrued profits have increased his capital and thus enabled him to make further investments. At the present he is the owner of one thousand acres of land in Knox county, which he devotes to crops and stock. His buying-in and market transactions show rare judgment and inevitably financial results of enviable proportions.

Mr. Parkinson was married in 1892, to Elizabeth Campbell, whose birth occurred on the 29th of November, 1871. She is the daughter of Robert and Catherine Dolan Campbell, the former of whom died December 10, 1911, at the age of seventy-six, while Mrs. Campbell is surviving and now in her eightieth year. Mr. and Mrs. Parkinson are the parents of one son.

In politics Mr. Parkinson casts his vote with the republican party, and has been honored by his fellow citizens with the office of president of the village board which he has competently administered for thirteen consecutive years. He holds membership in Wataga Lodge, No. 291, A. F. & A. M.

Mr. Parkinson's enterprise and industry have carried him into important relations with business affairs and he has won for himself a most creditable reputation by his enterprise and reliability in every one and all matters, with which he has come in contact.

ROBERT GIBBS.

Robert Gibbs, who is the owner of four hundred and eighty acres of valuable land in Copley township, which he devotes to farming and stock-raising, was born in Lynn township, December 30, 1874. He is a son of Joseph E. and Margaret (Speck) Gibbs. The mother is a daughter of E. Speck, a soldier of the Civil war, who died at Andersonville prison. Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs are now living retired in La Fayette, Illinois. The father's birth occurred in Pittsburg. The grandparents, Joseph and Elizabeth (Goetzinger) Gibbs, removed to Lynn township, Knox county, with their three children and settled on the old Gibbs farm, where he passed the remainder of his life. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Gibbs were the parents of four children: Helen, who is the wife of W. Craig, of Victoria township; Florence, who was married to Harry Thomas, also of Victoria township; Frank L., who is living in Stark county, Illinois; and Robert, the subject of this sketch.

After finishing school Robert Gibbs remained at home and assisted his father in the cultivation of the farm until twenty-one years of age. After this he began upon his independent agricultural career in Lynn township on the farm of his grandfather. Subsequently after three years' residence there, he removed to La Fayette and engaged in the meat-market business for the following two years. After disposing of this he purchased his present home and is now farming four hundred and eighty acres of productive land, which is under a high state of cultivation and equipped with modern and substantial buildings. In all of his work he is progressive, employing the latest improved machinery to facilitate the work of the fields, while his careful study of cattle-raising has given him accurate knowledge concerning the best methods of raising stock.

Mr. Gibbs was married in January, 1896, to Miss Abbie May Goff, whose birth occurred on the 9th of June, 1873, in Copley township and who is a daughter of Marvin and Mary Elizabeth (Monasmith) Goff, the former one of the old settlers of Copley township, having passed away in 1897, at the age of fifty-six years, and the latter now residing at the age of seventy-one years on the old homestead. To them ten children were born: Julia, who is the wife of S. Collinson, of Victoria township; John, of Lynn township; Marvin, a resident of Victoria township; Sarah, who is the wife of A. McCormick, of Creston, Iowa;

George, a resident of Copley township; Mrs. Gibbs; Charles, who is living at home; Louis, of Victoria township; Maggie, who became the wife of Fred McIlvray, of Victoria township; and Leona, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs are the parents of four children: Milo, whose birth occurred on October 24, 1896; Mary Margaret, who was born July 9, 1899; George Reed, born January 5, 1900; and Robert Russell, who was born August 3, 1906.

Mr. Gibbs' political allegiance is given to the republican party and in 1909 he was elected supervisor. He belongs to the Masonic lodge of Victoria, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Royal Neighbors and the Mystic Workers of the World. He cooperates in many movements for the general good and is particularly interested in everything pertaining to the agricultural development of the county. He is known as a reliable and public-spirited citizen and stands high in the regard of all who know him.

DAVID MERRY SIMPSON.

David Merry Simpson, who is living retired on his farm in Walnut Grove township, was born in Sorn Point, Ayrshire, Scotland, on the 15th of October, 1835, his parents being Hugh and Janette (Murdock) Simpson. The grandfather was George Simpson and was the father of twelve children, of whom David and Robert K., of Glasgow, Scotland, are the only surviving members. George Simpson was active in his duties as a member of the United Presbyterian church. The father was a shoemaker by trade and was engaged in this business throughout his life, his death occurring in 1852 at the age of sixty-five years. The mother was the daughter of John and Mary Murdock, the former a weaver by trade. Mrs. Simpson's death occurred in 1872 at the age of eighty-four years.

David Simpson attended the district schools in his native country until twelve years of age and then entered into agricultural pursuits, assisting his brother. For the following two years he was engaged in the tile and brick business and subsequently after his father's death, he went to the coal regions and engaged in mining, but in 1857, desiring to seek his fortune in the new world, he came to America, going directly to Oneida, Illinois, arriving there on the 16th of April, 1857. For the next three years he farmed out by the month and then began farming for himself. Subsequently he removed to his present farm which was at that time all prairie land, and Mr. Simpson now has the distinction of being the only living old settler in this township. When he had acquired one hundred and twenty acres of land he established his present home, and has constantly added improvements and conveniences until he now has one of the well equipped and modern farms in the township.

Mr. Simpson was married in 1861, to Lavina (Garland) Hawk, a native of Virginia, her parents being Thomas and Mildred (Moon) Garland. The father was a planter and slave owner until he removed to Ohio, where he spent the latter part of his life and where his death occurred. Mrs. Simpson had been previously married to Jacob Hawk, and was the mother of four children, all of whom are living. Mr. and Mrs. Simpson have become the parents of eight children, of whom three died in infancy. Of those living, Hugh C., the eldest, was born on the 14th of December, 1861, and is engaged in agricultural pursuits. He married Ada McLaughlin, by whom he had five children: Leola, Milo, James and David, and one, the eldest, who died in childhood. Mildred Lavina was born June 5, 1864, and is living at home, where she is keeping house for her father. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and is very active in its various societies, being one of the prominent members of the Ladies' Aid Society. Janette M., who was born November 19, 1866, is the wife of Ed N. Suydam, of Galesburg, and has four children: Marie, Fern, Edna and David, who died, when three years of age. Amanda Ellen was born October 19, 1868, and is the widow of William Mead, of Oneida. David J. was born January 13, 1872, and is a traveling salesman residing in Peoria, Illinois, and is a widower.

Mr. Simpson is an active supporter of the policies of the republican party, doing all in his power to promote its measures and to influence his fellow citizens in their support. He has served as central committeeman, highway commissioner and as member of the school board. He also holds membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Altona and in the Methodist church of Altona. In his social, fraternal and political relations he has won for himself the same esteem and regard, which he has won in the industrial circles, and has lived in accordance with the teachings of high principles, continually extending the circle of his friends who almost comprise all his acquaintances.

WILLIAM N. THOMAS.

William N. Thomas, who is operating a blacksmith shop in Wataga, has been a resident of Knox county for over fifty-two years. He was born in Wayne county, Indiana, on the 14th of May, 1842, and is a son of Edward and Maria (Kitwell) Thomas. The father was a native of Wabash county, Indiana, and there he was also reared and educated, after which he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church, his first field being in the vicinity of his early home. His labors were terminated by death some nine years later, however, his demise occurring in 1850. The mother, who passed away in 1876, at the age of sixty-two years, was a daughter of J. H. and Maria Kitwell, natives of Kentucky. The paternal grandfather of our subject, J. H. Thomas, was prominent in promoting and spreading the Universalist belief and for many years devoted his entire time and attention to advocating his views, traveling throughout the country and lecturing wherever he could obtain a hearing. He also owned and operated a printing establishment and emphasized his personal work by scattering broadcast essays and lectures of himself and others on the theme of universal salvation. He was a native of Kentucky. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thomas there were born five children: William N., our subject; James E., who is living in Prairie City, Iowa; W. H., a resident of Dodgeville, Wisconsin; Maggie, the wife of W. H. Moon, also of Prairie City, Iowa; and Mrs. J. H. Gregg, of Missouri.

The eldest child of his widowed mother, William N. Thomas left school at the age of twelve and during the succeeding eight years devoted his energies to the operation of their farm. In 1859 he came to Galesburg, continuing to follow agricultural pursuits until the breaking out of the war in 1861, when he enlisted as a musician in Company A, Fifty-Ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and went to the front under General Post of the Army of the Cumberland. He participated in the battles of Pea Ridge, Stone River, Chickamauga, Atlanta and Nashville, having been wounded in the latter engagement. He had enlisted at Knoxville for three years but upon the expiration of his period of service reenlisted until the close of the war. After the close of hostilities he went to San Antonio, Texas, where he was retained for nine months, being mustered out on September 19, 1866. Upon his return to Galesburg he gave his attention to the carriage manufacturing business, for about three decades, when he came to Wataga and opened a blacksmith and general repair shop which he is still operating.

For his wife Mr. Thomas chose Miss Frances A. Gibbs, a daughter of Nelson and Adelia Gibbs, the father a farmer of Knox county, where Mrs. Thomas has spent the greater part of her sixty-five years. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas there were born two sons: W. H., a resident of Galesburg, who married Ada Tulson and has one child; and A., living in Oneida, who is married and has two children.

Fraternally Mr. Thomas is a member of the Masonic order, being affiliated with Wataga Lodge, No. 291, A. F. & A. M., and he also belongs to the Odd Fellows, holding membership in Galesburg Lodge, No. 142, I. O. O. F. His political support he gives to the democratic party and he has several times been called to public office, having served as mayor and marshal for two terms each, and as constable for three. In all of his relations of life Mr. Thomas has ever exhibited the loyalty and efficiency that characterized him on the battlefield, the details of every responsibility he assumes being discharged with conscientious exactitude.

C. P. SMITH.

C. P. Smith, representing agricultural interests in Knox county, lives half a mile east of Elba Center on the farm and in the same house where he first beheld the light of day, fifty years ago, his birth having occurred July 9, 1861. His father, Ira A. Smith, was a pioneer settler of Illinois, coming here from New York state in 1850, when a young man, and carried on farming. He bought the present homestead and lived here for many years until his death in January, 1907, when he was eighty-four years old. He married Sarah A. Rose, whose grandfather, Stephen Rose, was one of the original settlers of Knox county, taking up his residence here in 1830. There were eleven children in the Smith family, of whom seven are still living: Mrs. Donnelly, of Kansas; Alfred A., of Iowa; Salem, of Kansas; C. P., the subject of this biography; W. T., of Texas, and Mrs. Barry of Nebraska, the last two being twins; and Mrs. Ramp, of Nebraska.

Upon the old homestead C. P. Smith spent the days of his boyhood and youth, and in the local district schools he obtained a fair education. He began work on the home place and has remained here ever since with the exception low agricultural pursuits until the breaking out of the war in 1861, when he enlisted as a musician in Company A, Fifty-Ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and went to the front under General Post of the Army of the Cumberland. He participated in the battles of Pea Ridge, Stone River, Chickamauga, Atlanta and Nashville, having been wounded in the latter engagement. He had enlisted at Knoxville for three years but upon the expiration of his period of service reenlisted until the close of the war. After the close of hostilities he went to San Antonio, Texas, where he was retained for nine months, being mustered out on September 19, 1866. Upon his return to Galesburg he gave his attention to the carriage manufacturing business, for about three decades, when he came to Wataga and opened a blacksmith and general repair shop which he is still operating.

MR. AND MRS. C. P. SMITH

For his wife Mr. Thomas chose Miss Frances A. Gibbs, a daughter of Nelson and Adelia Gibbs, the father a farmer of Knox county, where Mrs. Thomas has spent the greater part of her sixty-five years. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas there were born two sons: W. H., a resident of Galesburg, who married Ada Tulson and has one child; and A., living in Oneida, who is married and has two children.

Fraternally Mr. Thomas is a member of the Masonic order, being affiliated with Wataga Lodge, No. 291, A. F. & A. M., and he also belongs to the Odd Fellows, holding membership in Galesburg Lodge, No. 142, I. O. O. F. His political support he gives to the democratic party and he has several times been called to public office, having served as mayor and marshal for two terms each, and as constable for three. In all of his relations of life Mr. Thomas has ever exhibited the loyalty and efficiency that characterized him on the battlefield, the details of every responsibility he assumes being discharged with conscientious exactitude.

C. P. SMITH.

C. P. Smith, representing agricultural interests in Knox county, lives half a mile east of Elba Center on the farm and in the same house where he first beheld the light of day, fifty years ago, his birth having occurred July 9, 1861. His father, Ira A. Smith, was a pioneer settler of Illinois, coming here from New York state in 1850, when a young man, and carried on farming. He bought the present homestead and lived here for many years until his death in January, 1907, when he was eighty-four years old. He married Sarah A. Rose, whose grandfather, Stephen Rose, was one of the original settlers of Knox county, taking up his residence here in 1830. There were eleven children in the Smith family, of whom seven are still living: Mrs. Donnelly, of Kansas; Alfred A., of Iowa; Salem, of Kansas; C. P., the subject of this biography; W. T., of Texas, and Mrs. Barry of Nebraska, the last two being twins; and Mrs. Ramp, of Nebraska.

Upon the old homestead C. P. Smith spent the days of his boyhood and youth, and in the local district schools he obtained a fair education. He began work on the home place and has remained here ever since with the exception of a year and a half spent in Nebraska. He is a successful farmer and a breeder of high-grade live-stock.

MR. AND MRS. C. P. SMITH

Mr. Smith was married to Miss Harriett Miller and they became the parents of a son, Elmer, who was born in 1890 and passed away in 1907. In 1894 Mrs. Harriett Smith was called to her final rest and on June 12, 1907, Mr. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Julia Rausch, a daughter of Gustavus and Bertha Rausch, of Galesburg, where her father occupied the position of minister in the Evangelical church. She was one of five children in her family.

Mr. Smith belongs to the Masonic order and in his political convictions is not bound by party ties, preferring to vote independently for the man rather than according to the dictates of the party. He was elected to the office of constable and for four years served as justice of the peace. Fraternally he is connected with the Masonic order. Ever faithful in adhering to his ideals, he has unflinchingly performed the duties which have fallen to his lot and in the success which has attended his efforts has found his reward.

FRED C. BEARMORE.

Fred C. Bearmore, president of the First National Bank of Maquon, has long been prominently identified with the commercial and financial enterprises of this village, of which he has been a resident for thirty years. He was born in Monmouth county, New Jersey in 1853, and is a son of David T. and Rebecca (Conover) Bearmore, natives of the same state. The father was a wagon and carriage maker but also engaged in the operation of a farm in connection with his trade. The parents spent their entire lives in their native state, both passing away at the age of about seventy-five years, the father's demise occurring near the town of Freehold, and that of the mother at Lakewood. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Bearmore numbered three, of whom our subject was the eldest, the others being as follows: David, a real-estate man of Emporia, Kansas, who married Harriet Emma Hall and has one daughter, Edna; and Elnora, who is the wife of Joseph W. Thorn, of Farmingdale, New Jersey.

The early life of Fred C. Bearmore was spent in the village where he was born, and to whose schools he is indebted for his education. After acquiring such knowledge as was deemed essential to enable him to assume the heavier responsibilities of life he laid aside his text-books and operated his father's farm. He had from his earliest youth been trained in those qualities of integrity and industry that tend to develop men of enterprise and high principle, his ideals ever having been of the highest type of manhood. At the age of twenty-eight he left the parental roof and came west and entered into the mercantile and banking business with William Swigart. This venture proved to be very lucrative and they were associated together in this business in Maquon for twenty-two years. In 1903 Fred C. Bearmore established a private bank that he operated for three years and then reorganized and established as a national bank, the institution since 1906 having been known as the First National Bank of Maquon. It has a paid-up capital of thirty-five thousand dollars and is recognized as one of the most substantial and conservative financial organizations of this section of the state. Mr. Bearmore is the president; John Wolf, vice president; and A. S. Potter, cashier. All are men of high standing and well known integrity and business ability.

For his wife and helpmate Mr. Bearmore chose Miss Sarah Swigart, a daughter of William Swigart, their marriage being celebrated in 1885. Six children have been born unto Mr. and Mrs. Bearmore. Freda, who married Glen McGirr and has two children, is living on a farm south of Maquon. Ella, the second daughter became the wife of Ralph White and resides in Atlantic City, New Jersey. Fay, who is unmarried, is teaching in the schools of Hinsdale, Illinois. William, the only son, is living at Minot, North Dakota. The two youngest members of the family, Genevieve and Marian, the latter born on the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of the parents, are both at home.

The political views of Mr. Bearmore coincide with the principles of the democratic party, in support of whose candidates he casts his ballot. Though he has never been prominently identified in municipal politics, he served most capably as supervisor. During the long period of his residence in Knox county Mr. Bearmore, by reason of his honorable transactions, trustworthiness and absolute reliability on any and all occasions, as well as his regard for his word, has at all times had the full confidence of his fellow citizens and has manifested those characteristics which are among a business man's greatest assets. His name connected with any business enterprise is recognized as a guaranty of its reliability and assurance of its stability

---

PROFESSOR ARTHUR CLARK BUTLER.

Professor Arthur Clark Butler, who has served as superintendent of the city schools of Abingdon since 1904, is one of the well known educators of northern Illinois and has long been a prominent and valuable factor in educational circles in this part of the state. His birth occurred in Morgan county, Illinois, on the 11th of April, 1848, his parents being James L. and Oletha Parker (Sargent) Butler, who were natives of Virginia and Ohio respectively. In early manhood the father journeyed westward to Ohio and thence to Indiana and in 1840 removed to Morgan county, Illinois, being there married and purchasing a farm near Jacksonville. In 1862 he left the place and took up his abode on a farm which he purchased in Macon county, where he remained until 1870, when he removed to Neosho county, Kansas. There he continued to reside until called to his final rest on the 29th of July, 1891. James L. Butler was an ardent worker in the cause of temperance and also labored effectively in advancing the interests of education in his community. While living in Morgan county he was a prime factor in the erection of one of the best country schoolhouses to be found in the state. He was always an advocate of good public schools and worked earnestly for their establishment and keeping up their standard. Both he and his wife were devoted and consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mrs. Butler, who was still but a girl when she accompanied her parents on their removal to Morgan county, passed away on the 27th of May, 1900. Her father, William L. Sargent, there became a well known figure in state politics at an early day. He was a whig and a strong anti-slavery man, his home being one of the stations on the underground railway. He served as a member of the state legislature from his district and was one of the influential factors in the organization of the republican party. All of his sons, six in number, served throughout the Civil war and returned home after the cessation of hostilities. The only one still living is Henry, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home at Quincy, Illinois.

Arthur C. Butler was reared under the parental roof and obtained his early education in the public schools of Morgan county, Illinois. Subsequently he pursued the full course and also did an additional year's work in the State Normal School at Bloomington, Illinois, being graduated from that institution with the class of 1878. Later Dr. Richard Edwards, who has been president of the State Normal School, became president of Blackburn University at Carlinville and, having recognized Mr. Butler's efficient work in the normal school as an institute instructor and writer, recommended him to the university for the degree of Master of Arts, which was accordingly conferred upon him. Subsequently Mr. Butler took a correspondence post-graduate course from the University of Chicago, which completed his schooling. Five years prior to his graduation from the State Normal School he had taken up teaching as a vocation and during his normal course continued teaching at intervals. Following his graduation he was made principal of the schools at Normal, Illinois, where he remained for two years. On the expiration of that period he accepted the principalship of the schools at Virginia, Cass county, Illinois, there remaining for a similar length of time. He was next offered and accepted the position of superintendent of the Beardstown (Ill.) schools, in which capacity he served for nine years. At the end of that time he went to Taylorville and organized the Taylorville township high school, formulated the course of study and presided over the schools for three years. In 1894 he left that place to become superintendent of the schools at Kewanee, Henry county, Illinois, where he remained for ten years. In 1904 he came to Abingdon as superintendent of the schools here and has held that responsible position continuously since. He is a broad-minded man and an able educator and for several years past has been a regular contributor to the School News and has also written extensively for other educational publications. He has recently completed a series of articles for the School News and has begun another. "Persimmons" and "Gala Day Stories," two books of which he is the author, have won him merited fame. The former publication is very popular and has enjoyed an extensive sale. Miss Caroline Grote, formerly county superintendent of Pike county, Illinois, said: "I am frequently asked to name a collection of books for a school library. Whether the collection is to be a large or a small one I always name Persimmons among the first." This is only one of scores of testimonials from nearly every state in the Union. Professor Butler was a charter member of the Schoolmasters' Club, which has done much toward shaping the educational policy pursued in the northern part of the state. He is recognized as an able institute instructor and in 1911 was chosen to teach advanced-grade reading at the teachers' institute of Knox county.

On the 15th of June, 1871, Professor Butler was united in marriage to Miss Eliza H. Eaton, of Stonington, Christian county, Illinois, by whom he had three children, one son and two daughters. The son and one of the daughters are now deceased. Gazelle is the widow of Frank B. Newell and resides at home.

Professor Butler gives his political allegiance to the republican party, where national questions and issues are involved, but at local elections casts an independent ballot. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons, belonging to Abingdon Lodge, No. 185, A. F. & A. M. He is a member of the official board of the Methodist Episcopal church, to which his wife also belongs. Association with him means elevation and expansion, for his interests have always been in touch with those broadening processes which bring a wider, higher knowledge of life and enable the individual to place a correct valuation upon the things which go to make up life's activities and interests.

A. S. POTTER.

A. S. Potter, who is cashier of the First National Bank, is a native son and a representative of one of Maquon's pioneer families. His birth occurred on May 31, 1862, his parents being Dr. Alvin H. and Eliza (Moore) Potter. They were the parents of two sons, of whom our subject is the elder, the other, A. G., now being a resident of Oklahoma. The latter married Miss Hattie Simpkins, a daughter of Dean and Harriet Simpkins, who at that time were residents of Knox county, but now make their home in Oklahoma. Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Potter also have two sons: Alvin, who married Miss Iva Simpkins, a daughter of G. L. and Jane Simpkins, and has two children; and Forrest. Dr. Potter came to Maquon in his early manhood and engaged in the practice of medicine, continuing to be actively identified with this profession for about forty years. His demise occurred in this town, where he had resided for many years, when he was about sixty-five.

Reared at home, A. S. Potter spent his boyhood and youth in Maquon, obtaining his education in the public schools. In his sixteenth year he left the parental roof and went to Osceola, Nebraska, where he began his business career as a clerk in a mercantile house. He subsequently became the owner of this establishment, spending nineteen years in the business, as employe and proprietor. Mr. Potter took an active and helpful interest in the public life of the western town where he resided for so long, later spending four years as deputy in the office of the county clerk and two in that of the county treasurer of Buffalo county, Nebraska, while for three years he was city assessor of Kearney, Nebraska. In 1895 he returned to Maquon and during the succeeding five years turned his energies to farming. In 1900 he again became identified with mercantile pursuits, when he took the position of cashier of the First National Bank, prior to which he had been one of the directors of this institution.

For his wife Mr. Potter chose Miss Mauda E. Housh, a daughter of James O. and Ann Eliza (Strong) Housh, residents of Knox county. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Potter there have been born four children: Lydia Garnett, who married DeWitt DePue, of this county; Oliver Sheldon, who is living in southern Texas; Florence Ethyl; and Opal, both of whom are living at home.

Mr. Potter has always been a stanch republican, considering that the policy of that party is best adapted to subserve the interests of the majority. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic order, Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Modern Woodmen of America, while both he and his wife hold membership in the Central Congregational church, in the work of which they take an earnest interest.

W. G. LEHMAN.

W. G. Lehman, who has ably filled the office of postmaster of Yates City since October 1, 1897, is one of the spirited and ambitious business men of Knox county, having an active interest in a number of flourishing enterprises which advance the well-being and the commercial standing of the community. He is the proprietor of a general store carrying staple articles, school supplies and feed. In addition to this business he is one of the men who were chiefly instrumental in securing the installment of a local telephone exchange, operating under the name Ideal Telephone, of which he is the director and manager. This company was organized September, 1901, beginning with sixty-five members. From the sixty-five telephones which they put in at that time they have expanded their territory until now they have one hundred and eighty-five telephones on their system and are connected with the Bell Telephone and the local exchange covering the surrounding country. Mr. Lehman was educated in the public schools and attended business college at Quincy, Illinois, but his real training he received under Mr. Garrison of Yates City, whose good judgment and progressive methods gave him his keen insight into the practical ways of conducting business. He has an up-to-date store that bespeaks prosperity and employs three clerks, his wife assisting also in the store and the postoffice.

Mr. Lehman was married to Miss Stella M. Boyes, a native of Yates City and a daughter of Robert Boyes. They are the parents of one child, Lloyd B., who lives at home. In his political sympathies Mr. Lehman is a republican and has been elected to the office of town clerk for two terms and has served as mayor for one term. He is a man of energetic temperament not afraid to take a hazard in a business venture and through the exercise of good judgment has made a success of whatever he undertook.

THOMAS A. CLARK.

The late Thomas A. Clark, who for many years was successfully identified with the agricultural interests of Knox county, was born in the vicinity of Gilson, in September, 1847, and was a son of the Rev. W. M. Clark.

The youngest son in the family, Thomas A. Clark was reared at home, obtaining his preliminary education in the public schools of this county after which he pursued a course at Hedding College. After the completion of his education he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, locating on the farm that his widow now owns. This contained three hundred and twenty acres of land, well improved and highly cultivated. Here Mr. Clark successfully engaged in general farming and stock-raising until his demise in 1900, being considered one of the most capable and efficient agriculturists in the community. He was widely known and highly esteemed, possessing those personal qualities that enabled him not only to win but retain the respect and regard of those with whom he came in contact.

For his wife and helpmate, Mr. Clark chose Mrs. Salina Thurman, a daughter of P. Selby. She was the widow of Franklin Thurman, by whom she had two children: Mary, who married Elmer Kromer and is living in Maquon; and Florence, who is living in Alabama. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Clark there were born four children: Jean, the wife of Charles Burnside, of Maquon; William E. and Kathryn, both of whom are at home; and Fred A., who is living in Idaho.

Mr. Clark was a republican in politics and always took an active interest in all township affairs, having served as road commissioner and in some of the other township offices. Fraternally he belonged to the Knights of Pythias and in faith he was a Methodist, his widow also being a member of that church. Mrs. Clark still owns two hundred and forty acres of their farm which she now rents, having moved to Maquon and built a nice residence in 1904 and has ever since made this her home. Mr. Clark was one of those who so strongly impress their personality upon the community in which they reside that they are not readily forgotten and although more than a decade has passed since his death, he is often thought of and kindly mentioned by those who knew him well and held him in high regard in Maquon township, where he so long resided.

M. S. LEMON.

Among those who contributed to the agricultural growth and development of Knox county, M. S. Lemon must be given a prominent place since his energy and zeal were devoted to the cultivation of the fields for a period of forty-two years. He was born August 1, 1847, in Highland county, Ohio, and is a son of Samuel and Nancy (Shields) Lemon, both natives of Pennsylvania. The father was a farmer all his life and died in Ohio in 1848, his wife departing this life a year later.

Reared on the home farm M. S. Lemon obtained his education in the public schools near by and began to assist his father when barely old enough to handle a plow, remaining in Ohio until some time during the war when he enlisted in the One Hundred and Sixty-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, serving not quite a full year. In 1865 he arrived in Galesburg, Illinois, and purchased eighty acres of land in the county. This he improved and operated, increasing his holdings by additional purchases until he now owns a tract of four hundred and thirty acres. Through industry and thrift he transformed the raw prairie land into a flourishing farm yielding abundant crops. He is progressive in his methods and believes in utilizing the soil to its fullest extent, conforming to scientific principles of intensive farming instead of the old-fashioned manner that his widow now owns. This contained three hundred and twenty acres of land, well improved and highly cultivated. Here Mr. Clark successfully engaged in general farming and stock-raising until his demise in 1900, being considered one of the most capable and efficient agriculturists in the community. He was widely known and highly esteemed, possessing those personal qualities that enabled him not only to win but retain the respect and regard of those with whom he came in contact.

RESIDENCE OF M. S. LEMON

For his wife and helpmate, Mr. Clark chose Mrs. Salina Thurman, a daughter of P. Selby. She was the widow of Franklin Thurman, by whom she had two children: Mary, who married Elmer Kromer and is living in Maquon; and Florence, who is living in Alabama. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Clark there were born four children: Jean, the wife of Charles Burnside, of Maquon; William E. and Kathryn, both of whom are at home; and Fred A., who is living in Idaho.

Mr. Clark was a republican in politics and always took an active interest in all township affairs, having served as road commissioner and in some of the other township offices. Fraternally he belonged to the Knights of Pythias and in faith he was a Methodist, his widow also being a member of that church. Mrs. Clark still owns two hundred and forty acres of their farm which she now rents, having moved to Maquon and built a nice residence in 1904 and has ever since made this her home. Mr. Clark was one of those who so strongly impress their personality upon the community in which they reside that they are not readily forgotten and although more than a decade has passed since his death, he is often thought of and kindly mentioned by those who knew him well and held him in high regard in Maquon township, where he so long resided.

M. S. LEMON.

Among those who contributed to the agricultural growth and development of Knox county, M. S. Lemon must be given a prominent place since his energy and zeal were devoted to the cultivation of the fields for a period of forty-two years. He was born August 1, 1847, in Highland county, Ohio, and is a son of Samuel and Nancy (Shields) Lemon, both natives of Pennsylvania. The father was a farmer all his life and died in Ohio in 1848, his wife departing this life a year later.

Reared on the home farm M. S. Lemon obtained his education in the public schools near by and began to assist his father when barely old enough to handle a plow, remaining in Ohio until some time during the war when he enlisted in the One Hundred and Sixty-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, serving not quite a full year. In 1865 he arrived in Galesburg, Illinois, and purchased eighty acres of land in the county. This he improved and operated, increasing his holdings by additional purchases until he now owns a tract of four hundred and thirty acres. Through industry and thrift he transformed the raw prairie land into a flourishing farm yielding abundant crops. He is progressive in his methods and believes in utilizing the soil to its fullest extent, conforming to scientific principles of intensive farming instead of the old-fashioned manner of operating land with much wastefulness and without regard for the future possibility of exhausting the soil. Four years ago he retired from active work upon his place, giving the management of it to his son.

RESIDENCE OF M. S. LEMON

On March 1, 1871, at Galesburg, Illinois, Mr. Lemon was united in the bonds of wedlock to Miss Mary E. Whitfield, a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Thurwell) Whitfield, both natives of England. They came to America and settled in Pennsylvania where the father, who was a boiler maker, died before he reached middle life. His widow left alone with the task of bringing up two children came to Knox county and settled on a farm.

In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Lemon are seven children: Nancy, who married Arthur Coolidge, a farmer in Iowa and has two children, Horace and Phillip; Ruth; Fannie, a graduate of business college, who lives at home; Louis; Grace and Alice, both high-school graduates; and Stella. Being a veteran of the Civil war Mr. Lemon is an enthusiastic member of the Galesburg Post of the G. A. R. He is a mild-mannered man of genial temperament making friends easily and keeping them because he is big-hearted and loyal, always ready to lend his aid to those who may need it.

J. W. BRIGGS.

The late J. W. Briggs, who was one of Maquon's successful business men as well as extensive land owners, his holdings aggregating over fifteen hundred acres at the time of his demise, was a native of the state of New York.

He was essentially a self-made man, having arrived in Illinois at the age of thirty years with a capital of fifty cents. He was a tinner by trade, hard-working and enterprising as well as ambitious, and subsequently had the means to engage in the livery business, being one of the pioneer livery men of the town. Success in the life of the average man is largely a question of being able to recognize opportunities and to dominate conditions as the advantages afforded are the same in many instances. The essential factors in the success of J. W. Briggs was his ability to anticipate contingencies and so apply his energies as to realize the greatest possible benefit that might accrue therefrom. He dealt extensively in live stock, this proving to be a very profitable source of revenue, and as he was able, from time to time invested his capital in farms, until he had acquired fifteen hundred acres of land. Since his death this has been divided among his widow and children, Mrs. Briggs' portion being three hundred acres, which she is now renting.

Mr. Briggs married Miss Priscilla Jones, a daughter of Peter and Sallie Jones, who came to Illinois from Pennsylvania when Mrs. Briggs was a girl of thirteen years. Here she grew to womanhood, becoming the wife of J. W. Briggs in 1860, when she was seventeen years of age. Mr. Jones, who always engaged in farming in Pennsylvania, was injured in a railroad strike soon after locating here and subsequently died from the effects. Eight children were born unto Mr. and Mrs. Jones, four of whom are deceased. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Briggs numbered three. Ida, who is living in Galesburg, married William Cauffman, a farmer, and has six children, Nina, Harry, Kate, Maud, Briggs and Samuel. Charles, who is conducting the livery formerly owned by his father in addition to which he has a fine farm, is soon going west. He married Lizzie Combs and has one son, Judson. Frank, who engages in farming in Maquon township married Clara Ouderkirk of this county, and has two children, Faith and Paul.

Mr. Briggs was an out-and-out republican and a stanch adherent to his party and its policies, a faithful supporter of its candidates, devoting such of his time to political matters as the development of his personal interests, in which he met with such notable success, permitted of. His demise occurred in Maquon on the 22d of February, 1906.

WILLIAM A. SPIES.

Some men achieve success by a chance turn of fortune, some by an auspicious combination of circumstances which makes their rise possible, and some win their laurels by dint of hard toil and intensive application. The success of William A. Spies, president of the Abingdon Wagon Company, may be said to be due in a measure to all of these. He was fortunate in his parentage, his father, Adam B. Spies, founder of the wagon works, having been a man of rare organizing genius and administrative capacity along industrial lines. He was also fortunate in having his father blaze the trail before him. But William A. Spies' success is due to something more than ancestral heritage and the fact that the wagon industry was bound to flourish in a rapidly growing agricultural state like Illinois. In the wisdom of the ages he found the solution of his life's problem and following the old adage to learn one thing and learn that thoroughly, mastering every detail of the work, he followed in his father's footsteps and chose for this purpose the science of making wagons. No department of the trade was too mean or too unimportant for his attention, but giving himself wholly and enthusiastically to the work, he mounted in his calling with such exceptional celerity that, in 1895 when the present factory was erected and the company was reorganized, at the age of twenty-two years he won his well-merited reward in being chosen for the presidency of the company, a position which he has occupied ever since.

William A. Spies was born in Sterling, Illinois, on April 14, 1873. His father Adam B. Spies, Sr., a native of Germany, came to this country in 1852, when a boy of fourteen, his parents locating in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where his father, also named Adam, followed his trade as a stone mason. After living there four or five years the family came westward and settled on a farm in Whiteside county, Illinois, where William Spies' grandfather engaged in agriculture. His father, then a young man in his twentieth year, had, during their residence in Philadelphia, served an apprenticeship at the wagon-maker's trade and now, after the family's removal to Illinois, served as a journeyman wagon maker in Sterling for about two years. He then opened a general repair shop in Sterling and in 1865 he began making farm wagons for the trade. The demand for these was so great that he was called upon to enlarge and improve his facilities until from small beginnings there grew a large and prosperous manufacturing plant. In 1891 the factory burned, and in place of rebuilding on the old site which had become insufficient for their purposes, the works were transferred to Abingdon, where a new and modernly equipped plant was built and put into operation in 1895. Upon the reorganization of the company, A. B. Spies, wishing to lay aside the too exacting cares and responsibilities as the chief director, passed the reins of management to his son William. How creditably the new trust was assumed by the young man may be seen in the rapid development and expansion of the firm's output. The capacity of the plant is about fifteen thousand vehicles annually and, equipped with excellent shipping facilities on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Iowa Central Railways, it constitutes one of the most important factors in the industrial life of this section of the country. After the company's incorporation under a new name, A. B. Spies, Sr., did not sever his connections with the establishment of which he was the founder, but continued to take an active part in its affairs until his death in 1907. His wife had departed this life in 1895, twelve years earlier.

William A. Spies was educated in the public schools of Sterling. Even when a boy he evinced great love for the work carried on in his father's shop, where he spent most of his spare moments, thus absorbing many of the intricacies of the wagon-maker's trade with which he had practically grown up. For this reason, when the time came for him to assume responsibilities, he was ready to discharge his duties with the forethought and assurance that results from a thorough knowledge of the details of his business.

Mrs. William A. Spies was formerly Miss Blanche Johnston of Abingdon, the daughter of Merrick Johnston now residing in Chicago. Her marriage to Mr. Spies occurred in 1896. One son was born of this union, William A. Spies, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Spies are active workers and influential members of the Universalist church and had no small share in bringing about the fulfillment of the project long desired by the congregation, the erection of a new church upon which work is to be commenced this fall. In his political allegiance Mr. Spies is a republican. Fraternal circles know him as an active worker in Abingdon Lodge, No. 185, A. F. & A. M. and the Galesburg Lodge of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. In the industrial and commercial affairs of his community he occupies a leading position and no one is regarded with more esteem for his straightforward, unequivocal method of conducting his business.

L. W. BENSON.

L. W. Benson, who passed away September 23, 1907, was for many years actively identified with the agricultural interests of Maquon township. He was a native of Green Briar county, Virginia, one of the eight children born of the marriage of Thomas P. and Maria (Sneidger) Benson, also natives of Green Briar county, where they were reared and married. In 1836 they came to Illinois, locating on a farm in Haw Creek township, to the cultivation of which Mr. Benson devoted his energies for many years, but he was living in Maquon when he passed away, his demise occurring at the venerable age of eighty-four years.

The greater part of the life of L. W. Benson was spent in Knox county, in whose common schools he was educated. While pursuing his studies he also assisted his father in the operation of the home farm, his duties and responsibilities increasing from time to time in accordance with his development. With the discovery of gold in California and the marvelous stories of the wealth to be found there, the youth decided to abandon farming and go to the new Eldorado. He spent eight years prospecting in the mines of California, with but little reward, so returned home and resumed agricultural pursuits. Upon his return he purchased the farm of his father-in-law, Nelson Selby, but after six years residence there removed to Maquon. At the time of his death he owned fifty acres of productive land, twelve of which is still in the possession of his widow.

For his wife Mr. Benson chose Miss Mahala Selby, a daughter of Nelson Selby, who was a cloth manufacturer in Ohio, who came to Knox county in 1834, engaging in agricultural pursuits. Of this union there were born four children. Thomas P., the eldest, is deceased. Kathleen M., the deceased wife of Charles Hoxworth was the mother of two children, Raymond and Lura E. Leven W., who is a roadmaster on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad at Galesburg, married Elevan Stoke. Wade H., the youngest member of the family, is a resident of the state of Washington.

Mr. Benson affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal church of which his widow is a member, and fraternally he was a Mason. His political support he gave to the democratic party and for eight years most efficiently served his township in the capacity of supervisor.

DAVID CATION.

David Cation, president of the First State Bank of Williamsfield and one of the most prominent and influential business men of this part of the county, is a native of Illinois, born in Peoria county in June, 1856, and is a son of James and Catherine (Gray) Cation, both of whom were born in Scotland.

Having been reared in the country, David Cation obtained his preliminary education in the district schools of Peoria county and Elba township, Knox county. This was later supplemented by study at Hedding College and he also pursued a commercial course in Brown's Business College, thus better qualifying himself for the practical duties of life. While attending school he also assisted his father with the operation of the farm, and after laying aside his textbooks he devoted his summers to agricultural pursuits and his winters to teaching. In 1881 he went to Oregon, where he remained for nine years, being identified with wheat-raising and the lumber industry. In 1890 he returned to Knox county, locating in Williamsfield, where he at once became associated with L. J. Baird in the operation of a private bank, known as Bank of Williamsfield, with L. J. Baird as president and himself as cashier. This institution was reorganized in April, 1908, as a state bank with a capital stock of thirty thousand dollars, David Cation first becoming vice president and later president of the new institution. Its officials have always been conservative business men of recognized stand-

DAVID CATION

The greater part of the life of L. W. Benson was spent in Knox county, in whose common schools he was educated. While pursuing his studies he also assisted his father in the operation of the home farm, his duties and responsibilities increasing from time to time in accordance with his development. With the discovery of gold in California and the marvelous stories of the wealth to be found there, the youth decided to abandon farming and go to the new Eldorado. He spent eight years prospecting in the mines of California, with but little reward, so returned home and resumed agricultural pursuits. Upon his return he purchased the farm of his father-in-law, Nelson Selby, but after six years residence there removed to Maquon. At the time of his death he owned fifty acres of productive land, twelve of which is still in the possession of his widow.

For his wife Mr. Benson chose Miss Mahaia Selby, a daughter of Nelson Selby, who was a cloth manufacturer in Ohio, who came to Knox county in 1834, engaging in agricultural pursuits. Of this union there were born four children. Thomas P., the eldest, is deceased. Kathleen M., the deceased wife of Charles Hoxworth was the mother of two children, Raymond and Lura E. Leven W., who is a roadmaster on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad at Galesburg, married Elevan Stoke. Wade H., the youngest member of the family, is a resident of the state of Washington.

Mr. Benson affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal church of which his widow is a member, and fraternally he was a Mason. His political support he gave to the democratic party and for eight years most efficiently served his township in the capacity of supervisor.

DAVID CATION.

David Cation, president of the First State Bank of Williamsfield and one of the most prominent and influential business men of this part of the county, is a native of Illinois, born in Peoria county in June, 1856, and is a son of James and Catherine (Gray) Cation, both of whom were born in Scotland.

Having been reared in the country, David Cation obtained his preliminary education in the district schools of Peoria county and Elba township, Knox county. This was later supplemented by study at Hedding College and he also pursued a commercial course in Brown's Business College, thus better qualifying himself for the practical duties of life. While attending school he also assisted his father with the operation of the farm, and after laying aside his textbooks he devoted his summers to agricultural pursuits and his winters to teaching. In 1881 he went to Oregon, where he remained for nine years, being identified with wheat-raising and the lumber industry. In 1890 he returned to Knox county, locating in Williamsfield, where he at once became associated with L. J. Baird in the operation of a private bank, known as Bank of Williamsfield, with L. J. Baird as president and himself as cashier. This institution was reorganized in April, 1908, as a state bank with a capital stock of thirty thousand dollars, David Cation first becoming vice president and later president of the new institution. Its officials have always been conservative business men of recognized standing and naturally the bank has flourished, being now one of the well established financial institutions of the county. The present officers are: David Cation, president; A. L. Harris, cashier; and J. D. Doubet, vice president, all widely known and highly esteemed citizens of the community.

DAVID CATION

Mr. Cation has been twice married, his first union having been with Miss Ella Barber, who passed away in 1905. Four children were born to them, as follows: Russell and Mary, now deceased; James L., a farmer, who married Miss Myrtle Tucker, a daughter of J. A. Tucker; and Catherine, who graduated from the Abingdon high school and is now attending the State Normal.

In 1908 Mr. Cation married Miss Emma Parker, of Williamsfield, who for nine years was bookkeeper and assistant cashier in the bank and is a daughter of George and Sallie Parker. Her parents take especial interest in advanced farming and were the first in Truro township to make use of phosphates as recommended by the State Agricultural College at Urbana. They also built the first silo in the township and conduct their farming on the cooperative plan, furnishing the stock and tools, and sharing the profits with those who do the actual work.

Mr. Cation manifests his religious faith through his membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, and his political support he gives to the republican party. He takes an active interest in local affairs and served for two years as supervisor and for six as township treasurer, which office he still retains. He is one of the progressive and public-spirited business men of his town, the development of which he forwards on every possible occasion by giving his support to every movement that he feels will promote the welfare of the community.

J. A. HENSLEY.

J. A. Hensley, for many years justice of the peace in Yates City and a representative of the mercantile interests, was born near Mount Sterling, Montgomery county, Kentucky, October 15, 1844. His parents Evan S. and Amis (Anderson) Hensley were both natives of Kentucky. The grandfather, Elijah Hensley, came from Virginia to Kentucky at an early date and died when J. A. Hensley was but a small boy; the grandmother survived her husband for many years and passed away during our subject's early manhood. When the convulsions of the great war were rending the usual peace and quiet of Kentucky, his father, Evan S. Hensley, removed his family to Illinois settling in Elba township, Knox county, in 1864. There he lived, engaged in the pursuits of farming, until his death, caused by typhoid fever, at the age of sixty-one years. His mother, who was a daughter of James Anderson, died at the age of eighty-four years, both parents being buried in the cemetery at Yates City. Ten children grew to years of maturity, of whom four are now living. They are: Julia A., the widow of Nathan Williams, residing in Spokane, Washington; J. A. Hensley; Isabelle, the wife of R. H. Taber, residing in Portland, Oregon; and Charlotte, the widow of L. A. Thomas, residing in Kansas City, Missouri. The deceased are: Emily, who was the wife of Elijah Shubert, of Council Bluffs, Iowa; Dr. J. W. Hensley, who died in Peoria, Illinois, where he was practicing medicine; Dr. Joseph

ing and naturally the bank has flourished, being now one of the well established financial institutions of the county. The present officers are: David Cation, president; A. L. Harris, cashier; and J. D. Doubet, vice president, all widely known and highly esteemed citizens of the community.

Mr. Cation has been twice married, his first union having been with Miss Ella Barber, who passed away in 1905. Four children were born to them, as follows: Russell and Mary, now deceased; James L., a farmer, who married Miss Myrtle Tucker, a daughter of J. A. Tucker; and Catherine, who graduated from the Abingdon high school and is now attending the State Normal.

In 1908 Mr. Cation married Miss Emma Parker, of Williamsfield, who for nine years was bookkeeper and assistant cashier in the bank and is a daughter of George and Sallie Parker. Her parents take especial interest in advanced farming and were the first in Truro township to make use of phosphates as recommended by the State Agricultural College at Urbana. They also built the first silo in the township and conduct their farming on the cooperative plan, furnishing the stock and tools, and sharing the profits with those who do the actual work.

Mr. Cation manifests his religious faith through his membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, and his political support he gives to the republican party. He takes an active interest in local affairs and served for two years as supervisor and for six as township treasurer, which office he still retains. He is one of the progressive and public-spirited business men of his town, the development of which he forwards on every possible occasion by giving his support to every movement that he feels will promote the welfare of the community.

J. A. HENSLEY.

J. A. Hensley, for many years justice of the peace in Yates City and a representative of the mercantile interests, was born near Mount Sterling, Montgomery county, Kentucky, October 15, 1844. His parents Evan S. and Amis (Anderson) Hensley were both natives of Kentucky. The grandfather, Elijah Hensley, came from Virginia to Kentucky at an early date and died when J. A. Hensley was but a small boy; the grandmother survived her husband for many years and passed away during our subject's early manhood. When the convulsions of the great war were rending the usual peace and quiet of Kentucky, his father, Evan S. Hensley, removed his family to Illinois settling in Elba township, Knox county, in 1864. There he lived, engaged in the pursuits of farming, until his death, caused by typhoid fever, at the age of sixty-one years. His mother, who was a daughter of James Anderson, died at the age of eighty-four years, both parents being buried in the cemetery at Yates City. Ten children grew to years of maturity, of whom four are now living. They are: Julia A., the widow of Nathan Williams, residing in Spokane, Washington; J. A. Hensley; Isabelle, the wife of R. H. Taber, residing in Portland, Oregon; and Charlotte, the widow of L. A. Thomas, residing in Kansas City, Missouri. The deceased are: Emily, who was the wife of Elijah Shubert, of Council Bluffs, Iowa; Dr. J. W. Hensley, who died in Peoria, Illinois, where he was practicing medicine; Dr. Joseph Hensley, who died in Oklahoma City, where he was a physician; W. D. Hensley, a member of the Twenty-fourth Kentucky Regiment, who died in the army of measles; Sarah C., who remained unmarried; and Ella, .who was the wife of J. M. Ewalt, of Yates City.

During his boyhood J. A. Hensley lived in Kentucky, where he obtained most of his education completing his schooling in Elmwood, Peoria county, Illinois. He was engaged in farming in Kentucky, when he resolved to enter the army and accordingly enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Fifty-first Regiment of the Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served with honor for one year.

Not only in times of war did J. A. Hensley render valuable service to his country, however, but in times of peace he has performed his duties in the administration of public office, since in his long continued position as justice of the peace in Yates City, he has contributed to the maintenance of order and propriety in his community. He has served in this capacity ever since 1884 with the exception of four years, from 1889 to 1893 under Harrison's administration, when he was postmaster of Yates City. In 1897 he engaged in the grocery business and opened a store of his own which he managed with much success until the year 1908, when he sold out to D. M. Enochs. He has, furthermore, represented for the past twenty-eight years the Fire Association of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, insuring for fire and lightning. In his appointment to the position ot notary public he is empowered to use the official seal in many legal transactions. A man of force and executive ability, he has been able to follow many interests and perform with credit the duties that have devolved upon him in his public and private capacity.

Mr. Hensley was united in the bonds of matrimony, on August 19, 1869, to Miss Sarah A. Enochs a native of Shellsburg, Jo Daviess county, Illinois, who has been to him an able helpmate and a true wife, all of these years. Her father, Samuel D. Enochs, was born in Belleville St. Claire county, Illinois, and was a carpenter by trade, pursuing agricultural interests during the later years of his life. He served in the Black Hawk war, in which he distinguished himself for bravery, and throughout his life gave himself loyally to the principles of democracy. He was for a time a school director in the earlier days of Yates City, being a resident of that place. His death occurred at the age of sixty-eight years and nine months, and he was buried in the cemetery at Yates City. His wife, Mrs. Sarah (White) Enochs was a daughter of Thomas and Mary (Denton) White of Virginia. She makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Hensley, and is one of the oldest women living in this part of Knox county, being in her ninety-fifth year. Throughout her life when not hampered by ill-health, Mrs. Enochs was an active worker for the cause of temperance and in the Methodist Episcopal church, of which she is a member. Since 1903, however, her activities have been interrupted and she is now an invalid, her infirmities resulting from a fracture of the hip caused by a fall. She is the mother of eight children, of whom Mrs. Hensley is the only girl, beside one sister, who died in infancy. Of the six sons none is residing in Knox county. Mrs. Enochs receives a pension from the government for her husband's service in the Black Hawk war and has the distinction of being the only one in Yates City accorded this privilege of all those surviving, who were dependent on men that risked their lives in that war.

In national affairs Mr. Hensley is a democrat while in local politics he is independent, voting for the candidate whom he considers best qualified to fill the respective office. In his fraternal relations he is connected with the Masons and the Odd Fellows, his membership in the former being with Yates City Lodge, No. 444, and in the latter with Yates City Lodge, No. 370, in which he holds the office of treasurer. He is a Presbyterian in faith and is a trustee of the Yates City Presbyterian church. As a veteran of the Civil war he is an enthusiastic member of Morgan L. Smith Post, No. 666, G. A. R., in which he has held the office of adjutant and quartermaster for a number of years. He is likewise one of the directors of the Harvest Home Association of Yates City. In their pleasant home on West Main and Marietta streets Mr. and Mrs. Hensley often gather about them an interesting group of friends and relatives who are sincerely devoted to them for their hospitality and good-will towards all.

W. W. HARLER.

W. W. Harler is one of Knox county's agriculturists, who, by reason of his energy and industry, has acquired the means to enable him to spend his latter years in the ease and comfort that justly belong to every well spent life. He laid aside the active work of the fields more than a year ago and is now living retired in Maquon. He is a native of Huntington county, New Jersey, his birth there occurring in 1844, while his parents were J. W. and Anna M. (Slack) Harler, the father a native of Massachusetts and the mother of New Jersey. J. W. Harler, who was a molder, removed with his wife and family to Illinois in 1853, locating here on November 8. He was for many years employed in the Peterson foundry, but was forced to withdraw from this employment during the latter years of his life. He removed to Chippewa county, Minnesota, about seven years prior to his death, which occurred at the age of seventy-two years. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Harler numbered eight, six of whom are living.

W. W. Harler was a lad of nine years when brought to Illinois with his parents and has ever since been a resident of the state. He attended the common schools until he had acquired sufficient knowledge of the common branches to enable him to begin his real life work, when he laid aside his text-books and entered Peterson's foundry with his father. There he applied himself to the mastery of the molder's trade but never followed it, subsequently turning his attention to agricultural pursuits. He remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-four years of age, at which time his father went to Minnesota to make his home. Having gained a good practical knowledge of the principles of general farming, he took a position as a farm hand, diligently applying himself to this work for the succeeding four years. During that period by reason of his unremitting energy and thrift he acquired enough capital to establish a home of his own and after his marriage began farming as a renter. He continued in this way until 1889, when he invested the capital he had acquired in one hundred and forty acres of land in Maquon township. The cultivation and improvement of this land engaged his attention until 1910, when he turned the operation of his homestead over to his son and removed to Maquon, where he owns a comfortable residence. Mr. Harler diligently applied himself to the tilling of his fields and the raising of cattle with growing success for many years, during that time bringing his land into a high state of cultivation and making his farm one of the valuable properties of the district. When he bought his place it was unimproved, but as the years passed he made such annual expenditures as he was able from time to time until it now contains good, substantially constructed barns and outbuildings, serviceable fences and a comfortable residence. He also effected many minor changes during the period of his occupancy that added greatly both to the appearance and value of the property.

For his wife Mr. Harler chose Miss Lizzie White of Fairview, and they became the parents of three children: Idella, who married Arthur Addis of this county and has four children, Pearl, Cecil, Fred and Irene; A. C., living on his father's homestead, who married Minnie Agers and has three children, Mildred, Wilson and John; and Myrtle, who married Floyd Selby and has three children, Fred, Helen and Grace.

Mr. Harler has always voted with the republican party, and has held the offices of commissioner, justice of the peace and constable, serving with efficiency in each capacity. In matters fraternal he has never been identified with any organization save the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the principles of which body have been very influential in directing his life. Mr. Harler is one of those to whom success came as the result of unremitting and persistent endeavor, and such ease and comfort as is now permitted himself and wife by reason of the competence they have acquired is the well merited reward of years of toil and self-denial.

GEORGE L. HAGAN.

George L. Hagan, cashier of the State Bank of St. Augustine, began his career as a farmer, following the pursuit in which his father had met with much success before him. Born in Knox county, Illinois, on the 21st of May, 1858, he was one of a large family of children. His grandparents lived in Maryland and were of Irish extraction. His parents were natives of Kentucky, the father George Henderson Hagan, having come to Indian Point township, Knox county, Illinois, in 1841, where he continued to live until his death April 1, 1898. During this time he saw the raw prairie of the surrounding country converted into fine farms and rich pastures, and with his own industry and thrift contributed in no slight degree to the agricultural prosperity. He married Miss Teresa Onan, whose parents came from Kentucky and located in Indian Point township in 1841, the same year in which his parents had come to this place. Mr. and Mrs. Hagan were the parents of eleven children. The order of their birth was as follows: Frances, Wallace, Robert, two Carolines and William, all of whom are deceased; George L., the subject of this sketch; H. Albert, who is living on his homestead northeast of St. Augustine; Henson, a twin brother of H. Albert and Charles, both deceased; and Blanche, who has also passed away. Mrs. Hagan died in 1907, nine years after her husband, and was buried by his side in the old town cemetery in Fulton county, Illinois, with the rites of the Catholic church to which they had belonged.

George L. Hagan, the seventh child, was educated at the district school of Pleasant Valley and for one year attended Notre Dame University of Indiana. He then came home and engaged in farming, which occupation he followed until 1905, when he removed to St. Augustine, where he became cashier of the State Bank, of which Oron Latimer is the president. He also conducts business in real estate and life insurance, and, in partnership with his brother, owns the home farm of two hundred acres.

In 1889 he was married to Miss Linnie Jennings. In politics he is a stanch democrat, thus following the political inclinations of his father. He is an assessor of Indian Point township, a position which he has held for ten years. Devotion to work and adherence to the principles of integrity, the characteristics which won for Mr. Hagan success in his agricultural career now distinguish him as an able business man in financial circles in his community.

H. A. HAGAN.

H. A. Hagan, the brother of George L. Hagan, and eighth child of Mr. and Mrs. George Henderson Hagan, lives a short distance northeast of St. Augustine, where he is successfully engaged in agriculture. He was born in Indian Point township, July 18, 1859, and was educated in the local district school. At the age of thirty-two he left home and began farming on the place which he now owns, two hundred acres on section 27, a valuable tract of land yielding abundant annual crops. He was married in 1893 to Miss Kate O'Pray, born in Fulton county, a daughter of Patrick and Mary (Daugerty). Their union was blessed with eleven children namely: Mary, Teresa, Patrick, Frances, Katie, Lorina, Maude, Jennie, Henderson, and the last two, who were twins, Ellen and Estelle, all living at home.

In politics Mr. Hagan, like his father and brother gives his allegiance to the democratic party, and his religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Catholic church. Mr. and Mrs. Hagan are numbered among the substantial citizens of their community, where they have many friends.

WILLIAM L. McGIRR.

William L. McGirr, who is successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits in Maquon township, where he owns a fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres, is a native of Knox county. He is one of the six children born of the marriage of Mahlon and Sarah L. (Barbero) McGirr, his natal day having been the 31st of July, 1863. His father was born in Stark county, Ohio, in 1828, and there he learned and followed the blacksmith's trade until he was twenty-two. Feeling a desire to create a place for himself in one of the newer western sections, then being opened up, he came to Illinois, locating on a farm in Maquon township, one-fifth interest in which is now held by our subject. There Mr. McGirr spent the remainder of his life, devoting his energies to the cultivation of his homestead until his death at about the age of sixty-seven.

Reared amid the environment of what at that time was largely a pioneer district in the acquirement of his education W. L. McGirr attended the district schools. After mastering the common branches, he laid aside his text-books, to assume the heavier responsibilities of life. He began his career as carpenter and after following this occupation for four years went to work for the railroad. He gave this occupation up at the end of a year and went to Florida, where he worked on a plantation for three years. At the expiration of that time he returned to Illinois, where he has ever since been engaged in general agricultural pursuits, and in 1903 he purchased his present farm located four miles southeast of Maquon. He has wrought extensive improvements on this property during the period of his occupancy, having erected a beautiful new residence, thoroughly modern in all of its appointments, thus adding greatly to the attractiveness as well as value of the place.

Mr. McGirr's arrangements for a home of his own had their culmination in his marriage to Miss Julia Murphy, a daughter of John and Catherine Murphy, of Haw Creek township. Two children have been born of this union, John Mahlon and Helen Kathleen. By means of his diligence and intelligence in the direction of his affairs Mr. McGirr is meeting with constantly growing success in the pursuit of his vocation, and now owns one of the finest farms in his township. Although he meets the requirements of good citizenship at election times, his time is nearly all taken up by the development of his personal interests, leaving him no opportunity to actively engage in politics. He casts an independent vote, giving his support to the men and measures he deems best adapted to subserve the interests of the agriculturist, irrespective of party affiliation.

SAMUEL SHIVES.

In the death of Samuel Shives, in 1900, the ranks of the prosperous farmers of Knox county suffered the loss of one, who for fifty years devoted himself faithfully to the growth and development of the agricultural interests for which this section of the country is known. A native of Fulton county, Pennsylvania, his birth occurred January 1, 1825. His parents were John and Susan (Miller) Shives, both born in Pennsylvania, who lived in that state their entire lives.

Until he was twenty-five years of age Samuel Shives lived in the state in which he was born, where he was educated and where he served his years of apprenticeship in his calling, laying the foundation for that thorough knowledge of agricultural pursuits which later enabled him to win for himself and his family a generous competence. He settled in Knox county in 1850, making his home one and one-half miles northeast of Yates City, where he began by working in the employ of others on a monthly wage. Being interested in machinery he devoted himself for a time to the work of operating a threshing machine and corn sheller. After his marriage in 1866 he rented a farm in Elba township from his father-in-law. Thirty-eight years ago this March, that is in 1874, he bought the farm of eighty acres which is still owned by his widow, and in addition to this his wife came into the possession of a farm comprising eighty acres given to her by her father. The latter place Mrs. Shives sold last winter. During the twenty-six years of his management of the farms Mr. Shives carried on general farming and stock-raising. He improved the land greatly, built large, substantial buildings, and equipped the farm modernly throughout. He was prosperous, winning his success by his untiring labors and by strict adherence to honest business principles.

For his helpmate Samuel Shives chose Miss Martha Kightlinger, who was born in Elba township, May 18, 1844, a daughter of Jacob and Maria (Burfield) Kightlinger, both natives of Pennsylvania. They settled in Knox county, Illinois, at an early date. Land being held at low prices Mr. Kightlinger bought large tracts of it, becoming an extensive landowner. He was a wealthy farmer and before his death gave a farm to each of the children surviving of a family of eleven. He died at the age of eighty-six and his wife has also passed away.

Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Shives. Flora Estella, born August 19, 1871, died October 23, 1880. Marion, born January 23, 1873, is married to Maud Thurman and lives north of Yates City. John, born November 6, 1879, is married to Minnie German and lives in Elba township. He has one child, Herman H. Mabel, born September 19, 1881, is the wife of Milo Taggart, who operates the home farm. They are the parents of one child, Lois Leola.

In his political persuasion Mr. Shives was a democrat, standing for the true democracy that means equal opportunities for everybody. He served as collector and assessor and was on the school board of his district for a period of twenty-three years, working unselfishly for the advancement of the educational interests of his community. He was a kind man and generous, beloved by all who knew him.

JESSE ELDRIDGE BARLOW.

Varied interests have engaged the attention of Jesse Eldridge Barlow, whose comprehensive knowledge of the world of finance, sagacity and intelligent direction of his energies has enabled him to become recognized as one of the most capable and influential business men of Abingdon.

Mr. Barlow was born on a farm in Warren county, this state, on May 31, 1862, his parents being Samuel and Margaret (Kinton) Barlow. They were born and reared in Kentucky and there they were married in 1844, this union being blessed by ten children. The father, who always engaged in farming, in the early '50s brought his family to Warren county, locating in the vicinity of Greenbush, where he resided until about 1886. He then withdrew from the active work of the fields and removed to Abingdon, where he lived retired until his death in 1899. The mother is still living at the venerable age of eighty-six and now makes her home with her son Jesse. She is a woman possessed of unusual mental and physical powers and accompanies the family on long automobile trips, seemingly having the endurance of one twenty years her junior. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, as was also the father. Fraternally Mr. Barlow was a Mason, being a member of the chapter, while politically he was a democrat. He was a man of high principles and unquestionable integrity, whose loyalty and reliability won him the esteem of all with whom he came in contact.

Jesse Eldridge Barlow was reared on the farm, where he was born, in the operation of which he assisted while acquiring his preliminary education in the district schools of the vicinity. He subsequently attended the Prairie City high school and Hedding College, laying aside his text-books at the age of eighteen years. During the following three years he followed the profession of teaching, but being a most ambitious youth, this vocation did not afford him the opportunity to develop the latent business powers he had early given evidence of possessing, nor did he deem its financial returns commensurate with his ability. So upon attaining his majority he went to Fairfield, Nebraska, where he invested his small capital and for three years thereafter was successfully identified with the mercantile interests of that town. At the end of that time he became associated with Charles E. Faith in the hardware business in Goodland, Kansas, for four years, at the same time being interested with his brothers, Samuel Thomas and Charles Henry Barlow, in the operation of the Kansas Banking Company, of that town. From there he went to Burlington, Colorado, and having met with most excellent returns from his various business enterprises, he became one of the large stockholders of the State Bank of Burlington. For four years thereafter he was the cashier and business manager of that flourishing institution, which under his capable supervision soon became known as one of the substantial and reliable banks of the state. In 1892 he disposed of his stock and came to Abingdon, where he organized the Abingdon Safety Bank, of which he was cashier for four years. At the expiration of that period he severed his connection with this enterprise and devoted his entire attention to the buying and selling of real estate and agricultural interests. Mr. Barlow is the possessor of the most essential quality of success in any field of action, the ability to recognize opportunities. This united with his confidence in his powers has always given him the courage to act upon his convictions and so intelligently direct his interests that invariably they have proven the wisdom of his foresight. He now owns practically one thousand acres of as fertile and productive farming land as is to be found in the state, his holdings being located in Knox, McDonough and Fulton counties.

Mr. Barlow was married in 1893 to Miss Winnie Lucille Jolidon, of Elvaston, Illinois. Two children were born of this union, Jesse Eldridge, Jr., who died in infancy; and Esther, who was a most interesting child of the age of four and a half years when death overtook her.

Despite his extensive personal and business interests, Mr. Barlow has always found the time to assist in the direction and management of those organizations maintained for the public and general welfare. At the present time he is acting as one of the stewards of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which both he and his wife are earnest members, and he is a trustee and treasurer of Hedding College, as well as a member of the board of directors of the public library of Abingdon. Fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order, being a member of a lodge in Colorado, and he belongs to Abingdon Lodge, No. 184, I. O. O. F.; the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp No. 446; and Achilles Lodge, No. 373, K. of P., of Abingdon. In matters politic he is a democrat, but is not strictly partisan and often times in local elections votes for other candidates, believing in municipal affairs it is a question of the man best qualified to subserve the interests of the community. Mr. Barlow is one of those whose success can be attributed to inherent ability united with untiring energy, perseverance and determination of purpose, qualities that ultimately win recognition when intelligently and capably directed.

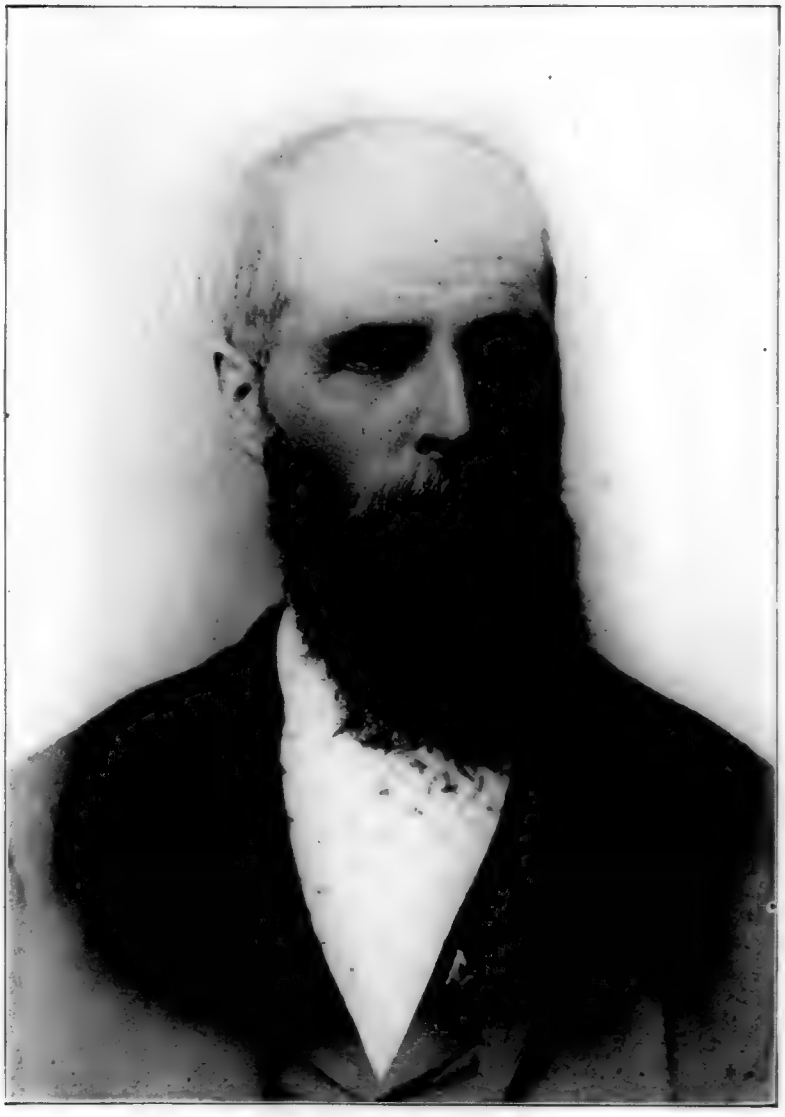
ORLANDO PAYTON.

Orlando Payton has met with such excellent success in his agricultural pursuits that he has not only acquired a fine property of two hundred and forty acres in Maquon and Salem townships, Knox county, but has extensive holdings in North Dakota. He was born in Fulton county, Illinois, in March, 1853, and is a son of James and Elizabeth (Alsberry) Payton, the father a native of Arkansas and the mother of Indiana. James Payton was brought to Illinois from his native state when an infant and spent the remainder of his life in Fulton and Peoria counties. He became a successful farmer and was an extensive landowner of the state at the time of his death, which occurred when he was seventy-two. Of the five children born of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Payton three are living: Orlando, the second in order of birth and our subject; Matilda; and Malvina. Those deceased are John, the eldest; and Artemus, the fourth in the order of birth.

Pioneer conditions still prevailed in this section of the state at the time of the birth of Orlando Payton, whose boyhood and youth were spent on his father's farm. He pursued his education in the district schools of Fulton county, while mastering the practical methods of agriculture under the direction of his father. He came to Knox county in his early manhood and worked as a farm hand, having been engaged in that capacity on his present homestead. Persistent application and determination enabled him to acquire the means to buy the place ultimately, and here he has ever since resided. He has owned the property for twenty-eight years, during which period he has wrought many and extensive improvements, having erected the majority of the buildings now standing, while he has brought the land into a high state of cultivation. Here he engages in general farming in connection with which he raises stock, meeting with excellent success in both lines of the business.

For his wife Mr. Payton chose Miss Martha J. Young, a daughter of William and Elizabeth (Gilmore) Young, also residents of Maquon township. Five children have been born unto Mr. and Mrs. Payton: Ada E., the wife of Lewis Tasker, who is living on the old Young homestead; Jessie, who is deceased; Mabel, who is at home; Herman, who is assisting his father in the operation of the farm; and Mary, who is also living at home. There are three grandchildren in the family: Verne, Glenn and Ray, the children of Mrs. Tasker, who lost a little daughter, Olive, and a baby.



His political allegiance Mr. Payton gives to the democratic party, but has never been an aspirant to official honors, although he has acted in the capacity of school director. The success with which he has met in the conduct of his affairs must be largely attributed to his inherent ability and unremitting energy. The appearance of his homestead, located five miles southeast of Maquon, evidences his skill as an agriculturist, as well as his business sagacity, which has enabled him to increase his realty holdings by the addition of three hundred and twenty acres of land in North Dakota.

WILLIAM E. WARNER.

William E. Warner, a veteran of the Civil war and for many years a successful carpenter in Knox county, was born in Clinton county, Indiana, June 8, 1841. He was the son of Asa H. and Hanna J. (Greene) Warner, both natives of New York. His father, a cooper by trade, died in Indiana in 1844 when William E. Warner was three years old. His mother remarried and came to Knox county, Illinois, in 1845, settling in Rio township, where she lived for four or five years. The family then removed to Iowa and from there to Missouri and, in 1859, came back to Illinois, making their home in Henderson township, Knox county. This remained the family home till a few years before the parents' death. His mother died in Nebraska and his stepfather in Oregon.

In the district schools of the various localities where the family resided, William E. Warner was given an education. When seventeen years of age he went to Butler county, Iowa, and there enlisted in Company I, Third Iowa Infantry and, in April, 1861, was mustered into the service. He served until the close of the war, being discharged at Louisville, July 12, 1865. The story of his participation in the war and his accounts of important engagements in which he took part, forms an interesting chapter in his history. In 1861 his company spent most of the time in Missouri chasing guerrilla parties and bushwhackers. From Missouri they went to Illinois, to Cairo, and then up to Shiloh, where they took part in the memorable battle of Peach Tree Creek. His company was also present at the siege of Vicksburg which lasted forty-one days and took part in the battle at Jackson where General Grant won a victory over the rebels under General Johnston. After the war the young soldier came to his home in Henderson township, Knox county, Illinois. He was twenty-five years old and wishing to establish himself in a career, his choice fell on the carpenter's trade. This he mastered and followed, working steadily until a few years ago when he retired, making his home on the outskirts of Henderson village.

On June 13, 1866, William E. Warner was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mary Shepherd, a daughter of David and Martha (Eaton) Shepherd, living near Brookville, Canada. Her mother came from England to America at the age of thirteen years, lived for a time in Canada and there married David Shepherd. They did not remain in Canada but came to Hancock county, Illinois, where their daughter Mary was born June 16, 1844. The following year in March, 1845, her family removed to Knox county, Illinois, where Mr. Shepherd,

WILLIAM E. WARNER

His political allegiance Mr. Payton gives to the democratic party, but has never been an aspirant to official honors, although he has acted in the capacity of school director. The success with which he has met in the conduct of his affairs must be largely attributed to his inherent ability and unremitting energy. The appearance of his homestead, located five miles southeast of Maquon, evidences his skill as an agriculturist, as well as his business sagacity, which has enabled him to increase his realty holdings by the addition of three hundred and twenty acres of land in North Dakota.

WILLIAM E. WARNER.

William E. Warner, a veteran of the Civil war and for many years a successful carpenter in Knox county, was born in Clinton county, Indiana, June 8, 1841. He was the son of Asa H. and Hanna J. (Greene) Warner, both natives of New York. His father, a cooper by trade, died in Indiana in 1844 when William E. Warner was three years old. His mother remarried and came to Knox county, Illinois, in 1845, settling in Rio township, where she lived for four or five years. The family then removed to Iowa and from there to Missouri and, in 1859, came back to Illinois, making their home in Henderson township, Knox county. This remained the family home till a few years before the parents' death. His mother died in Nebraska and his stepfather in Oregon.

In the district schools of the various localities where the family resided, William E. Warner was given an education. When seventeen years of age he went to Butler county, Iowa, and there enlisted in Company I, Third Iowa Infantry and, in April, 1861, was mustered into the service. He served until the close of the war, being discharged at Louisville, July 12, 1865. The story of his participation in the war and his accounts of important engagements in which he took part, forms an interesting chapter in his history. In 1861 his company spent most of the time in Missouri chasing guerrilla parties and bushwhackers. From Missouri they went to Illinois, to Cairo, and then up to Shiloh, where they took part in the memorable battle of Peach Tree Creek. His company was also present at the siege of Vicksburg which lasted forty-one days and took part in the battle at Jackson where General Grant won a victory over the rebels under General Johnston. After the war the young soldier came to his home in Henderson township, Knox county, Illinois. He was twenty-five years old and wishing to establish himself in a career, his choice fell on the carpenter's trade. This he mastered and followed, working steadily until a few years ago when he retired, making his home on the outskirts of Henderson village.

On June 13, 1866, William E. Warner was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mary Shepherd, a daughter of David and Martha (Eaton) Shepherd, living near Brookville, Canada. Her mother came from England to America at the age of thirteen years, lived for a time in Canada and there married David Shepherd. They did not remain in Canada but came to Hancock county, Illinois, where their daughter Mary was born June 16, 1844. The following year in March, 1845, her family removed to Knox county, Illinois, where Mr. Shepherd, who was an agriculturist, had bought a farm of sixty acres which he cultivated during the remainder of his years. He died on May 8, 1898, at the age of eighty. Mrs. Shepherd passed away on August 17, 1896, in her seventy-ninth year.

WILLIAM E. WARNER

In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Warner were the following children, all daughters: Alora E., the wife of Frank Murray, a carpenter, living in Albia, Iowa, who is the mother of two daughters: Mabel, the wife of Ora Folger, a painter, living in Galesburg, who is the mother of three children; and Blanche, the wife of E. C. Searcy, a grocer, living in Albia, Iowa. Maude is the wife of Hilmer Harpman, who conducts a hotel in Waterman, Illinois, and the mother of five children named, Helen, Hazel, John Warner, Richard A., and George Washington. Mattie, the wife of John Weedman, a hardware dealer, is living in Victoria, Illinois. She has two children, Mary and Maud.

Mr. Warner is a democrat in his political allegiance and has been called to public office a number of times. He has served as school director, as constable and as police magistrate. He is a member of the Henderson lodge, A. F. & A. M., and of Post No. 26, G. A. R., of North Henderson. Throughout his life Mr. Warner has been a man of singular devotion to his aims discharging his duties with honor both during the Civil war and in the pursuit of his occupation.

Since the above was written Mr. Warner passed away on September 15, 1911, after a short illness.

JAMES RICHEY.

The life record of James Richey is the story of efficient public service extending over a period of more than four decades, the worth of which is attested by all who know aught of his career. A native of Ireland, he was born in County Tyrone, June 22, 1842, a son of William and Jane (Scott) Richey, the father's birth also occurring on the Emerald isle. The family came to the United States in 1842 or 1843, locating first in Columbiana county, Ohio, where they remained until 1853. In that year the home was established in Abingdon, Knox county, Illinois, and there the parents spent their remaining days, the father's death occurring in 1876 and the mother's in 1893. Both were laid to rest in Abingdon cemetery. The father was a butcher by trade and also engaged to some extent in farming. He and his wife were faithful members of the Methodist Episcopal church, the teachings of which formed the guiding influences in their lives. In their family were six sons and three daughters, as follows: E. A., the widow of W. H. McDonold, of Abingdon, who enlisted in the First Illinois Cavalry for service in the Civil war and was killed in the battle of Lexington, Missouri; Samuel, deceased; James, of this review; Maria, the widow of J. W. McGintis, who also fought in the Civil war; Scott and Henderson, twins, the former a farmer of Milton, Oregon, and the latter conducting an undertaking establishment at Denver, Colorado, one who died in infancy; Robert, carrying on agricultural pursuits in Stockdale, Nebraska; and Archie, who has also passed away.

The educational advantages of James Richey were those afforded by the public schools of Abingdon and he remained at home until thirty-five years of age, being engaged at various occupations. For more than forty years he has been continuously identified with public service, his association therewith being in connection with the police department of Abingdon and elsewhere. In 1861 he was appointed to the office of marshal at Abingdon, which he filled for thirteen years, after which he served for twenty-five years as deputy sheriff of Galesburg. The succeeding four years were spent as marshal of Abingdon, while at the present time he is serving as deputy marshal of this town, and his long continuation in connection with the department of public safety is indicative of the efficiency and faithfulness which has ever marked the performance of his duties. Official service, however, has not absorbed his entire attention, for he has devoted a portion of his time to agricultural pursuits, being the owner of a fine farm of one hundred and ninety acres located in Cedar township. He has also assisted in the establishment of several of Abingdon's industrial institutions and has thus taken a prominent and active part in the material development of the community.

Mr. Richey was married, in 1871, to Miss Serelda Haney, a niece of the Rev. Richard Haney, and unto them have been born two children, Kai and Haney. The daughter is now the wife of George S. Butler and resides near Avon, Illinois. They have two children, Marie and James Dale. The son, Haney Richey, who resides on his father's farm, married Mabel Wiles and they are the parents of three children, James, Teddy and Serelda. Mrs. Richey was called to her final rest August 5, 1884, her remains being interred in Abingdon cemetery. She was a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal church, as is also her husband, who is now serving as chairman of the board of trustees of that institution. Fraternally he belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Abingdon and is at present filling the office of chaplain of that order. He has ever been a stanch supporter of republican principles since age conferred upon him the right of franchise, and for two years served as street commissioner of Abingdon. Higher honors were also bestowed upon him, for his fellow citizens, recognizing his ability and worth, elected him to the office of mayor of the city, in which he was the incumbent for three years. It was during his service as chief executive that the waterworks were installed and many other improvements were indorsed and introduced by him. Few residents in this section of the county have been longer in the public service than has Mr. Richey and the honorable purposes and high ideals, which have ever actuated him in this connection, have won the confidence, respect and good-will of all law-abiding citizens, who appreciate faithfulness and upright methods in official service.

FRANK HOPKINS.

Frank Hopkins is the owner of three hundred and forty acres of highly cultivated land in Chestnut township, where he successfully engages in stock-raising and general farming. His birth occurred on the farm where he now resides on the 4th of May, 1873, his parents being Thomas and Sarah A. (Booton) Hopkins. His father, who was born in Wales, on January 4, 1831, was brought to the United States by his parents when a babe of six months. They located in Clinton county, Ohio, where they spent the remainder of their lives and where the son was reared to manhood. When he was twenty-seven, Thomas Hopkins came to Illinois, locating in 1858 in Peoria, where he engaged in coal mining until after the breaking out of the Civil war. During the early days of the Rebellion he responded to the nation's call and enlisted as a private in the Fourteenth Illinois Cavalry. He remained at the front for three years and three months, being discharged with the rank of second lieutenant. Although he saw much active service, participating in thirty-two engagements, during one of which he had his horse shot from under him, Mr. Hopkins was never wounded. After being mustered out he returned to Peoria, where he was married in 1866 to Miss Booton, who was a native of Ohio, her birth having occurred at Oakmound, Jackson county, on the 17th of February, 1831. The first year of their domestic life they spent in Peoria, and then removed to Knox county, settling on a farm on section 4, Chestnut township. This was new land, and Mr. Hopkins immediately erected upon it such buildings as were necessary and then devoted his energies to clearing and placing his farm under cultivation. He was an energetic man of sound judgment and practical in his ideas, who intelligently applied his efforts and reaped corresponding returns. As his means accumulated he from time to time increased his holdings, at the same time bringing his original tract into a higher state of cultivation and adding to its value by the erection of better buildings and making other improvements. Agricultural pursuits continued to engage his energies until his death, which occurred on his homestead on the 23d of August, 1895, his burial taking place at Hermon, Illinois. He was survived by his widow, who is still living and now makes her home at Knoxville. Mr. Hopkins was one of the public-spirited men of the community, always taking an active and helpful interest in all political affairs, and capably discharging the responsibilities of the various township offices he held, giving his support on all occasions to the republican party. He was not affiliated with any church but was an earnest member of the Odd Fellows fraternity. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins numbered three: Rosa D., the wife of J. E. Davis, of Orange township; Mary A., who became the wife of Nathaniel F. Johnson, also a resident of Orange township; and Frank, who is our subject.

The entire life of Frank Hopkins has been spent amid the scenes of his birth, his education having been acquired in the schools now attended by his children. After completing the course therein he took Brown's Business course, thus obtaining a more comprehensive idea of practical commercial methods. Having been trained from his earliest boyhood for the life of an agriculturist after laying aside his text-books, he engaged as such on the home farm, which he has operated ever since the death of his father. He now owns three hundred and forty acres of land, all in one piece, that he devotes to general farming and stock-raising. Progressive in his methods and practical in his ideas, Mr. Hopkins has so intelligently concentrated his energies, that now his is one of the most attractive and valuable farms in the township. During the period of his occupancy he has improved it by the erection of fine barns and outbuildings and a modern residence, the beauty of his place being greatly enhanced by the tasteful arrangement of the well kept grounds that surround it. He is meeting with lucrative returns from his undertakings and is recognized as one of the prosperous farmers and stockmen of the county.

On the 11th of March, 1900, Mr. Hopkins was united in marriage to Miss Anna Davis, who is a native of Chestnut township, and they have become the parents of two children: Ruth, whose birth occurred on the 9th of June, 1902; and Rex, who was born on September 11, 1904.

Mr. Hopkins is a member of the Knights of Pythias, being affiliated with the lodge at London Mills, and he belongs to the Odd Fellows, his connection being with the organization at Hermon. His political views coincide with the principles of the republican party, for whose candidates he always casts his ballot. He takes an earnest interest in all township activities and has served with efficiency in several of the township offices. Mr. Hopkins is one of Knox county's sons who in every way is a credit to the community where he has so long resided, and is held in high esteem, well merited by reliability and trustworthiness in all of his relations of life, both public and private.

U. S. GARREN.

U. S. Garren, postmaster of Douglas, was born in Fulton county, Illinois, December 3, 1842, his parents being Dempson and Rachel (Ulmer) Garren, natives of Indiana. His father, who was an ardent democrat in his political convictions, died of a fever at the age of forty and was buried in Ross cemetery in Fulton county, Illinois. The mother survived her husband by more than half a century, dying at the age of ninety years. She is laid at rest in a cemetery in Peoria county, Illinois. There were five children in the family, of whom U. S. Garren is the only one living. The others are George, Sarah, Nancy and Dempson.

Reared in his native locality U. S. Garren attended the common schools in the vicinity of his home. When the war broke out he joined the army, enlisting with Company H, Thirty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and early in his military experience received a severe wound in the right groin refusing, however, any hospital service or the opportunity of being granted a discharge. Remaining with his company in which he had enlisted as a private he was promoted to the rank of second sergeant and saw much active service until the time they were mustered out at Richmond, Virginia. On his return from the war he settled in Peoria county and there was married on June 28, 1866, to Miss Amelia Krisher. She was born in Juniata county, Pennsylvania, and was a daughter of John and Katherine (Cliffman) Krisher, who were pioneer settlers in Illinois, living for a time in Stephenson county and later in Peoria county, where the father was engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was a republican in politics and with his wife held membership in the Lutheran church. Stalwart of physique he lived to attain the ripe old age of seventy-eight years, while his wife died at the age of forty-five years. They are both buried in Pennsylvania Ridge, Peoria county.

After his marriage Mr. Garren lived for a number of years in Peoria county when he removed to Fulton county and engaged in the blacksmith trade, remaining there one year. He then returned to Peoria county and continued to work at his trade there for ten years. His next place of residence was Middle Grove, Fulton county, where he followed blacksmithing for a time but later sold and removed to Douglas, Illinois, and here operated a stationary engine and sawmill one and a half miles north of Douglas in Elba township and also engaged in draying for a period of five years. He then retired and is now serving his fourth year as postmaster of Douglas and also represents the Wilber Mercantile Agency. In his political views he is independent, voting for the man rather than the party and in consequence has been called to office by voters of both the democratic and republican parties. He acted as school director for several years and has held the office of justice of the peace for three terms.

In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Garren were the following children: John D., residing in Oklahoma, is married to Lillian Mitchell, a native of Texas, and they have three children, Damon, Earl G. and Glenn; Alice, residing in Douglas, Illinois, is the wife of C. B. Painter and has one child, Florence; Franklin, residing in Salem township is married to Estella Diefdorf and they have three children, Freda May, Leonard Oaks, and Willis; Henry, who resides in Peoria county; Grace, deceased, who was killed when twenty-four years of age, by a train at the railroad station in Douglas; Edith, living at home, who is assistant postmaster of Douglas; and Nellie, who lives at home. The members of the Garren family are loyal supporters of the Methodist Episcopal church to which they belong. Widely and favorably known throughout the county they have a host of warm friends, who are always sure of a hospitable welcome at the Garren home.

MRS. HATTIE PORTER.

For more than a half century Mrs. Hattie Porter has been a witness of the growth and development of Knox county and has beheld this section of the country transformed from crude prairie land to well cultivated farms. A native of Ohio, she was born in Ashtabula county, March 13, 1852, her parents being Aaron and Mary (Buckman) Brockhurst. Her father was a native of England and came to the United States when he was a young man, settling in Ohio. There he met Miss Mary Buckman, a native of New York state, who later became his wife. They were the parents of the following children, all of whom were born in Ohio: Henry, who resides in Oil City, Pennsylvania; John, also a resident of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Anna Brazington, of Cleveland, Ohio; George, a resident of Ashtabula county, Ohio; Charles, who makes his home in Clinton, Illinois; Mrs. Mary McNutt, of Ohio; Frank and Edward, both of whom are deceased; Hattie, the subject of this biography; and two boys who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Brockhurst removed with their family to Knox county, Illinois, when their daughter Hattie was seven years of age, and settled in Salem township on a farm consisting of one hundred and fifty acres of land now owned by Levi McGirr. This land the father continued to cultivate until his death, at the age of sixty-six years. His wife died at the age of fifty-three years and both are buried in Yates City cemetery. In his political convictions Mr. Brockhurst was a republican and always was heartily in sympathy with the measures and movements that tended toward the advancement of the welfare of the community in which he resided.

Reared under the parental roof, Hattie Brockhurst obtained her education in the common schools of Salem township. She remained at home until her marriage, January 1, 1870, to Stephen P. Porter, a native of Columbus, Ohio. He was a son of Lorenzo and Mahala (Postal) Porter, both natives of Columbus, Ohio, and the parents of two children. Stephen Porter's father died when he was a boy and his mother married a Mr. Phillips, by whom she had three children. They left Ohio for Illinois and made their home on the farm now owned by Mrs. Hattie Porter, which her husband had received from his mother at the time of his marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Stephen P. Porter were the parents of ten children: Cora; Nellie, who married Frank Tasker; Maude, who is the wife of Edward Hollaway and resides in Haw Creek township, being the mother of one child, Marie; Sylvia, now Mrs. Kay Harper of Douglas, Illinois; Earl, of Salem township, who married Nora Johnston, by whom he has one child, Rowland; Clyde; Alta; and three, who died in infancy.

Ever since her marriage Mrs. Porter has lived on the farm where she now resides, with the exception of one year during which she was a resident of Yates City. Mr. Porter's death occurred in December, 1905, and he is buried in the Yates City cemetery. Although never a politician he was an ardent believer in the principles of democracy and at the polls gave his vote to the candidates of that party. The home place, to the cultivation of which Mr. Porter gave his best efforts, is now operated by the sons who are of valuable assistance to their mother. Mrs. Porter oversees all the details of the management and performs those duties which lie within the range of her activities, manifesting both good judgment and executive ability in the administration of her affairs. In spite of the many demands made upon her she never fails to have sufficient time to devote to her friends of whom she has a large number, for she is affable in manner and always kind.

MRS. SARAH SLOAN.

Mrs. Sarah Sloan owns a fine farm in Salem township, which her son James operates with great efficiency. She was born near Antrim, in County Antrim, Ireland, November 22, 1832. Her parents were both natives of County Antrim and lived there during their entire lives. Her father, Hugh Allen, was a very fine musician and was a leader of the church choir for thirty years, also giving instruction in music throughout the county, where he was well known. He was united in marriage to Sarah Caulfield, by whom he had eight children. All grew to maturity, Sarah Ellen, the subject of this review, being now the only member of the family who survives. The others were: William, who passed away in Ireland when a young man; Martha, who was married and had six children, the family residing in Ireland; Hugh, who was a soldier in the Civil war and passed away in Douglas, Illinois; John, who met his death while serving in the Irish army; Margaret Ann, who was married and lived in Ireland; Francis, who came to America after the death of his wife and passed away in Chicago, Illinois; and Robert, whose surviving family resides in Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Allen, who were members of the Presbyterian church and well known in County Antrim, both died at the age of sixty years, their remains being interred in the churchyard of their native village.

After completing her education in Ireland, Sarah Allen came to America at the age of twenty-two years. On the day following her arrival in Davenport, Iowa, in 1854, she was married to John Sloan, who was born in County Antrim, Ireland, in 1827, and whom she had known in her childhood, having plighted her troth to him before his departure for America, three years and nine months earlier. John Sloan's parents were James and Mary (Beck) Sloan, who lived in County Antrim, Ireland. On coming to this country he engaged in agricultural pursuits and in time acquired eight hundred acres of land which he operated with much success. His death occurred in April, 1889, and he is buried in the cemetery at Yates City. Mr. and Mrs. Sloan were the parents of seven children, three of whom passed away in 1879. Mrs. Sloan is a member of the Presbyterian church, as was also her late husband.

Through enterprise and industry Mr. Sloan, whose landed holdings amounted to eight hundred acres, was enabled to leave his wife well provided for at his death. She resides on the homestead farm, situated on section 4 of the north side of the east and west road, in Salem township. Her son James lives with her and attends to the cultivation of the land, thus relieving her of the exacting responsibilities which the ownership of a large farm entails. Their home is a hospitable one and is often the scene of merriment when the children and grandchildren assemble at the hearthstone, where they passed their happy childhood days.

WALTER BAILEY.

Walter Bailey, deceased, for many years one of the best-known residents of Knox county, was a native of New York state, born January 9, 1827, in St. Lawrence county and a son of James and Eve (Kitts) Bailey, the former of whom was born in Westmoreland, Cheshire county, New Hampshire. His father followed agricultural pursuits as his chief occupation, in addition to which he was a surveyor and mechanic. He was married in New York and lived there until his son Walter was ten years of age when he removed the family to Delaware county, Ohio. After residing there for a number of years he came farther west and settled in Galva, Henry county, Illinois, where Mrs. Bailey died September 17, 1873. The father then returned to Delaware county, Ohio, living there until his death in June, 1875.

Walter Bailey was reared and educated in New York and Ohio, coming to Knox county in October, 1849, when twenty-two years of age. A few years later he bought one hundred and sixty acres of land on the site where the present family home is situated, increasing his holdings by additional purchases until he acquired extensive tracts of land, owning at the time of his death eight hundred and sixty acres. In 1871 he erected all the buildings and the family residence standing at the present time.

The marriage of Mr. Bailey and Miss Harriet Parsell occurred February 14, 1855. She was born, July 30, 1835, in Sycamore township, Hamilton county, Ohio, where her parents, Joseph and Hetty A. (Ralston) Parsell, lived for a year, moving thereafter to Illinois, locating in Fulton county for a short time. In 1840 they removed to Elmwood township, Peoria county, and there the mother passed away April 17, 1850. In 1875 the father took up his residence in Elba township, Knox county, making his home with his daughter, Mrs. Bailey, until his death, January 3, 1880.

In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Bailey were five children. Edith A., the eldest, living south of Yates City, was married to William D. Ware, who died April 17, 1905, and in their family were six children. The others are: Lura D., who married George F. Hughes, who operates the home farm, and has one child, Walter; Bertha B., married to George S. Mathews, living two and a half miles west of Yates City, who has two children; Addie G., who lives at home; and Nena H., who is also at home.

Mr. Bailey farmed throughout his life, finding pleasure and profit in the exercise of his multifold duties. He died December 14, 1895, leaving behind him a host of friends who sincerely mourned his loss. In his political views he was a republican and filled the position of justice of the peace with great credit. He and his family were members of the Universalist church. A man of big ideas, Mr. Bailey was big and noble in his dealings with his fellowmen, being always straightforward and unafraid to express his honest convictions and most charitable in his judgment of others.

MENZO MORSE.

Menzo Morse is one of the agriculturists of Knox county, who, by reason of his intelligently directed energies during his early manhood, is permitted to spend his latter days in the ease and comfort justly merited by an active career. He is a native of the state of New York, his birth occurring in Oswego county, and a son of Stephen R. and Hannah (Dikeman) Morse, also natives of the Empire state, as was the maternal grandfather, Cornelius Dikeman. Stephen R. Morse removed from his native state to Wisconsin in 1854, becoming a resident of Knox county the following year. He was a carpenter by trade, but always engaged in farming. He spent his last years in this county and passed away in an old log house on the farm now owned by our subject, at the age of seventy-five years. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Morse numbered fifteen, as follows: Gilson, who is a resident of Nebraska; William, who is deceased; Ansel, who is living in Elmwood; Wordie, Helen and Henry, all of whom are deceased; two, who died in infancy; Melvin and Daniel, both of whom are deecased; Menzo, our subject; one, who died in infancy; Harvey, who is living in the vicinity of Maquon; Alzina, who is deceased; and Orletta, who is living in Missouri.

Reared on a farm, Menzo Morse obtained his education in the district schools of the vicinity, at the same time lending assistance in the operation of the land and care of the stock. After he had mastered the common branches he laid aside his school books and assisted his father in clearing and cultivating the land, and he also worked out as a farm hand part of the time. When the war broke out, he was at home and enlisted in 1863, when he went to the front with Company B, Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, under Colonel Robert Ingersoll. He remained in the service until the close of hostilities, and then returned to Knox county, taking up his residence in Maquon township. He was married very soon thereafter, after which event he began his independent career as an agriculturist, farming as a renter until 1873, when he bought a portion of his present homestead. In the operation of this he met with such success that he was later able to add to his holdings at different times until he had acquired two hundred and thirteen acres. The development and improvements of this farm successfully engaged his attention until his retirement, since which time his sons have been operating it.

Mr. Morse was married in 1865 to Miss Millie Ann Stidd, a native of Indiana, who at that time was living in this county. To them eight children were born: John Frank, who married Katie Allen and has eight children, living across the road from his father; William, who married Alice Roberts and has two children, living west of Maquon; Bose, who married May Stuffelbeam and has four children; Nettie, who became the wife of Pete McCord, by whom she had four children; Joshua, who has been married twice, his first wife being Hattie Knox, who left one child, while his second union was with Cora Gribsy, who has had three children: Timothy, who married Katie Miller and has two children; Edith, who became the wife of Guy Anderson, by whom she has had one child; and Vady, the wife of Charles Stuffelbeam.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Morse are members of the Baptist church, and fraternally he is a Mason. He maintains relations with his comrades of the war through the medium of his membership in the Grand Army of the Republic, while his political support is given to the republican party. He has the distinction of having been a school director for thirty-three years and he served as road commissioner for two terms. Mr. Morse is held in high regard in his community ever having manifested those substantial qualities that invariably win esteem and respect in every walk of life.

MRS. WILLIAM AUSTIN CHASE.

Mrs. William Austin Chase, formerly Miss Leonora May Woolsey, was the wife of the late William Austin Chase and is a daughter of David Woolsey. She is the owner of a very fine farm in Haw Creek township, where she was born January 14, 1867, and where she has resided throughout her life. Her marriage to William Austin Chase occurred February 10, 1887.

Mr. Chase, born April 2, 1863, was a son of John H. and Mary Ann (Reed) Chase, residents of Farmington and of Galesburg, the mother being now deceased. He was reared and educated in Elba township, and after his marriage engaged in agriculture in Haw Creek township. He passed away November 22, 1902, and was laid to rest in the cemetery at Maquon. On political issues he voted with the republicans and in his religious faith he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. and Mrs. Chase had six children born to them: Florence Geneva, born October 22, 1887, who died April 10, 1888; Edna Merle, born December 14, 1889, who died February 12, 1890; Nina Bishop, born December 27, 1891; Doris Edith, born November 14, 1893; Wayne Harris, born April 22, 1897; and Paul David, born February 11, 1900. Mrs. Chase is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church in which she is actively and helpfully interested. She is the owner of about two hundred acres of valuable farm land on section 13, Haw Creek township, from which she makes a comfortable income by renting it to a tenant. Mrs. Chase possesses many of her father's characteristics —a progressive spirit, a forceful will and the ability to manage wisely and with an eye to the future. She is a very kind mother in the home and is devoted to the interests of her children.

MRS. ANNA VOLK.

Mrs. Anna Volk, one of the estimable citizens of Oneida, was born and reared in Knox county and is a daughter of one of the pioneer settlers. Her birth occurred on a farm in Sparta township, on October 5, 1864, her parents being Ole and Betsy Anderson. Her father was born in Norway, on February 18, 1820, and passed away in Knox county in 1899. The mother, however, a native of Sweden, born May 26, 1839, and a daughter of Andrew Peterson, is still living at the venerable age of seventy-two years and continues to make her home on the old farm in Sparta township. Mr. Anderson had been previously married, his first wife having died on shipboard on the way from the east to this state, between Chicago and Ottawa, and the remains were interred in the cemetery at Ottawa, Illinois. Of this marriage there was born one daughter, Mary, who was two years of age at the time of her mother's death, now the wife of H. Mitchell, of Galesburg, Illinois. Unto Mr. Anderson and his second wife there were born eleven children, six sons and five daughters, as follows: Harriet, the wife of George Werteen, of Galesburg; Andrew, who is a resident of Sparta township; Albert, who lives in Oklahoma; Anna, now Mrs. Volk; Jennie, who married S. McKibben, of Copley township; Christ, who lives in Sparta township; Sophia, the wife of L. Weber, of Sparta township; William, likewise a resident of Sparta township; Henry, who is living in Appleton, Illinois; and Emma and Arthur, both of whom are at home.

Mrs. Volk was reared to womanhood in the parental home, attending the common schools in the acquirement of an education. At the age of nineteen years she became the wife of Herman Volk, their marriage occurring on the 20th of February, 1883. He was born on the 27th of November, 1856, in Baden, Germany, a son of Frank Joseph and Gresinzia (Gehring) Volk. The father followed the butcher's trade in the fatherland. In their family were four children, Herman, Mary, Joseph and Tony. The three boys are all buried in the cemetery at Oneida, while the daughter, Mary, is now married and lives in Galesburg. Mrs. Frank Joseph Volk was a sister of Seaford and Anthony Gehring and Mrs. Cummer, of Galesburg. Herman Volk spent the first seventeen years of his life in his native land, and after completing his education he learned the miller's trade. Desirous of opportunities, such as the fatherland at those times did not afford, ambition-fired and seeking more liberal conditions of life, he decided to come to America, believing that here he would find a more advantageous field for earnest endeavors and a shorter route to independent position. He arrived in the United States June 1, 1874, making his way inland to Wataga, Illinois, where for a time he worked as a laborer. Later he went to the home of his uncle, Anthony Gehring, who was a farmer and assisted him in the cultivation of his land and the care of the stock. He was an energetic, thrifty young man, and ultimately acquired the means to buy a farm, continuing to devote his energies to its further development until his death. In matters of faith, Mr. Volk was a Presbyterian and always took an active interest in the work of the church, having for many years taught a class in the Sunday school. Fraternally he was identified with the Mystic Workers, being a member of Lodge No. 90, of Galesburg. His political support he gave to the republican party and served for some years as a member of the school board. He was a good business man and capable agriculturist and was meeting with deserved success in the cultivation of his farm and the raising of stock until death claimed him. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Volk there were born the following children: Grace Etta, who was born on the 29th of April, 1887; Maud, whose birth occurred on October 20, 1890; Anna Betsy, who was born on January 12, 1893, now deceased; Ida Viola, born on February 25, 1895, a graduate of the Oneida high school; Pearl Sybil, born on the 3d of November, 1896, now attending school; and Ella, who was born on the 20th of January, 1902, and died in infancy. The eldest daughter, Miss Grace, graduated from the Oneida high school with the class of 1906, after which she pursued a commercial course in Brown's Business College at Galesburg, and is now a bookkeeper. The second daughter, Miss Maud, also graduated from the Oneida high school, subsequently attending the Central State Normal, and is now teaching her third term of school.

The family all attend the Presbyterian church, in which Mrs. Volk and all her children hold membership. Both the mother and daughters are held in high esteem in Oneida, where they have many friends.

ENOCH DALTON.

Enoch Dalton, deceased, was for many years prominently associated with the agricultural interests of Elba township, Knox county, where he owned a valuable farm. The youngest of six children, he was born June 6, 1845, two and a half miles east of Douglas. His father, Reuben Dalton, one of the early settlers of this county and an extensive landowner in his day, died when Enoch Dalton was a babe nine days old, leaving the mother, whose maiden name was Nancy Maise, to rear the six children.

Enoch Dalton obtained his education in the rural schools near his boyhood home and when old enough to support himself left for Iowa, where he found employment as a stage driver. Continuing in this occupation for some time he gave it up at length and came to Knox county to follow agricultural pursuits, and for four years tilled the fields owned by the church and later land belonging to Ziba Adams, whose daughter Elizabeth he married. Mr. Adams was one of the substantial citizens of Knox county, coming west when a young man from Pennsylvania, where he was born September 20, 1820. He carried on farming in addition to the carpenter trade in which he was proficient. On the 8th of April, 1847, he was united in marriage to Delilah Gullett who was born December 17, 1828, and departed this life December 21, 1904. There were seven children in the Adams family, of whom all but one are living.

Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Dalton: Theodora, who lives near Yates City: Nancy, the wife of George King, who lives north of her mother's homestead and has two children, Maud E. and Genevieve; Mollie, the wife of Robert Robison, who has one child, Helen; Albert who lives at home; Edith, the wife of Floyd Heller, who lives south of the home farm and has one child, Harold; Earl, at home; Fred, at home; Newton, living south of the home farm, who married Irene Coleman and has two children, Bertha and Frances; and Florence, the wife of Ernest Metcalf, who has one child, Opal.

Mr. Dalton continued to follow farming throughout his life and met with well deserved success in his labors. He died February 12, 1904, at the age of fifty-eight years, seven months, and six days. In his political views he was a democrat and with his family worshiped in the Methodist Episcopal church. Generous and kind almost to a fault he was devoted to the interests of his family and left them not only in comfortable circumstances but bequeathed them likewise an honored name.

THOMAS B. SHAFFER.

Thomas B. Shaffer, a well known druggist of Oneida, has been identified with the commercial activities of Knox county for the past nine years. His birth occurred in the vicinity of Williamsfield on the 31st of December, 1876, his parents being Benjamin and Sarah L. (Foster) Shaffer. His father was born and reared in Pennsylvania, whence he came to Illinois during the pioneer days, and engaged in agricultural pursuits.

After completing the course of the common schools, Thomas B. Shaffer entered Knox College, where he studied for three years. Having decided to go into the drug business, at the expiration of that period he matriculated in the Chicago College of Pharmacy, and he also studied for a time at Drake University, Highland Park, Des Moines, Iowa. After receiving his degree he was employed for a year in the drug store of Dr. T. E. Alyea at Princeville, Illinois, and resigning his position at the end of that time to take a similar place in a drug store at that place, where he likewise remained a year. Feeling that he was fully qualified both theoretically and practically to undertake the management of a place of his own, in 1902 he came to Oneida and purchased the store of E. L. Jimison. Mr. Shaffer has a very good location, and carries a full and complete line of drugs, patent medicines and such toilet articles and sundries as are usually to be found in establishments of this kind. His business is conducted in a thoroughly up-to-date manner, and, owing to the gracious treatment accorded all patrons as well as the quality of the goods offered for sale, his has become one of the thriving enterprises of the town.

At Grande Ridge, Illinois, by Rev. O. P. Graves, on the 23d of June, 1910, Mr. Shaffer was united in marriage to Miss Stella A. Peterson, a daughter of Charles A. Peterson. Mr. Shaffer is affiliated with Oneida Lodge, No. 337, F. & A. M.; Oneida Chapter, No. 173, R. A. M.; Order of the Eastern Star; and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks at Galesburg. He maintains relations with the other members of his profession through the medium of his connection with the Association of Retail Druggists; Illinois Pharmaceutical Association; and the Knox County Druggists Association, of which he is the vice president. He is registered in both Illinois and Iowa and is, therefore, entitled to follow his profession in either state. In his political views Mr. Shaffer has always been independent, and he gives his support to the men and measures he deems best qualified to meet the exigencies of the situation, regardless of party affiliation. He is one of the public-spirited and progressive men of the town, who is conducting his business in accordance with the highest principles governing commercial activities and as a result wins and retains the respect of all with whom he has transations.

THOMAS AUSTIN.

One of the best known citizens of Abingdon is Thomas Austin, who for over a half century has been actively identified with the business interests of the town. He was born in Norfolk county, England, on the 21st of March, 1834, and is a son of Thomas and Mary A. (Wells) Austin, natives of the same county, where they spent their entire lives. Thomas Austin, Sr., was a blacksmith by trade, as was his father, James Austin, and two of his brothers, while he in turn also reared three of his sons to the same vocation.

Thomas Austin, after finishing his education in the common schools, entered his father's shop, where he learned his trade. He had long been strongly attracted toward America, with its many advantages and innumerable opportunities, and on the 21st of January, 1855, he took passage on a sailing vessel for the United States. He landed at New York early in March, having spent forty days on the Atlantic. His destination was Lockport, Illinois, where he had several relatives living, among them a brother of his mother's, who was a distiller and a prominent business man of the town. He took up his residence with his uncle on the 8th of March, 1855, and soon thereafter became his business partner, but owing to a disagreement on June 20, 1856, he severed his connection with his relative and went to Morgan county. After remaining there for a short time he started on a trip through Iowa and Nebraska seeking a location for a shop. Not finding anything to suit him, he was on his way back to Lockport, when Jonathan Latimer, whom he met on the train, prevailed upon him to come to Abingdon. He did so, finding employment as a blacksmith with Latimer & Shaffer, who were wagonmakers. On the 20th of July, 1857, Mr. Austin opened a blacksmith shop in Abingdon, which he has ever since operated.

On the 30th of October, 1862, Mr. Austin was united in marriage to Miss Eliza J. McElrea, who at that time was residing in Indian Point township. Mrs. Austin was born in Warren county, Illinois, but is of Irish extraction, her father having been a native of the Emerald isle. Three children were born of this marriage, but one of whom is now living, Anna M., the wife of Charles Harshberger, of Abingdon.

In December, 1853, while still a resident of the mother country, Mr. Austin joined the Odd Fellows lodge, but has never affiliated with the organization since coming to the United States. Mrs. Austin is a member of the Congregational church, but his religious views do not conform to those of any creed, although he contributes toward the support of the churches and various charitable organizations. In politics he is a democrat in national issues, but casts an independent ballot at local elections. He served for two years as mayor of Abingdon and for an equal period as county supervisor, while for three years he was on the local school board, refusing to serve for a longer period. He also acted as alderman for a year. Mr. Austin has always been a wide reader of both philosophy and history and is one of the well informed men of his community. He has ever been noted for his remarkable memory, and is generally regarded as having a more vivid recollection and better knowledge of Abingdon's early history than any other living citizen. It is customary for those in doubt about any fact of early local history to refer the enquirer to "Tom" Austin, feeling confident that the desired information can be obtained there. During the long period of his residence in the United States, Mr. Austin has never had occasion to regret transferring his allegiance to the younger country, having here met with a fair degree of success.

WILLIAM B. MAIN.

William B. Main, deceased, a resident of the town of Abingdon for more than three decades, who for a number of years was prominently identified with its business interests as a leading hardware merchant, has lived retired from 1896 up to the time of his death, in January, 1912. His birth occurred on Snowdon Hill, Otsego county, New York, on the 7th of December, 1835. His parents being Thomas P. and Laura (Allen) Main. The first emigrant ancestor of the Main family came to the United States from the vicinity of Edinburgh, Scotland, in May, 1680, landing in New York and thence going to Stonington, Connecticut, where he took up his abode. William B. Main represented the sixth generation of the family in this country. Thomas P. Main, the father of William B. Main, was born in Otsego county, New York, on the old Main homestead which had been in possession of the family for several generations, his natal day being May 31, 1798. He remained in his native county until 1838 and then removed to Bainbridge, Chenango county, New York. The tract on which he settled was a primeval forest and his first task was the clearing of

WILLIAM B. MAIN

to come to Abingdon. He did so, finding employment as a blacksmith with Latimer & Shaffer, who were wagonmakers. On the 20th of July, 1857, Mr. Austin opened a blacksmith shop in Abingdon, which he has ever since operated.

On the 30th of October, 1862, Mr. Austin was united in marriage to Miss Eliza J. McElrea, who at that time was residing in Indian Point township. Mrs. Austin was born in Warren county, Illinois, but is of Irish extraction, her father having been a native of the Emerald isle. Three children were born of this marriage, but one of whom is now living, Anna M., the wife of Charles Harshberger, of Abingdon.

In December, 1853, while still a resident of the mother country, Mr. Austin joined the Odd Fellows lodge, but has never affiliated with the organization since coming to the United States. Mrs. Austin is a member of the Congregational church, but his religious views do not conform to those of any creed, although he contributes toward the support of the churches and various charitable organizations. In politics he is a democrat in national issues, but casts an independent ballot at local elections. He served for two years as mayor of Abingdon and for an equal period as county supervisor, while for three years he was on the local school board, refusing to serve for a longer period. He also acted as alderman for a year. Mr. Austin has always been a wide reader of both philosophy and history and is one of the well informed men of his community. He has ever been noted for his remarkable memory, and is generally regarded as having a more vivid recollection and better knowledge of Abingdon's early history than any other living citizen. It is customary for those in doubt about any fact of early local history to refer the enquirer to "Tom" Austin, feeling confident that the desired information can be obtained there. During the long period of his residence in the United States, Mr. Austin has never had occasion to regret transferring his allegiance to the younger country, having here met with a fair degree of success.

WILLIAM B. MAIN.

William B. Main, deceased, a resident of the town of Abingdon for more than three decades, who for a number of years was prominently identified with its business interests as a leading hardware merchant, has lived retired from 1896 up to the time of his death, in January, 1912. His birth occurred on Snowdon Hill, Otsego county, New York, on the 7th of December, 1835. His parents being Thomas P. and Laura (Allen) Main. The first emigrant ancestor of the Main family came to the United States from the vicinity of Edinburgh, Scotland, in May, 1680, landing in New York and thence going to Stonington, Connecticut, where he took up his abode. William B. Main represented the sixth generation of the family in this country. Thomas P. Main, the father of William B. Main, was born in Otsego county, New York, on the old Main homestead which had been in possession of the family for several generations, his natal day being May 31, 1798. He remained in his native county until 1838 and then removed to Bainbridge, Chenango county, New York. The tract on which he settled was a primeval forest and his first task was the clearing of a site for a log cabin, which he erected. Our subject was then about four years of age. Thomas Main had incurred a debt of about two hundred dollars and was unable to discharge it until some sixteen years later, when his son William left the parental roof and at which time the farm was cleared of trees as well as indebtedness. Thomas P. Main passed away on the 27th of July, 1878, at Boone, Iowa, where he had removed some twelve years earlier and where a son and daughter had preceded him. In his family there were eight children. For many years he was recognized as a pillar in the Methodist Episcopal church, acting as class leader and Sunday school superintendent and long serving in one official capacity or another. His wife, whose natal year was 1808, was also a representative of an old New England family of English descent. Her demise occurred soon after she and her husband had established their home in Chenango county, New York.

WILLIAM B. MAIN

William B. Main acquired his early education in the district schools but his advantages in this direction were meager, for his services were required on the home farm and he was able to attend school for only about two months each winter, often being too busy to begin his studies until after the 1st of January. On attaining the age of twenty years he started out in life on his own account, securing employment as a farm hand in Chenango county. In 1857 he came to Altona, Knox county, Illinois, here breaking prairie and operating a threshing machine and working as post driver until 1861. In that year he enlisted for three year's service in the Union army, becoming a member of Company I, Seventeenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, on the 25th of May. At the siege of Fort Donelson, however, he was obliged to sleep on the snow and share one blanket with two other men, contracting a severe cold. This together with a chronic enteric sickness, reduced his weight from one hundred and sixty to one hundred and six pounds and on April 28, 1862, he was discharged on account of disability. He returned to Galesburg, Illinois, and was an invalid throughout the summer. In the fall he took up railroad work and was soon afterward made a conductor on the Burlington road, running a freight train from Galesburg to Aurora for seven years and a passenger train from Galesburg to Peoria for ten years. In 1878, in company with A. J. Shaw and William Wincup, he went to northwestern Texas and acquired some twenty thousand acres of land in Floyd and Hale counties. Buying railroad land warrants, paying sixty-five dollars for warrants covering six hundred and forty acres, and also incurring additional expense for surveys and entrance fees, the land cost them about one hundred and five dollars per section.

After returning to Galesburg, Mr. Main resumed his railroad work. In the fall of 1878 he traded some Texas land for one of the best residences in Abingdon as well as a farm near the town. In the spring of 1879 he came to Abingdon and has here resided continuously up to his demise. He left the railroad service in October, 1879, and on the 1st of June, 1881, purchased the hardware business of H. L. Chaffee, of Abingdon, remaining one of the leading merchants of the town for about fifteen years. In 1896, having accumulated a handsome competence, he put aside active business cares, turned his establishment over to his son-in-law, C. D. Byram, to enjoy the last fifteen years of his life in honorable retirement. He was likewise a prominent factor in financial circles, serving as president of the First National Bank for some years and as a director of the institution until January 1, 1911, when he withdrew and turned his banking interests over to his son-in-law. For twenty years he acted as trustee of Hedding College and for several years was chairman of the finance committee and treasurer of the college.

On the 17th of January, 1865, Mr. Main was united in marriage to Miss Harriet M. Bills, of Bainbridge, New York, by whom he had two children: Carrie E., the wife of C. D. Byram; and George W., who is a resident of Kansas City, Missouri. Mr. Main was formerly identified with the Masonic fraternity, being a demitted member of the blue lodge, the chapter, commandery and Eastern Star. He was a member of the board of trustees of the Methodist Episcopal church, to which his wife now belongs. Mr. Main died in January, 1912, in the seventy-eighth year of his life. He enjoyed to a large extent the respect and veneration of all who came in contact with him in a business or social way and is sincerely mourned by a host of friends who reverently cherish his memory. His loss is irreparable to his immediate family, to whom he was the most devoted and loving husband and father.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN SHAFFER.

Benjamin Franklin Shaffer, who has resided in Knox county for fifty-seven years, is one of the best known and most highly respected citizens within its borders. The earlier years of his manhood were spent as a farmer and stockman, while later he turned his attention to mercantile pursuits. At the present time, however, he is living on his farm adjoining the town of Williamsfield. His birth occurred near Youngwomans Town, Cameron county, Pennsylvania, on the 1st of January, 1848, his parents being Benjamin B. and Elizabeth (Caldwell) Shaffer. The father was born near Sinnamahoning, Clinton county, Pennsylvania, while the mother's birth occurred near Youngwomans Town, Cameron county, that state. Both were consistent and devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Benjamin B. Shaffer was a local minister for many years and while in Pennsylvania also engaged in the lumber business. In 1855 he came to Illinois, settling on a farm of two hundred and forty acres in Truro township, Knox county.

Benjamin Franklin Shaffer, who was a little lad of seven when he came with his parents to this county, obtained his early education in a district school and later continued his studies in the Yates City high school. Together with two brothers, he also assisted in the operation of the home farm, thus early becoming familiar with the duties and labors that fall to the lot of the agriculturist. When twenty-two years of age, his father having taken up his abode in Yates City, our subject rented the homestead place and turned his attention to general agricultural pursuits on his own account, devoting considerable time to stock. A great lover of animals he takes keen interest in stock of all kinds and was one of the first to introduce imported Norman horses. While on the farm he met with a serious accident, which crippled him for life and made him unable to walk without crutches for six or eight years. Finding it difficult to carry on the work of the fields thus handicapped, he embarked in the mercantile business at Douglas, Illinois, in 1882, remaining there until 1888, when he removed to Williamsfield, where he conducted the first store and also the post-office. At the end of two years his health had become so impaired that he abandoned mercantile pursuits and traded his store for some Kansas land and Norman horses. Since that time he has resided on his farm adjoining the town of Williamsfield, now making his home with his two youngest children.

On the 5th of November, 1874, Mr. Shaffer was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Lydia Foster, a daughter of Thomas J. and Sarah H. Foster. The first representative of the family in this country was the grandfather of Mrs. Shaffer, a successful farmer and stock dealer, who came to the United States in 1834. Our subject and his wife had seven children, four of whom are yet living. Thomas B., a sketch of whom appears on another page of this work, is a druggist of Oneida. Bertha Aves, whose birth occurred on the 14th of August, 1880, attended Knox College and also received an excellent musical education, teaching that art for a time. On the 23d of June, 1909, she gave her hand in marriage to James A. McHenry, of Coffeyville, Kansas, who acts as cashier for the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company at that place. Ada Elizabeth, whose natal day was May 12, 1884, is a graduate of the Williamsfield high school and followed the profession of teaching for a number of years. William Caldwell, who was born on the 1st of February, 1886, is also a graduate of the Williamsfield high school.

Mr. Shaffer gives his political allegiance to the democracy and for many years has served as school director and commissioner of highways. For six years he acted as democratic chairman of Truro township and during both of President Cleveland's administrations held the office of postmaster, serving during his first term at Douglas, Illinois, and during his second term at Williamsfield. In 1869 he joined the Odd Fellows lodge but later resigned therefrom and in 1888 became identified with the Modern Woodmen of America, of which he is still a member. Since 1898 he has also belonged to the Bankers Life Association. In the county where he has resided from early boyhood, Mr. Shaffer has a circle of friends that is almost coextensive with the circle of his acquaintances.

MICHAEL BAYMILLER.

Michael Baymiller, who for the past twenty-one years has lived retired in Abingdon, was born in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, on the 20th of October, 1835. He is a son of John and Mary (Smith) Baymiller, natives of York county, that state, where they were also married. Later they located in Cumberland county, whence they migrated to Ohio, settling in Columbiana county, subsequently removing to Harrison and later to Montgomery counties. In 1854 they came to Illinois, locating on a farm in McDonough county that he cultivated until his retirement, when he went to Industry, where he was living at the time of his death. Mr. Baymiller, who was a veteran of the war of 1812, was a stanch democrat in his political principles, but was never an office seeker. Both he and his wife were ardent members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in the faith of which they reared their family.

The boyhood and youth of Michael Baymiller were spent in the country, his education being obtained in the district schools. When he had attained the age of eighteen years he apprenticed himself to the carpenter's trade, but upon the completion of his period of service returned to the farm. He devoted his energies to the cultivation of the soil until 1862 and in September of that year he enlisted as a private in Company I, Seventy-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry and went to the front. He saw much hard service, participating in the battles of Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Rocky Face, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Bentonville and the siege of Atlanta. He was also with Sherman when he made his famous march to the sea. On the 7th of June, 1865, he was mustered out and returning home, spent the ensuing year on his father's farm. At the expiration of that period he opened a shop and for five years thereafter gave his undivided attention to the cabinet-maker's trade. He withdrew from this in 1871 and engaged in carpentry work and contracting during the remaining period of his active career. About 1890 he removed to Abingdon, where he has ever since resided and is held in high esteem.

Mr. Baymiller has been twice married, his first union having been with Miss Mahala Pennington of Industry township, McDonough county, in 1860. One son was born unto them, Joel Franklin, who is residing in Pullman, Washington. Mrs. Baymiller died while he was in the service and in 1866 he was married the second time, his choice being Miss Martha A. Carroll, also of Industry. Of this union there were born three children, two of whom are living: Minnie M., who is an osteopath physician; and Clarence B., a principal of a Peoria school. Both are graduates of Hedding College. The mother of these children passed away in 1905.

Politically, Mr. Baymiller is a prohibitionist, thus voicing his views on the liquor question and, in matters of faith, he is a Methodist. He is well known in Abingdon and although he has never taken any part in the public life of the town has, by reason of his many fine personal qualities, won the high regard and friendship of many of the best citizens.

J. A. SWEBORG.

One of the thrifty and enterprising citizens of Cedar township, who for thirty-one years has been successfully identified with the agricultural interests of Knox county, is J. A. Sweborg. His birth occurred in Linkoping, Sweden, on February 23, 1840, his parents being Johanas and Catherine (Peterson) Sweborg, both of whom spent their entire lives in Sweden, where the father engaged in carpentry work and farming. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Sweborg numbered five, as follows: Anna and Andrew P., both of whom continue to live in the old country; Caroline, who is a resident of Bloomington, Illinois; Dolinda, who is also in Sweden; and J. A., our subject.

The common schools of his native land provided J. A. Sweborg with such educational advantages as he enjoyed during his early boyhood. The first twenty-eight years of his life were spent in the old country, but being ambitious and energetic he early determined to come to America, feeling assured that here he would find greater opportunities. In 1868 he took passage for the United States, arriving here with a capital of six dollars. He first located in Galesburg but after working there for a short time went to Knoxville, where for several years he held the position of section foreman on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. Possessing the thrift that usually characterizes the people of his country he had carefully saved a portion of his earnings until in 1880 he had accumulated sufficient means to enable him to engage in farming. He first located in Orange township, where he spent nineteen years, at the expiration of which period he removed to his present homestead in Cedar township. Here he owns one hundred and seventy acres of fertile land, upon which he has wrought extensive improvements, and is successfully engaged in general farming.

In 1871 Mr. Sweborg was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Anderson, and of this union there were born four children: Ernest, who follows the carpenter's trade in Galesburg; Albin J., who is living on a farm adjoining his father's place; and Amanda and A. D., both of whom are at home.

In religious matters the family have always affiliated with the Swedish Lutheran church of which the parents are members. Mr. Sweborg is one of those energetic and industrious Scandinavians who have figured so prominently in the agricultural development of the great middle west, of which they have become an integral part.

N. HENRY McGIRR.

Varied interests engage the attention of N. Henry McGirr, who is one of the extensive property owners of Maquon township in addition to which he operates a farming machinery and implement store, and a blacksmith and machinery repair shop at Maquon. His present homestead, which is three and a half miles from Maquon, is located across the road from the farm where his birth occurred on April 9, 1860. His father, Mahlon McGirr, was born in Stark county, Ohio, in 1827, and there he spent the first eleven years of his life. His next place of residence was Washington county, Ohio, where he lived for about twelve years, and then came to Maquon. He followed the blacksmith's trade in Ohio, but after coming here, he did carpentry work, but subsequently withdrew from this trade and took up farming, which he followed until his death at the age of sixty-seven. For his wife Mr. McGirr chose Miss Sarah L. Barbero, and together they at one time owned four hundred and twenty-seven acres of land in Knox county, a portion of this now being the property of our subject. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. McGirr there were born six children: Leslie; Levi; N. Henry, our subject; Frederick, who is deceased; Rosie L.; and Mary. In his religious faith the father was a Quaker.

Reared in the township where he was born N. Henry McGirr attended the district schools of the vicinity until he was old enough to begin preparations for his real life work. After laying aside his school books, he entered a blacksmith shop in Maquon, where he learned the trade. As soon as he became self-supporting, like the majority of ambitious young men he was desirous of seeing the world, so he set out for the west, where he spent a few years. Returning to Maquon he established a shop that he operated for a time, and then went to the Black Hills, where he remained until 1888. In the latter year he located in Galesburg, taking a position on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, where for five years and ten months he was fireman on an engine. At the expiration of that period he decided to take up farming, and after his father's death, in 1894, he returned to Maquon township. Here he now owns three hundred and four acres of fine land, the greater part of which he rents to his son, devoting his entire attention to conducting his business. In his store is to be found practically everything in the way of farming implements, machinery, hardware, fences, seed or appliances of any kind needed by the average agriculturist. He also has a shop where he repairs machinery of all kinds and also does horseshoeing, and such other work as is usually done in a blacksmith establishment. Rare mechanical skill and business sagacity have enabled Mr. McGirr to make a success of anything he has undertaken, and he is now one of the substantial and highly prosperous citizens of Maquon township.

For his companion and helpmate on life's journey he chose Miss Eva May McCord, of this county, and they have one son, Glenn, who was born in February, 1884. He married Miss Freda Bearmore and they have two children, Nona and Eva. Glenn McGirr is one of the successful young agriculturists of Knox county and now operates the greater part of his father's land.

Fraternally Mr. McGirr is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and his political support he gives to the republican party, but has always been too deeply engrossed in promoting his own interests to devote much attention to political activities.

GEORGE P. EDMUNDSON.

Possessing those qualities—industry, energy and perseverance—so necessary for success in any line of activity, George P. Edmundson has, by close application and wise management, brought himself to a creditable place among the substantial agriculturists of Knox county, within whose borders his entire life has been spent. He was born in Indian Point township, on the 6th of July, 1853, a son of William and Anna Edmundson, natives of North Carolina and Ohio respectively. The parents came to Knox county, Illinois, as early as 1840, and here located upon land which is now in possession of our subject. At that time land was very reasonable in this locality and Mr. Edmundson became the owner, through purchase, of one hundred and ninety-two acres located in Indian Point township, to the development and improvement of which he devoted his time and attention throughout his remaining days. He and his wife are both now deceased. Of their family of nine children four are yet surviving. The sisters of our subject are Elizabeth, Josephine and Maria Thursy, the latter the wife of Luke Fielder, of Knox county.

Reared amid the wholesome scenes and environment of rural life, George P. Edmundson became a pupil in the district schools of Indian Point township, devoting the winter months to the acquirement of an education while the summer seasons were spent in assisting his father in the work of the home farm. As soon as he was able to handle the plow he took his place in the fields and with his increasing strength and years new tasks were assigned to him until he had mastered the various branches of agriculture. His entire life has been devoted to this line of activity and since his father's demise he has remained on the home place, concentrating his energies upon its further improvement and cultivation. He now owns and operates one hundred and twenty acres, located on section 29, Indian Point township, constituting a farm as well kept and valuable as any in this locality. Earnest, industrious and persevering, he has carefully and systematically performed all of the various labors that comprise the life of the farmer, and the excellent condition of his fields today indicates the successful accomplishment of his undertaking.

Mr. Edmundson was married, in 1882, to Miss Laura A. Rowe, who was born in Indian Point township, Knox county, a daughter of Silas and Mary Rowe, early settlers of this county. The father is now deceased but the mother still survives at the remarkable old age of ninety-six years. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Edmundson has been blessed with six children of whom two, however, have passed away. Those surviving are: Florence, who is the wife of Andrew Hobbs, a farmer of Indian Point township, and the mother of a son, Clifford; Mina, who married Jesse Baker, of Warren county, Illinois; and Franklin and Daisy, both at home, the elder assisting his father in the operation of the home farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmundson hold membership in the Christian church, the teachings of which form the guiding influences of their life, and members of their family are also affiliated with that denomination. Clean principles, high purpose and honorable dealing will win esteem and confidence in any land and clime, and that these qualities have been manifest in the life of George P. Edmundson is indicated by the high place which he has won in the regard of his fellowmen.

JOHN GALPIN.

John Galpin, one of the early settlers of Knox county, Illinois, and for fifty-nine years closely associated with the life and history of this locality, was born in Morgan county, Indiana, in 1827. He was a son of T. L. Galpin, a native of New York state, who came west settling in Indiana in 1820. Later he removed to Jo Daviess county, Illinois, where he died at the age of seventy-two. His wife, whose maiden name was Nancy Case, died in 1840 at the age of forty. There were nine children in the family.

John Galpin obtained his education in Knox county in the old log schoolhouse near his home. It was a rude little structure with square pieces cut out of the solid log to serve as windows and hard slab benches on which the pupils sat. There were deep woods all about and the way to and from school was long and difficult for most of the children. When eighteen years old he learned the cooper trade and worked at this occupation for five years. In 1850 he joined the multitudes thronging to the gold fields of California and in 1852 returned to Illinois, settling in Knox county, where he bought a farm on Spoon river. Later he sold this place and bought eighty acres of land elsewhere, selling it after a time and buying the farm which he owns at present, one hundred and sixty acres in Elba township, Knox county. Here he improved the land, put up substantial buildings, and pursued general farming as well as stock-raising for many years. He is now living retired, making his home with his son, who is operating the farm and continuing its cultivation according to the progressive methods of modern farming.

The marriage of Miss Augusta Curtis and Mr. Galpin occurred on November 8, 1852. She is a native of Washington county, Ohio, and was a daughter of Paul and Sarah Ann (Dilly) Curtis, residents of Ohio who became early settlers of Illinois, living in Jersey county, then in Jo Daviess county and lastly in Knox county. The father died at the age of ninety-three and the mother at the age of seventy-three. They were the parents of nine children.

In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Galpin there were nine children. George Ogden died in infancy. T. L., living in Galesburg, married Miss Jennie Callahan and is the father of one child. Sadie, the wife of Mr. Case, lives in Chicago and is the mother of two children. Mary, the wife of Mr. Youngs, is living in Missouri. There were nine children in her family. John Wesley, married to Dora Mason, resides in Kewanee, Illinois. Henry, married to Jessie Connell, lives at Williamsfield and is the father of two children. Frank, married to Miss Lowman, lives one mile east of the home farm. He is the father of one child. Rosa, who married Mr. Sherman of Galesburg, has one child. Fred F., the youngest son, operates the home farm in Elba township. His wife was formerly Miss Martha Dobbs. They are the parents of one child.

In politics Mr. Galpin gives his allegiance to the republican party. He held the office of school director for a number of years. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and their earnest Christian lives have won for them the respect of all who know them, and among the inhabitants of Knox county they have a host of warm friends.

JOSEPH GEHRING.

Joseph Gehring, now retired, was formerly a prosperous representative of the farming and stock-raising interests in Knox county, Illinois. He was born March 16, 1856, in Sparta township, east of Wataga. He was a son of Xavier and Elizabeth (Heminger) Gehring, both natives of Germany, the former born in Baden, February 9, 1825, the latter in Wurtemberg, in 1826. The paternal grandparents were Bennett and Elizabeth (Closman) Gehring and the great-grandparents were Mathias and Susan Gehring. On coming to this country, the father of our subject remained in New York during the first four years, working for four dollars a month. In 1853 he came west to Knox county, Illinois, locating in Sparta township. He bought the old homestead which is still in the family and there lived for fifty-one years, carrying on agricultural pursuits on a large scale and feeding sometimes as many as one hundred head of cattle for the market. He was a member of the Lutheran church and in his political predilections was a republican. His death occurred in 1906. There were three children in his family: Henry, who is living in Galesburg; Amelia, the wife of P. A. McDowell, living on a farm in Copley township; and Joseph.

MRS. JOSEPH GEHRING

JOSEPH GEHRING

After attending the district school Joseph Gehring assisted his father with the work of the farm until he was twenty-four years old. He then married and, purchasing a farm near Wataga, engaged in farming on his own account. For twenty-four years he cultivated and improved this land and raised stock for shipment. During this time he acquired much additional land, owning on his retirement in 1903 several farms, most of which land he divided among his children.

In 1880 Mr. Gehring married Miss Cora Peterson, a daughter of O. P. Peterson, who was a native of Sweden. Her death occurred in 1895 at the age of thirty-five. By this marriage Mr. Gehring became the father of four children. Adella Maud is the wife of H. L. Freed, a depot agent at Wataga for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, and they have one child, Arthur Lee. Edna May, formerly a bookkeeper in Galesburg, has for the past two years held the position of cashier of the Bank of Wataga. Arthur Joseph married Nina MacDonald and is now operating the home farm in Sparta township. Myrtle Irene is the wife of Winn Miller, an automobile electrician living in Galesburg.

Mr. Gehring was again married, March 25, 1896, at the home of the bride's parents in Wataga, his second union being with Miss Harriet A. Knight, who was born at that place February 26, 1867. By this union there is one child, Frank Earl, living at home. Mrs. Gehring is a daughter of Peter and Sarah A. (Morgan) Knight. Her father was born in Gloucestershire, England, January 26, 1828, his parents being William and Sarah Knight, of Gloucestershire. In 1854 he came to America and here worked at the mason's trade during the summer months, while during the winter he engaged in coal mining. He married Miss Sarah A. Morgan, who was also born in Gloucestershire, England, June 21, 1849, and was a daughter of Abram and Mary J. (Philips) Morgan. She was only three years of age when her mother died and her father subsequently married Miss Eliza Morgan, also of Gloucestershire. In 1856 the family emigrated to the United States, the children being at that time Sarah and an infant son, Isaac. In religious faith they were Congregationalists. To Mr. and Mrs. Knight were born two children, Harriet A. and William A., of Wataga. Mr. Knight died on the 24th of April, 1904.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Gehring are members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Wataga, in which he served as a trustee for twenty-five years, having altogether filled that office for the past thirty-one years. Fraternally he is an active member of the Mystic Workers of the World. He is a strong prohibitionist in his political views and has held the office of school director for sixteen years. Mrs. Gehring is also a member of the Mystic Workers and during girlhood joined the Independent Order of Good Templars, becoming a member of the lodge at Wataga in 1884. She now holds membership with the Women's Christian Temperance Union and was president of that organization in 1896. For the past four years she has been president of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal church, has taught the primary class in the Sunday school for twelve years and for several years before that time taught in the intermediate grades. Both she and her husband have taken a prominent part in the moral development of the community and are held in the highest esteem by all who know them.

C. R. BLISS.

C. R. Bliss is engaged in general farming and stock-raising on section 20, Chestnut township, where he operates three hundred and fifty acres of land, one hundred and forty of which he owns. He was born on the farm where he now resides on the 2d of October, 1883, his parents being C. T. and Harriet (Coffman) Bliss, both natives of Ohio. The father, who was born near Lake Erie came to Illinois during his early manhood, locating on the farm where our subject now lives. He devoted his time and attention to the cultivation and improvement of this property during the remainder of his life. The mother, whose birth occurred in Clinton county, Ohio, came to Illinois with her brother and here she met the man who subsequently became her husband. She is still living and now makes her home in Abingdon, the father, however, passed away in 1899 and was laid to rest in the cemetery at Hermon. Mr. Bliss belonged to the Christian church, of which his widow is still a member, and fraternally he was an Odd Fellow. He had a brother Azro, who went to the front during the Civil war and there he died. In politics Mr. Bliss was a stanch republican, and always took an earnest interest in all public matters, particularly local affairs of a governmental nature. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss numbered five; L. W., who is deceased; Charles, who passed away in 1896; Laura, who is unmarried and living at home; Emma, the wife of W. E. May, a resident of Nolan, New Mexico; and C. R., who is our subject.

From his infancy C. R. Bliss has been accustomed to life in the country, always having lived amid the scenes now associated with his daily life. In the acquirement of an education he attended the district schools in the vicinity of his home, after the completion of which he studied for a time at Hedding College, and also pursued a commercial course in the Gem City Business College. Having decided that he preferred life on the farm to a commercial career, he returned home and directed his attention along agricultural lines. From his earliest boyhood he had been trained in the care of the fields and crops and by the time he had attained his maturity was a good practical farmer, having a comprehensive knowledge of all the principles of general agriculture as well as stock-raising. Mr. Bliss has met with a goodly measure of success in the direction of his undertakings because of his capable and intelligent manner of concentrating his energies so as to attain the highest results with the minimum expenditure of effort. He is progressive in his methods, sparing no expense in equipping his farm with all modern agricultural implements, but he is practical in his ideas and conservative, not too quickly abandoning an old, well tried method for a fad of the moment. He is the owner of one hundred and forty acres of fertile, highly cultivated land, upon which he maintains good improvements, his being one of the attractive places of the township. In connection with general farming he engages in raising and feeding stock, undertakings which have proven to be most remunerative under his capable supervision.

Mr. Bliss completed his arrangements for a home by his marriage, in 1904, to Miss Isabelle Walker, who is a native of Hancock county, Illinois. Of this union there have been born two children: Frances, who is deceased; and Richard, who is an interesting child of three years.

The religious faith of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss is made manifest through their membership in the Christian church, while politically he is a republican in principle, but in local elections gives his support to the man he deems best qualified to subserve the interests of the community, irrespective of party indorsement. Mr. Bliss is one of the self-reliant, energetic men of Chestnut township, whose unremitting efforts are rapidly bringing him to the fore, and he is becoming known as one of the competent and prosperous farmers of his community.

EDWARD STEGALL.

The attractiveness of Illinois as a place of residence is indicated by the fact that many of her native sons have remained within her borders, believing that her advantages and opportunities are equal if not superior to those to be secured in other parts of the country. This number includes Edward Stegall, who was born in Cedar township, Knox county, on the farm which is yet his home, on the 23d of April, 1862. His parents, Nelson and Elizabeth (Bowman) Stegall, were both natives of Ohio, where the father engaged in farming for a time. His father had been a soldier in the war of 1812. At an early day the parents of Edward Stegall came to Illinois, settling in Knox county, and here the father entered a tract of government land, located on section 22, Cedar township. It was unbroken prairie when it came into his possession, covered with native grasses, and upon it not a furrow had been turned nor an improvement made. He at once brought the land under cultivation, however, planting the cereals best adapted to soil and climate, and it was not long before his farm had been converted into attractive fields, annually bearing abundant harvests. He continued to devote his time and energies to its further development throughout his remaining years, and here he passed away in 1893, having survived his wife, who also died on the old homestead, for three years. Nelson Stegall had three brothers, Frederick, Solomon and Ambrose, who likewise came to Illinois, locating in Knox county, but they, too, are now deceased.

No event of special importance came to vary the routine of life for Edward Stegall during the period of his boyhood and youth, which was devoted to the acquirement of an education in the country schools of Cedar county and to the performance of such tasks as usually fall to the lot of the country lad. He early became familiar with the best methods of plowing, planting and harvesting, and continued his father's assistant in the work of the farm until the latter's death, since which time he has operated the old homestead, promoting its development and improvement until today it is one of the highly cultivated and valuable properties of the township. It is the visible evidence of his industry, thrift and enterprise, qualities which have ever been salient elements in his nature, and in its well kept appearance it denotes practical methods and a progressive course.

Mr. Stegall was married in Knox county, Illinois, on the 9th of March, 1881, to Miss Mary C. Smith, who was born in Cedar township, this county, on the 16th of August, 1864, a daughter of Mack and Ellen (Hickman) Smith. Her parents were both born in Kentucky and at an early day came to Knox county, where they made their home for some time, the father here engaging in farming. Later they took up their abode in Iowa and there continued to make their home until called from this life. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Stegall were born fifteen children, but one is now deceased. Those surviving are as follows: Mack, of Abingdon, Illinois, who married Miss Ethel Wycoff, of that city, and now has two children, Russell and Clyde; Ellen, who married Clark Shelton, of Abingdon, and is the mother of three children, Lee, Frances and Floyd; Elizabeth, at home; Nelson, who married Lena Scholz, by whom he has one daughter, Dortha; and Clyde, Martin, Alcie, Ray, Verna, Harvey, Martha, Ada and Vada, twins, and Claude all yet at home.

Mrs. Stegall holds membership in the Congregational church, while the political allegiance of Mr. Stegall is given to the democratic party. He is serving at present as a school director of Cedar township, although he is not a politician in the sense of office-seeking, and the cause of education finds in him a warm champion. The success which has attended his efforts in connection with his agricultural interests entitles him to recognition among the prosperous, enterprising and representative citizens of the community. Having spent his entire life within the borders of Knox county he is widely known throughout this locality, and the fact that many of the comrades of his youth continue to remain his best friends indicates that his life has ever been actuated by high and manly principles.

J. H. CAIN.

J. H. Cain is engaged in general farming and stock-raising on a fine eighty acre tract on section 30, Chestnut township, which he has owned and operated for the past thirteen years. He was born in Fulton county, Illinois, on February 5, 1851, the youngest son and fifth child in a family of eight born of the union of Daniel and Nancy Jane (Jones) Cain. His father was a native of Pennsylvania, his birth having occurred in the vicinity of Pittsburg, where he spent the first nine years of his life. At the end of that time he accompanied his parents on their removal to Illinois. where they lived during the remainder of their days. They located in Fulton county and there Daniel Cain was reared to manhood, completing his education in the public schools of his adopted state. He adopted agriculture for his life vocation, first following this activity in Illinois but subsequently removed to Missouri, where he resided for several years. Later he returned to Illinois, again settling in Fulton county, whence he came to Knox county, where he is still living. The mother, who was a native of the state of New York came to Illinois with her family when quite young. They were farming people in Fulton county and there she met and subsequently married Mr. Cain. She passed away thirty-five years ago. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Cain there were born eight children, those beside our subject being: Angeline, the wife of William Bowden, of Hermon; Catherine and Caroline, both of whom are deceased; Delia, the wife of Marion Allen, who is deceased, of Galesburg; Mary, also deceased; Fanny, the wife of John Dolan of Chicago; and Helen, who married Douglas Roberts of Farmington.

Reared on his father's farm, in the acquirement of his education J. H. Cain attended the common schools of his native state. While mastering the common branches of English learning, he was also becoming familiar with the practical methods of farming under the supervision and direction of his father. He remained at home until he was twenty years of age, when he set out on an independent career. During the succeeding five years he worked as a farm hand, but by means of his industry and thrift succeeded in accumulating sufficient capital to enable him to become a property owner at the expiration of the period. He invested his earnings in a tract of land located on section 31, and there for twenty-two years he assiduously applied his energies to general farming and stock-raising. Mr. Cain took great pride in his farm and during his occupancy brought the land into a high state of cultivation and added many improvements to the property, thus greatly enhancing its attractiveness as well as value. Disposing of this he removed to his present homestead, whose fertile fields and substantially constructed and well repaired buildings make it a most desirable property. Mr. Cain has always made a specialty of stock-raising, particularly the breeding and raising of fine horses, being the owner of a fine Percheron stallion, "Champion," by name.

In 1876 Mr. Cain was joined in wedlock to Miss Mary D. Berry, and they have become the parents of eight children: George, who is a resident of Chestnut township; Nora, the wife of Charles Dikeman, of Delong, Illinois; Alice, who is unmarried, a typist of Chicago; Nellie, the wife of George Eldridge, living with her parents; Sarah, who is unmarried, a typist of Denver, Colorado; and Ralph, Bertha and Grace, all of whom are at home.

His political allegiance Mr. Cain gives to the republican party, and at the present time is serving as school director. In matters religious he affiliates with the Methodist Episcopal church of which his wife is an earnest member. Mr. Cain is one of the well known and highly respected citizens of his township, where he has long resided.

GEORGE R. BYRAM.

Among the successful enterprises which constitute the business activity of Abingdon is numbered the livery establishment of George R. Byram, a representative of a family which has long been established in this district. Mr. Byram was born on a farm southwest of Abingdon, in Indian Point township, Knox county, and is a son of Robert and Nancy (Nance) Byram, natives of Ohio and Knox county respectively. The maternal grandfather of George R.

Byram saw military service in one of the early wars, while the paternal grandfather was numbered among the early settlers of this section of the state. At an early day he brought his family to Knox county, establishing his home on a farm which he purchased, consisting of one hundred and seventy-three acres of land located southwest of Abingdon. After his death his son, Robert Byram, purchased the interests of the other heirs to the property and continued in its ownership and cultivation for a number of years. He is now living retired from active work and with his wife makes his home in Abingdon. Aside from his connection with agricultural pursuits he has also taken an active and helpful interest in public affairs, serving for a time as county supervisor and also as tax collector.

Opportunity for good mental training was afforded George R. Byram, his preliminary education being acquired in the schools of Abingdon, while later he had the benefit of study at Hedding College. His father's farm was the training ground upon which he received his early preparation for the practical duties of life, and after thoroughly mastering the various phases of agriculture he took up farming on his own account, being thus engaged for five years both in Indian Point and Cedar townships. In 1903 he took up his abode in Abingdon and in the following year purchased the livery business owned by the estate of L. S. Austin, to the conduct of which he has since devoted his time and attention. He now carries on a general livery and feed business that is up-to-date and modern in all of its appointments, and in its management has been very prosperous, the gratifying degree of success which has attended his efforts being the result of keen business sagacity, close application and sound judgment.

It was on the 23d of February, 1897, that Mr. Byram was united in marriage to Miss Ella M. Dingman, who was born in Iowa on the 6th of February, 1874. Her parents came to Abingdon at an early day and here the father engaged in bridge building, being accidentally killed while thus employed. His wife passed away during the early childhood of her daughter who, by her marriage to Mr. Byram, has become the mother of two children, Doren and Donald. Mr. and Mrs. Byram are members of the Christian church and occupy a prominent position in the social circles in which they move. Mr. Byram is keenly alive to the questions and issues of the day and his public spirit prompts his cooperation in all matters for the development and improvement of his home locality.

ANDREW O. ANDERSON.

Andrew O. Anderson, whose time is devoted to general farming and stock-raising in Sparta township, his place adjoining the old family homestead, was born on the 20th of November, 1860, upon the farm which has long been in the possession of the Anderson family. His father was Ole Anderson, who was born in Christiansund, Norway, February 18, 1820. His father Andrew Olson was born in Christiania, Norway. He followed farming throughout his entire life and both he and his wife, Mrs. Harriet Olson, remained residents of Norway until called to their final rest. Ole Anderson, the father, spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native country and in 1849 started for America, accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Mary Anderson, and their one child. While on shipboard on the way from the east to Ottawa the mother became ill and died when the family were between Chicago and Ottawa, her remains being interred at the latter place. For his second wife Mr. Anderson chose Betsy Anderson, who was born in Sweden, May 26, 1839, and was a daughter of Andrew Peterson, who was born in 1814 and came to America in early life, settling in Sparta township, Knox county, Illinois, where he became a prosperous farmer. He married Anna Hedlund, who was born October 18, 1815, and was a daughter of Jold and Elsie Hedlund, the former a soldier of Sweden, in which country he spent his entire life. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Olson were Peter and Betsy Larson. Following his second marriage Ole Anderson made his home in Sparta township, becoming one of the well known agriculturists of that community. He brought his land under a high state of cultivation and remained for many years on the old homestead, where he at length passed away. He was a Lutheran in his religious belief and was a republican in his political views. The party numbered him among its active and earnest workers for he did all that he could to advance its interests and secure its success. He was drafted for service in the Civil war but never went to the front. His widow still survives and is now living on the old homestead at the age of seventy-two years.

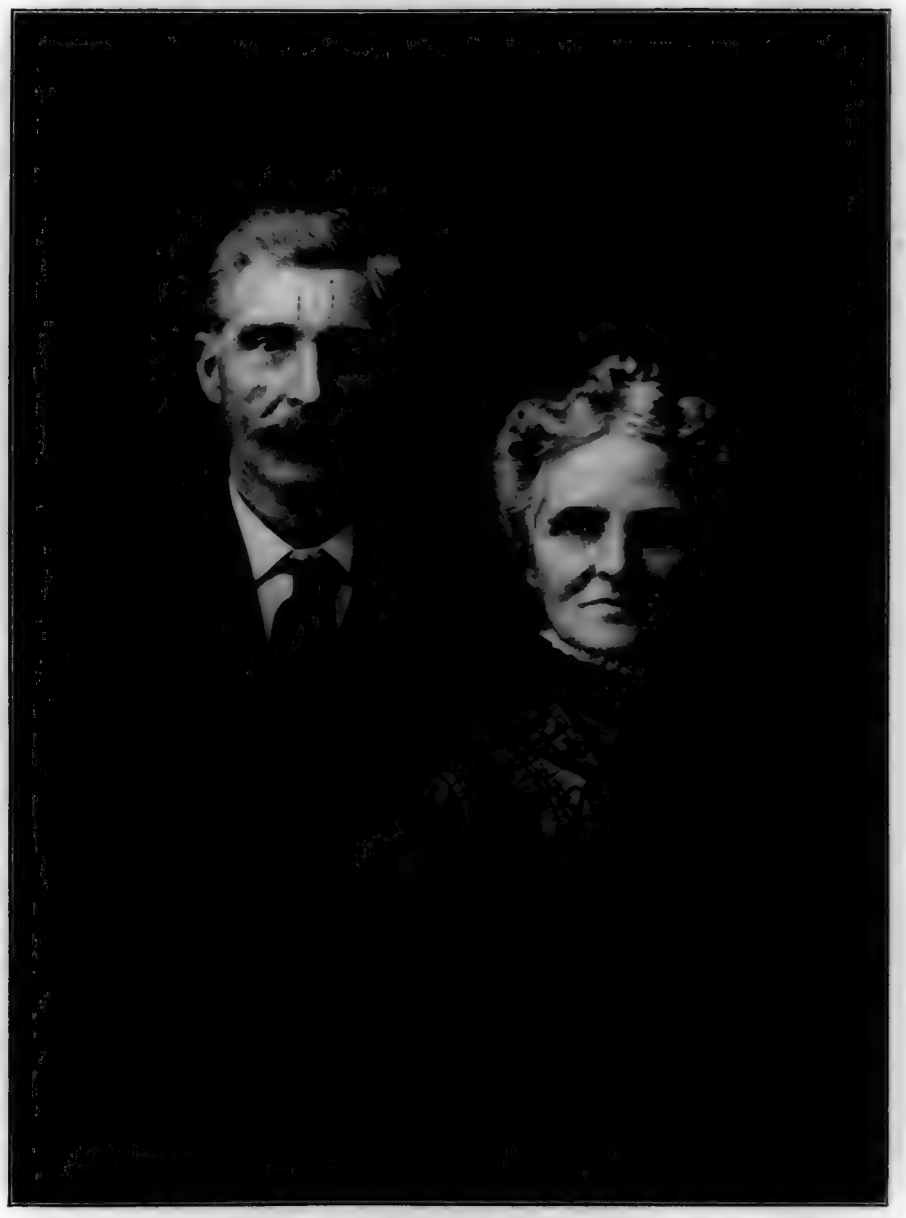
Andrew O. Anderson had the usual experiences that fall to the lot of the farm boy who is reared under the parental roof and divides his time between the duties of the schoolroom, the pleasures of the playground and the work of the home farm. When he had put aside his text-books he devoted his entire attention to farm work, remaining with his parents until he reached the age of twenty-three years. Later he engaged in farming on his own account in Sparta township for five years and in 1885 went to Texas, where he was engaged in stock-raising for eleven years. He was convinced, however, that Illinois offered better opportunities to him and in 1896 he returned to Sparta township, where he resided until 1903. In that year he purchased his present farm adjoining the old homestead and is now engaged in general agricultural pursuits, cultivating the crops best adapted to soil and climate. By reason of his practical and progressive methods he secures good harvests and thus wins a substantial annual income. He also makes stock-raising a feature of his business and this also adds to his success.

Mr. Anderson has been married twice. He first wedded, in 1890, Emma Weedman, who was born in Victoria, this county, and is a daughter of Ole and Betsy Weedman. In 1896 Mr. Anderson was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, who passed away in that year, leaving two children: Esther, who was born in Texas, in 1891, and is now a student in Lombard University of Galesburg; and Rufus, who was born in 1895 and is now attending the public schools. For his second wife Mr. Anderson chose Miss Christine Norlum, who was born in Sweden, in 1883, and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Norlum, both of whom are yet living in Sweden. The children of the second marriage are Helen and Lloyd, aged respectively six and five years.



In his fraternal relations Mr. Anderson is a Mason, belonging to Oneida Lodge, No. 337, F. & A. M., which finds in him an exemplary representative, true to its teachings concerning mutual helpfulness and brotherly kindliness. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and while he has never held political office he has served for two terms on the school board and is a warm friends of the cause of education.

C. A. ZENOR.

Among the gallant sons of Illinois, who donned the blue and went to the front in the '60s is C. A. Zenor, a pioneer merchant of Williamsfield, now living retired. He was born in Putnam county, this state January 23, 1845, and is a son of Jacob and Elvira (Skeel) Zenor. The father was born in Kentucky, and there he resided until 1833, when he came to Illinois, settling on a farm in Putnam county that he cultivated until his death at the age of sixty-seven years. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Zenor.

The early years of C. A. Zenor were not unlike those of other farmer lads of the pioneer period. He attended the public schools at Hennepin, this state, until he had mastered the common branches and also assisted his father in the work of the farm. At the age of nineteen years he enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, starting for the front on the 13th of May, 1864. He later served in the Forty-seventh Illinois and was a member of the Sixteenth Corps. After the surrender of the Spanish Fort, they started for Montgomery, Alabama, in the midst of a driving storm. Before they began to march, General McArthur said, "Boys, you will be out of the rain soon," meaning that the war was almost over. On the 22d of April, near Greenville, Alabama, a staff officer mounted on a fleet horse came dashing along the line, shouting "Lee has surrendered!" The cheering was long and loud. The rain and mud that made marching almost impossible, their hunger and limited rations, and general physical discomfort was forgotten. The change in their appearance and movements was phenomenal, they were like new men, their vitality was restored and they had no thought save that the war was almost ended. The elation did not last long, however, for in the evening, at Montgomery, Alabama, word was received of the assassination of President Lincoln. Early in May they marched to Selma, one of the principal arsenals of the south, and on the 8th of August, 1865, the Sixteenth Corps was disbanded and the mustering out of the troops began. As there was no civil authority then in existence in the south, the Forty-Seventh Illinois was retained to assist in the readjustment of the disorganized country and to protect government property, as well as to restrain the bands of marauders then prevalent. On the 21st of January, this regiment was also mustered out and took the train for the north. Just north of Corinth, Mississippi, in the night, they had a head-on collision with a construction train loaded with negroes. Two of the soldiers were killed and a number were injured, while the other train was practically demolished and the majority of the negroes killed outright or terribly mangled. They arrived at Springfield, Illinois, on the 2d of February, 1866, and on the following day were paid and discharged. Very soon after his return home, Mr. Zenor resumed the duties of civil life as a clerk in a dry-goods store. He true to its teachings concerning mutual helpfulness and brotherly kindliness. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and while he has never held political office he has served for two terms on the school board and is a warm friends of the cause of education.

MR. AND MRS. C. A. ZENOR

C. A. ZENOR.

Among the gallant sons of Illinois, who donned the blue and went to the front in the '60s is C. A. Zenor, a pioneer merchant of Williamsfield, now living retired. He was born in Putnam county, this state January 23, 1845, and is a son of Jacob and Elvira (Skeel) Zenor. The father was born in Kentucky, and there he resided until 1833, when he came to Illinois, settling on a farm in Putnam county that he cultivated until his death at the age of sixty-seven years. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Zenor.

The early years of C. A. Zenor were not unlike those of other farmer lads of the pioneer period. He attended the public schools at Hennepin, this state, until he had mastered the common branches and also assisted his father in the work of the farm. At the age of nineteen years he enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, starting for the front on the 13th of May, 1864. He later served in the Forty-seventh Illinois and was a member of the Sixteenth Corps. After the surrender of the Spanish Fort, they started for Montgomery, Alabama, in the midst of a driving storm. Before they began to march, General McArthur said, "Boys, you will be out of the rain soon," meaning that the war was almost over. On the 22d of April, near Greenville, Alabama, a staff officer mounted on a fleet horse came dashing along the line, shouting "Lee has surrendered!" The cheering was long and loud. The rain and mud that made marching almost impossible, their hunger and limited rations, and general physical discomfort was forgotten. The change in their appearance and movements was phenomenal, they were like new men, their vitality was restored and they had no thought save that the war was almost ended. The elation did not last long, however, for in the evening, at Montgomery, Alabama, word was received of the assassination of President Lincoln. Early in May they marched to Selma, one of the principal arsenals of the south, and on the 8th of August, 1865, the Sixteenth Corps was disbanded and the mustering out of the troops began. As there was no civil authority then in existence in the south, the Forty-Seventh Illinois was retained to assist in the readjustment of the disorganized country and to protect government property, as well as to restrain the bands of marauders then prevalent. On the 21st of January, this regiment was also mustered out and took the train for the north. Just north of Corinth, Mississippi, in the night, they had a head-on collision with a construction train loaded with negroes. Two of the soldiers were killed and a number were injured, while the other train was practically demolished and the majority of the negroes killed outright or terribly mangled. They arrived at Springfield, Illinois, on the 2d of February, 1866, and on the following day were paid and discharged. Very soon after his return home, Mr. Zenor resumed the duties of civil life as a clerk in a dry-goods store. He subsequently engaged in business for himself in Williamsfield, continuing in this line until 1886, when his health failed and he went west to Nebraska. There he purchased a farm that he cultivated for six years, at the expiration of which time he returned to Williamsfield, and again went into business. In the early years of his mercantile life he was associated in business with a Mr. Ryan, under the firm name of Zenor & Ryan. They had purchased the establishment of Parker & Wilder, and later Mr. Zenor bought the interest of Mr. Ryan and took Mr. Elliott into partnership with him, but during the latter years of his commercial career he was associated with Mr. Nelson, the store being operated under the name of Zenor & Nelson. Soon after returning from the west Mr. Zenor sold his Nebraska farm and in 1908 he withdrew from business life and is now living retired. He still has property interests here, however, and also owns land in Canada.

MR. AND MRS. C. A. ZENOR

For his wife and helpmate, Mr. Zenor chose Miss Alice Thomas, who was born July 28, 1849, a daughter of H. C. Thomas, a farmer of Putnam county. They were married March 25, 1869, and they became the parents of four children. Mildred, who is a graduate of music of Shenandoah, Iowa, married R. V. Field, of Galesburg, and they have two children, Lavonne and Zenor D. Mabel, the second in order of birth, has passed away. Maude, the third daughter, who is a graduate of Knox College of Galesburg, married A. W. Gale, a farmer of Truro township, and they have one child, Alice. Zelda, the youngest in the family, died at the age of two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Zenor are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Grand Army of the Republic. His political allegiance he accords to the republican party and has served as township assessor and as a member of the local school board and also of the town board. Mr. Zenor has met with success in his various undertakings and is one of the prosperous and highly esteemed citizens of Williamsfield, where he has resided since the spring of 1892.

DAVID SOUTH.

Through the improvement of opportunities which Illinois offers in agricultural lines David South has gained prosperity which now ranks him among the representative citizens of Knox county. He is a native of Indiana, his birth there occurring on the 23d of January, 1842. His parents, William and Deliah South, were natives of Ohio and Pennsylvania respectively, but for a number of years made their home in Indiana, where the father was engaged in farming at the time of his death. Later the mother came to Knox county, Illinois, where her remaining days were spent. In their family were three sons. Our subject and a half-brother are the only surviving members of the family. An older brother, Elijah South, who came to Knox county at an early day, enlisted from Abingdon for service in the Civil war and was killed in the battle of Pittsburg, on the 5th of April, 1862.

David South spent the early part of his life in his native state and then, in 1851, was brought by his mother to Knox county, Illinois, settlement being made upon a farm near St. Augustine. When old enough to enter the business world on his own account, he wisely chose as his life work the occupation to which he had been reared and he has since devoted his energies to the occupation of farming, in which direction he is meeting with substantial success.

Mr. South has never married. He gives his political support to the democratic party. Although his life has had no exciting chapters it has ever been characterized by all that is honorable and upright in every relation, and his genuine personal worth has gained for him the friendship of a large number of those with whom he has been brought in contact.

HUGH A. SLOAN.

Hugh A. Sloan is the owner of four hundred and seventy acres of highly improved and well cultivated land in Elba and Salem townships, Knox county, where he is most successfully engaged in general farming and stock-raising. He resides on the northwest corner of section 3, Salem township, where he has spent practically his entire life, his birth having occurred there on the 19th of May, 1858. He is a son of John Sloan, who was born in County Antrim, Ireland, in 1827, and who was also reared and educated there. At the age of twenty-three years he decided to emigrate to the United States and on the 13th of November, 1850, he landed in St. Louis. He remained there until the 13th of the following month when he and his brother went to Oquaka, where he obtained employment as a member of a surveying crew at thirteen dollars per month. He drove the first stake in the survey made for the lines of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad east of the Mississippi river that year, remaining in the service of this company for seven years. During the period of his connection with them he held various positions, having assisted in laying out the road between Galesburg and Peoria, while for a time he was also an engineer. Ambitious and thrifty, he carefully saved as much of his salary as was not required to supply him with the actual necessities of life and in 1857 he had sufficient capital to buy a farm on section 4, Salem township. His ownership but proved an incentive to greater effort, and he applied himself with untiring energy to the cultivation and improvement of his homestead. He met with more than average success in his agricultural pursuits, owing to his concentration and intelligent direction of his activities, and so was able to extend the boundaries of his farm from time to time until he had acquired eight hundred acres of land. In connection with the operation of his fields he made a specialty of breeding and raising Shorthorn cattle, being awarded most lucrative returns from both.

On the 13th of June, 1854, Mr. Sloan was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Allen, also a native of County Antrim and a daughter of Hugh and Sarah (Caulfield) Allen, natives of the same county. The mother passed away on the 22d of November, 1832, during the infancy of her daughter, Mrs. Sloan. The paternal grandparents of our subject were James and Mary (Back) Sloan, who spent their lives in the Emerald isle. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs.

John Sloan there were born seven children: Mary, the widow of J. W. Hensley of Yates City and Peoria, Illinois, now living in Chicago; Hugh A., our subject; Sarah, who married E. H. Ware, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this volume; James, who is living at home with his mother in Salem township; Susan, who was born on October 7, 1865, and died on the 27th of July, 1879; John, who was born on the 8th of October, 1872, and died on July 27, 1879; and Jessie, who died in August, 1879, at the age of two years and six months. The last three were victims of a diphtheria epidemic. Mrs. Sloan is a member of the Presbyterian church, in the faith of which denomination the family were reared. The father was a Mason, belonging to Yates City Lodge, No. 488, R. A. M.; and his political views coincided with the principles of the democratic party. He was a man who always took a prominent and active interest in the development of the community and in its governmental affairs. From 1869 to 1878 he served as a member of the board of supervisors and was subsequently elected to the state legislature, being a member of the committee on township organizations and also the agricultural and horticultural committee. He was reelected in 1882 and in every way proved to be a most efficient and conscientious representative, reflecting credit upon himself and his constituency through his capable discharge of his responsibilities. When the county or town required the services of a man possessed of more than average powers of organization or executive ability, Mr. Sloan was called into requisition. He was appointed to a number of important committees among them being that of the building committee of the county courthouse, and in every instance his duties were fulfilled with a conscientious exactitude rarely to be found in public life. As a friend he was loyal and faithful, in matters of citizenship upright and honorable, while as a husband and father he was kind and indulgent, and when called to his rest on the 27th of April, 1889, there was deep regret and mourning not only in his immediate circle of family and friends but throughout the community where he had many friends by whom he was held in the highest esteem.

Reared on the home farm, Hugh A. Sloan attended the schools of Salem township in the acquirement of his early education, supplemented by a brief period of study in the schools of Elmwood, Illinois. After acquiring such knowledge as was deemed essential to enable him to assume the heavier responsibilities of life, he laid aside his school books and gave his entire time and attention to assisting in the work of the farm. Following his marriage in 1883, Mr. Sloan located on his present homestead, on which at that time there was neither a tree nor a building, but many changes have been effected during the long period of his occupancy, and there are now large commodious barns, substantially constructed outbuildings and a comfortable residence, the beauty and attractiveness of which is much enhanced by the large trees that thickly stud the lawn. During the early years of his agricultural pursuits he operated the farm in partnership with his father, but after the latter's death he took over his present holdings, these comprising a trifle more than half of his father's acreage. His fields are almost entirely devoted to cereals, such as can be used for the feeding of cattle, stock-raising being Mr. Sloan's specialty. He has always been very successful in both and is numbered among the highly prosperous farmers of the community, being recognized as a man whose rewards are only commensurate with the intelligent expenditure of effort.

On the 22d of March, 1883, Mr. Sloan was united in marriage to Miss Ida Eleanor Baird, who was born in Elba township on June 1, 1862. Mrs. Sloan is the only child born of the marriage of Demartis and Charlotte (Wheeler) Baird, natives of Pennsylvania. During the early years of their domestic life they located on a farm of one hundred and sixty acres on Elba township, where Mrs. Sloan was born. Mr. Baird responded to his nation's call and went to the front in defense of the union, being killed in the battle of Resaca. When her little daughter was seven years old Mrs. Baird was married to L. A. Laurence of Yates City, and unto them were born five children, two of whom are living, as are also the parents, who make their home in Yates City. They affiliate with the Presbyterian church. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Sloan there have been born two children, Jessie May and John, both of whom are at home.

In matters of faith the family are Presbyterians, and fraternally Mr. Sloan is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, belonging to the Yates City Camp. His political support has always been accorded to the democratic party and he has filled a number of public offices. He first served as school director, subsequently discharging the duties of road commissioner for eleven years in Salem township, while for ten years he was township supervisor. In the spring of 1911 he was again elected road commissioner, and he is also a member of the board of review and president of road and bridge board committee of Knox county. In the administration of his public duties Mr. Sloan has been as judicious and discreet as in the direction of his personal affairs, discharging his responsibilities in a manner to meet with the approval not only of his constituency but the community at large.

E. H. WARE.

E. H. Ware is the owner of a fine farm of six hundred acres located in Salem and Maquon townships, Knox county, that he devotes to general farming and stock-raising. He was born on section 6, Salem township, the farm where he now resides, on the 6th of January, 1862, and is a son of W. K. and Priscilla (Stark) Ware. The parents are now both deceased, the mother having been sixty-two at the time of her demise, and are buried in the cemetery at Peoria, Illinois. W. K. Ware was one of the highly successful farmers and extensive landowners of the pioneer period, having acquired before his retirement five thousand acres of land. Both he and his wife attended the Methodist Episcopal church and in politics he was a republican, but not an office seeker. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Ware there were born three children, of whom the eldest, W. D., is now deceased. Their only daughter, Ida H., became the wife of James A. Penick of Sheridan, Iowa; and the youngest member of the family, E. H., is our subject.

The youthful years of E. H. Ware were spent amid the scenes of his present home, his early education being obtained in the public schools of Douglas. Later he studied for a term or two at Abingdon and also at Sheridan, Iowa, for a time. Having been reared on a farm he early became familiar with the work of the fields and care of the stock and when old enough to lay aside his school books was fully qualified to assume the responsibilities of an agriculturist. He was married at the age of twenty-one years and immediately thereafter located on the place, where he now resides. Although the property is well improved and in a high state of cultivation, Mr. Ware has only made such minor changes as were necessitated by the passing of time, the buildings all being those erected during his father's life time. He has kept them well repaired and as they were substantially constructed, originally, are practically as good at the present time as they were when erected. Stock-raising has always engaged much of Mr. Ware's attention, and at the present time he is making a specialty of thoroughbred Jersey cattle, while formerly it was Poland China hogs, of which he raised about two hundred annually. All work upon his place is conducted under his personal supervision and he annually reaps abundant harvests, while the returns from stock-raising prove to be equally lucrative.

In June, 1882, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Ware and Miss Sarah A. Sloan of Salem township, where she had been born and reared, a daughter of John and Sarah Sloan. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Ware there have been born three children: Jessie, who is at home; Priscilla, training for a professional nurse in a hospital in Chicago; and Florence, the wife of William Belden, of Maquon township.

Fraternally Mr. Ware is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, while his political support he gives to the republican party, but is not an office seeker, preferring to give his attention to his personal interests in which he has met with such gratifying success. In addition to his fine farm Mr. Ware is also one of the stockholders of the Ideal Telephone Company.

S. H. HELLER.

Progressive and strictly modern in the agricultural methods which he employs, S. H. Heller is numbered among the prosperous farmers of Elba township, Knox county, owning a very fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres five miles from Yates City. He was born in 1848 in Wayne county, Ohio, and was brought to Illinois when one year old. His parents were George and Margaret (Gillricks) Heller. The father was a native of Franklin county, Pennsylvania and removed to Ohio in middle life. In 1849 he came with his family to Illinois and in 1858 moved farther west, settling in Missouri. He came back to Illinois, however, and, after residing for a year and a half in Fulton county, he came to Knox county and made his home in Elba township in the spring of 1860. He died in May, 1881, at the age of seventy-eight years, having devoted his entire life to agricultural pursuits. There were twelve children in his family.

S. H. Heller received his education in the district schools of Knox county and since entering upon a career has farmed. During the early years he rented land for cultivation until, in 1905, he purchased the present place which he has improved wonderfully since that time. He carries on general farming and stock-raising, making a very comfortable income for himself and his family.

Mr. Heller was united in marriage to Miss Clara Shade and they are the parents of six children: Floyd, who married Edith Dalton, and has one child;

Earl, who married Bessie Reardon, and has one son; Elmer, who is at home; Simon, Jr., who married Nora Howe; Ralph, who married Jennie Blust, and is the father of a son; and Clarence, who wedded Elizabeth King, of Knox county.

Mr. Heller is an ardent republican in his political activities and in his capacity of school director has shown himself qualified to discharge the duties of public office. For sixty-two years a resident of Knox county, he has not only been a witness of the agricultural growth of this locality but has materially contributed to its development.

WILLIAM S. BELLWOOD.

Dr. William S. Bellwood, a successful medical practitioner of Abingdon, is a native of Knox county, born March 21, 1866. His grandparents, Seth M. and Polly (Shumaker) Bellwood, both natives of Ohio, were married in 1831 and six years later came as pioneers to Knox county, Illinois, where their son Jefferson was born. The latter, on February 2, 1861, married Miss Mary E. Harvey, the daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Lemon) Harvey, both born in Ohio. Their son William S. Bellwood, the subject of this sketch, was born in Knox county, March 21, 1866. His father was one of the substantial farmers of this section of the country and widely known as an extensive stock man, attracting especial attention by his breeding of Shorthorn and Poled Angus cattle. He was numbered among the successful men of Indian Point township and his splendid farm of one hundred and ninety-nine acres on section 11 was the source of a comfortable living for himself and his family. In 1888, or thereabout, he took up his residence in Abingdon. He was an active and enthusiastic worker in Abingdon Lodge, No. 184, I. O. O. F., to which he belonged. Mr. Bellwood, at the age of sixty-eight years, eight months and five days, died on April 28, 1907, just five days after the death of his wife, who passed away on April 23, 1907, at the age of sixty-four years, five months and twenty-three days.

William S. Bellwood was brought up on his father's farm and, in the rural school of his vicinity, distinguished himself for aptness and zeal in his studies. When he was twenty years old he became the teacher of the school which he had attended as a pupil. After two years of teaching he enrolled in Hedding College, taking a special course. Drawn to the study of medicine, however, from a natural love for the profession as well as the humanitarian ideal of social helpfulness, he left college and in the spring of 1892 began to prepare himself for his chosen work, reading under Dr. Madison Reece, in his day one of the most noted practitioners in the country round about. Eager to pursue his studies in a professional school, the young student selected Rush Medical College of Chicago for his training, entering the following fall. He was graduated from that institution in the class of 1895 and began his practice of medicine at once, locating in Alliance, Nebraska, where he was made surgeon of the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad and met with unusual success in the pursuit of his profession. In 1904 he returned to Abingdon, his home town. Here he has remained ever since, and through unfaltering devotion to his profession has built up a flourishing practice.

On June 30, 1897, Dr. Bellwood was joined in wedlock to Miss Edna Kelly Shaffer of Fairfield, Iowa. To this union was born one child, Irene. Mr. Bellwood is a member of the Knox county Medical Society, of the Illinois State Medical Society and of the American Medical Association. He belongs to the Abingdon Lodge No. 185, A. F. & A. M. Always progressive and alive to the needs promoting the best interests of his fellowmen, he has remained independent in his political views, voting according to the dictates of his best judgment. He is a member of the Episcopalian church in which his wife is an active worker. For his faithful performance of the duties devolving upon him in his professional as well as his private life, Dr. Bellwood has won for himself the high esteem of all who know him. As a physician and surgeon he enjoys a wide reputation and a lucrative practice.

JOHN BURCH.

In the upbuilding and development of Knox county John Burch has been a potent factor, not only in the improvement of good farming property but also as a builder, in which connection he has erected many substantial dwellings throughout the county. He was born in Albany, New York, in May, 1848, a son of Moses and Maria (Petry) Burch, both of whom were natives of the Empire state. The father, who was a wagon and cabinet-maker, was engaged in that line of activity near Albany for many years. In his family were ten children, five sons and five daughters, of whom eight are now living, including John, the subject of this review. The others are: Mrs. Betsy Stewart, residing in New York state; Seth, who makes his home near Albany; Mrs. Louisa Gold, Rufus, and Mrs. Rosanna Decker, all of whom live in the Empire state; Mrs. Harriet Crawford, whose home is in eastern Illinois; and William, of New York.

John Burch acquired his education in the schools of his native state, and at the same time his training at farm work was both practical and comprehensive. Later he learned the carpenter's trade, which he continued to follow in connection with agricultural pursuits in New York until 1868, when he came west to Illinois, locating in Abingdon, Knox county, where he resided for a short time. He then removed to a farm in Chestnut township, where he carried on farming and carpentry until 1907, when he came to his present farm, which comprises eighty acres. In the meantime he took a very active and substantial part in the upbuilding of various portions of the county in the capacity of a carpenter, erecting and assisting in erecting many good dwellings and helping in the building of the town of Hermon and of London Mills. His ability and skill in that trade was pronounced and his time was kept fully occupied with the business that came to him in that line and with his farming interests. He now owns a fine tract of land on section 12, Indian Point township, which he has brought under a good state of cultivation, and today he ranks among the substantial and well-to-do business men of this locality.

Mr. Burch was married in Knoxville, in 1869, to Miss Phoebe Richmond, a daughter of Walter and Susanna Richmond, who were very early settlers in Knox county. The father was a farmer by occupation, being thus engaged for many years in Indian Point township. Both he and his wife are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Burch have become the parents of three children, of whom the second, Alvie, lives at home and assists his father in the operation of the farm. Susie, the first in order of birth, married Emerson D. Yerion, and they now make their home in Huntsville, Alabama. Hazel, the youngest, resides with her parents.

A strong advocate of the principles of the democratic party, Mr. Burch is an earnest worker in party ranks and served as collector of Chestnut township for several terms. He has also filled the office of school director and the cause of education finds in him a warm champion. He has ever been a busy man and his active life has gained for him a creditable degree of success and at the same time has won the confidence and good-will of his fellowmen because of the honorable policy which he has at all times followed.

JOHN WEST.

The operation of a highly cultivated and well improved farm of nearly five hundred acres located in Truro and Persifer townships engages the entire time and attention of John West, who is one of the oldest residents in this section of the county. His birth occurred on the old family homestead in the vicinity of Maquon, Knox county, February 25, 1843, and there he was reared to manhood. Samuel West, his father, came to Illinois during the pioneer days, acquiring land near Maquon that he cultivated until his death at the age of fifty-two years. He married Mary Ann Gullett, and they had six children.

Reared on what was then termed the frontier, in the acquirement of his education John West attended the district schools, during brief terms, in which he mastered the common branches. In common with other lads of that period he early began his agricultural training, being assigned duties about the fields and barns that were increased with the development of his strength and sense of responsibility during the passing years. In 1862, at the age of nineteen years, he dropped the plow for the musket, enlisting as a member of Company F, Eighty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry under Captain Burkhalter of Sherman's army. He was in the service for three years, and during that time participated in many of the most notable conflicts but was never wounded. He was captured by the enemy, however, and served ten months in confederate prisons. When mustered out he returned to Knox county and farmed for several years in the vicinity of Maquon. In 1867 he purchased the place where he now lives, having made this his home for forty-four years. Many and extensive improvements have been wrought during that time and he now has one of the most highly cultivated and valuable homesteads in the township. Mr. West is a man of practical ideas and progressive methods and as he is both enterprising and industrious has prospered in a most gratifying manner in his undertakings. His fields are devoted to such cereals as are best adapted to the soil,

JOHN WEST

Mr. Burch was married in Knoxville, in 1869, to Miss Phoebe Richmond, a daughter of Walter and Susanna Richmond, who were very early settlers in Knox county. The father was a farmer by occupation, being thus engaged for many years in Indian Point township. Both he and his wife are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Burch have become the parents of three children, of whom the second, Alvie, lives at home and assists his father in the operation of the farm. Susie, the first in order of birth, married Emerson D. Yerion, and they now make their home in Huntsville, Alabama. Hazel, the youngest, resides with her parents.

A strong advocate of the principles of the democratic party, Mr. Burch is an earnest worker in party ranks and served as collector of Chestnut township for several terms. He has also filled the office of school director and the cause of education finds in him a warm champion. He has ever been a busy man and his active life has gained for him a creditable degree of success and at the same time has won the confidence and good-will of his fellowmen because of the honorable policy which he has at all times followed.

JOHN WEST.

The operation of a highly cultivated and well improved farm of nearly five hundred acres located in Truro and Persifer townships engages the entire time and attention of John West, who is one of the oldest residents in this section of the county. His birth occurred on the old family homestead in the vicinity of Maquon, Knox county, February 25, 1843, and there he was reared to manhood. Samuel West, his father, came to Illinois during the pioneer days, acquiring land near Maquon that he cultivated until his death at the age of fifty-two years. He married Mary Ann Gullett, and they had six children.

Reared on what was then termed the frontier, in the acquirement of his education John West attended the district schools, during brief terms, in which he mastered the common branches. In common with other lads of that period he early began his agricultural training, being assigned duties about the fields and barns that were increased with the development of his strength and sense of responsibility during the passing years. In 1862, at the age of nineteen years, he dropped the plow for the musket, enlisting as a member of Company F, Eighty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry under Captain Burkhalter of Sherman's army. He was in the service for three years, and during that time participated in many of the most notable conflicts but was never wounded. He was captured by the enemy, however, and served ten months in confederate prisons. When mustered out he returned to Knox county and farmed for several years in the vicinity of Maquon. In 1867 he purchased the place where he now lives, having made this his home for forty-four years. Many and extensive improvements have been wrought during that time and he now has one of the most highly cultivated and valuable homesteads in the township. Mr. West is a man of practical ideas and progressive methods and as he is both enterprising and industrious has prospered in a most gratifying manner in his undertakings. His fields are devoted to such cereals as are best adapted to the soil, and in connection with his general farming he also engages in stock-raising, both having proven lucrative under his capable direction. All of the buildings now standing on the place have been erected during the period of his ownership, and are substantially constructed and in good repair. He keeps a good grade of stock, his fields are carefully tilled and everything about his farm suggests the careful supervision and thrift that are the accompaniments of success.

JOHN WEST

Mr. West has been married twice, his first union being with Rachel Rebecca Kelly, and to them were born five children. Anna is the wife of William Bohannan and they are the parents of three children, Bessie, Philetta and Selma. Philemon marries Miss Mabel Dillon and to them were born three children, Geneva, Robert and Blondell. Elsie became the wife of Charles A. Johnson and is the mother of two children, Edwin and Gertrude. Arden married Geneva Murray, and to them were born four children, Vivian, Ronald, Bertram and Audrey. Orren married Josie Dawson and they are the parents of four children, Lavon, Laverne, Oral and Gyneth. The present Mrs. West was formerly Miss Mary B. Blackburn, a native of this county, and she is by her marriage to Mr. West the mother of six children, Lloyd, Leota, Jay, Ray, Elizabeth and Earl.

Mr. West is an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic, by which medium of association he maintains relations with his comrades of the field. He has always voted the republican ticket but has never placed himself in line for political preferment, although he is now a road commissioner. During the long period of his residence in this county Mr. West has contributed his full share toward promoting its agricultural development and he is now justly regarded one of the leading and representative farmers of the township.

J. F. ABDILL.

J. F. Abdill, who owns and occupies a beautiful place of six acres just outside of Abingdon, was born in Henderson county, Illinois, on the 12th of January, 1861. He is the only child born of the marriage of David T. and Sarah (Fryrear) Abdill. In his early manhood David T. Abdill, who was a native of Kentucky, came to Henderson county, Illinois, where he lived until the outbreak of the Civil war. Responding to the call of the nation's chief, he went to the front in defense of his country, and when mustered out located in Fort Worth, Texas, where he was later married and has ever since resided.

J. F. Abdill was reared by his grandparents with whom he remained until their death, obtaining his education in the common schools. Having spent his boyhood and youth on a farm, he, when ready to begin his independent career, naturally turned to the vocation for which he was best adapted, and for some time devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits in his native county. In 1889 he became imbued with the western fever and went to Nebraska, purchasing a section of land, that he cultivated for twelve years. At the expiration of that period he removed to Iowa, buying land near Washington, that state. After operating this for seven years he came to Knox county, purchasing his present place near Abingdon in addition to which he also owns forty acres in Cedar township. Mr. Abdill's homestead is one of the show places of that vicinity. He has a beautiful residence surrounded by tastefully arranged and well kept grounds, presenting a most charming and home-like appearance.

In 1885, while still a resident of Henderson county, Mr. Abdill was married to Miss Malissa A. Carr, a native of Warren county, this state. Six children have been born of this union, as follows: Glen, who is deceased; one who died in infancy; and Flossie May; Bessie, at home; Hiram Lester, deceased; and Blanch Freda, also at home.

Fraternally Mr. Abdill is a member of the United Workmen of America, while his political support he accords to the republican party. He is one of the substantial citizens of Abingdon, whose well and capably directed energies during his early manhood has enabled him to acquire the means to assure him ease and comfort during his latter years, while yet he is in his prime.

WILLIAM BOND.

In the death of William Bond the agricultural interests of Knox county lost an important representative. He was thoroughgoing and progressive in the management of his flourishing farm and was known throughout the county as one of the prosperous and substantial residents who won a comfortable competence by dint of his unremitting labors. A native of Ohio, he was born in Preble county, February 18, 1819, and continued to reside there during the first thirty-three years of his life. His father, Exumus Bond, was a native of South Carolina and removed to Ohio when a young man. He married Juda Bennett and a number of years later removed to Randolph county, Illinois, where he passed the remainder of his life. Mrs. Bond died in Preble county, Ohio.

In 1852 William Bond left Ohio and settled in Brimfield township, Peoria county, Illinois. Two years later he purchased the farm in Elba township on which his widow now resides, consisting of one hundred and sixty acres of rich and productive land. This he cultivated with much success during the ensuing years of his life. He was married December 21, 1845, to Miss Eliza J. Peterson. She was born January 22, 1826, in Tennessee, a daughter of John and Sarah (McCorcle) Peterson, both of whom were natives of Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Bond were the parents of six children, born in the following order: Sarah A., deceased; Frances, the wife of William Pitman, by whom she has eight children; Ella C., the wife of William Barrett, by whom she has four children; Alice E., the wife of Marion Ellison, by whom she has five children; Augusta, living at home; and Edward C., of Sparta township, who married Mary Stone and has five children.

Mr. Bond gave his political support to the republican party but was never eager for the honors and emoluments of public office. Mrs. Bond is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and therein a helpful and loyal worker. The death of William Bond occurred on the 10th of February, 1903, when he had reached the age of eighty-four years. One-half of the farm of one hundred and sixty acres which he bequeathed to his wife, she rents to a tenant. Honest and upright in all his relations in life, Mr. Bond enjoyed the high regard of all who knew him, and in his death the community suffered the loss of one who represented the best type of American citizenship. He never shirked the duties which fell to his lot but performed his share in the world's work with willingness and pleasure.

STRAWTHER GIVENS.

To recount the history of a community one has often merely to consider a small group of men whose activities and energies are so inseparably woven into the warp and woof of the social fabric about them that in relating the history of their rise and growth we are recounting the history of the development of the community. To this generalization Abingdon is no exception and conspicuous among its group of foremost citizens is Strawther Givens. Identified with the organization of practically every industry and progressive movement that has originated in this town, Mr. Givens has had an incalculable influence in shaping the industrial, commercial, and social character of Abingdon. He was born in Monroe county, Indiana, May 23, 1843. He was the son of Thales H. Givens and the grandson of James Givens, a soldier in the war of 1812 who won distinction under General Jackson at the battle of New Orleans. His mother was, in her maidenhood, Julia Carter who, like her husband Thales H. Givens, was a native of Madison county, Kentucky. They were married in Brown county, Indiana, to which place they had removed with their parents. After their marriage they settled on a farm in Monroe county, Indiana, residing there up to 1854 when they came to Illinois and bought a farm on the county line between McDonough and Hancock counties. In 1865 they withdrew from the farm and removed to Abingdon, where Mr. Givens became a prominent factor in the business and financial enterprises of this town. In company with his son Strawther and J. M. Dawdy, he organized the first bank in Abingdon. He was a trustee of Hedding College for a number of years and was one of the most influential men of his day in this section of the country. He died on April 23, 1882.

Fortunate in his parentage Strawther Givens in his youth enjoyed advantages far beyond the reach of many of the boys of his time. His primary education he received in the district school in the vicinity of the old home farm on the border of McDonough county. Later he attended the State University of Indiana and followed this with a commercial course at Burlington, Iowa. On Christmas day, 1862, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Huston, a daughter of John Huston, one of the early pioneers of McDonough county. Subsequent to his marriage he engaged in farming. On March 1, 1870, he removed to Abingdon and engaged in the grocery business. Thus he was identified with mercantile interests until 1873 when he, together with his father and Mr. Dawdy, established the bank above mentioned, The Union Bank of Abingdon, conducting the business under the firm name of "Givens, Dawdy & Company." In 1878 it was reorganized with Strawther Givens as cashier, and was known thereafter merely as The Union Bank of Abingdon. In 1879 he engaged in stock-raising and in the latter capacity won a wide reputation for breeding and establishing what was known as the Maple Grove herd of Shorthorn cattle. This breed of cattle attracted much attention in his own and many other states, soon making him nationally famous among breeders of thoroughbred stock. Since his removal to Abingdon he has been identified with the organization and development of such interests as the Iowa Central Railroad Company, The Abingdon Sanitary Manufacturing Company, The Illinois Theatre Company and The Abingdon Light & Power Company. Of the last named concern Mr. Givens was for some years the president and general manager, during which time it was developed to its present high level of efficiency. In 1894 he became identified with the real-estate and insurance business and into this he threw all his energy and personality as he did in every undertaking. The results of his intensified efforts were astonishing, for, during the years of his connection with this enterprise, he built up one of the largest insurance businesses in the county, having at the time of his retirement from this field underwriters for nearly a million and a half dollars. It is not an overstatement to say that there is possibly not a man in Abingdon who has done more to promote the business welfare of the city than he.

Mrs. Strawther Givens passed away in December, 1907. She was the mother of four children: Anna, the wife of W. A. Thomas of Wichita, Kansas; Lucy, the wife of George Foltz, of Abingdon; Laura, deceased, a twin sister of Lucy, married to Alfred Ryden; and Thales H., a ranchman in Teton county, Montana. In his political faith Mr. Givens has always been an ardent democrat and prominently identified with the party for many years. He was a delegate of the national convention that nominated Cleveland in 1884. He has served five terms as alderman of Abingdon and has been an influential factor in his party's councils. He is a member of the Galesburg Club.

Widely known throughout the state there is not a man in Illinois whose business pledge is more trustworthy than is that of Strawther Givens. Mounting on the foundation of unfaltering integrity, of unremitting energy and lofty idealism, the fact of his success needs no explanation.

J. F. SMITH.

In one of the handsome homes of Hermon lives J. F. Smith, for some years past manager of the Farmer's Elevator Company. His native state is Ohio, where he was born in Clinton county near Wilmington on the 10th of May, 1851. His father, Charles W. Smith, was born in Virginia, where this branch of the family had located, leaving that state, however, when he was a small boy. On their westward journey, which was accomplished by train and wagon, they made their destination Knox county, Illinois, settling in Indian Point township, in the year 1854. There he grew from boyhood to manhood, aiding his father in his task of transforming the raw land into a farm. He married Miss Lina C. Moon in Ohio, where she was born. Five children resulted from this union: Susan, deceased; W. H., postmaster of Colby, Kansas; J. F.; D. H., of Chicago; and Sarah, deceased. Mrs. Smith's death occurred in 1907. She had been a widow for many years, her husband having passed away thirty-nine years before in the year 1868. They are both buried in the cemetery at Hermon.

J. F. Smith was given the usual education which the district schools of Indian Point township afforded. At the age of twenty-one he commenced his career independently as a farmer in his home township. He gave this up, however, in 1884, the year made memorable by the democratic victory in the election of Cleveland to his first term of the presidency. Leaving the farm he removed to Weldon, where he lived for a short time, until a desire to push farther west drew him to Kansas, where he located in Thomas county. For six years he tilled the soil of his farm in that place, when he concluded to come back to Indian Point township, Knox county, the locality endeared to him by many associations of former days. He gave up his home in the country in 1903, removing to Hermon upon assuming the management of the Farmer's Elevator Company and has resided in this place ever since.

Miss Mary Roberts became his wife in 1871. Their children are: Emma Lena, wife of O. M. Barnes of Hermon, Illinois; Albert R.; Sina Dora, deceased; Zella, wife of C. V. Shumaker of Abingdon, Illinois; and Orla Glen, of Abingdon, Illinois. Mr. Smith and his wife are faithful members of the Christian church. He has passed through all the chairs of the Odd Fellows lodge of Hermon and is also a Modern Woodman of America. Politically he is a republican in his sentiments. Mr. Smith possesses an energetic and buoyant temperament which cannot be easily discouraged and to those who seek his friendship he is ever a loyal friend.

J. D. GRAY.

J. D. Gray, living near Elba Center on a farm which he has occupied for more than a quarter of a century, is prominently associated with the agricultural interests of Knox county, being successfully engaged in the pursuits of general farming and stock-raising. He was born in Maquon township, November 18, 1855, his parents being Lemuel and Mary A. (Swegle) Gray. The father was a native of Highland county, Ohio, and came to Illinois when a young man, locating in Maquon township, Knox county, where he was engaged in farming all his life with the exception of a few years prior to his death, when he resided in Elba township. He died in Farmington at the age of seventy years. The mother was born in Fulton county, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Gray were the parents of five children, of whom J. D. is the oldest. The others are: Kate, Josephine, John and Charles.

Passing his youth under the parental roof, J. D. Gray was educated in the common schools of Knox county and when old enough to work, engaged in farming on the home place. After his marriage he removed to his present farm located in the western part of the county near Elba Center. It is a valuable tract consisting of one hundred and sixty acres of fertile farm land, which he operates with much success also cultivating a tract of forty acres owned by his wife. In addition to this he has an interest in two other farms. He is progressive in his methods believing that the most competent farmer is he who is best equipped for his work, having substantial buildings, first class machinery and all the necessary accessories such as running water, a lighting plant and other modern improvements that contribute in such a large measure to the comfort and convenience of country dwellers, making farm life not only desirable but highly attractive.

Mr. Gray was united in the bonds of wedlock to Miss Villa Adams, a daughter of Ziba Adams. They are the parents of four children: Earl, who is married to Miss Ada Farwell and has one child, Mildred Lorena; Amy, who is the wife of William Rambo and has a daughter, Iona; and Ord and Floyd, who are both at home. The children were all born and brought up on the farm where the parents are now living. Mr. Gray votes with the democrats and has served the community in which he lives in various official capacities as school director, as tax collector and as commissioner. He is a man who possesses much spirit and energy and throughout his life has advanced by virtue of his untiring efforts and his steadfast devotion to the ideals which he has never lost sight of, content to provide for his family the comforts which his fair competence enables him to secure for them and to take for his measure of reward the joy that comes with the knowledge of labor well performed.

GEORGE W. CLINE.

George W. Cline, another of the citizens of Indian Point township who has met with a gratifying degree of success in agricultural pursuits, was born in Berwick township, Warren county, Illinois. His natal day was the 12th of October, 1863, and his parents Samuel and Olive (Butler) Cline, the father a native of Pickaway county, Ohio, and the mother of Greenbush township, Knox county. Samuel Cline came to Illinois during his boyhood with his father, who located in Sangamon county and there spent the remainder of his life. In his early manhood he went to Warren county, purchasing a farm in Berwick township upon which he resided until he retired to Abingdon, where he passed away in 1898. The mother survived for ten years thereafter, her death occurring in Abingdon in April, 1908. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Cline there were born three sons and three daughters. In order of birth they are as follows: Mary, the wife of John Robinson, of Blackwell, Oklahoma; George W., our subject; Frederick, who is living on the old homestead; Clara, the deceased wife of Oscar Cashman, a resident of Knox county; Charles, who is living in Abingdon; and Olive, the wife of Reuben Davis, a farmer of Indian Point township.

Reared at home, George W. Cline received his education in the district schools of Berwick township. While engaged in mastering the common branches of English learning he was receiving practical training, under the supervision of his father, in the cultivation of the fields and care of the crops. In common with the majority of farmer lads from his early boyhood he was assigned regular duties about the homestead, his responsibilities being increased with the passing years, until by the time he had attained his majority he was fully qualified to begin his independent career as an agriculturist. In 1895 he engaged in the grain and lumber business, being connected with this in both Abingdon and Hermon for eight years. At the expiration of that period he withdrew from commercial activities and returned to farming, with which pursuit he has ever since been identified. Mr. Cline only spends the summer months on his farm, returning to Abingdon after the harvesting is over in the fall and remaining there until spring. He is progressive in his methods, yet practical in his ideas, so judiciously directing and supervising the cultivation of his fields and care of his crops, that he is rewarded abundant harvests of a quality that commands good prices. His efforts are being substantially rewarded and he is recognized as one of the capable agriculturists of the township.

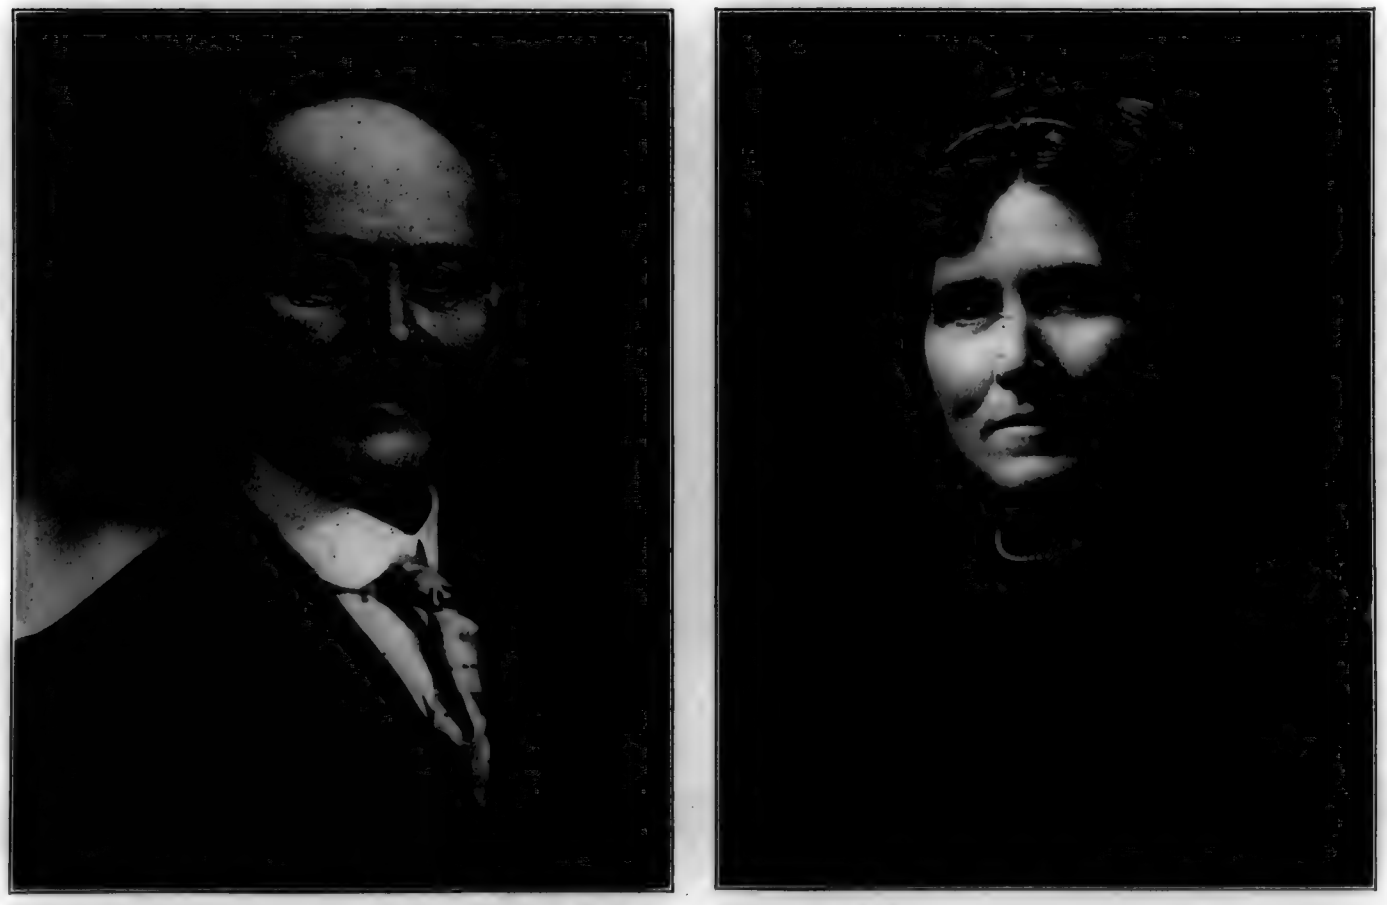
In September, 1886, Mr. Cline was married to Miss Effie Baldwin, who was born in Abingdon in 1865, a daughter of Thomas A. and Nancy (Williams) Baldwin, the father a native of Indiana and the mother of Knox county. Mr. Baldwin, who was a painter by trade, removed with his wife to De Witt, Nebraska. Mrs. Cline passed away on April 17, 1886, and on the 7th of September, 1890, Mr. Cline was married at Avon to Miss Nellie Rose. She is a native of that village, her birth having occurred on the 26th of April, 1872, and is a daughter of W. H. and Harriet (Stevens) Rose, natives of the state of New York. They are now residents of Avon. The father was for many years successfully engaged in agriculture and is the owner of several farms. Three children have blessed this marriage: Merle F., Harold D. and Bertha.

Mr. Cline is a worthy member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Abingdon Lodge, No. 185, A. F. & A. M., of which he is a past master, and he also belongs to the Odd Fellows, being past noble grand of the Abingdon Lodge, No. 184, I. O. O. F. He affiliates with the Universalist church, of which Mrs. Cline is a member, and in politics he is a republican. He is one of the highly regarded citizens of Abingdon, who by honorable business methods and upright principles has won the esteem of those with whom he has had transactions.

ISAAC BURNSIDE.

Isaac Burnside, deceased, was one of the wealthy citizens of Knox county who, after following for many years, extensive agricultural and stock-raising pursuits, retired to Abingdon where he lived peacefully till death claimed him. He was born in Pocahontas county, Virginia, August 26, 1826. His parents, William and Margaret (Callison) Burnside, were both natives of Virginia removing to Indiana when Isaac was a small boy. In 1852 they came to Illinois locating in Chestnut township, Knox county, where Mr. Burnside followed the pursuit of farming until his death.



Isaac Burnside received his education in the district schools of Indiana. When ready to enter upon a career he followed the calling in which his father had trained him. In April, 1857, he married Miss Elizabeth Price of Chestnut township, and established his home on a farm that he had previously purchased in the vicinity of his father's farm. There he lived until 1884 when he retired and took up his residence in Abingdon. During the twenty-seven years in which he operated and improved his farm he was extensively engaged in stockraising and in buying and selling stock. His tireless devotion to duty and his business acumen brought him unusual success and on his retirement he was accounted one of the rich men of this section of the county, owner of six hundred acres of land of which he still owned five hundred and eighty acres at the time of his death, having sold twenty thereof some years earlier. He was heavily interested as a stockholder in the First State Savings Bank. He had also become by purchase the owner of the old family homestead.

Mr. Burnside was twice married. In April, 1857, he was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Price, of Chestnut township, with whom he lived thirty-one years. Her death occurred May 20, 1888. To his second wife he was united in marriage on August 25, 1889. She was Mrs. John Ruth, her maiden name having been Miss Susan E. Soliday. Mrs. Ruth's parents were Samuel and Catherine A. (Shafer) Soliday, both natives of Fairfield county, Ohio, where they were married, coming to Illinois in 1852. They located first in Tazewell county, and in 1860 came to Knox county, making their home in Salem township. In 1875 they removed to Iowa, where they bought a farm in Adams county. There they remained till the last, Mr. Soliday passing away in 1902 and his wife in 1909. Miss Susan Soliday's marriage to Mr. Ruth occurred on July 8, 1875. His death on March 30, 1888, left her a widow until she was again united in the bonds of matrimony the following year. There was no issue to either marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Burnside. The latter is, however, the mother of an adopted daughter, Dorothy C., whom she is tenderly rearing, giving her the excellent opportunities of education and travel which her position and means permit. She is a woman of culture and refinement, possessing a charm of personality that wins many friends. During the past two winters she has resided in California. She is an active church worker, being a member of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions, and also a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian church, in which faith Mr. Burnside, too, was an earnest believer. At the time of his death Mr. Burnside was nearly seventy-nine years, passing away August 14, 1905. Throughout his life he had been a man of high moral principles, serious in his purposes, successful in his undertakings, generous and kind in his public life as well as in his private relations. In the memory of his nobility his widow finds the greatest comfort that can soften her loss.

SAMUEL MORSE WHITING.

Samuel Morse Whiting, who is engaged in mercantile pursuits in Altona, was born in that town on the 11th of August, 1857, and traces his ancestry back to William and Susanna Whiting, who settled in Hartford, Connecticut, in 1632, having come from Boxford, Suffolk county, England. William Whiting was a very wealthy merchant who had received a patent for land at Sevanscot with Lord Say and Lord Brook. He served as treasurer of the Connecticut colony from 1642 to 1647 and died in July of the latter year. His wife passed away July 8, 1673. Their son Joseph Whiting, who was born October 2, 1640, and died October 8, 1717, was married in 1676 to Anna Allyn, who was raising and in buying and selling stock. His tireless devotion to duty and his business acumen brought him unusual success and on his retirement he was accounted one of the rich men of this section of the county, owner of six hundred acres of land of which he still owned five hundred and eighty acres at the time of his death, having sold twenty thereof some years earlier. He was heavily interested as a stockholder in the First State Savings Bank. He had also become by purchase the owner of the old family homestead.

MR. AND MRS. S. M. WHITING

Mr. Burnside was twice married. In April, 1857, he was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Price, of Chestnut township, with whom he lived thirty-one years. Her death occurred May 20, 1888. To his second wife he was united in marriage on August 25, 1889. She was Mrs. John Ruth, her maiden name having been Miss Susan E. Soliday. Mrs. Ruth's parents were Samuel and Catherine A. (Shafer) Soliday, both natives of Fairfield county, Ohio, where they were married, coming to Illinois in 1852. They located first in Tazewell county, and in 1860 came to Knox county, making their home in Salem township. In 1875 they removed to Iowa, where they bought a farm in Adams county. There they remained till the last, Mr. Soliday passing away in 1902 and his wife in 1909. Miss Susan Soliday's marriage to Mr. Ruth occurred on July 8, 1875. His death on March 30, 1888, left her a widow until she was again united in the bonds of matrimony the following year. There was no issue to either marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Burnside. The latter is, however, the mother of an adopted daughter, Dorothy C., whom she is tenderly rearing, giving her the excellent opportunities of education and travel which her position and means permit. She is a woman of culture and refinement, possessing a charm of personality that wins many friends. During the past two winters she has resided in California. She is an active church worker, being a member of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions, and also a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian church, in which faith Mr. Burnside, too, was an earnest believer. At the time of his death Mr. Burnside was nearly seventy-nine years, passing away August 14, 1905. Throughout his life he had been a man of high moral principles, serious in his purposes, successful in his undertakings, generous and kind in his public life as well as in his private relations. In the memory of his nobility his widow finds the greatest comfort that can soften her loss.

SAMUEL MORSE WHITING.

Samuel Morse Whiting, who is engaged in mercantile pursuits in Altona, was born in that town on the 11th of August, 1857, and traces his ancestry back to William and Susanna Whiting, who settled in Hartford, Connecticut, in 1632, having come from Boxford, Suffolk county, England. William Whiting was a very wealthy merchant who had received a patent for land at Sevanscot with Lord Say and Lord Brook. He served as treasurer of the Connecticut colony from 1642 to 1647 and died in July of the latter year. His wife passed away July 8, 1673. Their son Joseph Whiting, who was born October 2, 1640, and died October 8, 1717, was married in 1676 to Anna Allyn, who was born August 18, 1652, and died March 3, 1735. She was a daughter of Colonel John and Ann (Smith) Allyn. Her father, who was secretary of the Connecticut colony for twenty-eight years, was born February 24, 1630, and died November 11, 1696. John Whiting, son of Joseph and Anna (Allyn) Whiting, was born December 15, 1693, and died February 12, 1766. He married Jerusha Lord, who was born in 1699 and died in 1776. Their son Allyn Whiting was a soldier of the Revolutionary war, being a private in Major Sheldon's Regiment of Light Horse and Colonel Enos' Regiment on the Hudson. He was born June 23, 1740, and died February 9, 1818. He and his wife Elizabeth joined the church at West Hartford in 1758. Their son Joseph Whiting was born in August, 1763, and died February 16, 1842. He was married in 1784 to Mary Goodwin, who was born in 1766 and died in 1835. Their son Allyn Whiting, who was the grandfather of our subject, was born July 4, 1788, and died in Aurora, Illinois, November 3, 1871. He married Amanda Alford, who was born June 6, 1796, and died May 3, 1849. Their son Samuel Phelps Whiting, the father of our subject, was born September 19, 1821, in Hartford, Connecticut, and was married, in Litchfield, that state, May 28, 1845, to Miss Lucretia Morse who was born in Litchfield, August 22, 1823, and died April 5, 1901. She was a daughter of Jacob and Harriet Morse, who were married March 14, 1821. Her mother was born March 17, 1800, and died February 28, 1882, in Litchfield. Her father was born in that city March 6, 1792, and was a son of Levi and Thalia (Sanford) Morse. Levi Morse was born in Litchfield, September 19, 1775, and died January 20, 1841. His wife was born October 26, 1776, and died July 16, 1854. Mrs. Lucretia (Morse) Whiting belonged to a very prominent old New England family and a monument has been erected which bears the following inscription: "To the memory of seven Puritans who emigrated from England to America in 1635-9. John Morse, born 1604, settled at New Haven and died at Wallingford, Connecticut, 1707, aged one hundred and three years. Samuel Morse, born 1585, settled at Dedham, 1636, died at Medfield, 1654. Joseph Morse, settled at Ipswich, where he died 1646. Anthony Morse, born at Marlboro, England, 1606, died at Newbury, 1686. William Morse, born 1608, died 1685. Robert and Peter, their brothers, settled and died in New Jersey."

MR. AND MRS. S. M. WHITING

Samuel Phelps Whiting, the father of our subject, conducted a meat market in his native city until coming to Victoria, Illinois, in 1851, with his brother Richard and family. They engaged in mercantile business for two years and at the end of that time Samuel P. Whiting removed to Altona, where he opened a meat market. In addition to that business he also engaged in the raising and shipping of cattle, horses and hogs, becoming one of the leading men engaged in that enterprise in the locality. He disposed of his stock in Peoria, which was the nearest market. His was one of the first frame houses built in Altona and was situated on Main street, opposite the present place of business of Samuel M. Whiting. In 1878 he admitted his son Samuel as a business partner and subsequently purchased and edited for five years Altona's only newspaper —the Altona Journal. He took an active interest in public affairs and was a supporter of the republican party. After a useful and well spent life he passed away in March, 1907. In his family were four children: Samuel M., of this review; Della, the wife of A. H. Miles, a druggist of Des Moines, Iowa; Inez, the wife of A. G. Edwards, a druggist and ex city treasurer of Omaha, Nebraska; and Angie, the wife of Ernest R. Smith, of Palo Alto, California.

Samuel M. Whiting has been engaged in the meat market business since he finished school at the age of fifteen years. In addition to conducting his market he has also bought and shipped cattle to the near-by markets. For one year he ran a restaurant and from 1892 to 1897 he conducted a meat market in Galesburg but then returned to Altona. In his dealings he has maintained the strictest business integrity, realizing that satisfied customers are the best advertisement. He keeps in touch with the trade, knows what the market offers and carries a good line of meats, while his prices are reasonable and his treatment of his patrons always courteous.

Mr. Whiting was married to Miss Ella M. Pierce, of Walnut Grove township whose birth occurred January 5, 1860. She is a daughter of Mathew Pierce, who came to Altona from New York state when very young and is now living retired at Galesburg. To Mr. and Mrs. Whiting four children have been born: Claude N., an electrician, who married Jennie Nelson and is residing in Cairo, Illinois; Harry S., the assistant cashier of the State Bank at Victoria, Illinois, who married Lillian Wenstrom, of Altona, and they have a little daughter, Lucile, born January 11, 1912; Inez, who is engaged in teaching music and is residing at home; and Mathew Pierce, who since his graduation from school has assisted his father in the meat market.

Mr. Whiting is an active and enthusiastic republican and has frequently been elected to office. He has served as village clerk and has four times been elected supervisor, his first election being in 1889. For nine years he served as county committeeman and during that time did much active work in furthering the interests of the republican party. Practically his whole life has been spent in Altona, where he has the distinction of being one of the two oldest business men. He occupies a place of prominence as one of the energetic business men, succeeding in what he undertakes by reason of his forceful character and his strict conformity to modern business methods.

WILLIAM PORTER REED.

William Porter Reed, who is living retired on his farm in Lynn township, Knox county, was born on the 20th of January, 1843, in Memphis, Missouri, his parents being Daniel Porter and Lena (Carter) Reed, whose births occurred in 1818 and 1823 respectively. Daniel P. Reed was a native of Pennsylvania, his mother's death occurring when he was a mere child, and he was reared by her sister. He is living at present and makes his home in California. When he was but seventeen years of age he went to Ohio, but subsequently settled in Stark county. After his marriage he left for Missouri and resided there eight years, farming, but then returned to Stark county where his aunt was residing. He farmed in Illinois for five years before removing to Galva in 1854. He remained there until 1890, when he left for California, in which state he is at present living at the venerable age of ninety-four years. He has always been an active traveler, and at the age of eighty-eight he came to Illinois to visit his children. After remaining with them for a short time he returned to his western home, a remarkable feat for one of his years, showing the virile health and vitality he is now enjoying. He was married to Lena Carter, who was a daughter of William Carter, whose birth occurred near Mansfield, Ohio. She passed away in 1895. To their union nine children were born, five of whom survive: William P., who is the subject of this review; Isaac, who is in the real-estate business in Chicago; Mary, who is married to W. R. Soper, of Galva; Isabell, who is the wife of Dr. Burbank of Santa Cruz, California; and Cora, who married Henry Fropwell, of California.

William P. Reed received a few years' education in the district schools near his father's farm and at the same time was actively engaged assisting his father in the duties on the home property, beginning at the age of nine to handle the plow. He did other heavy labor and attended school for a short time during the winter. In 1861, when he was eighteen years of age, he enlisted at Kewanee, for service in the Civil war with Company H of the Ninth Illinois Cavalry under Captain Bishop. He served for three years in the western army under Sherman. In 1862 he also served under Stephen Curtis through Missouri and Arkansas, and in the winter of 1862-63 continued to Memphis, Tennessee, to take part in the Grierson raid through that state to Louisiana. He was captured in battle at Moscow, Tennessee, and sent to the Alabama prison. Six weeks later he was transferred to Andersonville, where he remained for eight months when he was again transferred, this time being sent to Charleston, South Carolina. During his detention at Andersonville he escaped once but was captured by bloodhounds. An incident worth mentioning which took place during Mr. Reed's venturesome exploits, occurred on his recapture, when within forty miles of Pensacola, Florida, the rebels, to make doubly sure of their captive, had a blacksmith weld irons on his arms and a ball and chain to his ankle. Subsequently he escaped on a log in the river but was betrayed by a negro and was again captured, but finally while on parole at Savannah, Georgia, he escaped and for a month lived by begging. Finally he became acquainted with a Union family, who supplied him with clothing and twenty dollars in money, but he was again captured, and while being transported to prison he jumped from the freight car, joined his army and was sent to New York city. Later he was sent to Annapolis, where he was mustered out and left for home by way of Peoria, Illinois. Later, at Springfield, he was discharged, and almost immediately afterward left for Colorado, where for eighteen months he engaged in cattle herding. At the end of that time he returned to Galva, but after his marriage returned to southern Kansas, where for five years he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until he purchased his present home. When he went to Kansas he was in company with horse and sulky and took up a land claim near Cherryville, where the Osage Indians were their neighbors. He erected the cabin himself and built their log house. The cabin had one half window for light. Two months later his wife followed by way of Kansas City, and remained with her husband on that place for five years. They resided within three miles of the noted Bender family, but Mr. Reed had never heard of them until, while searching for his cattle which had been lost, he met them. This was during the Bender family's noted criminal and murdering career. In 1873 Mr. Reed came to Galva and purchased his father's farm. Two years later he bought the place upon which he is now residing. He has since lived near Galva continuously excepting the year of 1887 when he removed to Galesburg, so that his children might have better educational advantages. All his property has been brought under a high state of cultivation, and under his capable management and, because of his untiring efforts and perseverence, his is one of the most productive properties in this section.

On July 17, 1867, Mr. Reed was married to Miss Mary Ellen Soper, whose birth occurred on the 29th of September, 1848, near Kingston, Illinois, and who is a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Eggleston) Soper, the former a native of New Jersey and the latter of Albany, New York. The mother came from Fulton county with her parents when she was quite young. Joseph Soper was an agriculturist throughout the greater part of his active career, but after disposing of the management of his land, he engaged in the hardware and grocery business at Galva, disposing also of that before his retirement. His death occurred in 1907 when he was eighty years of age and the mother is still living at the age of eighty-one years. Of their five children only two survive, Emma Treloar, of California, and Mrs. Reed.

Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Reed the following are living: Josephine H., who is married to Daniel S. Kelly, of Victoria, Illinois; Jay D., of Iowa, who is married to Retha Van Riper and who is the father of three sons, William, Maurice and Claude; and Daniel Porter, who is residing on the home farm and who is married to Miss Bessie Van Buren, a daughter of John and Luella Van Buren. Mr. Reed is a Mason, holding membership in Lodge No. 330, of Altona, Illinois. He is also a member of the G. A. R. Post, No. 45, of Galesburg. In his agricultural pursuits and subsequently in his business undertakings Mr. Reed displayed the same marked determination to succeed and ability to concentrate his whole efforts upon one undertaking that he displayed while in the war. His one aim has been to succeed and to succeed along lines which are a credit to himself and his community, and to a large degree he has met with that success.

JAMES E. ROBERSON.

James E. Roberson, who owns and operates a fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres on section 18, Indian Point township, was born in the southwestern part of Knox county, on the 7th of January, 1864. His parents, James and Mary (Smith) Roberson, were both born in Kentucky. The paternal grandfather, who was a farmer, died in the Blue Grass state, after which his widow and four sons came to Illinois. They located in Woodford county, this state, in 1834 and two years later came to Knox county, purchasing government land in Indian Point township, that lately was sold for one hundred and twenty dollars per acre. It was there that James Roberson spent the remainder of his life and where his children were born and reared. Mrs. Roberson is still living at the age of seventy and makes her home in Abingdon. Four sons and two daughters were born of this marriage: William, who is the eldest member of the family, now residing in Abingdon; Luna, the wife of Jason Day, a farmer of Iowa; Lida, who married Charles Kendall, of California; James E., our subject; Thomas, who is also a resident of California; and Clarence, who is the youngest member of the family, a carpenter of Abingdon.

The boyhood and youth of James E. Roberson were spent amid the scenes with which his manhood has been familiar, his education having been obtained in the district schools of Indian Point township. He remained on the home farm with his parents until he had attained his maturity, during which time he became thoroughly familiar with the practical methods of agriculture, under the capable supervision and direction of his father. For the past twenty years he has been farming for himself, during which period he has met with a fair measure of success. In 1892, he settled upon the place he now owns, and here he engages in general farming in connection with which he raises cattle, hogs and sheep, making a specialty of breeding and raising a high grade of Poled Angus cattle. His efforts in both lines of the business have been rewarded with very good results and he is regarded as one of the substantial citizens of the township.

The 22d of February, 1893, was the wedding day of Mr. Roberson and Miss Clara Dawdy, a native of this township and a daughter of Warren and Anna (Brown) Dawdy. The father is a native of Knox county, being a son of one of the first settlers, while the mother was born in Ohio. They are both living and continue to make their home on the farm in Indian Point township, where they have resided for many years. Two daughters were born unto them, the one Mrs. Roberson, and the other, Minnie, who became the wife of John Schister and is living on the old Roberson homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberson are members of the Christian church and fraternally he is a member of the Odd Fellows, being identified with Abingdon Lodge, No. 184, I. O. O. F. In matters politic Mr. Roberson gives his support to the democratic party, but does not actively participate in township affairs, although he meets the requirements of good citizenship by casting a ballot on election day. He is one of the highly esteemed citizens of the community, whose excellent judgment and inherent ability has enabled him to be numbered among the prosperous agriculturists of the township.

J. ARTHUR ROUTH.

J. Arthur Routh, for years an electrician in Chicago and other Illinois towns, is now operating a farm near Hermon, on section 19, Chestnut township, Knox county, Illinois, where he was born January 21, 1873. His father, Thompson L. Routh, whose biography appears in this volume, is a native of Clinton county, Ohio, coming to Chestnut township, Knox county, Illinois, in the early fifties when he was three years old. He followed the occupation of his father, engaging in farming which he still pursues in this vicinity with much success. His mother, Mary C. (Leigh) Routh, is a native of Knox county.

J. Arthur Routh received a thorough education in the district schools of his community, at Hedding College, Abingdon, and in the Normal School there, and in the Bushnell Normal College. When twenty-three years old he went to Chicago and secured employment in the General Electric Company's shops. After two years he left Chicago, continuing electrical work at Pontiac, Peoria, Galesburg and Abingdon, covering in all a period of eleven years. In 1907 he settled on the farm on section 19 where he was born. Here he is living at present and operating one hundred and five acres of land which furnish him with a generous income. He also owns four hundred and sixty acres of land in Jackson county, Wisconsin, and a residence in Abingdon. Besides general farming he devotes himself to the raising of thoroughbred Jersey cows, an occupation in which he has been unusually successful.

He was married to Miss Gertrude Robertson in 1900. She is a daughter of William B. and Jennie (Neece) Robertson and is a native of Colchester township, McDonough county, Illinois. Her father was born in Kentucky and her mother in Missouri. They are still residing in Colchester, where Mr. Robertson is engaged in farming and is also a carpenter and contractor. They had four children born to them: Herman C., a dairyman in Colchester; Ora, deceased; Gertrude, the wife of J. Arthur Routh; and a child, who died in infancy. Gertrude (Robertson) Routh was educated in the Colchester schools and at Bushnell Normal College, and then taught school in her home community for four years, when she resigned in order to marry Mr. Routh. She is the mother of two children, Mildred Doris, seven years old, and Howard Aubrey, three years old.

J. Arthur Routh votes with the republicans and has been road overseer for one term. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church in which they are highly esteemed by a large circle of friends.

THOMAS R. P. GOUGH.

Thomas R. P. Gough, who is filling the position of postmaster at Williamsfield, has been a resident of Knox county for twenty-seven years. He was born in Bristol, Somersetshire, England, in 1864, and is a son of R. C. and Frances (Jones) Gough. His parents spent their entire lives in England, of which country the father was a native, but the mother came from Wales.

Reared to the age of twenty years under the parental roof, Thomas R. P. Gough attended a private school in the pursuit of his education. When he had acquired such knowledge as to enable him to undertake life's heavier responsibilities, he laid aside his text-books and learned the carpenter's trade. In common with many other young men America strongly appealed to him as the promised land of opportunities, in which to pursue his career amid conditions somewhat different from those to which he had been born, and 1884 saw him on his way to the United States. He landed in New York city and immediately made his way inland to Illinois, locating in Truro township, Knox county. There he engaged in farm labor, in connection with which he also followed his trade until 1893, when he took a position with C. C. Davis & Company, who are in the grain business. He remained in their employ for eleven years, resigning his position to assume the duties of postmaster, to which office he was appointed on the 1st of October, 1904. He is now serving his eighth year in this capacity, in connection with which he has also done farming.

For his wife Mr. Gough chose Miss Ethel May Tucker, a daughter of Noah N. Tucker, and unto them have been born three children: Ellen Frances, Glen Thomas and Mabel Evelyn.

The religious views of the family are manifested through their affiliation with the Methodist Episcopal church, and fraternally Mr. Gough is a Mason, holding membership in the blue lodge of Princeville and the chapter of Yates City. He also belongs to the Eastern Star of Princeville, and the Woodmen of the World, being identified with the Williamsfield camp. In his political views Mr. Gough is a republican, having given his unqualified indorsement to the principles of this party ever since granted the full rights of citizenship. He has displayed rare efficiency in discharging the responsible duties of his present office, his service having proven highly satisfactory to the community at large. During the long period of his residence in Williamsfield, Mr. Gough has won and retained the friendship of many of the most estimable citizens of the town, as he has always manifested those qualities that invariably win respect in both his public and private life.

N. N. TUCKER.

N. N. Tucker is the owner of a very attractive homestead of twenty acres located a half mile southeast of Williamsfield, where he is now living retired. For many years he was successfully engaged in general farming and stock-raising in Knox county, the proceeds realized from his business being largely invested in real estate in the county and he now owns three hundred and twelve acres of farming land in Truro township.

He was born on a farm located a half mile from his present residence, November 18, 1858, and is a son of Samuel and Mary (Mundy) Tucker. The father passed away in May, 1893, at the age of seventy-one years, but the mother is still living and now resides in Williamsfield. Samuel Tucker was born in Ashland, Ohio, in October, 1822, the first twelve years of his life being spent on his father's farm in his native state. In 1834 the family removed to Illinois, settling in Brimfield township, Peoria county, where he resided for fourteen years. At the expiration of that time he came to Knox county, locating in Elba township, but at the end of six years removed to Truro township, taking up his residence on a farm a half mile south of Williamsfield. There he passed away, being at that time the most extensive landowner in the township. The mother is a daughter of one of Knox county's pioneer settlers, and represents the third generation of her family in the county. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Tucker there were born eleven children, seven of whom are living, as follows: J. J., who is a resident of Courtland, Kansas; L. V., who lives in Galesburg; Elizabeth, who married A. D. Moon, living on a farm south of N. N. Tucker; N. N., our subject; Sarah, the wife of C. H. Eastman, of Galesburg; Mary Evelyn, who married Dr. Ben D. Baird, of Galesburg; and Eugene, who lives at Knoxville.

As he was reared in the country N. N. Tucker attended the district schools, and while mastering the common branches, he was acquiring a practical knowledge of agriculture by assisting his father with the work of the farm. After leaving school he remained on the home place for several years, devoting his entire time and attention to the work of the fields and care of the stock, thus laying the foundation for a successful agricultural career. He has been very fortunate in his undertakings, having met with more than an average degree of prosperity, and now owns, in addition to the place where he is living, a farm containing one hundred and thirty-two acres, located east of his homestead, and one hundred and sixty acres on section 36. Determination of purpose and unceasing industry have been prominent factors in the success of Mr. Tucker, who has at all times manifested clear judgment and good business sagacity in the direction of his activities. He located on the place where he is living at the present eighteen years ago, and during the greater portion of that time engaged in general farming and stock-raising but is now living retired, having acquired a competence that, together with the income from his different properties, provides him with all of the comforts of life.

For his wife and helpmate Mr. Tucker chose Miss Ellen Jordan of Truro township, and unto them were born four children: Ethel, the wife of T. R. P. Gough; Rilla, who married Fred Hurlburt, a farmer of Truro township; Leonard, who married Nora Stodgel and is now a resident of Williamsfield; and Lola, who is still at home.

Fraternally Mr. Tucker is affiliated with the Masonic order, and his political support he gives to the republican party. He is a public-spirited, progressive man and has always taken an active interest in all township affairs, and for eighteen years served as road commissioner, while for thirteen years he was justice of the peace. The ability with which he discharged the duties of both offices is attested by the length of his terms. The entire life of Mr. Tucker has been spent in the immediate vicinity of his present home, where he enjoys a favorable acquaintance and has a large circle of friends, many of whom were the comrades of his youth and the playmates of his childhood.

WALTER N. DIKEMAN.

Walter N. Dikeman, who far twenty-five years has been engaged in general farming six and a half miles southeast of Maquon, is a native of Illinois. His birth occurred in Fulton county, July 14, 1853, his parents being Cornelius and Lydia (Douglass) Dikeman, both natives of the state of New York, where they were also reared and married. During the early years of their domestic life they came west, settling in Fulton county, where they spent the remainder of their lives with the exception of one year when they resided in Minnesota. Farming always engaged the energies of Mr. Dikeman, who with his wife and family endured all of the hardships of pioneering during the early days, in order to bring the wild land upon which they located into a state of productivity. Two of the children born of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Dikeman lived to attain maturity, the one beside our subject being James, a retired farmer of Fulton county, who married Emerlis Bodkins.

WALTER N. DIKEMAN

FOUR GENERATIONS OF THE DIKEMAN FAMILY

As he was reared in the country N. N. Tucker attended the district schools, and while mastering the common branches, he was acquiring a practical knowledge of agriculture by assisting his father with the work of the farm. After leaving school he remained on the home place for several years, devoting his entire time and attention to the work of the fields and care of the stock, thus laying the foundation for a successful agricultural career. He has been very fortunate in his undertakings, having met with more than an average degree of prosperity, and now owns, in addition to the place where he is living, a farm containing one hundred and thirty-two acres, located east of his homestead, and one hundred and sixty acres on section 36. Determination of purpose and unceasing industry have been prominent factors in the success of Mr. Tucker, who has at all times manifested clear judgment and good business sagacity in the direction of his activities. He located on the place where he is living at the present eighteen years ago, and during the greater portion of that time engaged in general farming and stock-raising but is now living retired, having acquired a competence that, together with the income from his different properties, provides him with all of the comforts of life.

For his wife and helpmate Mr. Tucker chose Miss Ellen Jordan of Truro township, and unto them were born four children: Ethel, the wife of T. R. P. Gough; Rilla, who married Fred Hurlburt, a farmer of Truro township; Leonard, who married Nora Stodgel and is now a resident of Williamsfield; and Lola, who is still at home.

Fraternally Mr. Tucker is affiliated with the Masonic order, and his political support he gives to the republican party. He is a public-spirited, progressive man and has always taken an active interest in all township affairs, and for eighteen years served as road commissioner, while for thirteen years he was justice of the peace. The ability with which he discharged the duties of both offices is attested by the length of his terms. The entire life of Mr. Tucker has been spent in the immediate vicinity of his present home, where he enjoys a favorable acquaintance and has a large circle of friends, many of whom were the comrades of his youth and the playmates of his childhood.

WALTER N. DIKEMAN.

Walter N. Dikeman, who far twenty-five years has been engaged in general farming six and a half miles southeast of Maquon, is a native of Illinois. His birth occurred in Fulton county, July 14, 1853, his parents being Cornelius and Lydia (Douglass) Dikeman, both natives of the state of New York, where they were also reared and married. During the early years of their domestic life they came west, settling in Fulton county, where they spent the remainder of their lives with the exception of one year when they resided in Minnesota. Farming always engaged the energies of Mr. Dikeman, who with his wife and family endured all of the hardships of pioneering during the early days, in order to bring the wild land upon which they located into a state of productivity. Two of the children born of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Dikeman lived to attain maturity, the one beside our subject being James, a retired farmer of Fulton county, who married Emerlis Bodkins.

WALTER N. DIKEMAN

FOUR GENERATIONS OF THE DIKEMAN FAMILY

Reared on the farm, where he was born, Walter N. Dikeman's educational advantages were confined to what the district schools in the vicinity afforded. As the country was new and but sparsely settled, the schools were primitive and offered but little opportunity to acquire more than a thorough practical knowledge of the common branches. After laying aside his text-books, his entire attention was devoted to the cultivation of the home farm, during a period of about three years. He then left the parental roof and began his independent career as a farmer and for two years thereafter leased land at different places. After the death of his parents he returned to the old homestead, which he operated for five years. Disposing of his interest in this at the expiration of that time he came to Knox county and in 1886 settled upon the place where he has ever since resided. Mr. Dikeman has effected extensive improvements on this place during the period of his residence, having erected substantial buildings and made many other changes of a minor but telling nature. He owns five hundred and fifty-two acres of land, one hundred and fifty of which he is renting to his son. The remainder he devotes to general farming and stock-raising, in both of which pursuits he has met with a most gratifying degree of success. He is a man of energy, whose foresight and clear judgment as well as practical ideas have been the secret means of his attaining his present state of prosperity. He has always given his personal supervision to the plowing, planting and harvesting of his crops as well as the care of his stock, and that his efforts have been amply rewarded is attested by his present circumstances.

Mr. Dikeman chose for his wife Miss Roletta B. Stiarwalt, a daughter of George Montroville Stiarwalt, of Ohio. Of this marriage there have been born five children. Rosa Belle, the eldest, married W. D. McCoy and has three children, Merle Marie, William Earle, and Walter Dennis. Earle, who is operating part of his father's farm, married Maude Ryer and has two children, Bernice Irene and Norma Maude. Jessie Fay, the third in order of birth, married N. J. Nelson. The two youngest children, Walter and Loretta Pearl, are both living at home.

In his political views Mr. Dikeman is a republican, but he has never taken an active part in township matters of a governmental nature, his energies being bent upon the development of his varied interests in which he has met with well merited success.

JAMES A. SHAFFER.

A prominent and highly successful agriculturist of Truro township was the late James A. Shaffer, who passed away February 1, 1890. He was born in Clinton county, Pennsylvania, on the 15th of April, 1841, a son of Benjamin B. Shaffer, a farmer, who removed from the Keystone state to Illinois in 1856, locating in Knox county, where he passed the remainder of his life.

James A. Shaffer was reared in his native state to the age of fifteen years, attending the public schools in the acquirement of his education. From early boyhood he was trained in agricultural pursuits and naturally when he was ready to begin working for himself chose the vocation to which he was best adapted. In whatever he undertook he would have succeeded, being a man of enterprise and industry and much determination of purpose. He was practical in his ideas, progressive in his methods and always directed his undertakings with foresight and intelligence. At the time of his death he owned between four hundred and fifty and five hundred acres of land in this township, all of which was under high cultivation. A portion of this had been the old family homestead, and during the long period of his occupancy Mr. Shaffer effected many improvements in the property. He made a careful study of the soil, planting his fields to such cereals as he deemed best adapted to it. In connection with general farming he also engaged in stock-raising, both undertakings proving lucrative under his capable supervision. He was only forty-seven years of age when he passed away, and was actively engaged in the operation of his farm, three hundred and twenty acres of which is now being cultivated by his son, Benjamin.

For his wife and helpmate Mr. Shaffer chose Miss Louisa J. Oberholtzer, and they became the parents of six children. Vesper, who is the eldest of the family, graduated from the Women's Medical College of the Northwestern University in Chicago, and is now engaged in the practice of her profession in that city. Joseph O., who is a farmer living in Canada, married Ella Grimm and they have four children: Hortense; Lester, who is deceased; Vesper; and Helen. Benjamin B., who is the second son, is engaged in the operation of the old homestead. He married Mary E. Fitzgerald of Chicago. Celesta married Walter Potts, a farmer of this township, by whom she has had four children: Harold H., who is deceased; Willis J.; and Lester B. and Letta Bell, who are twins. Letta became the wife of Fred M. Brown and they are living on a farm in South Dakota. James A., who is the youngest member of the family, is living at home.

Mr. Shaffer was a public-spirited man and took a deep interest in all township affairs, giving his support to the men and measures of the democratic party. He had high standards of citizenship and always discharged his share of public duties faithfully, having filled various offices of the township. A man of upright principles and unquestionable integrity, loyal to his friends and true to every trust reposed in him, he was held in high esteem by all who knew him, his death being occasion for deep and widespread regret throughout the community.

OSBORN T. ROBERTS.

Osborn T. Roberts, who is engaging in general farming on section 26, Cedar township, Knox county, has by means of his businesslike methods and intelligent direction become recognized as one of the capable and highly successful agriculturists of the community.

Mr. Roberts was born on a farm in Mercer county, Illinois, on the 11th of January, 1869, his parents being Obed and Mary Ottilla (Peterson) Roberts. His father was a native of Mercer county, Pennsylvania, his birth having there occurred on the 28th of February, 1845. When a lad of eight years he removed to the west with his parents who located in Mercer county, where Mr. Roberts later engaged in farming for some time. About twenty years ago he went to Henry county, this state, where he acquired a farm in the cultivation of which he engaged until his death on the 27th of May, 1911. The mother, who was born in Ohio sixty-three years ago, is still living on the old homestead in Henry county. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts there were born nine children, of whom our subject is the eldest, the others being as follows: Nellie, who is deceased; Frank, who is living in Henry county, Illinois; Bessie, who is living at home; Mabel R., the wife of F. E. Anderson, Cedar township, Knox county; George W., who is a resident of Mercer county, Illinois; Grace, the wife of T. S. Briggs, also of Mercer county; Arthur C., who is at home; and Benjamin H., who is deceased.

The boyhood and youth of Osborn T. Roberts were spent on his father's farms in Mercer and Henry counties, in the common schools of which he obtained his education. At the age of twenty-four years he withdrew from agricultural pursuits, to which he had devoted his energies ever since his early boyhood, and engaged in the hardware business in Alpha, Illinois. After spending six years in commercial activities, he decided that the life of a farmer was more independent and afforded greater possibilities, and therefore disposed of his business and came to Knox county, where he has ever since resided. He owns one hundred and nine acres of land, which by means of intensive application and capable supervision he has brought to a high state of cultivation. He has always taken great pride in his homestead and during the period of his residence has wrought many and extensive improvements, making it not only one of the attractive but valuable properties of that district.

In 1893 Mr. Roberts was united in marriage to Miss Emily Anderson, whose birth occurred in Henry county, Illinois, on the 7th of November, 1868. Mrs. Roberts is a daughter of the late Nels P. and Louisa Charlotte (Anderson) Anderson, both natives of Sweden. The father, who was a cabinet-maker, emigrated to the United States when a boy. For many years he followed his trade in Galesburg, this state, but the greater part of his life was spent in Henry county, where he passed away about nine years ago. The mother was also reared in America, having come to this country when a little girl and early locating in Illinois, where she was living at the time of her demise in 1898. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson there were born seven children: Ida, who is deceased; Emily, now Mrs. Roberts; Albert, who is a resident of New Windsor, Illinois; one who died in infancy; Frank, who is living in Knox county; and the two eldest, both of whom died in infancy. Mrs. Roberts, who is a woman of rare charm and culture, obtained her early education in the common schools of Knox county, after the completion of which she attended Knox College at Galesburg. Later she studied music and German at Hedding College, Abingdon, while she took a course in painting while living at home. Having decided to devote her attention to teaching, she subsequently pursued a professional course in the normal school at Geneseo, Illinois, and for twelve years taught in a school near Windsor, this state. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts numbers six, all of whom are still at home: Earl F., Dole N., Keene O., June L., Nellie O. and Glenn O.

The religious belief of the family is manifested through their membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, while Mr. Roberts' fraternal connections are with the Masonic order of Abingdon and the Modern Woodmen of America of Alpha, Illinois. During his earlier years he gave his political support to the democratic party, but he now votes the straight republican ticket. He belongs to the progressive and modern class of agriculturists, who recognize the necessity of applying to their work the same principles and methods as pursued by the business man of any other field, and as a result he is meeting with substantial success.

SALVADOR HUNTLEY RYAN.

Although one of the more recent additions to the business circles of St. Augustine, Salvador Huntley Ryan has, however, for many years been actively identified with mercantile interests in Knox county and in the meantime has gained for himself recognition as an enterprising, progressive and successful business man. He is one of Illinois's native sons, his birth having occurred in Pontoosuc on the 29th of April, 1857, his parents being Adam H. and Nancy (Aldredge) Ryan. The mother was born in Mount Vernon, Indiana, and the father in Kentucky, and in the latter state they began their domestic life, Mr. Ryan there giving his attention to general farming. In 1848, however, he brought his little family, then consisting of wife and two children, to Illinois, and here he continued his operations in the field of agriculture, engaging in that line of activity until the outbreak of the Mexican war, when he enlisted and served throughout the period of hostilities. He participated in many engagements and in the battle of Cerro Gordo suffered the loss of one arm. His son, L. T. Ryan, served throughout the Civil war. Following its close, in 1867, Adam H. Ryan went to Missouri to live, and there his remaining days were passed, his death occurring on the 1st of March, 1892. His wife survived until the 2d of March, 1904, passing away at the home of her son Huntley. After the arrival of the family in Illinois five children were added to the household, but of the family of seven children only two are now living, a brother of our subject, Andrew W. Ryan, now making his home in Oklahoma.

In the schools of Victoria township, Knox county, Salvador Huntley Ryan acquired a good education and after its completion he turned his attention to farming as an occupation, being therein engaged in Victoria township until thirty years of age. Thinking, however, to find in mercantile pursuits a more congenial field of labor he removed to the town of Victoria and for one year was there engaged in general merchandising. He then took up his abode in Williamsfield, Knox county, and continued in that line of business, there remaining for thirteen years. In 1909 he arrived in St. Augustine and since then has occupied a prominent place in the business circles of the town as the proprietor of a general store. Long experience in that avenue of activity has proven to him that satisfied customers are the best advertisement and accordingly he carries a stock of goods which is well adapted to meet the demands of his patrons. The nature of his business policy, too, has begotten the confidence of the general public, and the business transacted over the counters of his house is constantly increasing in importance and volume.

Mr. Ryan was married, in Galesburg, Illinois, on the 3d of February, 1876, to Miss Margaret Ericson, who was born in Manitowoc, Wisconsin, in April, 1854. Her parents, who were both natives of Sweden, came to the United States at an early day, locating in Wisconsin. There the mother died and later the father came to Knox county, Illinois, where he engaged in general farming until his death. By her marriage to Mr. Ryan their daughter became the mother of three children, as follows: Elmer M., a resident of Galesburg, who married Miss Myrtle Breece, of Dahinda, Illinois; B. Doris; and Edna S., the wife of John Rush, of Galesburg, and the mother of one son, John. Mrs. Ryan passed away on the 27th of December, 1898, and on the 18th of February, 1901, in Galesburg, Mr. Ryan was again married, his second union being with Miss Margaret Brennan, who was born in Abingdon on the 25th of November, 1862. Her parents, Thomas and Alice Brennan, were natives of Ireland, where the father engaged in railroading. He came to Knox county, Illinois, at an early day, locating at Abingdon, where he made his home for several years, after which he removed to Galesburg and there resided until his death. The mother survives him. Unto the second marriage of Mr. Ryan there has been born one child, Grace G.

Mr. Ryan's religious belief is that of the Methodist church while fraternally he is connected with the Knights of Pythias at Williamsfield, and also with Williamsfield Lodge, No. 779, I. O. O. F., having passed through all of the chairs in both bodies. He has taken an active part in republican circles in Knox county, serving as town clerk and treasurer of Williamsfield, and is now serving on the village board of St. Augustine, while at the same time he is acting as a member of the school board of St. Augustine. He takes a keen interest in the various phases of public life, doing all in his power to further the welfare of the community along material, intellectual and moral lines, and is ranked among the influential and representative citizens of the locality.

WILLIAM M. WELSH.

William M. Welsh, who is engaged in general farming and stock-raising in Truro township, is a worthy representative of a family that has long figured prominently in the agricultural annals of Knox county. His birth occurred on the old homestead in the vicinity of Maquon on the 24th of December, 1852, his parents being Michael and Kathrin Welsh, who are mentioned at greater length elsewhere in this work.

Reared on the farm in the acquirement of his education, William M. Welsh attended the district schools. He passed the early years of his life as did the other lads of the community at that period. When not engaged with his lessons he was largely occupied in discharging the tasks assigned by parental authority, while his leisure hours were devoted to such pastimes and sports as were appropriate to the season. He remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-eight years of age, assisting in the operation of the farm. Being in every way qualified to begin his independent agricultural career, in 1880 he bought eighty acres of land on section 21 of this township, upon which he settled. He applied himself assiduously to its cultivation, directing his energies with such foresight and intelligence that he met with good financial returns. As his circumstances justified, he added to his holdings at various times until he now owns two hundred and eighty-three acres on section 21, forty acres on section 15, and twenty on section 16. During the long period of his ownership he has made many improvements on his place, including the erection of large, substantial barns and outbuildings and the addition of many modern conveniences consistent with the spirit of progress that has ever characterized his undertakings. Mr. Welsh gives all of his attention to the plowing, sowing and harvesting of his fields, and annually realizes a handsome dividend on his season's labor. In connection with general farming he devotes much attention to the raising of stock of a good grade, and this also has proven to be very lucrative. System and method always distinguish his undertakings, and as he is very energetic and possesses an abundance of determination he is prospering in his business enterprises. His property is given careful supervision; the barns, fences, out-buildings and residence are kept in good repair, the fields are well tilled and the grounds are neat and tastefully arranged. Everything about the place indicates the capable management and thrift that invariably accompany success.

For his wife Mr. Welsh chose Miss Mary Murphy, a daughter of John and Bridget Murphy, farming people of this section, who emigrated from Ireland to the United States in 1876, locating in Peoria county. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Welsh, as follows: Michael Mc., who is attending school at Normal, Illinois; J. E., who is employed on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad at Galesburg; William L., who is farming, and married Wilma Kern, of Peoria; James Wendell, who is assisting with the home farm; and Catherine E., who died at the age of six months.

The family are all communicants of the Roman Catholic church, and fraternally Mr. Welsh belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. His political allegiance he gives to the democratic party, considering that their principles are best adapted to subserve the interests of the nation in its entirety. He has always taken an active and helpful interest in all township affairs, and for twenty years has been a school director, and he has also served as assessor. Mr. Welsh is one of the estimable citizens of the community and is proud of the fact that he was born and raised in Knox county, where he has ever since lived. His prosperity is the well merited reward of industry and constant application in the direction of his activities.

DANIEL BURNAUGH.

Daniel Burnaugh, now living retired in St. Augustine, was for many years closely identified with the material upbuilding and development of this town as carpenter and contractor, and many of the substantial structures not only of this community but of the surrounding district are monuments to the skill and handiwork of this venerable octogenarian. One of Ohio's native sons, he was born in Clermont county, on the 13th of August, 1830, his parents being John and Sarah (Oswald) Burnaugh. The father, who was of French descent, was born in Clermont county, Ohio, while the mother, of German lineage, claimed Pennsylvania as the state of her nativity. The family had long been established in Ohio, the grandfather of our subject, Carey Burnaugh, having removed to that state from Virginia at a time when Indians still inhabited that region. There John Burnaugh was reared and married and there followed the occupation of a builder and contractor throughout most of his life time. His wife also passed away in Ohio. Of their family ten children grew to maturity.

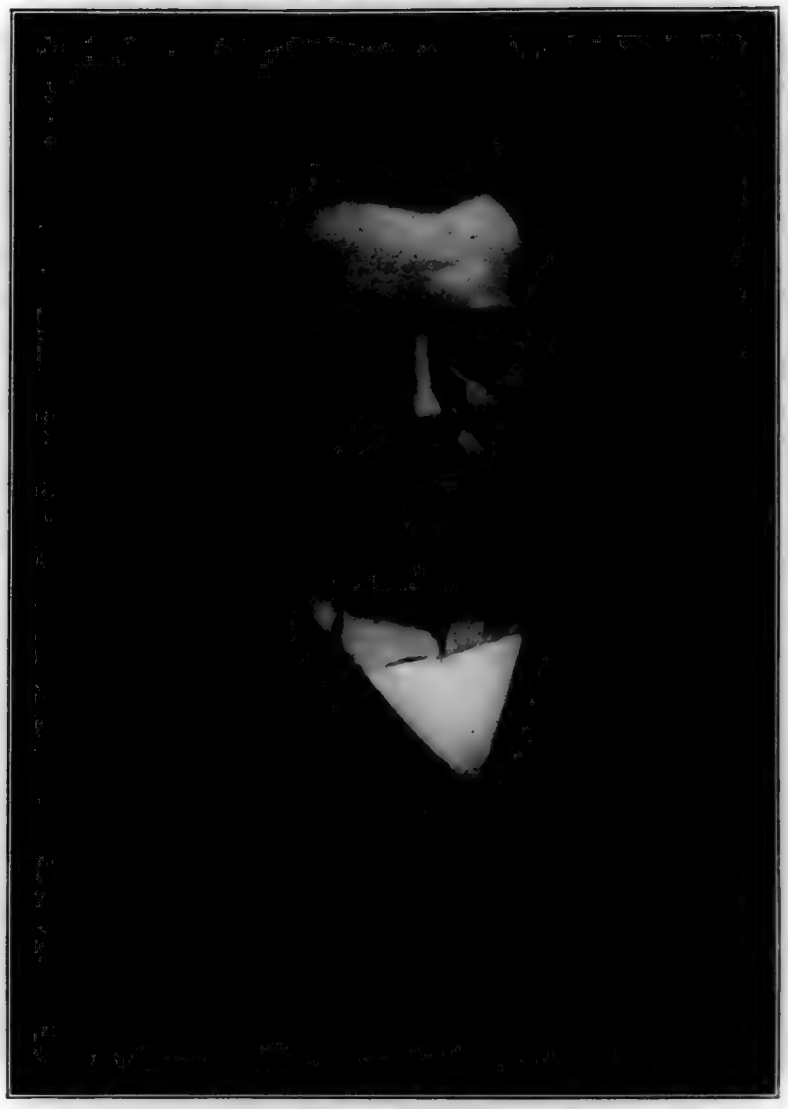
The educational privileges which Daniel Burnaugh received during the period of his youth were those of the common schools of Clermont county, Ohio, and when yet a lad in years, he learned the carpenter's trade under the direction of his father, whom he assisted prior to leaving his native state. In early manhood, however, he came to Illinois, arriving in Knox county in 1856, and for a year thereafter he made his home with an uncle, Joseph Burnaugh, near Abingdon. In 1857 he came to St. Augustine and here he has since resided with the exception of one year spent in Kansas and a similar period in Michigan City, Indiana. Upon his arrival in St. Augustine he purchased his present home and at once began business as a carpenter and contractor, in which field of labor he continued throughout his active career. He is a skilful workman, who added to his mechanical ability modern ideas and progressive methods, and it was not long before he had gained for himself a reputation which won for him a large and remunerative patronage. He built many of the residences, schools, churches and other structures not only of his home town but also of Abingdon, Galesburg and the surrounding country, and for many years has been one of the well known and representative business men of St. Augustine. He is still active today, and is living in the enjoyment of a competency which is the merited reward of a well spent and busy life.

Mr. Burnaugh was united in marriage in Knoxville, Illinois, on the 17th of December, 1856, to Miss Lucinda Dorman, who was born in the state of Indiana in June, 1838, a daughter of Henry and Sarah (Hendricks) Dorman, natives of Maryland and North Carolina respectively. The father, a farmer by occupation, removed to Tennessee in early life and later removed to Indiana, where he carried on agricultural pursuits for some time. He came to Illinois at an early period in its development, locating in Knox county, and here carried on general farming until his demise, his wife also passing away in this county. In their family were nine children, five daughters and four sons, but only three are now living. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Burnaugh were born four children, of whom two have passed away. The elder surviving child, John, is married and resides in Galesburg. He has two children, Gertrude, the wife of Orlie Alan, residing near Abingdon, by whom she has three children, Russell, Esteline and Ormand; and Juanita, living at home. Lillie Burnaugh became the wife of Henry Mason and they now make their home near Greenbush, Illinois.



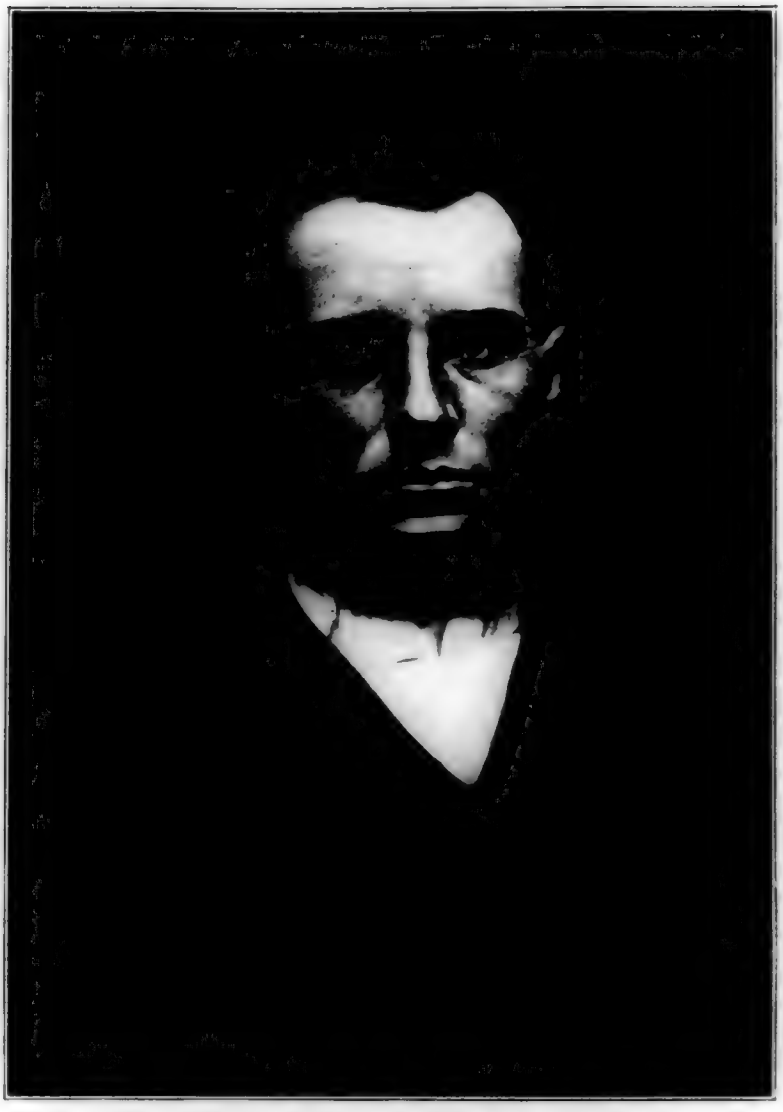
Mr. and Mrs. Burnaugh hold membership in the Christian church, the teachings of which have ever formed the guiding influences in their lives. His identification with the Masonic order covers a period of more than a half century, dating from the year 1854, and he is now one of the oldest members of that organization in the state, belonging to Avon Lodge, No. 253, A. F. & A. M..

Since 1857, or for a period covering more than fifty-four years, he has resided in this present home, and in the meantime has been an interested witness of the many changes which have been instituted for the advancement of this section, and in this work of progress and improvement he has taken an active part, his well directed efforts not only resulting in substantial individual success but also proving potent elements in the upbuilding of this district. Few have taken a more active interest in the material growth of the community, and St. Augustine numbers him among its loyal-spirited, representative and valued citizens.

FRANK LAPHAM.

Frank Lapham is the owner of one hundred and seventeen acres of land on sections 18 and 21 of Victoria township, where he engages in general farming and stock-raising. He is a native of Truro township, Knox county, the eldest child born of the marriage of Edward W. and Nettie (Mosher) Lapham. The father was born and reared in Ohio, whence he, in his early manhood, came to Knox county with his parents. Here he met and subsequently married Miss Mosher, a daughter of Joseph and Mehitabel (Hubble) Mosher. After marriage they located in Truro township on the farm now owned by John Hart. When the call came for troops in the early days of the Civil war, Edward W. Lapham responded by enlisting as a private in the Fifty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was killed at Nashville, Tennessee. He left a widow and four children, two sons and two daughters, those beside our subject being as follows: Ellen, the wife of T. W. Ray; Allen L., now deceased, who is buried in the cemetery at Victoria; and Love, the wife of G. W. Parker, who lives in Wyoming. The mother later married E. M. Sweeney, who was born and reared in Victoria township. They resided for a number of years in Truro township, but he later withdrew from farming and went to Galesburg and engaged in the insurance business. They had two children: Dow, who is living in Wyoming; and Susie, who is a resident of Galesburg.

Agricultural pursuits have engaged the attention of Frank Lapham from his earliest boyhood. Reared on the farm where he was born his early energies were directed toward the cultivation of the fields that had been tilled by both his father and grandfather. Here he received his training in general farming and stock-raising and after his marriage located on the place where he now lives. When he first came here only about one-half of the land was under cultivation, but he immediately set about clearing the remainder and now has it all under cultivation. During the period of his ownership he has erected practically all of the buildings now standing and has wrought various other improvements. He has good barns and outbuildings and a comfortable residence on his place, and it is well provided with all modern implements and appliances deemed essential to the successful pursuit of agriculture. Mr. Lapham devotes his fields to such cereals as are best adapted to the soil and is annually rewarded with abundant harvests, but as he makes a specialty of stock-raising he feeds the greater part of the grain he raises. He is a capable business man and competent agriculturist, who uses intel-



EDWARD W. LAPHAM

Since 1857, or for a period covering more than fifty-four years, he has resided in this present home, and in the meantime has been an interested witness of the many changes which have been instituted for the advancement of this section, and in this work of progress and improvement he has taken an active part, his well directed efforts not only resulting in substantial individual success but also proving potent elements in the upbuilding of this district. Few have taken a more active interest in the material growth of the community, and St. Augustine numbers him among its loyal-spirited, representative and valued citizens.

FRANK LAPHAM.

Frank Lapham is the owner of one hundred and seventeen acres of land on sections 18 and 21 of Victoria township, where he engages in general farming and stock-raising. He is a native of Truro township, Knox county, the eldest child born of the marriage of Edward W. and Nettie (Mosher) Lapham. The father was born and reared in Ohio, whence he, in his early manhood, came to Knox county with his parents. Here he met and subsequently married Miss Mosher, a daughter of Joseph and Mehitabel (Hubble) Mosher. After marriage they located in Truro township on the farm now owned by John Hart. When the call came for troops in the early days of the Civil war, Edward W. Lapham responded by enlisting as a private in the Fifty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was killed at Nashville, Tennessee. He left a widow and four children, two sons and two daughters, those beside our subject being as follows: Ellen, the wife of T. W. Ray; Allen L., now deceased, who is buried in the cemetery at Victoria; and Love, the wife of G. W. Parker, who lives in Wyoming. The mother later married E. M. Sweeney, who was born and reared in Victoria township. They resided for a number of years in Truro township, but he later withdrew from farming and went to Galesburg and engaged in the insurance business. They had two children: Dow, who is living in Wyoming; and Susie, who is a resident of Galesburg.

Agricultural pursuits have engaged the attention of Frank Lapham from his earliest boyhood. Reared on the farm where he was born his early energies were directed toward the cultivation of the fields that had been tilled by both his father and grandfather. Here he received his training in general farming and stock-raising and after his marriage located on the place where he now lives. When he first came here only about one-half of the land was under cultivation, but he immediately set about clearing the remainder and now has it all under cultivation. During the period of his ownership he has erected practically all of the buildings now standing and has wrought various other improvements. He has good barns and outbuildings and a comfortable residence on his place, and it is well provided with all modern implements and appliances deemed essential to the successful pursuit of agriculture. Mr. Lapham devotes his fields to such cereals as are best adapted to the soil and is annually rewarded with abundant harvests, but as he makes a specialty of stock-raising he feeds the greater part of the grain he raises. He is a capable business man and competent agriculturist, who uses intelligence and sagacity in the direction of his undertakings and is meeting with more than an average degree of success.

EDWARD W. LAPHAM

Mr. Lapham has been greatly assisted in his endeavors by the capable management of the household affairs by his wife, whose maiden name was Miss Addie Ray. She is a daughter of Lorenzo and Mary (Sweeney) Ray, and was born and reared in Victoria township, where she has passed the greater part of her life. Her parents were natives of Ohio, whence they came to Knox county in a wagon with an ox team in the pioneer days. Her maternal grandfather, Miles Sweeney, here acquired forty acres of land that he diligently cultivated until his death from cholera. This property is now owned by his grandson, Mrs. Lapham's youngest brother, Clarence Ray. Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Ray were married in Victoria township, and here were born their five children, in the following order: William, who lives in Victoria township; T. W., in Truro township; a daughter, who died at the age of four years; Addie, now Mrs. Lapham; and Clarence, who lives north of the Lapham farm in Victoria township. Mr. Ray was for many years engaged in the operation of eighty acres of land in Victoria township, and there he passed away at the age of fifty-six years. The mother had passed the seventy-second milestone on life's journey at the time of her death. Mr. and Mrs. Lapham have had five children, all of whom were born in this township. In order of birth they are as follows: Edward, who died at the age of twenty-six years and is buried in Victoria township; Cecil, who is still at home; Ella, the wife of Fred Naslund, of Victoria township; Leroy, who is also at home; and Verne, who died when only eighteen months of age and is buried in the family lot in Victoria cemetery.

Ever since he began voting Mr. Lapham has been loyal to the political principles of the republican party, the policy of which he deems most conducive to good government. He served for several years as a school director and as assessor for one term. Fraternally he is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America, and he is one of the stockholders of the Mutual Telephone Company. Mr. Lapham is one of the estimable citizens of Victoria township, where he is widely known and highly regarded both by reason of his business qualifications and his high standards of life.

H. J. BENNETT.

H. J. Bennett, who for twenty years was identified with the commercial activities of Williamsfield, was born in Peoria county, this state, on the 15th of January, 1865, and is a son of William J. and Catherine (Slygh) Bennett. The father, who was a physician, was born in England, and came to Illinois from New York city, while the mother was a native of Virginia, whence she was brought in early childhood to this state. Dr. Bennett located at Elmore upon his arrival in Peoria county, and there he resided until his death, which occurred at the age of thirty-four years. He was married twice but his first wife only lived a short time. One son was born of this union, William J., who is a resident of Bonanza, Colorado, where he has extensive mining interests. To Dr. Bennett and his second wife there were born four children: Emma, who is the deceased wife of J. P. McCauley, of Elmore; May, who married F. P. Bertschy, who is auditor of the Woodmen of the World, of Denver, Colorado; J. S., who is a resident of Marinette, Wisconsin, where he engages in the music and jewelry business; and H. J., our subject.

In the acquirement of his education H. J. Bennett attended the common schools of his native county until he had obtained sufficient knowledge to enable him to earn his own living, when he laid aside his text-books and turned his attention to farming. After following agricultural pursuits for a few years he went to Elmore, where he established a meat market in 1886 that he operated for three years. Disposing of this at the end of that time he came to Williamsfield and engaged in the same business until 1910. In the latter year Mr. Bennett withdrew from commercial activities and has ever since engaged in buying and feeding cattle and hogs.

Mr. Bennett married Miss Emma E. Freed of Peoria county, a daughter of August Freed, and they became the parents of nine children, six of whom are living: Paul, Elton, Maud, Harry, Gladys, and Juanita. Those deceased are as follows: Geneva, Genevieve and Claire. The oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett, Maud, was married October 23, 1909, to Earl T. Main, the son of Charles Main and a member of one of the most prominent families of Knox county. Mr. Main, who was the cashier of the First State Bank of Williamsfield, was killed in a railroad accident on the Rock Island road on March 21, 1910. One child was born to this union. Mrs. Main is a lady of refinement and very popular in social circles in Williamsfield, where she has a fine home.

Fraternally Mr. Bennett is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, and in his political views he is a democrat, and has several times been called to public office. He was president of the village for four years and he has also discharged the duties of town clerk. He met with success in the conduct of his business and has acquired some property interests, owning one hundred and sixty acres of land in the west. Mr. Bennett is one of the estimable citizens of Williamsfield, where he has resided for more than twenty years, and has many friends.

JAMES C. STEPHENSON.

James C. Stephenson carries on general farming in Copley township on what is now the old Stephenson homestead and here he was born on the 23d of January, 1870, his parents being James and Mary Ann (Leighton) Stephenson. His youthful experiences were those that fall to the lot of most farm lads who divide their time between the work of the schoolroom, the pleasures of the playground and the development of the fields. When not busy with his textbooks his time was given to the work of the farm and all through his life he has remained upon the place which is still his home and has carefully tilled his fields and developed and improved his property until it is today one of the valuable tracts of land in his district. The methods which he follows are at once practical and progressive and in the cultivation of the cereals best adapted to climatic conditions here he has won substantial success.

On the 1st of May, 1901, occurred the marriage of Mr. Stephenson and Miss Clara Bell Johnson, who was born in Concord, Morgan county, Illinois, February 9, 1871, and is a representative of one of the pioneer families of that county, her great-grandparents being Reuben and Sarah Johnson, who were among the first settlers and were from Kentucky and Tennessee respectively. They located in Morgan county before there were any churches, and religious services were often held in Mr. Johnson's house by the Rev. Peter Cartwright and the Rev. Ben Newman, who were circuit riders of that day, and were brothers-in-law of Mrs. Stephenson's grandparents. Mrs. Stephenson is a daughter of Elbert H. Johnson, whose birth occurred August 6, 1847, on what is known as the old Johnson farm in Morgan county. There her father lived up to the time of his removal to a farm two miles east, which he continued to cultivate for five years. He afterward spent a similar period in Virginia, Illinois, and then engaged in farming in the vicinity of Jacksonville but eventually lived retired. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and his many excellent traits of character won for him the regard and good-will of those with whom he came in contact. In 1869 he married Deborah Ann Leeper, who was born December 18, 1842, near Cincinnati, Ohio. Her father, John Leeper, was a native of the north of Ireland and came with his family in childhood to America, arriving in Cincinnati in the early '30s. He afterward lived in Brown county, Illinois, where he carried on farming throughout the greater part of his life, his death occurring in 1889. He had married Margaret Harrington, who was a daughter of John Harrington, and passed away in 1901 at the age of eighty-seven years. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Johnson were Andrew and Isabelle Leeper, the former of Scotch-Irish lineage. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Elbert H. Johnson were born three children, the brother of Mrs. Stephenson being Joseph Howard, now of Chicago, while her sister is Martha E., the wife of E. Hudson, of Beardstown, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson have became the parents of two children: James Glen, born June 22, 1903; and Mary Eloise, born April 9, 1905.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson are members of the Presbyterian church at Oneida and politically he is a republican but prefers to concentrate his time and energies upon his business affairs rather than to hold office. He has served, however, on the school board for two and a half terms and is a stalwart friend of the cause of education. In fact he is interested in all the projects and movements which work for public good and his influence is always on the side of advancement and improvement. He has led a busy, useful and active life, and is justly classed among the representative farmers and citizens of Copley township.

JOHN MACKEY.

John Mackey, who owns and operates a valuable farm of five hundred acres in Truro township, is one of the self-made men of Knox county. He started out in life without either capital or influence and with but limited education, and through the intelligent direction of his activites has become numbered among the affluent agriculturists of his community.

His birth occurred in Jackson county, Maryland, on the 24th of October, 1860, his parents being John and Jeannette (McFadyen) Mackey, both natives of Scotland. The father was born in Ayrshire in 1826, and when old enough to begin working entered the mines of his native country, being employed there until he was twenty-three. In 1849 he took passage for the United States, first locating in Maryland, continuing to follow mining there and at various other points as far west as Wisconsin. He subsequently came to Kewanee, Illinois, and soon thereafter settled on a farm three-fourths of a mile east of his son John's place, which was thereafter the family home. John Mackey met with a moderate degree of success in his agricultural pursuits and acquired one hundred and eighty acres of land. His death occurred in 1899 while he was visiting in Iowa, his place of residence still being in this county; the mother passed away on the homestead in 1903, at the age of seventy-six years. Thirteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Mackey, eight of whom lived to attain maturity, as follows: Matthew; Margaret, the wife of Albion Curtis; Jane, who married L. Iverson; Anna, who is the wife of William E. Willett; and John, William, David and Ezekiel.

The early education of John Mackey was limited to the advantages afforded by the district schools in the vicinity of his home, and while pursuing his studies he also assisted with the work of the fields and care of the stock. Recognizing the need of broader knowledge, he later supplemented his education by attending Lombard College for a brief period, being at that time twenty-four years of age. He then left the parental home and began farming for himself. Originally he owned but a small portion of his present place, but he applied himself so assiduously and intelligently to its cultivation that he was able to extend the boundaries of his farm until it embraced five hundred acres. Here he has resided ever since beginning his independent career, and has become deeply attached to the place because of its association with the greatest experiences of his life. A man of practical ideas and unlimited energy, Mr. Mackey attributes much of his success to the fact that he has always concentrated his energies and directed his activities toward a definite purpose. All of the improvements on his property have been made during the period of his ownership. He has constructed large, commodious barns, substantial outbuildings and a comfortable residence, and as his circumstances have permitted has added many modern conveniences and appliances, consistent with the progressive spirit that has characterized his undertakings. His is now one of the most attractive and valuable properties in the township, and he is contemplating making more extensive improvements within the near future. He has an excellent water system and a number of other conveniences not generally found on the farm homestead. Mr. Mackey oversees the operation of his fields and gives his personal supervision to everything on the farm, all of the work being done by him and his two sons. His land is devoted to diversified farming in connection with which he also raises stock.

For his wife and helpmate Mr. Mackey chose Miss Eva McDowell, a native of Mercer, Mercer county, Pennsylvania, their marriage being celebrated September 27, 1887. There were five children born to Mrs. Mackey's parents, three sons and two daughters, all of whom are now residents of Illinois. The mother passed away at the age of sixty-five years and the father, who was engaged in the mercantile business, reached the remarkable age of four score and ten. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Mackey: Eldred W. and Earl Edwin, who are assisting their father with the operation of the farm; and Irma J., who is attending school.

Ever since granted the right of suffrage upon attaining his majority, Mr. Mackey has given his political support to the men and measures of the democratic party. He takes an active interest in all township affairs and has served on the school board for twenty years. He is held in high esteem by all who know him throughout the county, where his success is recognized as the just reward of intelligent and judiciously expended effort.

AUGUST SWARTZ.

A Knox county agriculturist of enterprising and progressive methods is August Swartz, who owns two hundred and ninety acres of excellent land in Truro township, located three miles northeast of Williamsfield, where he has resided for the past nine years. He is a native of this state, his birth having occurred in Woodford county in 1864, and a son of Henry and Caroline (Sandmyer) Swartz. His father was born in Germany on the 21st of March, 1824, and there he was reared and educated, continuing to make his home in his native land until he was twenty-two years of age. Having heard wonderful stories of the opportunities and advantages afforded ambitious young men in the United States, he in 1846 crossed the Atlantic to the new world. He landed in New York city, where he remained for five or six years thereafter. At the expiration of that time he came to Illinois, settling in Peoria, where he remained for six years, removing to Woodford county. There he engaged in agricultural pursuits with such excellent success that at the time of his death he owned six hundred and forty acres of land, well improved and under high cultivation. In Peoria, this state, on the 28th of October, 1848, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Swartz and Miss Sandmyer, and they became the parents of seven children: Henry, who was born on July 13, 1849, and died in 1850 or 1851; William, whose birth occurred on the 26th of January, 1854; George, who was born on May 24, 1856, and died in 1905; Mary, born on the 22d of July, 1857, the wife of John Kanive; John, who was born on the 18th of March, 1860, and died in August, 1907; Henry, whose birth occurred on the 20th of May, 1862; and August, born on the 7th of October, 1864. The parents both passed away in Woodford county, the father dying at the age of seventy-seven and the mother at seventy-three.

The education of August Swartz was obtained in the district schools in the vicinity of his home, the period of his boyhood and youth being very similar in every way to those of other lads reared in the country. He early began assisting with the work of the fields and the care of the stock and after laying aside his text-books, gave his undivided attention to agricultural pursuits. When qualified to begin farming on his own responsibility he operated the old home place, which he subsequently purchased, continuing its cultivation until 1902. In the latter year he disposed of it and came to Knox county, purchasing his present place in Truro township, containing two hundred and ninety acres. During the nine years of his residence here Mr. Swartz had made many improvements in this property. He has erected good barns and outbuildings and a comfortable house in addition to which he has also effected various minor changes that have greatly improved the general appearance of the place. The greater part of his land he rents, having practically retired from active work, but he and his wife still continue to live on their farm. He is a man of progressive ideas and as he takes great pride in his homestead his succeeded in making it one of the valuable properties of the county.

Mr. Swartz was married in 1894 to Miss Minnie Lutz, who was also a resident of Woodford county where she had been teaching for four years previously. She is a daughter of John P. Lutz, a blacksmith by trade, and a veteran of the Civil war. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Swartz there has been born one son, Cecil A., whose birth occurred September 19, 1897.

His political allegiance Mr. Swartz gives to the democratic party, and is now and has been for the past five years serving as a member of the board of county road commissioners, while he has been a school director ever since locating in the county with the exception of one year. Mr. and Mrs. Swartz are members of the Reformed church and the Methodist Episcopal, respectively and fraternally, he belongs to the Woodmen. Mr. Swartz is a man of upright conduct and sound principles and during the period of his residence in Knox county has won and retained the respect of all with whom he has had transactions because of his honorable methods in conducting his dealings.

CARL AUGUST EKSTADT.

Carl August Ekstadt, who owns and operates a farm in Walnut Grove township, Knox county, was born March 23, 1864. He is one of the worthy representatives that Sweden has sent to aid in the development of this rich agricultural district. His parents, Samuel and Johanna Ekstadt, are now living in Altona. The father was born in Smoland, Sweden, in 1834, and was the son of A. Peterson, who followed farming throughout his entire life and died in Sweden in 1844. He married Hannah Carlson and of their family of seven children only two are living, the brother of Samuel Ekstadt being Charles Peterson.

Samuel Ekstadt was only ten years of age when his father died, after which he was reared by his maternal grandfather until able to take care of himself. His name was changed when he took out naturalization papers. He married Johanna Carlson, who was born in 1825 and was a daughter of Carl and Martha Hickston. It was in the year 1868 that Samuel Ekstadt came to America, making his way to Berlin, Illinois, where he remained for several years and then removed to Woodhull, this state, where he carried on farming for ten years. He next established his home in Walnut Grove township, Knox county, where he purchased a farm, which he cultivated until 1896. He then removed to Altona, where he is now living retired at the age of seventy-eight years. During the early period of his residence in this state he was also employed as a laborer by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. He has long been a faithful member of the Swedish Lutheran church, of which he has served for many years as a deacon. Of the children born to him and his wife three survive: Edward, a salesman residing in Chicago; Matilda, the wife of T. K. Brown, of Henry county, Illinois; and Carl August.

There was no event of special importance to vary the routine of farm life for Carl August Ekstadt in his boyhood and youth. He attended the district schools and worked on the home farm, early becoming familiar with all the duties and labors incident to farm life. After he was eleven years of age he was engaged as teamster on his father's farm for the following fifteen years and then engaged in general farming and stock-raising on an adjoining tract, where he has since resided.

On the 14th of February, 1889, Mr. Ekstadt was married to Miss Hulda Louisa Faline, who was born on the 23d of January, 1869, in Gosafall-Tuna-Soken-Kalmar Lane, Sweden, her parents being John M. and Bertha Louisa (Swanson) Faline. To Mr. and Mrs. Ekstadt five children have been born, all of whom are residing at home: Ida Elvira, whose birth occurred on the 2d of December, 1889, and who is now engaged in school teaching; Hazel Eleanora, who was born August 18, 1890; Harry Lawrence, born September 30, 1893; Carl Erwin H., born May 14, 1905; and Fern Linnea Irene, whose birth occurred October 27, 1911.

In politics Mr. Ekstadt is a republican and, although he is not an active politician he keeps abreast of the times regarding the paramount issues before the country and is always ready with his vote and influence to do what he can to secure the election of the candidates of his party. He belongs to the Lutheran church and Mrs. Ekstadt is also a member of the Ladies Missionary Society. He is well known throughout the township as a good and industrious man, enjoying the confidence and respect of his neighbors and spending his life in honest and successful labor.

G. L. DOUBET.

G. L. Doubet, who is now living retired on his farm two and a half miles southeast of Williamsfield, was for many years one of the representative agriculturists of Truro township. He was born in Peoria county in November, 1849, and is a son of Elenor and Harriet (Slane) Doubet, the father a native of France and the mother of the state of Ohio. When a lad of ten years, Elenor Doubet emigrated to the United States with his parents, who located in the western part of Peoria county, where he was reared to manhood. He completed the education already begun in his native land in the district schools in the vicinity of his home, and subsequently gave his attention to agricultural pursuits. When old enough to adopt a vocation, naturally he chose the one he was best qualified for and engaged in farming. He was thrifty and industrious as well as practical and used very good judgment in the direction of his undertakings. His efforts were attended with success, and as his circumstances warranted he invested in farming lands in the vicinity, becoming one of the extensive property owners of the county. He passed away on his homestead at the age of seventy-nine years, one of the highly esteemed and substantial citizens of the community. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Doubet there were born ten children, four of whom are deceased. Our subject is the eldest of the six living, the others being as follows: J. D., a farmer of Truro township; Eliza, the wife of a Mr. Shoemaker, of Iowa; Isabel, who married D. Secreton, and is living on the old home place in Peoria county; John F., who owns and operates a farm across the road from our subject in Peoria county; and Charles, who is on the home place. Those deceased are, one who died in infancy, Henry, Rebecca and Delia.

The early life of G. L. Doubet was passed very much in the manner of other country lads of that period. He attended the district schools in the acquirement of his education, and while mastering the common branches also assisted his father with the work of the farm. By the time he had attained his maturity he had a very thorough knowledge of the practical methods of agriculture and continued to follow this vocation during the remainder of his active life. When he was twenty-five he began farming for himself, locating on the place where he has ever since resided in Truro township. This contains two hundred and twenty-six and a half acres, all of which he brought under high cultivation During the long period of his ownership he has wrought extensive improvements in the place, including the erection of all the buildings now standing. He is a man of practical ideas and progressive, and as his circumstances warranted he installed on his farm such modern conveniences and improvements as he deemed essential for the best interests of his business. General farming and stock-raising were his chief activities and both proved to be very lucrative under his competent direction. Mr. Doubet has for some years past been living practically retired, although he still resides on his homestead, having turned over the cultivation of his fields to his sons.

Mr. Doubet married Miss Sarah J. Cole, and they became the parents of nine children, six of whom are living: Charles, who married Miss Nellie Biederbeck; Jennie, the wife of P. A. Murdock; Albert, who married Della White; Earl; Blanche; and Una. Three are deceased; a daughter, Effie; and two infants.

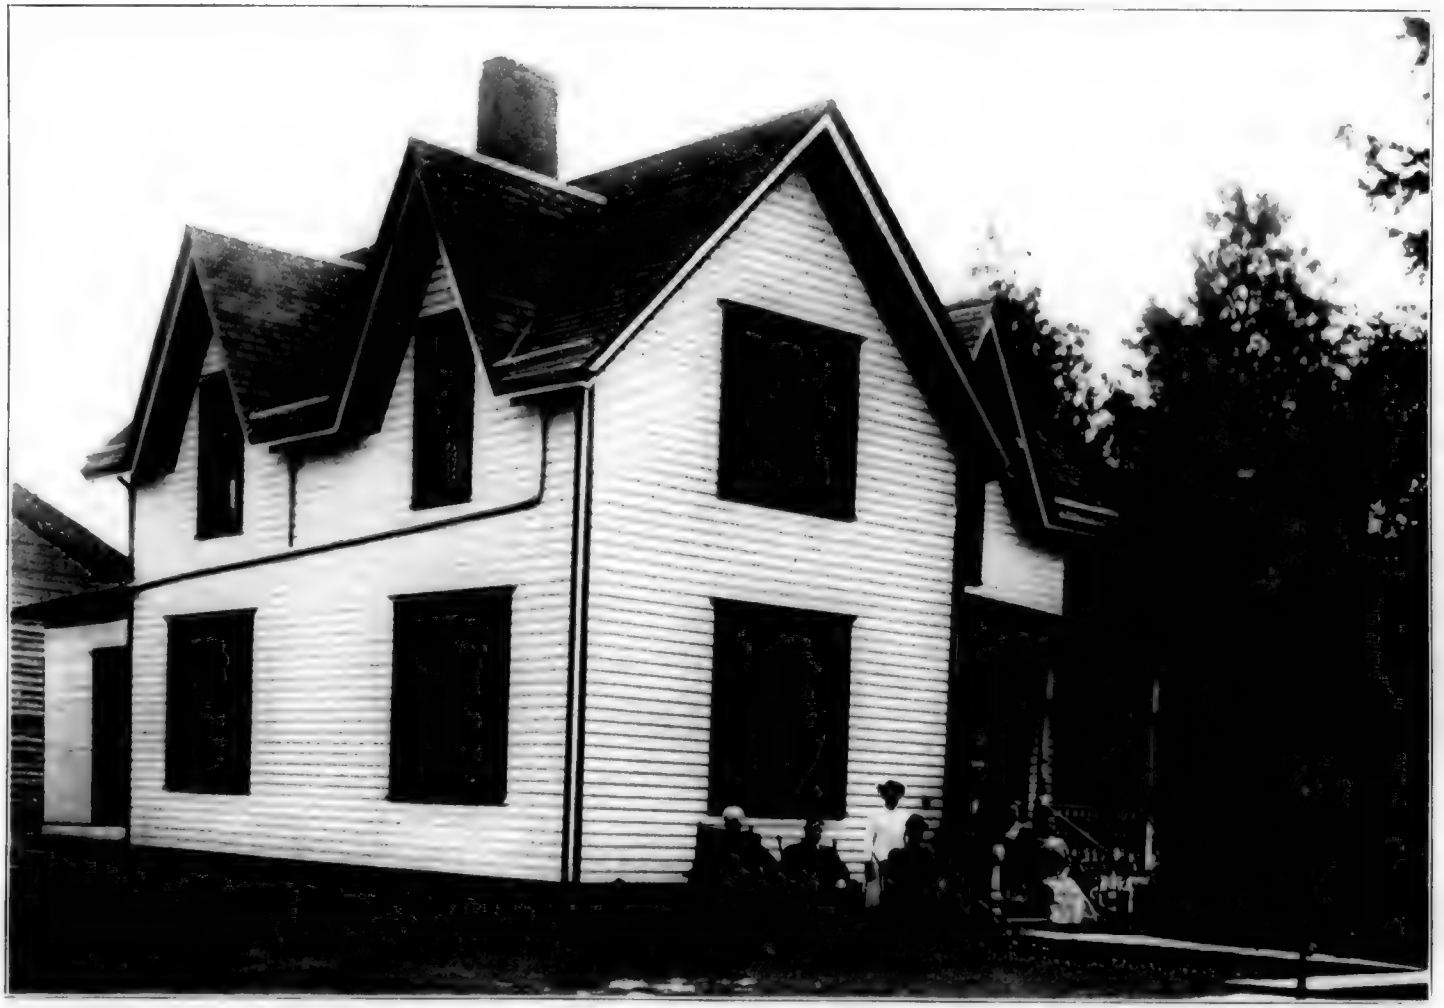
Fraternally Mr. Doubet is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, while he gives his political support to the republican party. He has always assumed his share of the township governmental responsibilities and has served with efficiency as assessor and collector. Mr. Doubet has resided on his farm for thirty-seven years, and is therefore widely known in the community, among whose residents he is held in favorable regard, ever having conducted himself in all of the relations of life in such a manner as to win the esteem of those with whom he had dealings.

ALEX. CALLAHAN.

A well cultivated farm of ninety-four acres located four and a half miles southeast of Victoria, does justice to the agricultural skill of A. Callahan, who was born in Elba township, this county, on the 10th of May, 1858. His parents were John and Nancy (Walker) Callahan, pioneer settlers of Knox county, where for many years the father was engaged in farming. He was born in Ire-

RESIDENCE OF ALEX CALLAHAN

of the community. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Doubet there were born ten children, four of whom are deceased. Our subject is the eldest of the six living, the others being as follows: J. D., a farmer of Truro township; Eliza, the wife of a Mr. Shoemaker, of Iowa; Isabel, who married D. Secreton, and is living on the old home place in Peoria county; John F., who owns and operates a farm across the road from our subject in Peoria county; and Charles, who is on the home place. Those deceased are, one who died in infancy, Henry, Rebecca and Delia.



The early life of G. L. Doubet was passed very much in the manner of other country lads of that period. He attended the district schools in the acquirement of his education, and while mastering the common branches also assisted his father with the work of the farm. By the time he had attained his maturity he had a very thorough knowledge of the practical methods of agriculture and continued to follow this vocation during the remainder of his active life. When he was twenty-five he began farming for himself, locating on the place where he has ever since resided in Truro township. This contains two hundred and twenty-six and a half acres, all of which he brought under high cultivation During the long period of his ownership he has wrought extensive improvements in the place, including the erection of all the buildings now standing. He is a man of practical ideas and progressive, and as his circumstances warranted he installed on his farm such modern conveniences and improvements as he deemed essential for the best interests of his business. General farming and stock-raising were his chief activities and both proved to be very lucrative under his competent direction. Mr. Doubet has for some years past been living practically retired, although he still resides on his homestead, having turned over the cultivation of his fields to his sons.

Mr. Doubet married Miss Sarah J. Cole, and they became the parents of nine children, six of whom are living: Charles, who married Miss Nellie Biederbeck; Jennie, the wife of P. A. Murdock; Albert, who married Della White; Earl; Blanche; and Una. Three are deceased; a daughter, Effie; and two infants.

Fraternally Mr. Doubet is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, while he gives his political support to the republican party. He has always assumed his share of the township governmental responsibilities and has served with efficiency as assessor and collector. Mr. Doubet has resided on his farm for thirty-seven years, and is therefore widely known in the community, among whose residents he is held in favorable regard, ever having conducted himself in all of the relations of life in such a manner as to win the esteem of those with whom he had dealings.

ALEX. CALLAHAN.

A well cultivated farm of ninety-four acres located four and a half miles southeast of Victoria, does justice to the agricultural skill of A. Callahan, who was born in Elba township, this county, on the 10th of May, 1858. His parents were John and Nancy (Walker) Callahan, pioneer settlers of Knox county, where for many years the father was engaged in farming. He was born in Ireland, where he lived until he was eighteen years of age when he emigrated to the United States, locating in Philadelphia. There he engaged in mercantile pursuits until 1854 when he removed to Illinois, subsequently settling on a farm in Elba township. This property contained eighty acres of fertile land, to the further improvement and development of which he devoted his energies until his death at the age of seventy-five years. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Callahan consisted of four sons and two daughters: Matthew; John; William J.; Alex., our subject; Jane, who became the wife of Thomas Galpin; and Anna P.

RESIDENCE OF ALEX CALLAHAN

Alex. Callahan was reared on the home farm in Elba township, obtaining his education in the district schools. While mastering the common branches he assisted with the work of the farm, thus qualifying himself for an agricultural career. After leaving school he went out west where he remained for three years. At the expiration of that period he returned to Knox county and again turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, which he has ever since followed. He cultivated leased land at first, thus acquiring sufficient capital to buy his present property, which he has now owned for fourteen years. During that time he has made extensive improvements on the place, including the erection of a very fine modern farm house that he completed in 1907. Since taking up his residence here Mr. Callahan has equipped his homestead with such modern conveniences from time to time as his circumstances permitted, and it is now one of the attractive as well as valuable farms of Victoria township.

Mr. Callahan's plans for a home of his own had their consummation in his marriage to Miss Christina Peterson, who was born in Sweden, whence she was brought to the United States at the age of two years. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Callahan, as follows: Ada and Blanche, who are stenographers in Galesburg; Myrtle, who married Andrew McClure; and Stella.

In matters of faith Mr. and Mrs. Callahan are members of the Congregational church and fraternally he is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America. In his political views Mr. Callahan is independent, giving his support to the men and measures he deems best qualified to subserve the interests of the majority. He leads a very active life as is evidenced by the appearance of his fields, which he has brought under high cultivation, his crops annually bringing him a very satisfactory income.

JACOB HUBER.

Jacob Huber, who resides on a fine farm of two hundred and eighty-eight acres located two and a half miles northeast of Williamsfield, has been identified with the agricultural development of Knox county for forty-seven years. He was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, in May, 1845, and is a son of Benjamin and Rebecca (Burkhardt) Huber, also natives of Berks county. There the father, who was a blacksmith, followed his trade until the fall of 1849, when with his wife and family he came to Illinois, locating in Peoria county, where he passed away at the venerable age of eighty-two years. Mr. and Mrs. Huber were the parents of nine children, five of whom are deceased. Our subject is the eldest of those living, the others being as follows: Mary, the wife of Isaac Anderson; Elmira, who married John Hart; and Delila, now Mrs. Levi Felby.

Practically the entire life of Jacob Huber has been passed in Illinois, as he was only a child of four years when he accompanied his people on their removal from Pennsylvania to this state. He obtained a common-school education in Peoria county, but early laid aside his text-books to assist in the operation of the home farm. At the age of twenty years he left home and came to Knox county, very soon thereafter locating on the place he now owns. During the period of his residence here he has extended the boundaries of his farm and has made many improvements on it. All of the buildings now standing on the place have been built since he became the owner, and he has added many modern conveniences and improvements that have greatly increased the value of the property. He has expended much care and labor in the tilling of his fields that have been brought under high cultivation, and annually yield abundant harvests that fully compensate him for his painstaking efforts.

Mr. Huber has been married three times, his first union being with Miss Catherine Armstrong, and unto them were born six children, four sons and two daughters. He next married Carrie Pulver, and his present wife was Mrs. Edith Messmore. One son, Harold, who is operating his father's farm, has been born unto Mr. Huber and his third wife. Besides his own children he reared Iva Riggins and Julia Kimbal.

The political views of Mr. Huber are not coinciding with any of the parties, but he votes independently for the man whom he considers the most proficient to fill the office. Although he takes an active interest in all township affairs he has never sought political preferment, having given his undivided attention to the development of his personal interests. Mr. Huber came here as a young man practically penniless and has through his own energy and perseverance become one of the prosperous agriculturists of Truro township, among whose citizens he enjoys a wide and favorable acquaintance.

J. A. TUCKER.

J. A. Tucker, who is conducting an implement business in Williamsfield in connection with which he is also operating a harness shop, is a native of Knox county, his birth having occurred on the old home farm in Truro township in 1850. His parents were Vachel L. and Jane Tucker, the father a native of Ashland, Ohio, whence he migrated in 1833 to Knox county. He acquired a tract of land in Truro township that he settled upon, devoting the remainder of his life to its operation, his death occurring on his farm at the age of sixty-seven years. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Vachel L. Tucker there were born nine children.

The boyhood and youth of J. A. Tucker were in every way similar to those of other lads of the period who were reared in the country. He attended the schools of Truro township and later the high school of Elmwood, in the acquirement of an education. While pursuing his studies he had to assist in the work of the fields and the care of the stock on the home place, thus qualifying himself for a future agricultural career. After leaving school he devoted his entire time and attention to farming until 1893, when he came to Williamsfield and engaged in business. Mr. Tucker met with very good success in his agricultural pursuits and now owns a fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Truro township. It is equipped with modern improvements and appliances, while the fields have been brought into a high state of productivity, being one of the most attractive and valuable properties in that vicinity. Mr. Tucker's store is well supplied with an extensive variety of farming implements in connection with which he also operates a harness shop, both affording him lucrative returns. He is a capable business man, while his practical knowledge of farming implements and the needs of the agriculturist well qualify for the vocation he is now following. His entire attention is given to his store, his farm now being operated by a tenant. His son, Seth, is in business with his father. During a heavy storm this summer, Mr. Tucker had the misfortune to have his barns struck by lightning, the buildings and their contents being entirely destroyed.

Mr. Tucker, who is very happy in his home life, chose for his wife Miss Lilly C. Love, of Knox county, and they have become the parents of five children, as follows: Seth, who is in business with his father; Leto Jane, the widow of Dr. Luther Stowell, who is now engaged in nursing; Myrtle Alberta, the wife of James L. Cation, a farmer south of Williamsfield; Lilly Mabel, who married John Aldrich, of Bloomington; and Dora May, who is at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Tucker affiliate with the Methodist Episcopal church, while he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen. In his political views he is a stanch republican, and gives his unqualified support to the men and measures of that party, believing that its policy is best adapted to subserve the interests of the majority. A man of untiring industry, by the intelligent direction of his activities and the concentration of his forces Mr. Tucker has met with success in anything he has undertaken, and is recognized as one of the affluent citizens of Truro township.

A. H. RICE.

A highly prosperous and enterprising agriculturist of Knox county is A. H. Rice, who owns three hundred and thirty-five acres of most productive land in Truro township, located four miles northeast of Williamsfield. To the further improvement and cultivation of this property he has devoted his entire time and energy for the past nineteen years, with most gratifying results.

Mr. Rice was born in Victoria township, this county, on the 20th of September, 1861, and there he was reared in a manner, similar to other farmer lads, receiving his education in the district schools. While engaged with the mastery of the common branches, he was laying the foundation for a future agricultural career by assisting with the work of the fields and care of the stock. Naturally when he was old enough to decide upon a life vocation, he chose the one to which he felt he was best adapted, and has never had any occasion to regret his selection as he has prospered in his undertakings, and is now numbered among the substantial farmers of his community. He was an ambitious and energetic as well as thrifty youth, and concentrated his entire efforts upon acquiring sufficient capital to purchase a place of his own. His endeavors proved successful, and immediately following his marriage in 1890 he settled on a place located in this county, that he operated for a year. In 1892, he disposed of this property and purchased his present homestead. Since becoming the owner, Mr. Rice has wrought many improvements that have added greatly to the appearance and value of the place. All of the buildings now standing have been erected since he came here, and he has also installed many modern conveniences and comforts, indicative of the spirit of progress that characterizes all of his undertakings. Everything about the place manifests close supervision and capable management, and the careful regard for details that invariably accompanies success in any enterprise. Mr. Rice is operating his farm in strict accordance to the modern methods of agriculture, and as a result his fields annually yield him abundant harvests that command the market's highest prices. His efforts are not entirely confined to diversified farming, much of his attention being given to the raising of stock, which has also proven to be very remunerative. He is not only a competent agriculturist but a business man of practical ideas and sound judgment, who owes his success to his tireless industry and the intelligent direction of his activities.

In 1890 Mr. Rice completed his arrangements for a home of his own by his marriage to Miss Priscilla Yelm, a daughter of Anderson and Priscilla (Abey) Yelm, the father a native of Sweden and the mother of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Rice was also born in Knox county in 1868. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Rice number six, as follows, Vesper M., Lester A., William F., George E., Sadie A. and Arthur. Of the seven children born to them one died in infancy. The sons all assist their father in the operation of the farm, thus making it possible to almost entirely dispense with the need of hired help.

His political prerogatives Mr. Rice exercises in support of such men and measures as are advanced by the democratic party, to the principles of which he has been absolutely loyal ever since granted the right of franchise. He takes an active interest in all township affairs, but is not an aspirant to public honors or the emoluments of office, and, therefore, has never been associated with local governmental matters in any capacity save that of school director. Fraternally he is a Woodman. Mr. Rice has spent his entire life in the immediate vicinity of his present homestead, where he is well known and highly regarded, as he has always conducted himself in all of his relations of life, both public and private, in such a manner as to command the respect of his community.

GEORGE E. MORGAN.

George E. Morgan, who is successfully engaged in general farming and stock-raising three and a half miles northwest of Williamsfield, was born in Haw Creek township, Knox county, on December 24, 1863. His father, Peter Morgan, was a native of Ireland, his birth occurring in 1818. There he spent the first fifteen years of his life, when he ran away from home and went to sea, binding himself to five years' service. At the expiration of that period he came to the United States and enlisted in the navy for seven years. He was in the service during the period of the Mexican war, at which time he was assigned to the revenue force, and was on the boat that carried the American minister back to Mexico after the close of hostilities. He left the navy at the expiration of his period of enlistment and about 1856 came to Illinois, locating in Peoria county. He turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, and went to work for Joe Lyons, who owned a farm in Millbrook township, that county. Being industrious, he applied himself intelligently to whatever duty was assigned him, thus soon acquired a practical understanding of the methods of tilling the fields and caring for the crops. It was his ambition to own a farm, and this proved an incentive to the exercise of thrift and self-denial and little by little he accumulated sufficient capital to begin for himself. After his marriage in 1863 he rented some land in Haw Creek township that he cultivated with such excellent success that at the expiration of two years he was in a position to buy a farm in the same township. His entire time and attention was devoted to the further development of this place during the remainder of his active life, and there he passed away at the venerable age of eighty-one years. For his wife and helpmate Mr. Morgan chose Miss Mary Batson, who was born in Ohio and reared in Missouri. Being Union sympathizers, her people left Missouri during the war and came to Illinois, but after the close of hostilities returned to the south. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan numbered six, the eldest of whom is our subject, the others being as follows: Stephen and Rosie, both of whom are deceased; William and Robert, who are residents of this township; and Elizabeth, who is also deceased.

George E. Morgan was reared in his native county, acquiring his education in the common schools in the vicinity of his father's home. After he had mastered the common branches he laid aside his text-books and turned his entire attention toward the operation of the farm, with the work of which he had been assisting from early boyhood. Agricultural pursuits have always engaged his energies and he has met with success in his undertakings. He is enterprising and practical in his methods and now owns one of the valuable farms of Truro township. His homestead contains two hundred and ten acres of good land that he has brought under high cultivation, and here engages in diversified farming and stock-raising. His efforts in both branches of the business are meeting with substantial returns, and he is recognized as one of the successful agriculturists and capable business men of the township. Since locating here Mr. Morgan has wrought extensive improvements in his place, having erected all of the buildings now standing and he has also effected many minor changes, that add greatly to the appearance and financial value of the property.

Mr. Morgan's efforts have been ably assisted by his wife, whose maiden name was Alice R. Stubbs, a native of Millbrook township, Peoria county, and a daughter of John Stubbs, a well known farmer of that section. They are the parents of two children, Melvin and Leona. The former is now assisting his father with the operation of the farm, and is an earnest and enterprising young man, who gives every assurance of possessing the qualities that make for success in any vocation.

Fraternally Mr. Morgan is an Odd Fellow, and his political allegiance is given to the democratic party. He has always taken an active interest in local affairs and in 1895 was elected supervisor, serving in this capacity until 1907, while for three years he was commissioner and he has also been a member of the school board. Mr. Morgan is a man who discharges his official duties with the same sense of obligation and responsibility that he manifests in the execution of any task or business enterprise, and is, therefore, justly entitled to the respect he is accorded in his community.

J. EDWIN MAIN.

J. Edwin Main, who engages in general farming and stockraising in Walnut Grove township, Knox county, and who is numbered among the substantial agriculturists of this vicinity, was born on the 7th of November, 1875, on the old Main homestead, his parents being Andrew and Ellen (Moore) Main. The father was born December 6, 1846, in Mothler, Ayrshire, Scotland, and the mother in Rio township, on the 13th of March, 1848. The grandparents were Peter and Jane (Ferguson) Main, of whom the former came to America with his three children after the death of his wife in Scotland. Arriving in Chicago, they proceeded to Knox county and subsequently went to Minnesota for a short residence before returning to this county, where the death of Peter Ferguson occurred May 1, 1878, at the age of sixty-nine years. Andrew Main, the father of our subject, was but seven years of age on his arrival in this country and during his sojourn in Chicago at the time of the cholera epidemic the death of his only sister occurred. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Main were the parents of three children: J. Edwin, our subject; Kate, who married Walter D. McMasters, a farmer of Walnut Grove township; and Clark A., also an agriculturist of this township. Mrs. Andrew Main is a daughter of Lyman King and Mary S. (Woodman) Moore, natives of New York and Massachusetts, respectively. They came west early in life and settled in Rio township, engaging in farming pursuits until their death.

During his boyhood days J. Edwin Main worked on his father's farm and passed through the usual experiences which enter the life of a country boy, engaging in the general routine of the farm during the summer season and attending the district school during the winter. He assisted his father until he was twenty-five years of age, when, ambitious to enter upon an independent career, he removed to the farm upon which he is now residing. When he settled upon this land it was in a more or less uncultivated state, but he gradually succeeded in making improvements so that now it is provided with all the equipments and conveniences of a successful farm. He engages in a general agricultural business, producing the various grain crops, and also devotes attention to stock-raising, breeding excellent standard-bred hogs. Intelligent management and close application to these undertakings have brought him unusual success and he makes his home today in one of the most comfortable and modernly equipped farm residences in Walnut Grove township.

On February 14, 1900, Mr. Main wedded Miss Ida McMaster, who was born on the 26th of August, 1879, on the McMaster homestead. Her parents, Thomas and Elizabeth (Hawk) McMaster, who are prominent farmers of Walnut Grove township, were the parents of four children: George A., who married Clara Nash; William John, who wedded Agnes McGaan; Mrs. Main; and one deceased. The first three named are residing in Walnut Grove township. Mrs. Main received her education in St. Mary's school of Knoxville, Illinois, after which she remained at home until her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Main are the parents of two children: Harold E., born May 17, 1901; and Everett, born April 15, 1905.

Mr. Main gives his political support to the republican party and, although he has never sought office, his interest in the educational development and welfare of his community is so great that he is at present a member of the school board. Both he and Mrs. Main hold membership in the Presbyterian church of Altona, he being one of its trustees and his wife being a prominent member of the Ladies Social Union. He is a man of integrity and ambition and is accounted one of Walnut Grove township's representative citizens.

W. B. HUBER.

W. B. Huber is the owner of ninety acres of land in Truro township, that he has been successfully operating for the past eleven years. It is well improved and the general appearance of both the fields and buildings on the place indicate the spirit of enterprise and industry that characterize Mr. Huber. He was born in this township in 1867, and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Huber, who are mentioned at greater length elsewhere in this work.

W. B. Huber passed his boyhood and youth similarly to other farmer lads, obtaining his education in the common schools. He early began assisting his father with the work of fields and the care of the stock, and after laying aside his school books he gave his entire attention to agricultural pursuits. He remained on the home place until he was qualified to begin farming for himself, when he operated his mother-in-law's place for eleven years. As he is an energetic man of practical ideas he met with success in his undertakings and during that time acquired sufficient capital to purchase the place where he is now living. This has undergone extensive improvements during the period of his ownership and is now one of the attractive appearing farms of this section. He has erected large, substantial barns and outbuildings and a comfortable residence, and fenced all of the fields, which are under high cultivation. Ever since he removed here, in 1900, Mr. Huber has given his personal supervision to everything about the place, much of the work having been performed by him. His fields are devoted to the raising of such cereals as are best adapted to the soil, and annually yield abundant harvests. In connection with general farming Mr. Huber also raises stock, and this has likewise proven to be very lucrative.

For his wife Mr. Huber chose Miss Olive Cadwell, a daughter of James Cadwell, who is now deceased, and Elizabeth (Wolf) Cadwell. The father came to Knox county in his boyhood and was identified with the agricultural interests of Truro township during the entire period of his active life. The mother is still living and now makes her home in Williamsfield. Mr. and Mrs. Huber have two children: Clyde, who is a youth of eighteen years; and Kathrine Elizabeth, who is ten.

The religious views of Mr. and Mrs. Huber coincide with the creed of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which they hold membership, and his political support he gives to the republican party. He has always taken an active interest in township affairs and has served as school trustee. Having spent his entire life in this immediate vicinity Mr. Huber is widely known in the community, among whose citizens he numbers many close friends, the majority of whom were comrades of his boyhood.

AMOS O. GIBBS.

Amos O. Gibbs for more than twenty years has been engaged in general farming and stock-raising on section 22, Victoria township, where he owns one hundred and twenty acres of land that he has brought under high cultivation. He was born in Lynn township, Knox county, on the 4th of August, 1850, and is a son of the late Martin and Mary Ann (Moak) Gibbs, Jr., the paternal grandfather likewise having borne the name of Martin Gibbs.

Reared on his father's farm, the youthful years of Amos O. Gibbs were not marked by either luxury or privation, but were very similar to those of other country lads of that period. His education was begun in his home district and completed in the public schools of Galva, which he attended for two years. At the expiration of that period he gave his undivided attention to agricultural pursuits, with the expectation of making farming his life vocation. By the time he had attained his maturity he was a skilled agriculturist and fully capable of taking charge of a place of his own, but he remained at home until he was married at the age of thirty-seven years. Immediately following this event he located on the place where he is now living, and here he and his wife have passed the entire period of their domestic life. This was then the property of his brother, P. H. Gibbs, but the greater part of the improvements had been made by the preceding owner, a Mr. Dalgrin, including the erection of the dwelling. During the period of his occupancy, however, Mr. Gibbs has wrought many changes that have greatly added to the appearance and value of the place. Here in connection with his general farming he has been raising stock, using the greater part of his grain for feed. He is an industrious man of persevering habits and gives his personal supervision to all of the work about his place. His fields are carefully and intelligently cultivated, all the fences and buildings are kept well repaired, and everything about his farm suggests thrift and prosperity.

Mr. Gibbs established a home for himself in 1887, when he married Miss Elizabeth Johnson, who was born in Sweden, a daughter of Lewis H. and Christina Johnson, both of whom are now deceased. She emigrated to America with her parents as a child of two years, and was reared in this county, receiving her education in the district schools of Victoria township. Her parents spent their latter years in Knox county and are buried in Galva cemetery, Lynn town-two children: Clyde, who is a youth of eighteen years; and Kathrine Elizabeth, who is ten.

AMOS O. GIBBS AND FAMILY

The religious views of Mr. and Mrs. Huber coincide with the creed of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which they hold membership, and his political support he gives to the republican party. He has always taken an active interest in township affairs and has served as school trustee. Having spent his entire life in this immediate vicinity Mr. Huber is widely known in the community, among whose citizens he numbers many close friends, the majority of whom were comrades of his boyhood.

AMOS O. GIBBS.

Amos O. Gibbs for more than twenty years has been engaged in general farming and stock-raising on section 22, Victoria township, where he owns one hundred and twenty acres of land that he has brought under high cultivation. He was born in Lynn township, Knox county, on the 4th of August, 1850, and is a son of the late Martin and Mary Ann (Moak) Gibbs, Jr., the paternal grandfather likewise having borne the name of Martin Gibbs.

Reared on his father's farm, the youthful years of Amos O. Gibbs were not marked by either luxury or privation, but were very similar to those of other country lads of that period. His education was begun in his home district and completed in the public schools of Galva, which he attended for two years. At the expiration of that period he gave his undivided attention to agricultural pursuits, with the expectation of making farming his life vocation. By the time he had attained his maturity he was a skilled agriculturist and fully capable of taking charge of a place of his own, but he remained at home until he was married at the age of thirty-seven years. Immediately following this event he located on the place where he is now living, and here he and his wife have passed the entire period of their domestic life. This was then the property of his brother, P. H. Gibbs, but the greater part of the improvements had been made by the preceding owner, a Mr. Dalgrin, including the erection of the dwelling. During the period of his occupancy, however, Mr. Gibbs has wrought many changes that have greatly added to the appearance and value of the place. Here in connection with his general farming he has been raising stock, using the greater part of his grain for feed. He is an industrious man of persevering habits and gives his personal supervision to all of the work about his place. His fields are carefully and intelligently cultivated, all the fences and buildings are kept well repaired, and everything about his farm suggests thrift and prosperity.

Mr. Gibbs established a home for himself in 1887, when he married Miss Elizabeth Johnson, who was born in Sweden, a daughter of Lewis H. and Christina Johnson, both of whom are now deceased. She emigrated to America with her parents as a child of two years, and was reared in this county, receiving her education in the district schools of Victoria township. Her parents spent their latter years in Knox county and are buried in Galva cemetery, Lynn township. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs, Martin Harrison, Ada, Roy, Lewis, Carl and Irene.

AMOS O. GIBBS AND FAMILY

The political views of Mr. Gibbs accord with the principles of the republican party, for whose candidates he casts his ballot. He has met with more than an average measure of success in his pursuits, and is one of the stockholders in the Farmers' Elevator and their creamery and likewise the Mutual Telephone Company; he is also interested in two imported breeding horses. Mr. Gibbs is a capable agriculturist and business man, whose undertakings are characterized by intelligent direction and competent management.

ALONZO F. PADEN.

Blessed with the heritage of a sturdy stock of ancestors Alonzo F. Paden derives from them not only his excellent constitution and the physical attributes giving promise of the longevity for which the family is noted, but also the intellectual and temperamental characteristics that insure success, the ability to get on in the world and the power of winning friends. His birth occurred in Galesburg township, Knox county, July 3, 1854. The Paden family was originally Scotch but have lived in this country for several generations, the grandfather, Isaac Paden, being a native of Pennsylvania. He married Celia Fish, a native of New York state, and in 1843 removed his family to Knox county, Illinois, and settled on a farm southwest of Galesburg. Illinois remained his home for the rest of his life, excepting a number of years during which he lived in Minnesota, returning from there to Henry county, where he tilled the soil for many years. He died in Knox county at the advanced age of ninety-five years, having been born in 1800. Alonzo F. Paden is a son of James and Martha (Edgar) (Fuqua) Paden, the father being a native of Crawford county, Pennsylvania, born June 17, 1827, the mother a native of Kentucky. They were married over fifty years during which time they were residents of Knox county. At the death of his wife July 26, 1904, Mr. Paden withdrew from active work on his land and came to live with his son Alonzo, dying a few years ago. He was well known throughout the county for his splendid public spirit and his keen interest in the welfare of his community, giving without reserve of his time and efforts in the aid of any cause for the general advancement and growth. He gave his political support to the republicans and was called upon to serve as supervisor of the township being a member of the board that secured the erection of the new courthouse. His high standard of integrity won him the confidence of his business associates among whom he was an important factor in his capacity as director of the First National Bank of Galesburg, while his pleasant manner and courteous bearing made him a general favorite among all classes in the town.

Alonzo F. Paden obtained his education in this county, where he has lived since his birth. He attended the public schools and supplemented this by two years at Knox College, in Galesburg. When entering upon his life's work he took up farming in which he continued until his retirement some years ago. Through industry and thrift and by pursuing practical methods, he made good profits which he invested in more land and now owns not only the farm of five hundred and twenty acres which he operated with success for many years but also large holdings in other states. Financially he is interested in the People's Trust Bank of Galesburg in which he is a director.

On February 16, 1881, he was united in the bonds of wedlock to Miss Sarah E. Eckman, a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (French) Eckman, both natives of Pennsylvania, who became residents of Knox county in the early '50s, Mr. Eckman being a farmer by occupation. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Paden of whom four are deceased. The others, all living at home are, Blanche, Glen Paul and Mildred May.

Mr. Paden has always been a consistent republican in the exercise of his right of franchise and was called to the office of supervisor of the township, serving five years in this capacity. In his fraternal relations he is connected with Lodge No. 894, B. P. O. E., and he also holds membership in the Galesburg Club. Mr. Paden is a man of singular strength of character, of that lofty sense of honor which admits of no compromise, and by his gracious manner has made many warm friends who hold him in high esteem.

HIRAM RILEY KING.

Among the agriculturists of Lynn township, Knox county, who have been numbered among the substantial farmers and representative citizens and who achieved success and surrounded themselves with prosperity by their own exertions and persevering efforts was Hiram Riley King, whose birth occurred near Akron, Ohio, on the 21st of January, 1832, and who died on the 19th of December, 1910. His industry and enterprise, together with good management, had been the means of enabling him to acquire a considerable acreage of excellent land, which for many years he kept under cultivation and from which he derived bountiful harvests.

His parents were Ambrose and Sarah (Root) King. The father, who was born in New York state, February 22, 1798, removed to Knox county in 1853 and located near the Union schoolhouse, where he resided for the greater part of his life. The mother's death occurred on the 2d of December, 1839, at Shalersville, Ohio. She had five children, one of whom survives, Homer A., of Colton, California. On the 1st of September, 1840, Mr. King was married to Miss Harriet Porter, of Bath, Ohio, and by their union three children were born: Mrs. Sarah E. Patty, of Riverside, California; Ambrose L., of Victoria, Illinois; and Corwin S., deceased. The father's death occurred on the 19th of January, 1876, when he was about seventy-eight years of age, and his second wife died on the 20th of December, 1885.

Hiram R. King acquired his education in his native state and in the meantime assisted his father in the duties of the farm. Upon completing his studies he remained under the parental roof and daily engaged in farm work until 1859. In that year he crossed the plains with ox teams to California, although en route he stopped at Pike's Peak. The trip required six months and he remained in the west one year, returning home by way of the isthmus of Panama.

In December, 1861, he arrived in Knox county, and on the 13th of February, 1862, was married to Miss Lydia Ann Collinson, who was born on the 12th of August, 1837, near Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, but removed to Walnut Grove township, Knox county, when she was but one year old with her parents, Simeon L. and Mary Collinson. Of the children of her parents four survive: John C., who is residing in Altona; Mrs. Martha McLaughlin; Mrs. James McGoon, a resident of Altona; and Mrs. Mary E. Durham, who makes her home in Mendota, Illinois. To Mr. and Mrs. King six children were born: Stephen A., of Lynn township, who is married to Isabel Crose; Susan L., deceased, who was the wife of Frank Riner and had one son, now making his home with his uncle; Harriet M., at home; Simeon H., deceased; Roy N., in charge of home farm; and Eunice J., deceased.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. King settled on a farm near West Jersey, Illinois, where they lived one year. Later they removed to a farm in Knox county and after residing there for a year went to California, where they remained for twelve months, Mr. King being engaged in the dairy business. After their return to Illinois they settled on the place where they resided until their deaths. In addition to general farming Mr. King also engaged in stock-raising to some extent. His farm was brought under a high state of cultivation and provided with all the modern improvements.

In politics Mr. King was a democrat and he held membership in the Christian church, which held its meetings in the Union schoolhouse. By industry, perseverance and patience, together with an ambition to succeed, he made his way step by step until he rose to a position where he was numbered among Knox county's substantial farmers and most highly respected citizens.

JAMES ARMSTRONG.

General farming and stock-raising engage the attention of James Armstrong, who is associated with his brother in the operation of a farm located six and a half miles north of Williamsfield. His birth occurred in Scotland in 1858, and he is a son of James and Mary (Montgomery) Armstrong, who resided in the land of hills and heather, where the father engaged in farming, until 1867. In the latter year with his wife and family James Armstrong emigrated to the United States, and upon his arrival in this country made his way directly to Knox county. He first located on a farm on section 36, Victoria township, but subsequently removed to Truro township, where he passed away at the age of eighty-three years. The mother is still living at the venerable age of eighty-three and makes her home with her sons James and Thomas. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong numbered nine, all of whom are deceased with the exception of four, as follows: Mary, who is the wife of Charles Angus, of Peoria county; James, our subject; Jeannette, the wife of W. B. Elliott, an agriculturist of Truro township; and Thomas, who is associated with our subject in agricultural pursuits.

James Armstrong was only a lad of eleven years when he emigrated to America with his parents and has spent the greater part of his life in the immediate vicinity of his present farm. In common with other country lads while mastering the common branches of English learning in the district schools of the vicinity, he was laying the foundation of a future agricultural career by assisting with the plowing, sowing and harvesting of the crops and the care of the stock. By the time he had attained his maturity he was a skilled, practical farmer, well qualified to successfully operate a place of his own. When he reached the age of twenty years he left the paternal home and began working for himself. The west had attracted him from earliest boyhood so leaving the scenes with which he had long been familiar, he began his independent career amid an entirely different environment in one of the more recently settled sections of the country. He remained in the west for three years, returning to Knox county in 1881, and has ever since been residing in Victoria township with the exception of two years spent in Truro township. In 1894 he and his brother Thomas bought the place they are now operating. Here they engage in general farming and stock-raising, undertakings proving remunerative under their intelligent direction. Their undivided attention is given to the cultivation of their fields, which are devoted to the raising of such crops as are best adapted to the soil. They are practical agriculturists of progressive ideas and are meeting with more than average success, through the intelligent and capable direction of their activities. Both are industrious and enterprising in their methods, and in the cultivation of their fields follow the more progressive ideas of the modern agriculturists.

In his political views Mr. Armstrong is a republican. He is a public-spirited man and takes a vital interest in all local affairs, particularly those pertaining to the government of the community. Recognized as a man of ability he has at various times been called to discharge the duties of the township offices, and has served with efficiency both as a road commissioner and school director. He is well known in Victoria township, having been actively identified with the agricultural interests there for the past seventeen years, and is accorded the respect and esteem of all with whom he has had transactions, being a man of upright principles and sound integrity.

J. L. HUBER.

J. L. Huber, who is residing six miles north of Williamsfield, where he engages in general farming and stock-raising, was born in this county July 8, 1872, being a son of Jacob and Catherine (Armstrong) Huber. The father is a native of Berks county, Pennsylvania, but when a child of four years he accompanied his parents on their removal to Illinois. His boyhood and youth were spent in Peoria county, this state, but upon attaining his maturity he came to Knox county, and here he has ever since resided. He is one of the well known and prosperous agriculturists of the county, owning two hundred and twenty-eight acres of land two and a half miles from Williamsfield, that he is still operating.

After he had mastered the common branches J. L. Huber terminated his student days, and thereafter gave his entire attention to agricultural pursuits. He remained on his father's farm until he was qualified to begin working for himself, when he located on a place west of the homestead. From there he removed to the vicinity in which he is now living, settling, in 1904, on the place he is operating at the present time. This farm contains one hundred and twenty acres of land which he leases. He is a practical man, enterprising and industrious in his methods and is meeting with substantial returns through the intelligent direction of his energies. His fields are cultivated in accordance with the modern methods followed by the most progressive and successful agriculturists, and the harvests they annually yield fully compensate him for his painstaking efforts and capable supervision.

For his wife Mr. Huber chose Miss Hattie Young, a daughter of Robert Young, and they have become the parents of six children, as follows: Floyd, Stella, Loren, Lavon, Marie and Earl. His political prerogatives Mr. Huber has exercised in support of the men and measures of the republican party, ever since age conferred upon him the right of suffrage. He has never aspired to public honors or the emoluments of office, however, and does not seek political renown, preferring to concentrate his entire attention upon the development of his personal interests.

AMBROSE KING.

Though more than a third of a century has passed since Ambrose King was called from this life, he is still remembered by many of the older residents of Knox county as an early settler and enterprising agriculturist whose labors were an important element in the work of upbuilding and development here. He was born in the state of New York, his natal day being February 22, 1798. The year 1853 witnessed his arrival in Knox county, Illinois, and during practically the remainder of his life he made his home in the vicinity of the Union schoolhouse in Victoria township. Throughout his active business career he devoted his time and energies to general agricultural pursuits, winning a gratifying measure of success in his undertakings. His demise, which occurred on the 19th of January, 1876, when he was about seventy-eight years of age, was the occasion of deep and widespread regret, for he had gained an extensive circle of warm friends during the long period of his residence here.

Ambrose King was twice married. By his first wife, who bore the maiden name of Sarah Root, he had five children. Nelson H. King, the eldest, was born near Akron, Ohio, on the 26th of January, 1828, and passed away near Sacramento, California, in 1873. In 1853 he wedded Miss Elizabeth Pool, by whom he had a son and daughter, the former being now a resident of Texas and the latter of Ouray, Colorado. Mahala, the second child of our subject, died at the age of two years. Hiram Riley King, whose natal day was January 21, 1832, was called to his final rest in 1910. Unto him and his wife, who bore the maiden name of Lydia Ann Collinson, were born six children, as follows: Stephen A., who is married to Isabel Crose and resides with his family near Galva, Illinois; Susan L., deceased, who was the wife of Frank Riner and had one son; Harriet M., at home; Simeon H., deceased; Roy N., who has charge of the home farm near Galva, Illinois; and Eunice J., who has also passed away. Homer A. King, the fourth child of Ambrose King, was born near Akron, Ohio, on the 7th of December, 1833. He acquired his early education at Upper Sandusky, Ohio, and later continued his studies in the academy at Galesburg, Illinois, and also in Knox College, while subsequently he went to Oberlin, Ohio, and prepared for the ministry under President Charles G. Phinney. It was in this state that he was ordained by the Illinois Advent Christian Conference. He then held from one to twenty series of Evangelistic meetings in every New England state and most of the northern states to the Mississippi river, forcefully illustrating his texts by the use of over one thousand square feet of historical, biblical and prophetical paintings. In association with Nelson and Albert J. King he published and sold twenty-six editions of The Beekeeper's Text Book. As each edition comprised two thousand copies, the total number of copies sold was fifty-two thousand. Two editions were printed in German. Rev. King was also connected with four monthly periodicals in New York city. In Boston, Massachusetts, he published his second book, The Bride of His Palace. At the same time he labored effectively and earnestly as a minister of the gospel, serving as pastor of the Advent Christian and Baptist churches in Springfield, Massachusetts, Mystic, Connecticut, Union Hill, New Jersey, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Colton, California. His home is now at the last named place. As a companion and helpmate on the journey of life he chose Miss Mary Lee, whom he wedded in 1882. Albert J. King, the fifth child of Ambrose King, was born on the 14th of March, 1836, and died at San Diego, California, in 1910. He married Miss Martha Southerland and became the father of two daughters and a son.

Ambrose King lost his first wife on the 2d of December, 1839, and on the 1st of September, 1840, was again married, his second union being with Miss Harriet Porter, of Bath, Ohio. Unto them were born three children, namely: Mrs. Sarah E. Patty, of Riverside, California; Ambrose L., who resides in Victoria township, Knox county, and has reared quite a family; and Corwin S., who recently passed away in this county, leaving a widow and children.

JAMES W. HUNTER.

James W. Hunter, one of the leading and best known citizens of Abingdon, was born in Clinton county, Ohio, on the 23d of August, 1851, his parents being Charles N. and Mary C. (Bond) Hunter, who spent their entire lives in that county. The father, a farmer and stock dealer, was one of the well known stockmen of that section of the state. He was also prominently identified with merchandising in his later years, conducting establishments of that character in Blanchester, Martinsville and Cuba at different times. His demise occurred at Martinsville in 1876, when he had attained the age of forty-six years.

James W. Hunter was reared under the parental roof, acquiring his education in the Martinsville public school and the Lebanon normal school. When about twenty years of age he began teaching and followed that profession in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois for a period of ten years. While teaching at Frankfort, Indiana, he took up the study of law and was admitted to the bar. Subsequently he removed to Olney, Illinois, and continued reading law under the direction of ex-State Treasurer Wilson. In the spring of 1874 he came to Knox county, securing a school near Hermon, where he taught for two years. On the 16th of November, 1876, he was united in marriage to Miss Sarah A. Smith, of Hermon, this county, her birth having occurred in the house in which the ceremony took place. Mr. Hunter now owns the residence and also the old homestead farm of three hundred and sixty acres, the boundaries of which he has extended by additional purchase until at the present time it embraces four hundred and forty acres. After his marriage he took charge of his father-in-law's farm and by making purchases from time to time, as his financial resources permitted, he eventually acquired possession of the entire property. Thereon he resided until 1894, with the exception of the years 1889 and 1890, which he spent as a merchant in Hermon.

In 1886 he was elected to the board of supervisors of Knox county and the following year was reelected. During this term of office he presided over the first meeting held in the courthouse—on the event of the dedication of the building. While serving as county supervisor he was elected to the state legislature and resigned the office to assume his duties as a member of the thirty-sixth general assembly. By reelection he also became a member of the thirty-seventh general assembly and during his second term was prominently mentioned as a candidate for the speakership. He was placed on all of the most important committees, including the World's Fair committee, the appropriations committee and the steering committee. While a member of the thirty-seventh general assembly he was one of the one hundred and one democrats who supported General Palmer in that noted deadlock. After having ably represented his district for two terms Mr. Hunter returned to his home farm and again took up general agricultural pursuits. In the summer of 1892 he was the democratic nominee for congress from the tenth district, making the race against General Philip Sidney Post. Though not expecting to be elected, he reduced General Post's majority by several thousand votes. Subsequently he made application to Grover Cleveland for the position of revenue collector of the fifth district of Illinois. The contestants, who were numerous, included many able men and the fight was a most heroic one; but Mr. Hunter received the appointment and served during a full term of four years—three years under Cleveland and one year under McKinley. During this period he made his home in Peoria.

In the spring of 1898, on the expiration of his term of service, Mr. Hunter came to Abingdon, which town has since remained his place of residence. He assisted in the organization of the First State & Savings Bank and has since acted as vice president and also as a director of the institution. He has assisted in the organization of a number of other enterprises, prominent among which are the American Sanitary Company, of which he is a member of the board of directors; the Abingdon Seat & Tank Company and the Ideal Fence Tool Company, of both of which he is president; and the Hermon Farmers Grain Company, of which concern he is also the chief executive officer.

Mr. Hunter lost his first wife in 1898 and the following year wedded Mrs. Rosa A. Williams of Rome City, Indiana, whose demise occurred in 1907. In 1908 he married Miss Georgia Burner, of Abingdon. Our subject has but one living child, Charles M., who was the offspring of his first marriage. This young man is now a senior in the State University at Champaign, Illinois.

Fraternally Mr. Hunter is identified with the following organizations: Abingdon Lodge, No. 185, A. F. & A. M.; Abingdon Lodge, No. 184, I. O. O. F.; and Achilles Lodge, K. P. Both he and his wife are devoted and consistent members of the Christian church. At this point it would be almost tautological to enter into any series of statements as showing Mr. Hunter to be a man of broad intelligence and genuine public spirit, for these have been shadowed forth between the lines of this review. Strong in his individuality, he never lacks the courage of his convictions but there are as dominating elements in this individuality a lively human sympathy and an abiding charity, which, as taken in connection with the sterling integrity and honor of his character, have naturally gained for him the respect and confidence of men.

HUGH KING.

Hugh King, who is engaged in general farming and stock-raising on one hundred and sixty acres of land in Victoria township, eighty of which, located on section 25, he owns, was born in Victoria township, Knox county, on the 20th of December, 1873. His parents were Corwin and Mary King, who removed from Victoria township to Kansas during the childhood of our subject, and there resided until 1886, when they returned to Knox county and engaged in farming.

The education of Hugh King was obtained in the common schools of Kansas where he resided with his parents from early childhood until he was a youth of thirteen years. After acquiring such knowledge as was deemed essential to enable him to pursue an agricultural career, he laid aside his studies and gave his entire attention to the work of the fields and care of the stock on the home place. Soon after his marriage he located on his present farm, which was known as the Andrew Anderson farm. Mr. King is industrious and practical in his ideas and gives his personal supervision to all the work about his place. He has brought his fields into a high state of productivity and in connection with his general farming he raises horses and hogs, and is meeting with lucrative returns from both.

Mr. King has been twice married, his first union being with Miss Mary Anderson, now deceased, a daughter of Andrew Anderson. The lady who now bears the name of Mrs. Hugh King was formerly Miss Emily Sandquist. She was born and reared in Knox county, a daughter of Andrew and Augusta (Burg) Sandquist. The father was born in Sweden on the 20th of May, 1841, and there he was reared and educated. When he attained the age of twenty-five years he determined to come to the United States, believing that he would find better opportunities for advancement here than in his native land. Upon his arrival in this country he came directly to Illinois, locating in Henry county, where he was foreman in a coal mine for four years. There he was married in 1870 to Miss Burg, also a native of Sweden, whence she immigrated when a child of ten years to America with her parents, Andrew and Mary Charlotte Burg. They settled on a farm in Henry county and there they both passed away and were buried in Dayton cemetery. Soon after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Sandquist settled on twenty acres of land south of their present place. The father industriously applied himself to the cultivation of this property, extending his holdings from time

MR. AND MRS. HUGH KING

Fraternally Mr. Hunter is identified with the following organizations: Abingdon Lodge, No. 185, A. F. & A. M.; Abingdon Lodge, No. 184, I. O. O. F.; and Achilles Lodge, K. P. Both he and his wife are devoted and consistent members of the Christian church. At this point it would be almost tautological to enter into any series of statements as showing Mr. Hunter to be a man of broad intelligence and genuine public spirit, for these have been shadowed forth between the lines of this review. Strong in his individuality, he never lacks the courage of his convictions but there are as dominating elements in this individuality a lively human sympathy and an abiding charity, which, as taken in connection with the sterling integrity and honor of his character, have naturally gained for him the respect and confidence of men.

HUGH KING.

Hugh King, who is engaged in general farming and stock-raising on one hundred and sixty acres of land in Victoria township, eighty of which, located on section 25, he owns, was born in Victoria township, Knox county, on the 20th of December, 1873. His parents were Corwin and Mary King, who removed from Victoria township to Kansas during the childhood of our subject, and there resided until 1886, when they returned to Knox county and engaged in farming.

The education of Hugh King was obtained in the common schools of Kansas where he resided with his parents from early childhood until he was a youth of thirteen years. After acquiring such knowledge as was deemed essential to enable him to pursue an agricultural career, he laid aside his studies and gave his entire attention to the work of the fields and care of the stock on the home place. Soon after his marriage he located on his present farm, which was known as the Andrew Anderson farm. Mr. King is industrious and practical in his ideas and gives his personal supervision to all the work about his place. He has brought his fields into a high state of productivity and in connection with his general farming he raises horses and hogs, and is meeting with lucrative returns from both.

Mr. King has been twice married, his first union being with Miss Mary Anderson, now deceased, a daughter of Andrew Anderson. The lady who now bears the name of Mrs. Hugh King was formerly Miss Emily Sandquist. She was born and reared in Knox county, a daughter of Andrew and Augusta (Burg) Sandquist. The father was born in Sweden on the 20th of May, 1841, and there he was reared and educated. When he attained the age of twenty-five years he determined to come to the United States, believing that he would find better opportunities for advancement here than in his native land. Upon his arrival in this country he came directly to Illinois, locating in Henry county, where he was foreman in a coal mine for four years. There he was married in 1870 to Miss Burg, also a native of Sweden, whence she immigrated when a child of ten years to America with her parents, Andrew and Mary Charlotte Burg. They settled on a farm in Henry county and there they both passed away and were buried in Dayton cemetery. Soon after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Sandquist settled on twenty acres of land south of their present place. The father industriously applied himself to the cultivation of this property, extending his holdings from time to time as he was able until he had eighty acres, that is now owned by Oscar Anderson. Later he bought eighty acres of land on section 21, Victoria township, where he is now living, but owing to his advanced age, he found the cultivation of this tract to be too arduous, so sold forty acres to Lewis Ostrum. He still owns the remainder and there he and his wife now make their home. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Sandquist is as follows: William, who is a stockdealer in Victoria; Esther, the wife of Eldon Hammond of Victoria township; Emily, who married Hugh King of Victoria township; Hazel, who is keeping house for her brother at Victoria; Frances, who is clerk for a coal company at Galesburg; and Edna, who is still in school. In connection with general farming, Mr. Sandquist engages in stock-raising feeding all of the grain he raises. He is a republican in his political views and served for nine years as school director and road commissioner for three. Mr. and Mrs. King have two children: Francis Willard and Hiram Andrew.

MR. AND MRS. HUGH KING

Both Mr. and Mrs. King are members of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church, in the work of which they take an active interest, Mr. King having been treasurer of the Sunday school for the past year. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and in politics he is a republican. He was a school director for three years and now he is a member of the board of trustees. In addition to his property interests, Mr. King is a stockholder in the Mutual Telephone Company, of which he has been president for two years, and is connected with other local enterprises. He is energetic and progressive and is constantly increasing the value of his homestead by the addition of various modern conveniences and improvements, and now has one of the best equipped farms in the community, where he has erected a very comfortable and attractive country residence.

FRED G. COLE.

Fred G. Cole, who is farming on an eighty-acre tract, located two and a half miles south of Williamsfield, was born in Peoria county, Illinois, on the 8th of August, 1863, and is a son of William F. and Mary Ann (Cutter) Cole. His father was born in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, on the 18th of July, 1818, while his parents were emigrants to the United States from Yorkshire, England. He was reared on a farm in the vicinity of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and in his early manhood came to Illinois, settling in Peoria county in 1844. There he was married on the 16th of April, 1846, to Miss Cutter, who was born near Ashland, Richland county, Ohio, on July 29, 1829. She accompanied her parents on their removal to Peoria county in 1833, and there she passed the remainder of her life. Mr. and Mrs. Cole began their domestic life in Brimfield township, Peoria county, but in 1854 they removed to Millbrook township, where he acquired one hundred and twenty acres of land that he cultivated until his death on the 23d of December, 1883. The mother passed away on the 15th of March, 1894. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Cole numbered thirteen: John, a veteran of the Civil war, who is engaged in the practice of medicine at Williamsfield; one, who died in infancy; William H., who is farming in the vicinity of Joplin, Missouri; Isaac Frank, who is a resident of this county; Charles, who lives near Iola, Allen county, Kansas; Sarah, who married G. L. Doubet; Lucy, the wife of George Nelson, of Elmwood; Minnie, who died at the age of thirteen years; Lemuel, who is farming in Canada; Marge, who passed away on the 11th of May, 1903, the wife of Samuel M. Parker; Fred G., our subject; Job, who is a resident of Williamsfield; and Newton J., a rural mail carrier, who is living a half mile south of Williamsfield.

Reared on the farm where he was born, Fred G. Cole obtained his education in the schools of French Grove, Peoria county, and while mastering the common branches he also assisted with the work of the farm. After leaving school he gave his undivided attention to farming, first on the old homestead and later elsewhere in Peoria county until 1885. In the latter year he went to Kansas, where he remained for five years, engaging in agricultural pursuits, but in 1890 he returned to Knox county and settled on his father-in-law's farm, which he operated for two years. At the expiration of that time he removed to his mother's place, the old homestead, where he had been reared, and cultivated it for a similar period. In 1895, he bought from Harry Nelson the property where he now resides, and has ever since made this his home. His energies are devoted to general farming and stock-raising in both of which he is meeting with good returns.

In 1885, Mr. Cole was united in marriage to Miss Etta M. Tucker, a daughter of L. V. Tucker, and they became the parents of one daughter, Mabel, who was born in 1890 and died on the 15th of November, 1904. In matters politic Mr. Cole is a republican, but he does not participate in local affairs in pursuit of public office. His time and energies are engaged to good advantage as is manifested by the attractive appearance of his farm and the well tilled fields that annually yield good harvests.

PHILIP H. GIBBS.

Among the native residents of Victoria township who still remain within its borders is Philip H. Gibbs, the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of excellent land on section 27. He was born in Victoria, April 3, 1852, the son of Martin and Mary Ann (Moak) Gibbs, the father a native of New Jersey and the mother of the state of New York. The grandfather, Martin Gibbs, who was born in England and married there to a Miss Beck, came to the United States, settling in New Jersey, where he owned an entire section of land which he later sold at twenty-five cents per acre and came to Knox county, Illinois, locating in Lynn township, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land for which he paid about a dollar or a dollar and a quarter per acre. It is the old homestead in Lynn township and is now occupied by Richard Gibbs. In the family of Martin Gibbs, Sr., were five children: Joseph, Martin and Jonathan, all of whom were born in New Jersey; and two daughters who were born in Lynn township, Knox county. The father, Martin Gibbs, received his education in an old log schoolhouse of Lynn township and after his school days remained at home, working on the farm until his marriage to Miss Mary Ann Moak, who was a native of New York state. Subsequently Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs removed to Victoria township, where they settled on the farm now owned by Owen Conway and where they resided the rest of their lives except for two years that were spent in Kansas. He was a farmer and stock-raiser and a very successful business man. Mr. Gibbs was a republican in politics and held many of the township offices. He died at the age of fifty-seven years and his wife passed away at the age of fifty-six, and they are both buried in Victoria township. In their family were seven sons: Amos, who now resides in Victoria; Philip H., of this review; Jonathan and Joseph, both of Victoria township; Christopher, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; George, of Victoria township; and Nicholas, of Tolono, Illinois.

Philip H. Gibbs received his education in Victoria township and after his school days began farming there but later removed to Lynn township, where he resided for two years. Subsequently he returned to Victoria township and purchased of James Patty the farm on which he now resides. He engages in general farming and makes a specialty of raising a high grade of blooded cattle, hogs and horses. He is a very successful business man, is a stockholder in the Farmers Elevator of Victoria and owns an interest in the Victoria Creamery.

Mr. Gibbs wedded Miss Ida Wade, a native of Lynn township and a daughter of William and Mary Wade, of Virginia, who later repaired to Knox county, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs have become the parents of seven children: Hattie, the deceased wife of Jesse McIlravey; Dollie, who is the wife of Roy Sopher, of Victoria; Lottie, who is now Mrs. August Anderson, of Farwell, Texas; Mary, who is the wife of John Scott, of Victoria township; Clifford, who married Mabel Norburg and resides in Victoria township; Lansing, who is at home; and Fern, the wife of Charles Sopher, of Victoria.

Mr. Gibbs is a republican in politics and is very much interested in local party issues, having served for eight years as constable of Victoria township. He has given much time to the cause of education and has been school director for twelve years. He is a man of high business principles and his devotion to the public welfare has made him a valued citizen and given him a creditable place in the regard of his fellowmen.

A. P. CARLSON.

A. P. Carlson, who is now living retired in Williamsfield, was for thirty-three years prominently identified with the agricultural interests of Victoria township. He is a native of Sweden, his birth having occurred June 20, 1829, and a son of Jonas Anderson, who passed his entire life in Sweden.

Agricultural pursuits have always engaged the attention of A. P. Carlson, who spent the first twenty-seven years of his life in the land of his birth. He received a common-school education and then turned his attention to farming, following this vocation in Sweden until he had attained the age of twenty-seven years. In 1856, he emigrated to the United States, locating in Knox county on the farm his son is now operating in Victoria township. He devoted his entire time and attention to the further improvement and cultivation of this place for thirty-three years. His unceasing effort and the intelligent direction of his activities brought him the usual reward, and he ultimately became known as one of the capable and prosperous agriculturists of the community. He was a man of practical ideas, and the plowing, sowing and harvesting of his fields was conducted under his personal supervision. In 1889 he withdrew from active life and went to Galva, where he resided for twenty years, coming from there to Williamsfield in 1909, and here he has ever since made his home. He has disposed of all of his farming interests now, and is living retired, having attained the venerable age of eighty-two years.

For his wife Mr. Carlson chose Miss Malinda Larson, who was born in Norway, whence she emigrated to the United States at the age of ten years, coming directly to Knox county. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Carlson, as follows: W. C., who is living on the old homestead in Victoria township; Annie, who is deceased; Emma, who married George Brown of Washington, D. C.; and Gordon S., who is a resident of Ohio.

In matters of faith Mr. and Mrs. Carlson are Methodists, and his political views accord with those of the republican party, for whose candidates he has cast his ballot ever since granted the right of franchise through naturalization. Through the long period of his residence in this country, Mr. Carlson has met with the misfortunes and disappointments that fall to the lot of the average person, but on the whole his efforts have been well rewarded and he has never had occasion to regret the transference of his allegiance, as he has a competence that enables him to spend the latter years of his life in the ease and comfort that are the just heritage of age.

J. H. NELSON.

J. H. Nelson, who is now serving his third term as road commissioner of Victoria township, was born in northern Sweden, April 12, 1865, the son of Hanson and Christiana Nelson. The father died in his home country but the mother came with her family to America and settled in Illinois, southwest of Victoria, in Copley township, where she reared and educated her children. In her family were four children: J. H., of this review; C. F., who was born March 14, 1867; Matilda, who was born March 11, 1869, and is now Mrs. Wiley; and Sophia, who was born January 25, 1873, and is now Mrs. Flynn, of Grand Junction, Colorado.

J. H. Nelson received his early education in Sweden and came with his mother to America, where, being the eldest child, he helped to support the rest of the family. He resided in Copley township until 1884, when he went west, seeing the country and farming in different sections. He was convinced, however, that Illinois offered him better inducements as a home, so he returned, residing one year in Copley township and then, in 1898, settling on the farm where he now resides. It consists of two hundred and eighty-five acres and is owned by C. S. Clark. Mr. Nelson is engaged in general farming and makes a specialty of raising hogs, cattle and horses.

In 1903 Mr. Nelson was united in marriage to Miss Matilda Johnson, a native of Knox county, Illinois, and a daughter of Lewis Johnson. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have become the parents of two children, Roland J. and Earl W. Mr. Nelson has been a lifelong republican and his convictions are strong in the principles of this party. He served for two consecutive terms as road commissioner of Victoria township, during which time he was also treasurer of the board of road supervisors. For three years he was out of office and now is serving a third term. Mr. Nelson is not only industrious and enterprising but is also a man of high moral character and is highly esteemed both as a farmer and business man throughout the township.

FRANCIS HURLBUT.

Francis Hurlbut, who is living retired on his farm six miles northwest of Williamsfield, was born in New Hampshire on June 22, 1837, and is a son of Albia and Laura (Osgood) Hurlbut. The father, who was a physician, was also a native of New Hampshire, his birth there occurring in 1796. He continued to make that state his home until 1840 when with his wife and family he came to Illinois, locating on the farm where our subject now resides. Here he passed the remainder of his days, his death occurring at the age of sixty-four years. Eight children were born unto Mr. and Mrs. Hurlbut, of whom the four eldest, Hubbard, Edmund, Nathaniel and Laura, and the youngest, Charles, are all deceased. Those living are: Fred, who is the fifth in order of birth; Susan; and Francis.

Francis Hurlbut was only a child of three years when he accompanied his parents on their removal from New Hampshire to Illinois and was reared on the farm where he is now living, obtaining his education in the district schools of the vicinity. In common with the majority of pioneer farmer lads he early began to assist with the plowing, seeding and harvesting, as well as with the care of the stock, being thoroughly trained in the practical methods of agriculture under the capable supervision of his father. His duties were increased with the passing years in accordance with the development of his strength and sense of responsibility and by the time he had attained his maturity he was a skilled agriculturist. On August 1, 1862, he put beyond him all other considerations to follow his country's call for men in the great strife between the north and south and enlisted as private in Company K, Eighty-third Regiment, Illinois Volunteers. The rendezvous was at Monmouth, Illinois, hence they were ordered south, landing first at Fort Henry, then at Fort Donelson, where he took part in the second battle at that place. May 6, 1863, he was discharged and ordered home on account of disability, his lungs being affected by the trying climate. He returned to the old homestead, where he has resided seventy-one years with the exception of the term of enlistment. It is the only home he has ever known and is endeared to him by the associations from his childhood to the present. The entire period of his active life was devoted to the further improvement of this place, in the cultivation of which his two sons are now engaged. The fields have been brought under high cultivation, the improvements are all up-to-date and substantial and it is numbered among the attractive and valuable properties of the community.

For his wife and helpmate on the journey of life, Mr. Hurlbut chose Miss Martha Wallack, who passed away April 10, 1911, aged sixty-six, being born in Pennsylvania, September 13, 1844.

Seven children were born unto Mr. and Mrs. Hurlbut, four of whom are deceased, namely: Frank, Nettie and Mary, who are the three eldest; and John, who is the fifth in order of birth. A daughter and two sons are living: Blanche S., who married Lester Sherman; Bert, unmarried; and Fred, who wedded Rilla Tucker. Both are engaged in the operation of their father's farm.

In politics Mr. Hurlbut has always been a stanch republican, and during his early years served as road commissioner in this township. He was also elected constable, but refused to qualify for the office. He is one of those who have lived through the great formative period of the state's development, witnessing the primitive conditions of pioneer life give way to those of a newer civilization, as the railroad has superseded the stage coach and the telephone and telegraph the mounted messenger.

JAMES M. McMASTER.

James M. McMaster, who since March, 1906, has resided on his farm of one hundred and sixty acres, on section 14 of Victoria township, was born in Walnut Grove township, Knox county, August 8, 1867, the son of David S. and Susan E. (Multer) McMaster. The father now resides on his farm in Copley township, where the family has lived for several years. The mother, who was a member of the Oneida Presbyterian church, died at the age of sixty-five years and is buried in Oneida cemetery. In their family were six sons and one daughter, of whom one son and the daughter are now deceased.

James M. McMaster received his early education in the common schools in Copley township and later attended the Oneida high school, after which he remained with his father, helping to operate the home place until he was twenty-seven years of age. At that time he began farming on his own account, spending one year in Copley township on a farm near Oneida, subsequent to which he moved to Victoria, where he resided until he came to his present home. He purchased what was known as the Vaughn farm, which contained all the present buildings, in September, 1905, and moved on it in March of the following year. He engages in general farming, selling yearly a great deal of grain, and also raises quite a large number of hogs and horses.

On the 2d of July, 1894, Mr. McMaster was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Reynolds, who was born in Victoria, November 1, 1868, and is the daughter of Captain G. W. Reynolds. She received her education in the public schools of Victoria and in Knox College at Galesburg. Mr. and Mrs. McMaster have become the parents of two children: Eselwyn, who was born October 15, 1896, and is attending high school in Galesburg, belonging to the class of 1913; and Susan, born April 15, 1901, who is a student in the common schools in Victoria township. In politics Mr. McMaster votes with the republican party, and fraternally he is identified with Oneida Lodge, No. 337, A. F. & A. M. He gives his support to all measures which tend to advance the welfare of the community and is especially interested in the cause of education, having rendered excellent service in the capacity of school director in Victoria township.

WILLIAM D. CRAIG.

William D. Craig, the owner of a fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres on section 15, Victoria township, is one of the representative stockmen of the state. A native of Knox county, his birth occurred on a farm in Copley township on the 28th of February, 1862, his parents being William and Isabelle (Martin) Craig. They were born, reared and married in Scotland, whence they emigrated during the early years of their domestic life to the United States. William Craig engaged in coal mining in his native land and during the first period of his residence in this country, but he subsequently turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, in which he met with a gratifying degree of success. He farmed in Copley township for a time, but later came to Victoria, where he acquired extensive and valuable holdings. Thrifty and energetic, he applied himself tirelessly to whatever he undertook, directing his activities with clear judgment and intelligence. At the time of his death he owned the farm now belonging to G. L. Hedstrom and three hundred and twenty acres of land on section 15, where he was living. One-half of the latter is now the property of his son William D. Mr. Craig passed away on his homestead at the age of sixty-three years, but the mother was seventy-three at the time of her death, which occurred at the home of her sister, Mrs. Margaret Webster, of Stark county, Illinois. Both parents are buried in the cemetery at Victoria. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church and the father was affiliated with the Masonic lodge at Altona. He was a stanch republican in his political views and was several times called to public office, having served as supervisor and school director in his township. Twelve children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Craig, nine of whom lived to attain maturity, as follows: Agnes; Belle; Margaret; Mary, who is deceased; James; William D., our subject; Mattie; Joseph, who is deceased; and Jennie.

William D. Craig was reared on the farm where he now resides in Victoria township, obtaining his education in the common schools. In common with the majority of country lads he early began to assist with the work of the fields and care of the stock, and after laying aside his text-books his entire attention was given to agricultural pursuits. After the death of his father he purchased the interest of the other heirs in one-half of the old homestead, and here he has ever since resided. During the period of his ownership he has wrought many improvements in the place, including the erection of all of the buildings now standing. He has always taken great pride in his property and has constructed large, commodious barns, substantial outbuildings and a comfortable farm house. As his circumstances have warranted, from time to time he has installed various modern comforts and appliances and now owns one of the best equipped and most highly improved farms in the community. His fields are devoted to such cereals as are best adapted to the soil, and annually yield him abundant harvests, the greater portion of which he sells. Of recent years, however, Mr. Craig has practically given up the cultivation of his land, the greater portion of which he is renting for one-half of the crops, and gives his entire attention to the breeding and raising of stock. He raises horses and cattle to some extent but makes a specialty of raising thoroughbred Chester White hogs. They are a very pure breed and he has twice been awarded the first prize on his exhibit at the state fair at Springfield, and has won both the first and second prizes at the local county fair. This year, 1911, he raised ninety of these hogs, all of which will command a high price for breeding purposes. Mr. Craig has been very successful in both farming and stock-raising and in addition to his fine country property is the owner of a nice residence in Victoria, that commands the highest rental of any dwelling house in the town.

In January, 1892, Mr. Craig was united in marriage to Miss Emma Larson, who was born and reared in Victoria township, a daughter of Peter S. and Katherine Larson. The father is now deceased, but the mother is still living and continues to make her home in Victoria township. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Craig, as follows: Jennie, Dewey and Eva.

Mr. Craig attends the Methodist Episcopal church, toward the support of which he liberally contributes, and Mrs. Craig is a member of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church of Victoria. His fraternal relations are confined to his membership in the Modern Woodmen of America, and in politics he is a republican. He takes an active interest in all local affairs and at the present time is discharging the duties of school director and trustee. Mr. Craig is one of the progressive and enterprising agriculturists of Victoria township, where he is held in high esteem both by reason of his excellent business qualities and his many fine personal attributes.

JACOB E. MORGAN.

Jacob E. Morgan is a well known farmer of Lynn township, having spent his entire life in this locality, his birth having occurred on the old Morgan homestead August 2, 1867. He traces his ancestry back to Edward Morgan, who married Margaret Rittenhouse, and their son Morgan Morgan married Ann Roberts, a daughter of John Roberts, who fought for American independence in the Revolutionary war. Benjamin Morgan, a son of the latter couple and the grandfather of our subject, married Tacy Stroud in 1800. Among their children was John Rittenhouse Morgan, the father of our subject, who was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, April 5, 1809. He passed through the experiences of pioneer life in Ohio and later in Indiana, from which state he came to Illinois. He first married Rachel Bicknell and after her death wedded her sister Susan Bicknell, who was born at Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania, in 1826. Her father, George Bicknell, who was a mechanic by trade, settled in Indiana at an early day and in 1851 brought his family to Knox county, Illinois, entering land in Lynn township. After his wife's death he took up his abode in best equipped and most highly improved farms in the community. His fields are devoted to such cereals as are best adapted to the soil, and annually yield him abundant harvests, the greater portion of which he sells. Of recent years, however, Mr. Craig has practically given up the cultivation of his land, the greater portion of which he is renting for one-half of the crops, and gives his entire attention to the breeding and raising of stock. He raises horses and cattle to some extent but makes a specialty of raising thoroughbred Chester White hogs. They are a very pure breed and he has twice been awarded the first prize on his exhibit at the state fair at Springfield, and has won both the first and second prizes at the local county fair. This year, 1911, he raised ninety of these hogs, all of which will command a high price for breeding purposes. Mr. Craig has been very successful in both farming and stock-raising and in addition to his fine country property is the owner of a nice residence in Victoria, that commands the highest rental of any dwelling house in the town.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN R. MORGAN

In January, 1892, Mr. Craig was united in marriage to Miss Emma Larson, who was born and reared in Victoria township, a daughter of Peter S. and Katherine Larson. The father is now deceased, but the mother is still living and continues to make her home in Victoria township. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Craig, as follows: Jennie, Dewey and Eva.

Mr. Craig attends the Methodist Episcopal church, toward the support of which he liberally contributes, and Mrs. Craig is a member of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church of Victoria. His fraternal relations are confined to his membership in the Modern Woodmen of America, and in politics he is a republican. He takes an active interest in all local affairs and at the present time is discharging the duties of school director and trustee. Mr. Craig is one of the progressive and enterprising agriculturists of Victoria township, where he is held in high esteem both by reason of his excellent business qualities and his many fine personal attributes.

JACOB E. MORGAN.

Jacob E. Morgan is a well known farmer of Lynn township, having spent his entire life in this locality, his birth having occurred on the old Morgan homestead August 2, 1867. He traces his ancestry back to Edward Morgan, who married Margaret Rittenhouse, and their son Morgan Morgan married Ann Roberts, a daughter of John Roberts, who fought for American independence in the Revolutionary war. Benjamin Morgan, a son of the latter couple and the grandfather of our subject, married Tacy Stroud in 1800. Among their children was John Rittenhouse Morgan, the father of our subject, who was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, April 5, 1809. He passed through the experiences of pioneer life in Ohio and later in Indiana, from which state he came to Illinois. He first married Rachel Bicknell and after her death wedded her sister Susan Bicknell, who was born at Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania, in 1826. Her father, George Bicknell, who was a mechanic by trade, settled in Indiana at an early day and in 1851 brought his family to Knox county, Illinois, entering land in Lynn township. After his wife's death he took up his abode in La Fayette, this state, where he passed away in 1866, at the age of sixty-four years. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Susan Moore, died in 1851, at the age of fifty-seven years. In their family were six children: Rachel and Sarah, both deceased; Mary, who is living with a daughter at the age of eighty-eight years; George and Jacob, both deceased; and Robert P., a resident of Alliance, Nebraska. After losing his first wife Mr. Bicknell married Catherine Hagar, who was the widow of Peter Hagar. The Bicknell family, of which Mrs. John R. Morgan was a representative, was an old one of Pennsylvania, representatives of the name coming from England and settling in Philadelphia prior to the Revolutionary war. Her grandfather, Charles Bicknell, ran a stage from Philadelphia to Baltimore and on his way home contracted yellow fever, which caused his death when he was thirty-two years of age. His son, the father of Mrs. Morgan, became a soldier of the war of 1812 at the age of seventeen years. He was reared by his foster father, who had been drafted and he took his place in the army, serving until honorably discharged. For his services he received a land patent, which he located in Walnut Grove township, Knox county. His daughter Mrs. John R. Morgan had but little opportunity to secure an education. She was twelve years of age when her parents removed from Pennsylvania to Indiana and in 1847 she became the wife of John R. Morgan. They became pioneer residents of Brunertown, Indiana, where the grandfather took up land and built a cabin, living there two years before he made the journey by team and wagon to Illinois, traveling by way of Peoria to Centerville. Subsequently they lived in Knox county, settling on what has since been known as the Morgan homestead. They first lived in a deserted cabin until the present residence was built in 1852. There they made their home until the father was called to his final rest. The mother is now living with her daughter and is one of the honored pioneer women of this part of the state. When she became a resident of Knox county her neighbors were the Swedish colony at Bishop Hill and there was also a family by the name of Fraker at Fraker's Grove. Joseph Simeon and Jonathan Gibbs and the Collinson family likewise lived in the northern part of the county. Peoria was the nearest market. Unto Mr. and Mrs. John R. Morgan were born eight children, of whom six are now living. George B., a resident of Fort Scott, Kansas, married Alice Robinson and has eight children. Lydia Jane is the wife of George Spidle, of Schuyler, Nebraska, and they have three children. Mary Ellen is the wife of Thomas C. Heaton, living on the old homestead, and they have four children. Charles E., of Columbus, Nebraska, married Lida Munsie and has six children. Morris J., living at Ainsworth, Nebraska, wedded Mary Wagner and has ten children. Jacob E. is the youngest of the family.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN R. MORGAN

The last named pursued his education in the public schools to the age of fourteen years and during the remaining seven years of his minority worked with his father on the old home farm. He afterward engaged in cultivating the home place on his own account for four years and on the expiration of that period came to his present farm in Lynn township, where he has since carried on general agricultural pursuits and stock-raising. He has a well developed property, the fields responding readily to the care and labor which he bestows upon them, and in his barns and pastures are found good grades of stock. He is likewise interested in the Farmers Elevator of Galva and in the Cooperative Bank of that place, and is an enterprising, progressive business man whose judgment is sound and whose labors are resultant.

Jacob E. Morgan was united in marriage to Miss Sarah J. Collinson, who was born in Walnut Grove township, January 16, 1872, and is a daughter of Thomas W. and Sarah F. (Brooks) Collinson. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan became parents of two children: Eugene, born September 1, 1890; and Ethel, born April 13, 1892.

The family are well known and have an extensive circle of friends in this part of the county. The parents are members of the Baptist church of Galva and Mr. Morgan belongs also to the Modern Woodmen Camp of that place. In politics he is a republican, active in support of the party. He was elected a member of the board of trustees of Lynn township and served for three terms, and his connection with the school board covers altogether nine years. He stands for progress and advancement at all times, whether in business or in public affairs, and he has a wide and favorable acquaintance in this county where his entire life has been passed.

CHARLES SPENCER, Sr.

On October 21, 1911, it was seventy-one years since Charles Spencer, Sr., the oldest settler in Truro township, in point of years of continuous residence, first located here. During the greater part of that period he was engaged in agricultural pursuits, but he is now living retired in Williamsfield, enjoying the ease and comfort that is the just heritage of his long years of industry and thrift. He was born in Erie county, Pennsylvania, on the 4th of May, 1836, and is a son of J. N. and Maria (Steaver) Spencer. The father was a native of Maine, his birth having there occurred on the 22d of December, 1810, while the mother was born in Pennsylvania on December 16, 1810. They were married in Pennsylvania and there they spent the early years of their domestic life, but in 1840 they came to Illinois. On the 21st of October of that year they located in Truro township and in 1843 settled on one hundred and twenty acres of land on section 10, that township, that the father secured from the government, his deeds bearing the signature of James K. Polk. The first house erected for the family was a log house and was one of the oldest residences in the township and probably in the county. This farm, which has been in possession of the Spencer family for over seventy years, is now being operated by our subject's son-in-law, Edward F. Mosher. It was here on the 28th of June, 1856, that the father passed away, but the mother survived until March 8, 1888.

Charles Spencer was a child of four years when he accompanied his people on their removal to Knox county, and here he has ever since made his home. When old enough to begin his education he was sent to the little log schoolhouse in the vicinity of his home, and there he pursued the common branches. The country was very sparsely settled at that period and the primitive conditions that exist in all frontier settlements prevailed here. The methods of instruction were as crude as the building, and the pupils acquired little more than a practical understanding of the "three R's." While attending school he assisted his father with the farm work, thus qualifying himself to become self-dependent at a very early age. When he was twenty his father passed away, and the management of the farm very largely devolved upon him from that time. He diligently applied himself to the operation of the fields and the raising of stock, and ultimately purchased the property, which he still owns. He continuously devoted himself to the further improvement and cultivation of his farm until 1907, when he withdrew from active work and retired to Williamsfield, where he continues to reside. His land is well improved and under high cultivation and is numbered among the valuable properties of the township. The appearance of his fields and the abundant harvests annually gathered therefrom manifested the practical ideas followed in the direction of their cultivation, as well as his careful supervision.

On the 28th of October, 1858, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Spencer and Miss Rosina Doty, who was born in Ohio, where she continued to make her home until 1853, when she accompanied her people on their removal to Illinois. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer there have been born seven children. Mary, who is the eldest of the family, married Oliver Cadwell, who died on December 27, 1910, and by him she had five sons, four of whom are living; and three daughters. Nathaniel, who is engaged in farming on section 10, Truro township, married Carrie Edley. Frank Edward died aged seven years. Deborah married Lincoln Huber, a farmer of this township, and they have eleven children. Emma J. married Edward F. Mosher, who is operating the old Spencer homestead, and they have had seven children, two of whom are deceased. Rose married Otto Gross, who is a resident of Stark county, and they have three children. Charles, who is living in Peoria county, married Iva King and they have seven children.

His political support Mr. Spencer has always given to the democratic party, and while residing on the farm he served as school director and road commissioner. Through the long period of his residence in the county, Mr. Spencer has witnessed many most interesting changes with the development of the natural resources and the introduction of modern commercial and industrial methods. The prairies of half a century ago have been converted into highly improved and most productive farms, while the villages and settlements have grown into bustling cities and thriving towns.

OLIVER O. CADWELL.

With the passing away of Oliver O. Cadwell on the 10th of December, 1910, Truro township lost one of her native sons and highly estimable citizens. He had been successfully identified with the commercial activities of the county for over thirty years, and was known as one of the capable business men of the township. His birth occurred in Truro township in 1847, and he was a son of George Cadwell, who was a native of Pennsylvania. The father came from the Keystone state to Illinois in 1842, locating in Knox county, where for many years he was engaged in farming.

In the acquirement of his education Oliver O. Cadwell attended the district schools and later those of Kewanee. When old enough to begin his business career he laid aside his text-books and took a position in a store. He continued to clerk until he had attained the age of thirty-one years, when he engaged in business for himself in Truro township. Possessing an unusual aptitude for successful management and keen foresight he made a success of this undertaking, and from then until his death was identified with the commercial life of the county. He carried a good assortment of general merchandise, that he offered at reasonable prices, and this together with his gracious and accommodating manner enabled him to build up a large patronage. As the years passed he enlarged his business and acquired property interests, owning a fine farm of forty acres in Truro township, with good improvements.

Mr. Cadwell married Miss Mary M. Spencer and they became the parents of eight children. Thomas, who is operating a blacksmith shop on the Cadwell farm, married Bessie Loman and they have one child, Harley. Amos, who was the second in order of birth, died. Sally married Clarence Robinson of Williamsfield and they have three children, Bernice, Walter and Irene. Delbert is living at home with his mother and operating the store. Climena married Oscar Smith of Williamsfield and they have one child, Glenn. Charles, Ruth and Clyde, the three youngest members of the family, are all living at home.

In the public life of the township Mr. Cadwell always exerted considerable influence, owing to his comprehensive grasp of local conditions and keen insight into all political matters. His political support was given to the republican party and for many years he was treasurer of the township and he also served as school director. There was general regret and deep mourning when he passed away, not only in his immediate family and friends, but among all who had known him in either a social or business way, as he was a man of many fine qualities and rare traits of character that won him the regard of all with whom he came in contact.

C. J. CARLSON.

C. J. Carlson, a prosperous stockman and agriculturist of Victoria township, owns four hundred acres of land located on section 15. He was born in Småland, Sweden, on the 5th of December, 1853. The parents always resided in the land of their birth, and there the mother passed away in 1894 and the father in 1897. They were both members of the Lutheran church.

Agricultural pursuits have always engaged the attention of C. J. Carlson, who was reared and educated in his native land, where he passed the first twenty-two years of his life. Having decided that it was impossible for him to realize his ambitions in his own country in 1875 he took passage for the United States, coming directly to Knox county. Upon his arrival here he first located in the vicinity of Galesburg, where he worked out by the month as a farm hand for two years. At the expiration of that period he came to Victoria township, continuing in the same occupation for three years. He was subsequently married and located on the place where he now lives. During the long period of his ownership, Mr. Carlson has wrought many changes in the farm that have added greatly to its appearance as well as value. He has erected a number of new buildings and remodeled the old and has also installed various modern appliances and conveniences, making his one of the best equipped farms in the community. His fields have been brought to a high state of productivity and now annually yield abundant harvests that amply reward him for the labor expended in their tilling. In connection with general farming he raises stock of a good grade, and is now and has been for the past two years sole owner of a thoroughbred Norman stallion, Vanity Fair. As he has always been a hard working, enterprising man, who has used good judgment and intelligence in the direction of his undertakings, Mr. Carlson has prospered and is known as one of the substantial and highly capable farmers of the county.

Mr. Carlson completed his arrangements for a home upon his marriage to Miss Anna Louisa Tunberg, who is also a native of Sweden and a daughter of Andrew Anderson. Eight children have been born to them as follows: Esther Cordelia, the wife of Victor Crantz, of Victoria, by whom she has had two children, Carl and Paul; Clarence A., who is unmarried and living in Chicago; Anna Marie, at home; Carl August, now living on his father's farm, who married Grace Sornberger and has two children, Doris and Charles; and Roy, Beda, Charles and Forrest, all of whom are at home.

The family attend the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church at Victoria, in which the parents hold membership, and Mr. Carlson and four of his sons belong to the Modern Woodmen of America. When first granted the right of franchise he gave his support to the men and measures of the greenback party, but later became a democrat. He has always assumed his share of the township governmental duties and has been assessor of his township. Although he has met with the various disappointments and hardships that usually fall to the lot of everyone in a strange country, Mr. Carlson has never had reason to regret the transference of his allegiance to the United States. He has applied himself closely and for many years worked unceasingly and practiced the most rigid economy, but he has prospered and now owns one of the valuable properties of Victoria township.

S. W. MOSHER.

S. W. Mosher, a well known agriculturist of Victoria township, was born on the place where he is now residing on the 15th of March, 1853. His father, Allen Mosher, was a native of the state of New York, whence he removed in his early manhood to Ohio. From there he came to Illinois with the family of Eli Johnson, whose daughter Mary Ann he married after the family settled in Knox county. They were among the early pioneers of this section and the old house they occupied when they first came is still standing. Agricultural pursuits always engaged the attention of Allen Mosher, who devoted the remainder of his life to the further improvement of his farm, and there passed away at the age of forty-seven years. Nine children were born unto Mr. and Mrs.

Mosher, all of whom are now deceased with the exception of our subject and one other son, Charles.

The educational advantages of S. W. Mosher were confined to the district schools in the vicinity of his home, and while there engaged in mastering the common branches he assisted in the work of the farm. When he laid aside his text-books he had a good understanding of the practical methods of agriculture, and thereafter gave his undivided attention to the work of the fields. His entire life has been spent on his present farm, which is endeared to him by the associations of childhood and youth, as well as those of his manhood. He has one hundred and thirty-four acres of land, all under high cultivation. His fields are annually planted in the cereals to which the soil is best adapted, and under his capable care and supervision yield abundant harvests, the quality of which is fully equal to the quantity. In connection with general farming Mr. Mosher breeds and raises cattle of a good grade, and thus also realizes good returns. He has effected extensive improvements in the place during the period of his ownership, having erected all of the buildings now standing, in addition to which he has from time to time added various other conveniences, consistent with the progressive spirit that characterizes his undertakings. The place is well kept up and cared for, everything about it manifesting the capable management and the thrift that invariably accompany prosperity.

In 1889 Mr. Mosher was united in marriage to Miss Anna Peterson, a daughter of Daniel Peterson, and a native of Sweden, whence she was brought to the United States as a child of seven years.

His political allegiance Mr. Mosher accords to such men and measures as he deems best qualified to subserve the highest interests of the community, irrespective of party affiliation. As he has always lived on his farm, which is located six and a half miles northwest of Williamsfield, he is well known to the citizens of that entire community, who accord him the esteem and respect merited by his many substantial qualities, that have well withstood the crucial test of the passing years.

G. W. ELLIOTT.

One of Knox county's patriotic sons, who gave his services in defense of the Union on the battlefields of the south, was G. W. Elliott, for many years successfully identified with the farming interests of the county, but now living retired in Williamsfield. His birth occurred on his father's farm on the 18th of October, 1842, his parents being Thomas and Hannah (Reese) Elliott, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Virginia. They were married in Ohio, but soon thereafter crossed the prairies to Illinois, being among the early pioneers of Knox county. In 1836 they located on a farm in Persifer township, that he operated for twenty years, when disposing of it he removed to Victoria township. There he acquired one hundred and sixty acres of land and industriously applied himself to its further cultivation until 1868. Selling his homestead he removed with his wife and family to Missouri, where he bought eighty acres of land, that he continued to operate until his death. The family of Mr.

and Mrs. Elliott numbered fourteen, six of whom are living: George W., our subject; and Samantha, Sarah, Elizabeth, Hannah and Thomas.

The boyhood and youth of G. W. Elliott were spent on the farm where he was born and in Persifer township, his education being pursued in the district schools. Pioneer conditions prevailed throughout the country at that period, and there were but limited opportunities for social enjoyment outside of the family, as the settlers were all busily engaged in striving to establish homes, and place their land under cultivation. In the work of the farm he early began to assist his father, assuming many of the tasks that were really a man's work when little more than a boy. When he attained his majority he enlisted in Company D, Sixty-Ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry and went to the battlefields of the south. Upon receiving his discharge he returned to Knox county and purchased forty acres of land in Victoria township. He was an energetic, enterprising young man and his well directed efforts met with a gratifying degree of prosperity, so that as time passed he was able to increase his possessions until he owned two hundred and twenty acres of fine land. As his circumstances warranted with the passing years he improved his farm by the addition of many modern conveniences and appliances; indicative of the progressive methods he pursued in all of his undertakings. Good barns and outbuildings as well as a comfortable residence were erected on his farm, where he has spent the greater part of his life.

For his wife Mr. Elliott chose Miss Albina Mosher, who passed away on July 24, 1906. Mrs. Elliott was a daughter of Seneca and Nancy (Buck) Mosher, well known among the early residents of Knox county. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott there were born six children, five of whom are living, as follows: James F., Emma, Susan A., Hannah and John. George, the fifth in order of birth, is deceased.

A stalwart republican, Mr. Elliott has ever given his political support to the men and measures of that party, considering that their policy is best adapted to protect the interests of the majority. In his early years he took an active interest in all township affairs and served as constable, school director and pathmaster. In both his public and private life, Mr. Elliott has ever manifested the steadfast purpose, upright conduct and incorruptible integrity, consistent with the high principles he advocates in all transactions between man and man.

OLE ANDERSON.

Ole Anderson, an old settler of Sparta township, passed away December 1, 1900. He was a native of Christiansand, Norway, born February 18, 1820. In 1849 he emigrated to America and came to the Swedish settlement at Bishop Hill, Henry county, Illinois. He was a poor man and for three years worked by the month as a farm hand. In 1852 he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of raw prairie land in Sparta township and that remained his home until his death. His widow still resides on the place. She was Miss Betsey Anderson, a native of Sweden, born May 6, 1839. By her marriage to Ole Anderson, which was celebrated on the 7th of July, 1856, she had eleven children, as follows: Harriett, the wife of E. A. Werteen, of Galesburg, Illinois; A. O., an agriculturist of Sparta township; Albert, who is a resident of Oklahoma; Annie, now Mrs. Volk, of Sparta township; Jennie, the wife of Scott McKibbin, of Copley township; Christ, living in Sparta township; Sophia, the wife of Leonard Webber, of Wataga, Illinois; William, who makes his home in Sparta township; Henry, of Appleton, Illinois; and Emma and Arthur, both at home with their mother.

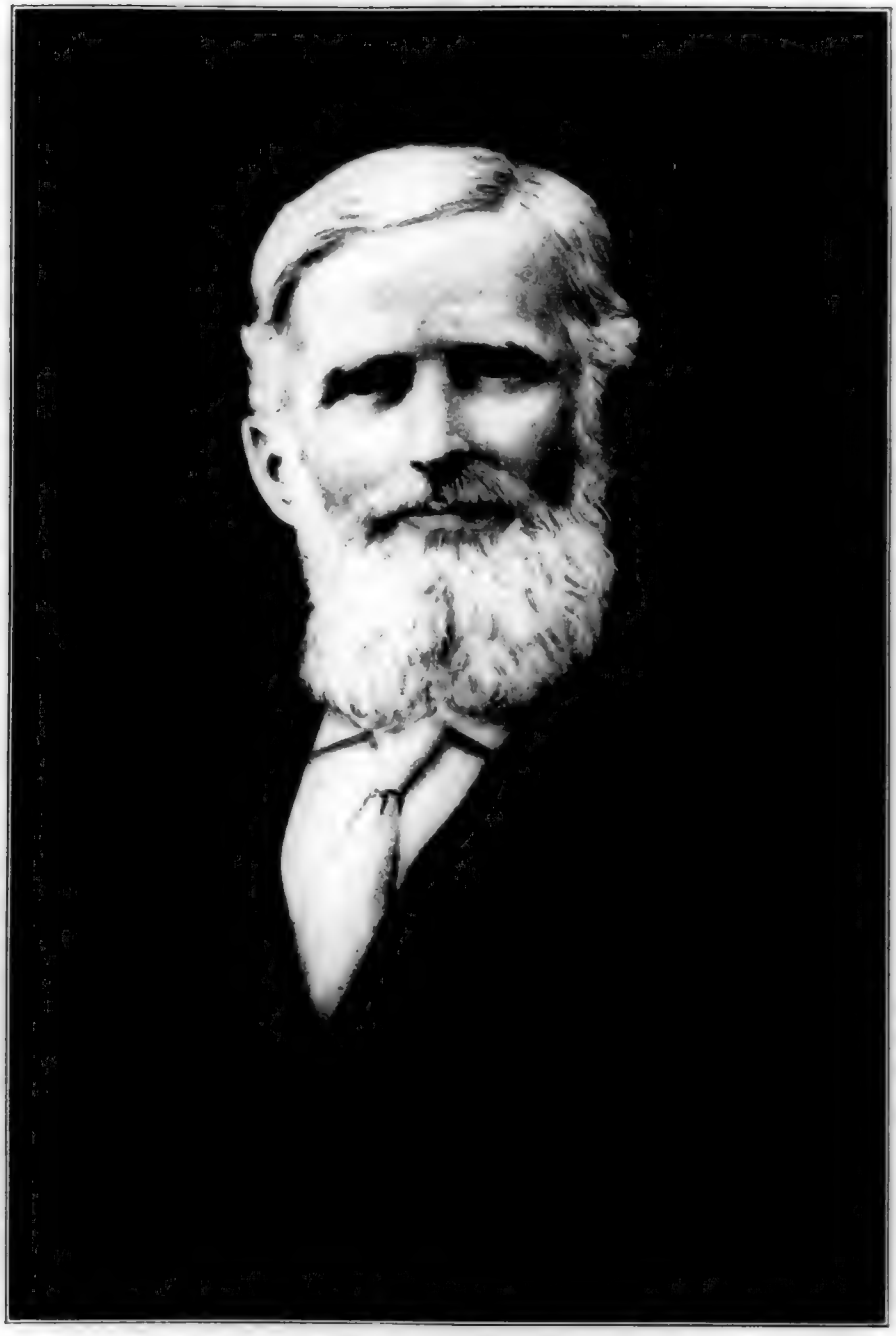
Mr. Anderson was a very successful man and at the time of his death owned twelve hundred acres of land in Knox county and sixteen sections of land in Texas. He was a member of the Methodist church and gave his political allegiance to the republican party.

JOSIAH HAMILTON.

Josiah Hamilton, who died in Galesburg, November 23, 1911, resided within the borders of Knox county for more than half a century and for years was actively successfully identified with its agricultural and mercantile interests. He was long numbered among the prominent citizens of the community. His birth occurred in Venango county, Pennsylvania, on the 23rd of January, 1829, his parents being Richard and Sarah (Reynolds) Hamilton, the former a native of the Keystone state and the latter of Birmingham, England. They were married in Pennsylvania and there spent the remainder of their lives, passing away in the faith of the Presbyterian church. Richard Hamilton, whose demise occurred in 1844, was a democrat in politics and ably served in the capacity of justice of the peace. Their children were thirteen in number, namely, James, William, Hugh, Edward, John, Josiah, Celina, Louisa, Mary, Lavina, Lida, Cynthia and Emeline, all now deceased.

Josiah Hamilton acquired his education in the schools of his native state. At the age of seventeen he sought to impart his knowledge to others by teaching in the country schools, which he continued to do for a number of years, during the winter months, following agriculture in the summer time. In the spring of 1854, he with a cousin, Walker Hamilton, made an extensive trip through Illinois and Iowa, spending the season in these two states, his cousin returning in the fall, while he remained in Knox county and taught the winter school in a log school house which stood about six miles east of Galesburg, on what has since been known as the William Reynolds farm, returning to his native state in the spring to cultivate a small farm of his own near Cherry Tree, Pennsylvania, which he had been able to purchase through industry and economy. In 1857, he returned to Knox county, Illinois, making his home with Jacob Sipherd, east of Galesburg, farming rented land during the summer and teaching school in the winter. On March 25, 1858, he was wedded at Peoria, Illinois, by Rev. Robert Johnson, to Miss Isabella N. Davidson, daughter of George and Mary Davidson, of Cumberland county, Pennsylvania. A son, William Davidson, was born unto them and is still living in Galesburg.

JOSIAH HAMILTON



lows: Harriett, the wife of E. A. Werteen, of Galesburg, Illinois; A. O., an agriculturist of Sparta township; Albert, who is a resident of Oklahoma; Annie, now Mrs. Volk, of Sparta township; Jennie, the wife of Scott McKibbin, of Copley township; Christ, living in Sparta township; Sophia, the wife of Leonard Webber, of Wataga, Illinois; William, who makes his home in Sparta township; Henry, of Appleton, Illinois; and Emma and Arthur, both at home with their mother.

Mr. Anderson was a very successful man and at the time of his death owned twelve hundred acres of land in Knox county and sixteen sections of land in Texas. He was a member of the Methodist church and gave his political allegiance to the republican party.

JOSIAH HAMILTON.

Josiah Hamilton, who died in Galesburg, November 23, 1911, resided within the borders of Knox county for more than half a century and for years was actively successfully identified with its agricultural and mercantile interests. He was long numbered among the prominent citizens of the community. His birth occurred in Venango county, Pennsylvania, on the 23rd of January, 1829, his parents being Richard and Sarah (Reynolds) Hamilton, the former a native of the Keystone state and the latter of Birmingham, England. They were married in Pennsylvania and there spent the remainder of their lives, passing away in the faith of the Presbyterian church. Richard Hamilton, whose demise occurred in 1844, was a democrat in politics and ably served in the capacity of justice of the peace. Their children were thirteen in number, namely, James, William, Hugh, Edward, John, Josiah, Celina, Louisa, Mary, Lavina, Lida, Cynthia and Emeline, all now deceased.

Josiah Hamilton acquired his education in the schools of his native state. At the age of seventeen he sought to impart his knowledge to others by teaching in the country schools, which he continued to do for a number of years, during the winter months, following agriculture in the summer time. In the spring of 1854, he with a cousin, Walker Hamilton, made an extensive trip through Illinois and Iowa, spending the season in these two states, his cousin returning in the fall, while he remained in Knox county and taught the winter school in a log school house which stood about six miles east of Galesburg, on what has since been known as the William Reynolds farm, returning to his native state in the spring to cultivate a small farm of his own near Cherry Tree, Pennsylvania, which he had been able to purchase through industry and economy. In 1857, he returned to Knox county, Illinois, making his home with Jacob Sipherd, east of Galesburg, farming rented land during the summer and teaching school in the winter. On March 25, 1858, he was wedded at Peoria, Illinois, by Rev. Robert Johnson, to Miss Isabella N. Davidson, daughter of George and Mary Davidson, of Cumberland county, Pennsylvania. A son, William Davidson, was born unto them and is still living in Galesburg.

JOSIAH HAMILTON

The first year of his married life was spent on a farm south of Knoxville and in the city of Knoxville. The spring of 1859 he moved on the Ralph Spooner farm northeast of Galesburg. During the same year he sold his farm in Pennsylvania and purchased a farm in Knox county, three and one-half miles northeast of Knoxville, where he continued to reside until the spring of 1883, when he disposed of the farm and took up his abode in Galesburg. In January, 1875, he was instrumental in the organization of The Galesburg Knox County Farmers Mutual Fire and Lightning Insurance Company, being one of the incorporators and holding the office of secretary thirty-one years. In January, 1897, he assisted in organizing The Galesburg District Mutual Wind Storm Insurance Company, comprising nine counties, and served as secretary for thirteen years.

In March, 1883, he purchased the Taylor residence on East Main street, in Galesburg, which was his home the remainder of his life. He embarked in the mercantile business in the spring of 1883, buying out the firm of Dore & Ryan on East Main street, near the corner of Cherry, where for six years he conducted a grocery store. After disposing of the store in 1889, he gave all his time and energy as secretary of the farmers insurance companies until his mature years compelled him to retire from active life.

The wife and mother passed away February 28, 1893, and on the 26th of September, 1899, Mr. Hamilton was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Mary E. Nation, the widow of Vickery Nation, and a daughter of Fleming F. and Rebecca (Bridgeman) Denton, of Wataga, Illinois.

In politics Mr. Hamilton was a republican, loyally supporting the men and measures of that party. He served as a deacon in the Presbyterian church, of which his wife is also a devoted and consistent member. He had passed the eighty-second milestone on this earthly pilgrimage when called away and his well ordered life brought him not only a substantial competence but also the regard and esteem of an extensive circle of friends.

JONATHAN GIBBS.

General farming and stock-raising have always engaged the energies of Jonathan Gibbs, who owns two hundred and seventy-six acres of highly cultivated and well improved land on section 16, Victoria township. He was born in the township where he is now living on the 4th of October, 1854, his parents being Martin and Mary Ann (Moak) Gibbs. The father was born and reared in New Jersey, whence he removed to Illinois in his early manhood, locating on land on Walnut Creek in Lynn township, that he cultivated until his marriage. Subsequent to this event he removed to Victoria township, where he acquired one hundred and twenty acres of land that was also located on the creek. He energetically applied himself to the further improvements and cultivation of this place until his death at the age of fifty-nine years. The mother was fifty-eight when she passed away and was laid to rest in the Victoria cemetery as was also the father. The old homestead is now the property of Owen Couley. Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs became the parents of seven sons and one daughter, and five of the sons are still living. The father was one of the public-spirited, enterprising men of the community at that period and gave his political support to the republican party.

Jonathan Gibbs was reared in Victoria township and pursued his education in its district schools. After he had mastered the common branches he laid aside his text-books and gave his entire time and attention to assisting with the work of the home farm. He was an ambitious young man of practical ideas and diligent habits, who applied himself intelligently to anything he undertook. After his marriage he located on a farm a mile and a half southeast of his present place, residing there until he purchased the farm where he now lives, at that time the property of Jonathan Huble. It was well improved when Mr. Gibbs took possession but during the period of his ownership he has made innumerable changes, all of which have tended to improve and add to the value of the property. He has large commodious barns, good outbuildings and a comfortable residence, which are kept well in repair and present an appearance of thrift and prosperity. Here Mr. Gibbs is successfully engaged in general farming and stock-raising, evidencing in both pursuits the enterprise and sagacity that have characterized him from boyhood. He is now recognized as one of the substantial and competent agriculturists of the county, whose success is due to his persistent and intelligently directed efforts.

For his wife and helpmate Mr. Gibbs chose Miss Elizabeth Craver, who was born and reared in Lynn township and is a daughter of David and Elizabeth Craver, both of whom passed their latter years on their farm in Lynn township. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs. Stella, the eldest, became the wife of L. Stewart, of Copley township, by whom she has had one child, Lucille. Martin, who is operating a farm in Victoria township, a mile north of his father's place, married Mary Milroy, a daughter of Nat Milroy, and they have two sons, Dale and Dean. Clarence, who is the next in order of birth, is living at home. Glenn, who is also living on the home farm, married Edna Milroy.

Fraternally Mr. Gibbs is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America, and his political allegiance he gives to the republican party, but he has never been an office seeker. He is one of the highly regarded citizens of the community, where he is widely known, having passed the entire period of his life in the vicinity of his present home. Mr. Gibbs possesses many most estimable qualities that have been thoroughly tested during the long period of his residence in Victoria township, and never found wanting. He has high standards of citizenship, is loyal to his friends and true to every trust reposed in him, while his integrity is known to be incorruptible.

JOHN M. YOUNG.

John M. Young, for the past three years assessor of Victoria township, resides on section 26, where he rents one hundred and twenty acres of land that he has been cultivating for the past seven years. He was born in Victoria township on the 2d of May, 1869, and is a son of Robert and Martha (Dennis) Young, both natives of Ohio. The father left the Buckeye state at the age of four years, coming to Illinois, where he was reared and educated. Upon attaining his manhood he engaged in agricultural pursuits, acquiring one hundred and sixty acres of land in Victoria township, that is now in a high state of productivity. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Young, six of whom are residents of Knox county, and all are living with the exception of one.

The entire life of John M. Young has been spent in Knox county with the exception of six years when he lived in Kansas. He attended school in district No. 71 of this township, and after completing the common branches he engaged in farming, and has ever since been identified with this vocation. For the past seven years he has been engaged in general farming and stock-raising on the place where he now lives and has met with a good degree of success.

For his wife Mr. Young chose Miss May Suydam, a native of Victoria township and a daughter of Abraham and Lucinda Suydam, and they have become the parents of five children: Edna, Lynn, Edward, Clyde and Ila.

Ever since granted the right of franchise upon attaining his majority, Mr. Young has given his political support to the men and measures of the democratic party, considering their policy best adapted to subserve the interests of the majority. He takes an active and helpful interest in township affairs and has efficiently discharged the duties of assessor for three years, while for six he has been a director of the school he attended during his boyhood. Mr. Young is one of the well known residents of Victoria township, where his family have resided for more than a half century, during which time they have contributed their quota toward promoting its agricultural development.

WILLIAM McGAAN.

No history of Galesburg and Knox county would be complete without reference to William McGaan, now the oldest resident of this county, having passed the ninety-fifth milestone on life's journey. He was born in Croftfoot parish, in Ayrshire, Scotland, in 1817, and for some years has lived retired. His father, James McGaan, was a farmer by occupation and died at the age of eighty-two years, while his wife, who bore the maiden name of Jane Hunter, passed away at the age of sixty-six years. She was a daughter of James Hunter. The great-grandfather of William McGaan in the paternal line was a miller—the oldest miller in the family.

William McGaan when a boy of eleven years, being the oldest of the family, became the main support of his father during the harvest seasons. In Scotland farm lands were divided into mounts of fourteen feet in order to form a drain. Harvesting was done by cutting the grain with a scythe and William McGaan acted as forecutter, going ahead of the others and doing what was called shearing the grain. At that day two pounds were paid for harvest work to the men, while the women received a pound and a half, or the equivalent of about seven and a half dollars. When fifteen years of age William McGaan entered the service of a large farmer, contracting to remain nine years, his wages being six pounds or about thirty dollars per year and board. He received but one pair of shoes, which were supposed to last him an entire year. When his term of service had expired he entered the employ of a cousin as a trader, buying and selling grain for six years He was married at the age of twenty-eight and afterward engaged in buying and shipping potatoes, which were sent to Glasgow.

Mr. McGaan was united in marriage to Agnes Andrews, a daughter of James and Grace (Drennan) Andrews. She was a widow at the time of her marriage to Mr. McGaan and had one child, a son, who afterward served as steward on a merchant vessel during the Civil war and was lost at sea. Mrs. McGaan inherited a small mercantile establishment from her first husband but she sold this a year later. William McGaan was forty years of age when he came with his family to the new world, the voyage across the Atlantic consuming sixteen days. He left his family in Scotland and made his way to Altona, Illinois, and soon afterward the family arrived, but through a mistake were sent to Alton, instead of Altona. For a year Mr. McGaan worked with relatives in Copley township, thus supporting his family, which then consisted of wife and two sons, James and William. He also has a daughter, Mrs. Grace Austin. The father is now the only survivor of a family of six children, of whom one died in infancy. His two sisters have also passed away and one of his brothers left for Australia at the time when he came to America and died in that country.

At the age of twenty years William McGaan had managed to save from his meager earnings the sum of fifteen pounds. He arrived in America with only twenty sovereigns, but he was industrious and energetic and improved every opportunity of providing a comfortable living for his family. He also made for himself a creditable name in Knox county by reason of his honorable business dealing and straightforward methods. He is now living with his son Hugh McGaan at the advanced age of ninety-five years and is the oldest resident of Knox county. He has long been a member of the Presbyterian church and through his entire life has been faithful to its teachings.

HUGH McGAAN.

Hugh McGaan, who is a resident farmer of Walnut Grove township, was born in Copley township, this county, January 13, 1858. After attending the public schools he engaged in farming on the old homestead until his marriage and he now lives on the old McGaan farm, devoting his attention to the cultivation of the fields and to stock-raising, both branches of his business proving profitable.

On the 12th of November, 1885, Mr. McGaan was united in marriage to Miss Lettie Arnold, who was born July 2, 1859, and is a daughter of E. H. Arnold, now a retired carpenter of Galesburg who has reached the age of eighty-four years. He was born in the state of New York and in 1864 came to Knox county, settling in Galesburg, where he always followed carpentering. He married Sarah Davis, who died in 1870. She was a daughter of Hull and Emeline (Merriam) Davis, the former a native of Delaware county, New York, and the latter of Harpersfield, that state. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold were four children, but only two are now living: Mrs. McGaan and her sister Emma, who is the widow of Dudley Overstreet, of Lincoln, Nebraska. After graduating from the high school of this city Mrs. McGaan engaged in teaching in Galesburg for six years. By her marriage she has become the mother of seven children: Agnes, who is now the wife of William McMaster, of Walnut Grove township, and has two children, Thomas and Evelyn; Sarah, a graduate of the Altona high school; Grace, the wife of Ellsworth Heck, of Bardolph, Illinois; William, at home; Susan who is attending the Altona high school; and Roy and Emory, both at home.

The parents are faithful and active members of the Presbyterian church of Altona and Mr. McGaan is a republican in politics. He has been particularly active in support of educational interests, serving for twenty-six years, or since 1886, as a member of the school board. He believes in progress and improvement along all lines which are of vital significance to the community and his influence has been a potent element for good.

CLAUDE E. FRANKENBURGER.

Claude E. Frankenburger, who is the conscientious and efficient cashier of the Bank of Rio, was born near Alpha, Henry county, September 4, 1885. He is the son of Ira K. and Mary E. (Calkins) Frankenburger, the father a native of Pennsylvania, of German descent, and the mother of Illinois. In 1878 the father came to Henry county, where he bought one hundred and seventy-three acres of land, and he and his wife now reside on the same. In their family were four children, of whom Claude E., of this review, was the third in order of birth.

Claude E. Frankenburger was reared and attended the common schools in Henry county and later completed a high-school course at Alpha. He was then employed for four months by John M. Taze, in the Alpha Exchange Bank. In February, 1903, the Bank of Rio was established by John M. Taze and his son, William I. Taze, and in March of the same year Claude E. Frankenburger was appointed assistant cashier of the bank. In 1905 he was promoted to the position of cashier. In August, 1909, he and his brother Benjamin E. and Milton Deatherage purchased the bank stock and now are efficiently controlling the same

Mr. Frankenburger is fraternally identified with Rio Lodge, No. 685, A. F. & A. M.; with Chapter No. 4, R. A. M.; and Commandery No. 42, K. T. He is also a member of the Order of the Eastern Star at Rio. He is energetic, progressive and capable and although a young man still, is rapidly gaining for himself a leading position in the business world in his community.

BENJAMIN E. FRANKENBURGER.

Benjamin E. Frankenburger, assistant cashier of the Bank of Rio and also engaged in the insurance business, was born in Orion, Illinois, December 13, 1880, and was reared in Henry county. He attended the common schools and was graduated from the Alpha high school. Subsequently he was employed as a railroad billing clerk at Aurora, Illinois, and later was for one year in Chicago as inspector of local freight accounts for the Chicago Car Service Company. Subsequently he was rate clerk at Joliet for the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Belt Line for two years and was then chief rate clerk for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad at that place for about a year. In 1907 he returned to Alpha and became manager of the Tri-County Light & Power Company, which position he held for one year, and afterward became connected with the Bank of Rio. He is now acting as assistant cashier of that institution and is extensively engaged in the insurance business, selling all kinds of insurance. Like his brother Claude E., he is a Knight Templar Mason, belonging to Rio Lodge, No. 685, A. F. & A. M., Chapter No. 4, R. A. M., and Commandery No. 42, K. T. He, too, is a member of the Order of the Eastern Star at Rio and is regarded as one of the leading young business men of the place.

REUBEN COX.

Reuben Cox, an agriculturist of Walnut Grove township, Knox county, was born January 20, 1844, in Somersetshire, England, his parents being James and Emma (Pittard) Cox. He is a grandson of Joseph and Sarah (Davis) Cox, who came to America with their son James and settled in Knox county, Illinois, where Joseph Cox died in 1878 at the age of one hundred years and his wife in 1857 at the age of seventy-two. James Cox, whose birth occurred January 8, 1816, arrived in America in 1846, and located in Sparta township, this county. He later purchased forty acres of land in Ontario township, on which place he resided for six years. Subsequently he acquired eighty acres of valuable farming land near Oneida, which he cultivated for some time before purchasing a quarter of a section in Sparta township, which is the old Cox homestead. Later he removed to Oneida, where he lived retired until his death, which occurred in 1897 when he was about eighty-two years of age. His wife was born October 7, 1817, in Somersetshire, England, and was the daughter of James and Martha Pittard, also natives of England. Her death occurred September 24, 1884. Mr. and Mrs. James Cox were the parents of seven children, two of whom survive: Mary M., a teacher residing in San Francisco, California; and Reuben, the subject of this sketch.

Until he was nine years of age Reuben Cox attended the district school, but at that early age made his start in farming which he has followed throughout his active career. At first he plowed corn on the home farm and later assisted in all the general work upon his father's farm. He has never regretted his choice of work because he has met with unusual success, and since his marriage has been residing upon his present place, which is one of the most highly cultivated tracts in the township. In addition to general farming he also carries on stock-raising to a large extent.

In 1865 Mr. Cox married Emma Pitney, a native of Somersetshire, England, and a daughter of William and Anna Pitney. Her parents who were born August 29, 1810, and April 29, 1810, respectively, came to America in 1845 and went directly to Albany, New York, where Mr. Pitney accepted employment as a mason, a trade he had learned in his native land. Subsequently they removed to Chicago, where the family remained for seven years and then went to Rockford, Illinois, where the father died December 18, 1880, and the mother ten years later. Mrs. Cox's paternal grandfather, John Pitney, was prominently known as a most successful gardener. Mr. and Mrs. Cox have become the parents of two children: Wallace W., whose birth occurred in 1867, and who is a carpenter living in Galesburg; and Asel A., who was born in 1874 and is residing at home.

Mr. Cox gives his political support to the prohibition party and is an ardent advocate of the temperance cause. He has never sought office but has done all in his power to interest others in the cause to which he devotes so much time. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cox hold membership in the Methodist church of Altona, and she is an active worker in the Ladies Aid Society. Being one of the pioneers of his township Mr. Cox has been a witness to the greater part of its development and has done his share in improving the soil which is the county's greatest resource. During his long residence there he has always interested himself in all measures pertaining to the welfare of the community and has won for himself a circle of friends almost coextensive with the circle of his acquaintances.

GEORGE WHITED.

Prominent among the successful farmers and substantial citizens of Knox county is George Whited, who is the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of valuable and productive land at Rapatee and one hundred and seven and a half acres located on the west township line, his home being on section 34, Maquon township. He was born on section 28 of this same locality, on October 30, 1862, his parents being John Striker and Charlotte (Adams) Whited. The birth of John S. Whited occurred in Somerset county, New Jersey, March 16, 1832, and the Whited family came in 1853 from New Jersey to Fulton county, Illinois, when John Whited was a young man of twenty-one. Here he located on the present farm, which was owned by Uncle Stephen Ramsay. He tilled the soil and improved his land and buildings during the remaining years of his life, passing away in Hancock, Pottawattamie county, Iowa, May 1, 1906, at the age of seventy-four years. Mrs. John Whited was a daughter of Andrew Adams, an old settler emigrating in his youth from County Down, Ireland, settling in the east, whence the family removed in 1853, coming from Rome, New York, to Knox county. Mr. and Mrs. John S. Whited were the parents of one son, George Whited, and one daughter, Lotta, who is living in Fulton county, Illinois, and is the wife of J. C. Nooval, a son of Oliver Nooval. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Nooval are the parents of four children, Harry, Vera, Wanda and Lois.

Reared on the home farm George Whited was educated in the common schools of Rapatee and early became familiar with all the duties which fall to the lot of the agriculturist. Thus well trained he was ready to become self-supporting at an early age, farming first on the homestead and later for himself, buying land near by. It was his earnest wish not to settle far from his old home and the childhood scenes amid which he was brought up, and in this desire he was gratified since he has never in his life lived over one and one-half miles from his present farm on section 34. By his close application throughout the period in which he carried on general agricultural pursuits he was enabled to accumulate a substantial competency out of his profits and now divides the management of the place with his son. He lives in the old residence which is the only one of the buildings not erected by his own efforts, having been built by his grandfather. The farm is well equipped and improved and is supplied with two sets of buildings.

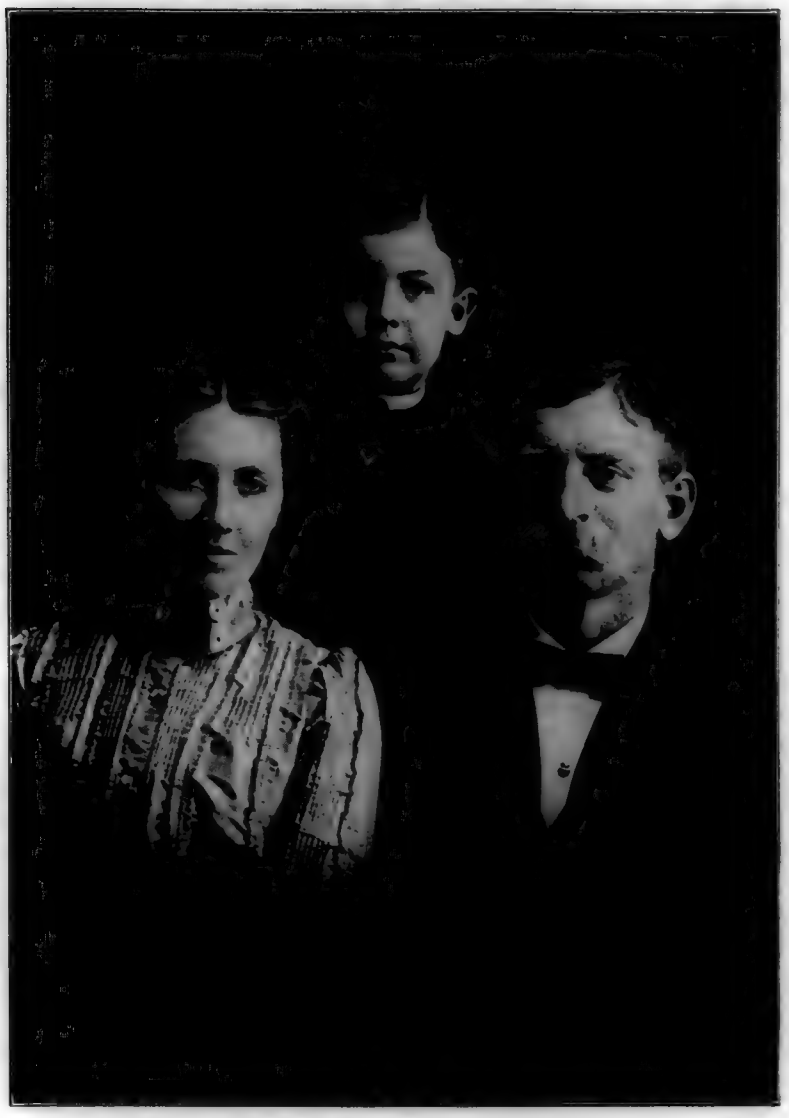
The marriage of Mr. Whited and Miss Iambia Foster was celebrated on September 29, 1887. She was a daughter of James M. Foster, one of the survivors of the Black Hawk war, having the distinction of being the first settler in the county and the first supervisor elected in the township. Mr. Foster, who owned a large tract of land in this vicinity married Miss Louisa Ward of this county, both being natives of Ohio, settling in Illinois in the days of its early growth. They were the parents of seven children. To Mr. and Mrs. George Whited eight children were born: Blanche, who died at the age of two years; Tracy, who operates the homestead; Chloe, Harold, Wayne, Audrey, Halo and Kenneth.



Since attaining his majority Mr. Whited has been affiliated with the democratic party and has been called upon to serve as justice of the peace. Fraternally he is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Odd Fellows of Rapatee. Mr. and Mrs. Whited are members of the Methodist Episcopal church in which their loyal and helpful support has won them many warm friends.

S. L. VANCE.

S. L. Vance, one of the well known residents of Knox county, lives two miles northeast of Yates City. He was born in Ohio in 1861, his parents being Andrew and Harriet (Kibbler) Vance. His father was engaged in agriculture and when S. L. Vance was a lad of seven years, came to Illinois, settling in Knox county, on a farm of two hundred and forty acres which still is the property of S. L. Vance. Here he cultivated the soil for many years, retiring from active participation in the labors of his farm nineteen years ago. He now resides in Elmwood and at the age of eighty-five years is still in good health and cheerful spirits. Mrs. Vance died some years ago. They were the parents of six children, of whom four are living: John; Mrs. V. Rogers; S. L.; Henry, deceased; Mrs. Ola Mace, deceased; and Neal.

Brought up in the vicinity of Yates City, S. L. Vance acquired his education in the schools of this locality and when old enough to handle a plow engaged in farming on the home place. After he had thoroughly mastered the great variety of knowledge with which an agriculturist must be conversant he engaged in tilling the fields on his own account. For this purpose he bought a farm from his father. The house and barn had been erected before the place came into his possession but all the other improvements were made by him. He is exceptionally successful in all the departments of general farming and pays much attention to the raising of high-grade stock for shipment to the Chicago market.

On March 9, 1892, Mr. Vance was united in marriage to Miss Lettie E. Riner, a daughter of Matthew and Margaret (Wingader) Riner, residents of this county. Mrs. Riner is a daughter of John Wingader and a native of Ger-of the buildings not erected by his own efforts, having been built by his grandfather. The farm is well equipped and improved and is supplied with two sets of buildings.

MR. AND MRS. S. L. VANCE AND SON

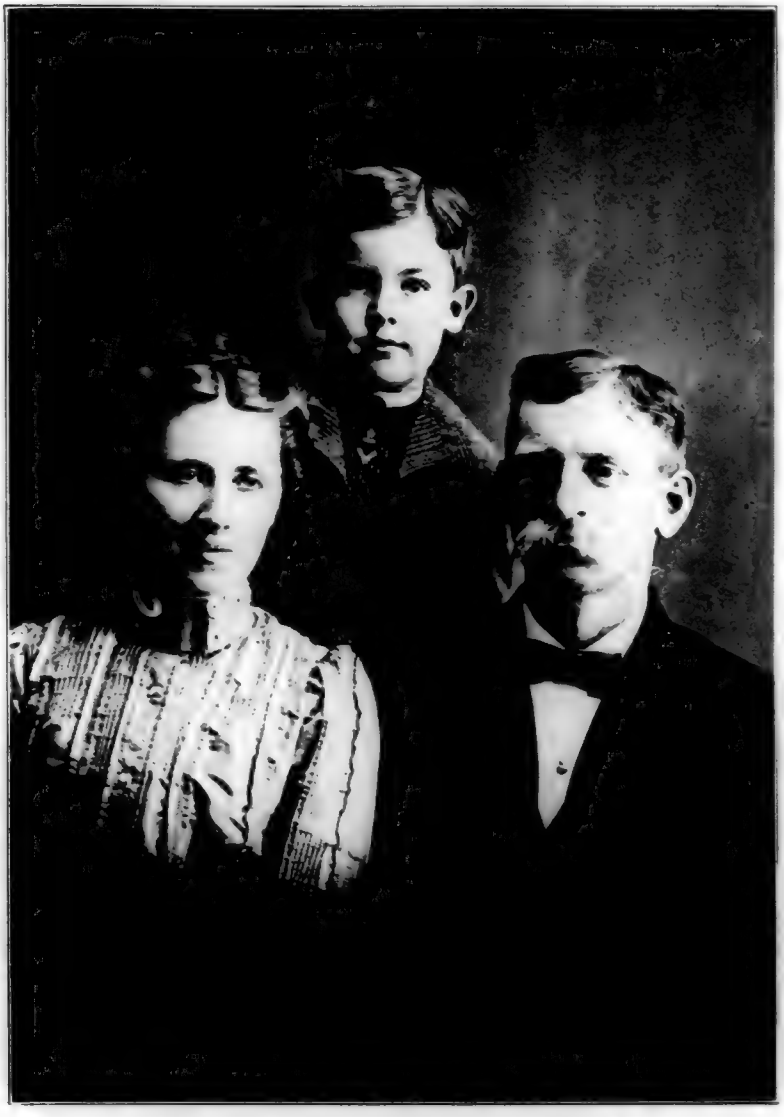
The marriage of Mr. Whited and Miss Iambia Foster was celebrated on September 29, 1887. She was a daughter of James M. Foster, one of the survivors of the Black Hawk war, having the distinction of being the first settler in the county and the first supervisor elected in the township. Mr. Foster, who owned a large tract of land in this vicinity married Miss Louisa Ward of this county, both being natives of Ohio, settling in Illinois in the days of its early growth. They were the parents of seven children. To Mr. and Mrs. George Whited eight children were born: Blanche, who died at the age of two years; Tracy, who operates the homestead; Chloe, Harold, Wayne, Audrey, Halo and Kenneth.



Since attaining his majority Mr. Whited has been affiliated with the democratic party and has been called upon to serve as justice of the peace. Fraternally he is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Odd Fellows of Rapatee. Mr. and Mrs. Whited are members of the Methodist Episcopal church in which their loyal and helpful support has won them many warm friends.

S. L. VANCE.

S. L. Vance, one of the well known residents of Knox county, lives two miles northeast of Yates City. He was born in Ohio in 1861, his parents being Andrew and Harriet (Kibbler) Vance. His father was engaged in agriculture and when S. L. Vance was a lad of seven years, came to Illinois, settling in Knox county, on a farm of two hundred and forty acres which still is the property of S. L. Vance. Here he cultivated the soil for many years, retiring from active participation in the labors of his farm nineteen years ago. He now resides in Elmwood and at the age of eighty-five years is still in good health and cheerful spirits. Mrs. Vance died some years ago. They were the parents of six children, of whom four are living: John; Mrs. V. Rogers; S. L.; Henry, deceased; Mrs. Ola Mace, deceased; and Neal.

Brought up in the vicinity of Yates City, S. L. Vance acquired his education in the schools of this locality and when old enough to handle a plow engaged in farming on the home place. After he had thoroughly mastered the great variety of knowledge with which an agriculturist must be conversant he engaged in tilling the fields on his own account. For this purpose he bought a farm from his father. The house and barn had been erected before the place came into his possession but all the other improvements were made by him. He is exceptionally successful in all the departments of general farming and pays much attention to the raising of high-grade stock for shipment to the Chicago market.

On March 9, 1892, Mr. Vance was united in marriage to Miss Lettie E. Riner, a daughter of Matthew and Margaret (Wingader) Riner, residents of this county. Mrs. Riner is a daughter of John Wingader and a native of Germany. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Vance two children have been born: Carmon, who is attending school in Yates City; and Andrew, who is deceased.

MR. AND MRS. S. L. VANCE AND SON

In his political affiliations Mr. Vance is in sympathy with the principles of the democratic party. Fraternally he is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America. Happy in disposition and kind towards all, Mr. Vance has many friends in the community in which he lives, having always been devoted to the interests promoting the general welfare.

A. S. RICE.

A worthy representative of the agricultural interests of Victoria township is to be found in the person of A. S. Rice, who owns two hundred acres of well improved land, six miles north of Williamsfield. His birth occurred in Knox county on the 9th of December, 1858, his parents being S. F. and Harriett M. (Aldridge) Rice, who are mentioned at greater length elsewhere in this work.

A. S. Rice passed the early years of his life similarly to other farmer lads of the same period and circumstances. In the acquirement of an education he attended the schools in his district, and such times as he was not thus occupied, assisted with the lighter tasks about the home farm. His duties increased with the development of his strength, and by the time he had attained his maturity he was a capable agriculturist. Soon thereafter he located on the old farm of D. Anderson, who broke the first prairie in Victoria township, coming to his present place in 1892. This contains eighty acres of rich, fertile land, that has been brought under high cultivation, while he also owns one hundred and twenty acres two miles south. During the nineteen years of his residence, Mr. Rice has made such improvements in the property from time to time as his circumstances warranted. He has erected large barns, that provide ample shelter for his stock; substantial outbuildings within which can be found all the usual modern implements that are required in the cultivation of the fields; and a comfortable farm house. His fields are carefully cultivated and devoted to such cereals as are best adapted to the soil, the greater portion of his products being used for the feeding of stock, of which he has made a specialty for the last twenty-five years. Practical in his ideas and progressive in his methods, Mr. Rice is meeting with success in his undertakings and is now numbered among the prosperous farmers of the township. His success must be very largely attributed to his close application and the intelligent direction of his activities, as he began his business career without capital, other than his tireless energy and determination of purpose. His development has not been at all phenomenal but the permanent, steady progress of the man who wins his own way.

Mr. Rice's plans for a home of his own had their culmination in his marriage to Miss Effie Brown, of Elmwood, a daughter of Hiram Brown, a well known pioneer of Elmwood. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Rice numbers five, as follows: Harriett M., who married Frank Peterson, of Victoria township; Mary, the wife of Edward Lapham; Laura, who married Will Spangler of Oakland, California;

Hiram, who married Anna Welsh, and lives on his father's farm; and Annie, at home.

The fraternal relations of Mr. Rice are confined to his membership in the Modern Woodmen of America. He is a republican in politics and assumes his responsibilities as a citizen by assisting with the government of the township. He has several times been called to public office, having discharged the duties of school director, while two years ago he was collector and he has been road commissioner. In the administration of his public duties he has manifested the same executive ability and powers of organization, as well as method and system that characterize him as a business man. Mr. Rice is held in high esteem and respect in the community where he has resided for so many years, ever having evinced during that period the substantial qualities that distinguish the best type of citizens.

SAMUEL HARRY JOHNSON.

Samuel Harry Johnson is one of the enterprising young men of Altona whose success is due to his enterprise, diligence and determination. He is associated with his brother, John A. Johnson, as clerk in the conduct of a grocery store and has become widely and favorably known in this part of the county. He was born in Altona, June 6, 1885, a son of Peter E. Johnson. His grandparents were John and Christina (Magnes) Johnson, farming people of Sweden, and in their family were nine children, of whom seven are yet living. Peter E. Johnson, the father of our subject, is now living in Altona. He was born in Sweden, October 7, 1844, and came to America in 1881, at which time he settled in Bureau county, Illinois, where he followed the occupation of farming. He also soon entered the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, with which he has since been associated. He resided for a time at Malden, Illinois, and afterward came to Altona, where he did section work for the railroad until 1909, when he was given the position of tower watchman near Altona. He was also at one time employed in the coal mines. He married Mathilda Swanson, who was born March 30, 1845, in the same part of Sweden in which her husband's birth occurred. She was a daughter of Swan Swanson and was only nine years of age at the time of her mother's death. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Johnson crossed the Atlantic on the same vessel and were married several months after their arrival.

Samuel Harry Johnson spent his youthful days in the place of his nativity and the public schools afforded him his educational opportunities, after which he entered the grocery business at Altona and is now assisting his brother as clerk in the conduct of an establishment of this character. He looks after the well appointed store, in which they carry a large and carefully selected line of staple and fancy groceries, and their trade is constantly increasing as the result of honorable dealing and earnest effort to please their customers.

Mr. Johnson attends the Methodist church and is prominent in the Maccabees lodge at Altona, serving at the present time as its record keeper. He also belongs to Woodmen Camp, No. 3737, at Altona, in which he has likewise filled a number of offices. His name is also on the membership roll of the Odd Fellows lodge and he is vice president of the Altona Volunteer Fire Company. His interest in all that pertains to public progress and improvement is deep and sincere and is evidenced in the hearty cooperation which he gives to many movements for the general good.

CARL OSCAR JOHNSON.

The name of Johnson is closely associated with mercantile interests in Altona, where Carl Oscar Johnson is now engaged in clerking. He was born in Malden, Illinois, May 10, 1882, and is a son of P. E. Johnson and a brother of John August and Samuel Harry Johnson, both of whom are mentioned elsewhere in this volume. In his school days he engaged in clerking for his brother, with whom he remained altogether for eleven years, after which he became connected with H. L. Peterson, an Altona merchant, with whom he has since been associated.

In community life Mr. Johnson figures quite prominently, being now well known as second lieutenant of the Altona Fire Company, No. 1. He is also connected with Altona Tent, No. 116, K. O. T. M., and is at present sergeant, chaplain and finance keeper, in which offices he has served for two years. His religious faith is that of the Swedish Lutheran church, in which he was reared. The family have long been known in Altona and its representatives have taken an active and helpful part in all the projects for public progress and are equally well known in the social life of the town.

DAVID THOMPSON.

General farming engaged the attention of David Thompson, who was a substantial farmer and representative citizen of Walnut Grove township, this county. He was born in Elkhart, Indiana, on the 6th of December, 1835, a son of John and Catherine (Livingston) Thompson, who were natives of Ohio. They removed to Indiana, where they resided for a short time before coming to Knox county, near Altona, where they engaged in agricultural pursuits.

David Thompson devoted practically his entire life to farming. During his early days, while attending the district schools, he assisted his father and afterward gave his whole time and attention to the cultivation of the home property before starting out independently. In 1862 he enlisted in Company G, Eighty-ninth Regiment of Illinois Infantry, from Altona and was in the service for three years, the greater part of which was devoted to duty on the forage wagon because his health would not permit him to engage in actual fighting. Of his four brothers who enlisted one was killed and one was wounded.

Mr. Thompson was married in 1868 to Catherine Richmond, who was born near Wheeling, West Virginia, September 22, 1845, and is a daughter of Joseph and Susan Richmond, the former also a native of West Virginia. She remained at home after finishing her schooling until the time of her marriage. The father devoted the early part of his active career to farming and also to buying stock, but later studied for the ministry and became a minister in the Methodist church. The remainder of his life was devoted to preaching in his home district, where he served as circuit rider over a district covering a radius of twenty-five miles. He was married to Susan Chess, who was a daughter of Daniel Chess and whose death occurred at the age of fifty-four years, near Columbus, Ohio. To this union eight children were born, four of whom are now living: Mary, who is the wife of Samuel McHard, of Aledo, Illinois; Mrs. Catherine Thompson, of Altona; Clarinda, who was married to James Piatt, of Fort Collins, Colorado; and George, who is a resident of Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were born the following children: Joseph E., now a resident of Des Moines, Iowa; Harry J., of Valparaiso, Indiana; Roy D., whose home is in Greeley, Colorado; William, a farmer living at Altona; Susan, the deceased wife of Charles Sawyer; John, deceased; and May Bell, the wife of David N. McMaster, of Walnut Grove township.

Mr. Thompson took an active interest in the Democratic party to which he gave his allegiance and did all he could to promote its measures and policies. His interest in the development of the educational and industrial projects instituted in his district and his executive ability in furthering these movements were recognized and given opportunity for expression while he was a member of the school board and while he served as president of the Grange, his term of office following immediately after its organization. He was a substantial citizen who merited the respect and confidence of the entire community and his later prosperity and the comfortable life which Mrs. Thompson is now living were both due to his own exertions, his indefatigable labor and his careful management. He was not only industrious and enterprising but was also a man of high moral character and was highly esteemed both as a farmer and a citizen throughout his township. His death occurred September 11, 1894.

RICHARD C. STUCKEY.

Richard C. Stuckey, now deceased, was a resident of Altona after his retirement from his farm in Walnut Grove township. He was born March 12, 1833, in Bedford county, Pennsylvania, and was a son of Charles Stuckey, who was a native of Germany and came to America in his youth. The latter married Rebecca Silver and remained on his farm in Pennsylvania until his death in 1872, at the age of seventy-two years. He was one of eight children, of whom six survive, three sons and three daughters, namely: Mrs. Annie S. Guthrie, of Denver, Colorado; Mrs. Emma M. Scott, of Iowa; Mrs. Amanda Toles, of Denver, Colorado; Simon H. Stuckey, of California; William A. Stuckey, of Fairmont, Nebraska; and Charles Scott Stuckey, of Bedford county, Pennsylvania.

After completing his education in the district schools, Richard Stuckey assisted his father for a few years and in May, 1853, at the age of twenty-one years, came to Knox county with a colony of settlers. He located on the farm upon which he remained until his retirement in 1897. During these years he was actively engaged in cultivating and developing the land which brought him sufficient remuneration to give him the opportunity of enjoying leisure and comfort in his later years. When he left the farm he moved to Altona, where his death occurred on the 8th of October, 1910.

In February, 1859, Richard Stuckey was married to Mary Timmons, whose birth occurred on the 29th of February, 1836, in Madison county, Ohio, and who is the daughter of Thomas Timmons of Carlisle, Pennsylvania. The father was born in 1800 and his death occurred in 1863. He was the son of Peter and Margaret (Beth) Timmons, the former a soldier in the war of 1812. Thomas Timmons spent his active life in agricultural pursuits, his early days being spent in farming and teaming in his native state. In 1833 he removed to Ohio, where he devoted his entire time to the cultivation of the farm upon which he located. He was especially interested in providing for the comforts and pleasures of his family. He married Hanna Peoples who died in 1854 at the age of forty-eight years. She was also a native of Pennsylvania and was a daughter of Richard and Ann (Longstretcht) Peoples, the former being an agriculturist. To them ten children were born, three of whom survive: Rebecca, who is the wife of H. Alder, of West Jefferson, Ohio; Laura, who married F. A. Kelly and is also a resident of West Jefferson; and Mrs. Mary Stuckey.

To Mr. and Mrs. Stuckey the following children were born: Laura, the eldest, is the wife of O. Preston of Monmouth, Illinois, and they are the parents of two children, namely: Edith, the wife of A. Miller, of Monmouth, and the mother of two children; and Earl Preston, who is residing at home. Eugene H. Stuckey, who is residing in Madison county, Ohio, and is married to Ruth Timmons. Richard C. Jr., who married Elsa Monfort, has two children and is residing in Columbus, Ohio. Ned S. is cultivating the old homestead upon which he resides. He married Nellie Chapman and to them two children have been born, Nellie I. and Jessie M., Frank Charles, William A., Silvia and May are deceased.

Mr. Stuckey gave his politcal support to the republican party and was most active in promoting its policies and in working for the support of its men and measures. Mrs. Stuckey is a member of the Presbyterian church of Altona, and for twenty years has been an active worker in the Ladies Social Union of that church, having been one of its original members. Mr. Stuckey's life exemplified what can be done when unremitting energy, persistency of purpose and conscientious labor are displayed in the development of a new territory. His integrity and fairness in all business operations as well as his active interest in any movements pertaining to the moral and social development of his community won for him the respect and regard of his fellow citizens.

C. H. PULVER.

C. H. Pulver has devoted his energies during the greater part of the twenty-four years he has resided in Williamsfield to contracting and building, although for a time he conducted a general mercantile establishment. He was born in Minnesota in 1862, his parents being S. W. and Jeannette (Doty) Pulver. The father was born in the state of New York in 1825, and there he was reared and educated and also learned the carpenter's trade. In his early manhood he came to the middle west, following his trade at various points in Minnesota and Illinois, finally settling at Williamsfield. Here he passed the remainder of his life, his death occurring at the residence of his son, C. H. Pulver, in 1904.

C. H. Pulver was only a babe of three days when his people removed from Minnesota. He attended the common schools until it was deemed he had sufficient education to fit himself for a vocation, when he laid aside his books and learned the carpenter's trade under the direction of his father. When he was twenty-seven, he came to Williamsfield, erecting the first building in the town. Carpentering and contracting thereafter engaged his attention for many years, yielding him satisfactory returns. He at one time withdrew from this vocation, however, and went into the general merchandise business, but subsequently returned to the contracting business. Mr. Pulver is a good mechanic and a capable business man with thoroughly practical ideas that he intelligently carries out in the construction of his buildings. He has succeeded in his undertakings here largely because he has always been found reliable and trustworthy in all of his transactions. It has been one of his principles during his entire business career not to make a promise he could not fulfill, at the same time he will not compromise on the quality of his work in order to do this.

On June 26, 1890, Mr. Pulver married Miss Kate Cole, and they are the parents of two children: Mary J., born June 19, 1891; and Doris, born October, 1897. Three children, a son and two daughters, have passed away.

Fraternally Mr. Pulver is affiliated with the Masons, Knights of Pythias and Independent Order of Odd Fellows, while he votes the republican ticket. He has always taken active interest in local political affairs and is now discharging the duties of supervisor. He was elected to this office in April, 1909, and was the only successful republican candidate, the remainder of the ticket all having gone democratic, this fact attesting his popularity in the community generally, and the efficiency with which he has filled other offices. During the greater part of his residence in Williamsfield, Mr. Pulver has been connected with the government of the town, having filled among others the offices of town clerk and tax collector. He is held in high respect in the community, having shown himself to be conscientious and honorable in the discharge of public duties, and reliable and trustworthy in business transactions.

T. W. RAY.

T. W. Ray, the owner of one hundred and fifty acres of fertile land in Truro township that he devotes to general farming, was born on a farm in Victoria township, Knox county, in 1853. His father, L. D. Ray, was a native of Pennsylvania, whence he removed in his early manhood to Illinois, locating in this county. Here he met and subsequently married Mary A. Sweeney, the mother of our subject, and a native of Vermont. L. D. Ray was an agriculturist and for many years resided on a farm in Victoria township, to the cultivation and improvement of which he devoted his entire time and attention until his demise at the age of fifty-four years. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Ray numbered five, our subject being the second in order of birth. The others are as follows: William H., who is a farmer in Victoria township; one who died in infancy; Addie, the wife of Frank Lapham, and Clarence, who is operating the old home place in Victoria township.

The schooling of T. W. Ray was obtained in his home district, and when he had mastered the common branches the duties of the schoolroom gave way to those of the field. He thereafter gave his undivided attention to the plowing, planting and harvesting of the fields and care of the stock, his responsibilities increasing as his strength and ability developed with the passing of time. At the age of nine he plowed his first field of corn, and has performed a like task each recurring season since then. He remained on the old homestead, with the operation of which he assisted his father, until he was twenty-five. Feeling at the end of that time that his own best interests demanded that he begin working for himself, he removed to this township, his entire life having been passed here and in Victoria townships with the exception of two years, when he engaged in farming in Nebraska. In 1902, Mr. Ray bought his present place, containing one hundred and fifty acres of land, located three miles northwest of Williamsfield. Since becoming the owner of this property he has fenced the land and made all of the improvements, including the erection of good, substantial barns and outbuildings. He is an industrious man of practical ideas and progressive methods and has assiduously applied himself to bringing the soil under high cultivation. His fields are devoted to diversified farming in connection with which he raises cattle. He is meeting with success in both lines of his business and annually harvests abundant crops that net him a good dividend on his labor.

Mr. Ray completed his arrangements for a home of his own when he married Miss Ellen Lapham, who was born and reared in Knox county, being a native of this township. Mr. and Mrs. Ray have but one child living, Meta, who married Carl Rice, a son of John Rice.

Fraternally Mr. Ray is a Mason, and his political allegiance is given to the republican party. He takes an active interest in all local affairs and has held various township offices. His entire life has been spent in the community, where he now lives and among whose citizens he numbers many stanch friends, whom he has known since boyhood.

ANDREW HAWKINSON.

Andrew Hawkinson, devoting his time and attention to general farming on section 35, Henderson township, where he is also making a specialty of the raising of Poland China hogs, was born in Skone, in the southern part of Sweden, July 20, 1864. His parents, Hawkin and Anna (Anderson) Johnson, were also natives of Sweden, where the father engaged in farming throughout his entire life. He never came to America, remaining always a resident of Sweden to the time of his death, which occurred in 1890. His religious faith was evidenced in his membership in the Swedish Lutheran church.

Andrew Hawkinson, who was the seventh in order of birth in a family of eight children, acquired a common-school education in his native land and when still a young lad began working on the farm for his father, but from time to time he heard interesting reports concerning America and its advantages, and in March, 1884, when in his twentieth year, he sailed for the new world. After spending three years in Bureau county, where he worked as a farm hand, he came to Galesburg and has since lived in Knox county. Since 1887 he has made his home upon the farm which is now his place of residence. It was then the property of Henry Sisson, for whom he worked until 1895, when he began farming on his own account. He has always carried on general agricultural pursuits, cultivating the crops best adapted to the soil and climate, and in addition to his property on section 35, Henderson township, where he is cultivating three hundred and twenty acres of land, he owns a farm in the same township of one hundred and five acres which he rents. Stock-raising has always been made a feature of his place, special attention being given to the raising of thoroughbred Poland China hogs. To this he has given particular attention since the retirement of Mr. Sisson and has made it a profitable branch of his business.

On the 4th of April, 1895, Mr. Hawkinson was united in marriage to Miss Betsy Nelson, a daughter of Nels and Nellie (Bengtson) Nelson and a granddaughter of Peter Nelson, who was a native of Sweden and in that country spent his entire life, devoting his time and energies to the occupation of farming The parents of Mrs. Hawkinson were also life-long residents of Sweden but she came from her native land to America in 1887, living with relatives up to the time of her marriage. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hawkinson have been born three children: Anna Matilda, now deceased; Harold, who is attending high school in Galesburg; and Helen Elizabeth.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hawkinson hold membership in the Lutheran church and his study of the political questions and issues of the day has led him to give his support to the republican party. He has served as school director and is interested in the cause of education, recognizing the fact that thorough school training constitutes the bulwark of the nation. He has never had occasion to regret his determination to come to the new world, for he here found the opportunities which he sought and in their utilization has worked his way steadily upward, overcoming all difficulties and obstacles in his path until he is now ranked with the substantial farmers of Henderson township.

J. W. MILES.

J. W. Miles, who resides on an attractive farm of eighty acres located on section 34, Persifer township, was born on the place where he now resides on March 6, 1864, his parents being R. W. and Mary Jane (Bruce) Miles. His father was born in Athens, Ohio, and when old enough to begin his education entered the schools of Newark, that state, which he attended until he was fourteen. He then accompanied his parents, S. S. and Eliza Ann (Gilmore) Miles, on their removal to Knox county. They first located a mile west of Gilson, where they remained for two years, when in 1838 they went to Haw Creek township. At the expiration of a year they removed to the farm where our subject now resides, the family home being a log cabin. This property has ever since been in the possession of still a young lad began working on the farm for his father, but from time to time he heard interesting reports concerning America and its advantages, and in March, 1884, when in his twentieth year, he sailed for the new world. After spending three years in Bureau county, where he worked as a farm hand, he came to Galesburg and has since lived in Knox county. Since 1887 he has made his home upon the farm which is now his place of residence. It was then the property of Henry Sisson, for whom he worked until 1895, when he began farming on his own account. He has always carried on general agricultural pursuits, cultivating the crops best adapted to the soil and climate, and in addition to his property on section 35, Henderson township, where he is cultivating three hundred and twenty acres of land, he owns a farm in the same township of one hundred and five acres which he rents. Stock-raising has always been made a feature of his place, special attention being given to the raising of thoroughbred Poland China hogs. To this he has given particular attention since the retirement of Mr. Sisson and has made it a profitable branch of his business.

RUFUS MILES

On the 4th of April, 1895, Mr. Hawkinson was united in marriage to Miss Betsy Nelson, a daughter of Nels and Nellie (Bengtson) Nelson and a granddaughter of Peter Nelson, who was a native of Sweden and in that country spent his entire life, devoting his time and energies to the occupation of farming The parents of Mrs. Hawkinson were also life-long residents of Sweden but she came from her native land to America in 1887, living with relatives up to the time of her marriage. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hawkinson have been born three children: Anna Matilda, now deceased; Harold, who is attending high school in Galesburg; and Helen Elizabeth.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hawkinson hold membership in the Lutheran church and his study of the political questions and issues of the day has led him to give his support to the republican party. He has served as school director and is interested in the cause of education, recognizing the fact that thorough school training constitutes the bulwark of the nation. He has never had occasion to regret his determination to come to the new world, for he here found the opportunities which he sought and in their utilization has worked his way steadily upward, overcoming all difficulties and obstacles in his path until he is now ranked with the substantial farmers of Henderson township.

J. W. MILES.

J. W. Miles, who resides on an attractive farm of eighty acres located on section 34, Persifer township, was born on the place where he now resides on March 6, 1864, his parents being R. W. and Mary Jane (Bruce) Miles. His father was born in Athens, Ohio, and when old enough to begin his education entered the schools of Newark, that state, which he attended until he was fourteen. He then accompanied his parents, S. S. and Eliza Ann (Gilmore) Miles, on their removal to Knox county. They first located a mile west of Gilson, where they remained for two years, when in 1838 they went to Haw Creek township. At the expiration of a year they removed to the farm where our subject now resides, the family home being a log cabin. This property has ever since been in the possession of the family and there the grandfather passed away in 1876 at the age of eighty-two years. The grandmother survived for four years thereafter, her death occurring when she was eighty. They were both laid to rest in the Russell cemetery, Haw Creek township. R. W. Miles completed his education at Knox College, subsequently returning to the old farm, where he devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits during the entire period of his active life, with the exception of a little over a year spent in the gold mines of California. He was captain of a company of twenty-four from near his home who started April 11, 1850, on the western trip by the overland route and returned in June, 1851, by way of Panama.. He was very successful in his agricultural undertakings and made extensive improvements on the place, making it one of the valuable properties of the township. Progressive and public-spirited, he took an active and helpful interest in all community matters, particularly those of a political nature. He twice represented his district in the state legislature, serving one term in 1858 and another in 1878, while for twenty years he was a supervisor in Persifer township. Educational matters particularly were given much of his attention, and for many years he was a member of the board of education, and during the early days he was township teachers' examiner. He also served as clerk of the township and justice of the peace and for two years he served as appointee on the board of equalization, and twice was elected for a term of four years each to this board. The mother was a native of Vermont and a daughter of Silas and Hannah Dunham (Scott) Bruce, who about 1844 located on a farm on section 35, Knox township. In matters of faith the parents were Presbyterians, Grandfather Miles having been a minister of that denomination before coming to Illinois, while politically Mr. Miles was a stanch republican. He passed away at the age of seventy-two and the mother at sixty-four, both being laid to rest in Russell cemetery, Haw Creek township. Of their marriage there were born seven children, our subject being the sixth in order of birth. The others are as follows: Lucy, who married Charles L. Mastin, of York county, Nebraska; Hannah Eliza, the wife of R. R. Buckley, of Knoxville; Emma M., who is also a resident of Knoxville; James H., who was drowned at the old Whitton mill site at the Fort Wallace ford before he was twenty-one; Rufus, who lived on the old farm until his marriage, when he went to York county, Nebraska, where two years later, in 1904, he passed away and is buried at York, Nebraska; and M. Jennie, the youngest member of the family, who is living at Knoxville. All were born on the old homestead in Persifer township and were given the advantages of a good education.

RUFUS MILES

The youthful years of J. W. Miles were not particularly different from those of other lads of the same period and circumstances. At the usual age he entered the common schools, where he procured his preliminary education and subsequently graduated from Knox College in 1889. Having decided on an agricultural career in preference to either professional or commercial pursuits he returned to his father's farm. He attentively applied himself to assisting with the work of the fields and the care of the stock, thus obtaining a thorough knowledge of the practical methods of agriculture and stock-raising, until his marriage. Subsequent to this event he located on section 33, Persifer township, where he resided for five years, at the expiration of which period he returned to the old farm. Here he has ever since resided, devoting his entire attention to its further improvement. He is one of the extensive farmers of the township, owning four hundred and sixty acres of land. His fields are operated in strict accordance to the more progressive methods of modern agriculture, every detail connected with the tilling of the soil or the gathering of the crops being given his personal supervision.

For his wife Mr. Miles chose Miss Mary Elizabeth Derham, who was born in Bristol, England, on the 2d of November, 1863, and is a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Pitt) Derham, who are residing in Bristol. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Miles there have been born two children, James Rufus and Phyllis M.

The family attend the Presbyterian church in Knoxville, in which the parents hold membership, and Mr. Miles is superintendent of the home Sunday school. His political support he gives to the republican party and he is now serving in the capacity of both township clerk and treasurer. Mr. Miles is numbered among the substantial citizens of his community, where he is held in high regard and has a large circle of friends.

DAVID NELSON McMASTER.

David Nelson McMaster, who is residing on his farm in Walnut Grove Township, was born in Knox county on January 18, 1865, and is the son of John McMaster, a prominent farmer who is living in Altona, and of whose life a sketch appears elsewhere in this volume.

In his youth David McMaster attended the schools in his district and assisted his father on the home farm which was one of the best developed and most highly productive properties in the township. In the discharge of these duties he showed a ready and willing spirit and a keen appreciation of the principles of agriculture which were at that time proving so successful. After he farmed independently he put much of his past experience into practice and at the same time advanced with the age, becoming one of the progressive farmers of the township.

On the 9th of December, 1896, Mr. McMaster was married to May Bell Thompson. She was born on the 22nd of April, 1869, on the old Thompson homestead in Walnut Grove township, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson. The father was born December 6, 1835, and died September 11, 1894, at the age of fifty-eight years and nine months. Her uncle, John Thompson, was the first white child born in Knox county. He came to Knox county with his wife, Catherine Livingston, and located at Altona, Illinois, where they were among the first settlers. David Thompson removed to Altona, Knox county, from Ohio, when a mere boy. His whole life has been spent in farming in this region. He was married to Catherine Richmond, whose birth occurred in West Virginia, on the 22nd of September, 1845. She is the daughter of Joseph and Susan Richmond, the former having been in the service in the Civil war for three years after his enlistment in 1862 in Company G of the Eighty-ninth Regiment under Captain Whiting. Although he contracted a serious illness during the war he still remained with his regiment, serving as teamster until his time expired. After he was mustered out of service he returned to his farm and entered actively into the work of its cultivation and development. He gave his political allegiance to the democratic party, but never held office.

In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were the following children: Joseph E., who is living in Des Moines, Iowa; Harry J., a resident of Valparaiso, Indiana; Roy D., whose home is in Greeley, Colorado; William, a farmer living at Altona; Susan, the deceased wife of Charles Sawyer; John, deceased; and May Bell, who is now the wife of Mr. McMaster and remained at home until the time of her marriage. She is an active and helpful member of the Presbyterian church at Altona and belongs to its Ladies Aid Society.

Mr. McMaster also holds membership in the church and is an exemplary representative of the Masonic fraternity, his membership being in Altona Lodge, No. 330, F. & A. M. His political allegiance is given to the republican party, but he has never been a seeker after public office. The cause of education finds in him a warm friend, and he is now serving as president of the township school board. In many ways, however, he has displayed his loyalty to the best interests of the community, and that he is a citizen of enterprise is indicated in the fact that he has not confined his attention alone to the work of the farm but has extended his efforts to other lines in which the public has been a direct beneficiary. Realizing how valuable telephone service would be to the farming community he joined with others in organizing the Farmers' Telephone Company of which he is the president, and he is also the president of the Farmers' Grain Association. His ability as a business man is thus attested, and at the same time his labors have proven an element of public convenience and prosperity as well as a source of individual success.

JAMES REBSTOCK.

Among Illinois' fast diminishing ranks of Civil war veterans James Rebstock, a retired farmer of Knox county, is well known as a man whose unwavering courage and loyal service when a private won for him not only the admiration of his fellow soldiers, but the recognition of President Lincoln, who bestowed upon him the rank of first lieutenant of the Eighth United States Artillery. James Rebstock was only twenty-one years old when the war broke out, his birth having occurred March 14, 1839, in Tuscarawas county, Ohio.

Left an orphan at the age of seven James Rebstock experienced some lonely years in which he was buffeted about by fate, living with various people at different times and in various kinds of homes. He did succeed, however, in obtaining something of an education, desultory though it was, attending school in Ohio, in Indiana and lastly in Illinois, in which places he made his home successively. At the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted in Company G, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served two years and five days as a private, being then commissioned by President Lincoln first lieutenant in the Eighth United States Artillery. He was mustered out March 13, 1866, when he was discharged at Louisville, Kentucky, and then returned to Gilson, Illinois, where he followed farming. In 1867 he acquired the farm on which he is now living retired and now owns altogether three hundred and fifty acres on section 8, in Haw Creek township, Knox county. This he cultivated with much care and by the use of progressive methods of tilling the soil and of practicing scientific economy he was enabled to make a comfortable living and also to save enough to permit him to retire and enjoy the fruits of his long-continued and faithful labors. He has his farming done by a tenant and devotes himself to the many interests which claim his attention in military and educational circles and as stockholder of the First National Bank of Maquon, Illinois.

In July, 1866, one year before he became the owner of his present farm, Mr. Rebstock was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mrs. Salinda (Lotts) Pickrel. She was a daughter of Isaac Lotts of Haw Creek township, and the widow of Solomon Pickrel and was born June 24, 1830. By her union with Mr. Pickrel there were five children, all of whom are living. They are Minerva, Amarillis, Marshall, Stephen S., and Solomon Pickrel. There were no children born of her union with Mr. Rebstock. Mrs. Rebstock belonged to the Methodist Episcopal church in which she was an earnest worker. After a life well spent in service to others and in the administration of her home she passed away January 20, 1911, at the age of eighty years, six months and twenty-six days, and was laid to rest in the Gilson cemetery.

In his political views James Rebstock is a republican and has been chosen by his party to the office of supervisor which he held for twenty-four years, being for five years of this time the chairman of the board of supervisors of Haw Creek township. He was also elected to other offices which he filled with honor, and is the president of the Haw Creek township high school board. In his religious faith he is a loyal worshiper in the Methodist Episcopal church to which he belongs. He is well known in military organizations of the state and is a member of the George N. Trafton Post, G. A. R., of Knoxville, Illinois.

An interesting document that throws light on James Rebstock's military career and also settles a long disputed point of controversy is an affidavit drawn up by J. N. Hogue in which he answers the question: "Who fired the first siege gun at Fort Donelson on the 13th of February, 1862." "I, J. N. Hogue of Burchard, Nebraska, late member of Company B, Eighty-third Illinois Infantry, do hereby certify that James Rebstock, of Company G, of the Eighty-third Illinois Infantry, filled the position of No. 3 on siege gun No. 32, on February 13, 1862, at the battle of Fort Donelson in Tennessee and fired that day and he also fired it when two rebels were killed at the muzzle of the gun on said day. I, J. N. Hogue, was gunner at the time and know all the circumstances of the above statement.

J. N. HOGUE."

Subscribed and sworn before me this 3d day of January, 1899.

HENRY N. FALLERS, Notary Public.

GEORGE M. SORNBORGER.

To win recognition as a valiant soldier, as a prosperous farmer and as a capable merchant shows not only versatility, but also indicates the adaptability and concentrated effort which compel success. For this reason George M. Sornborger who has distinguished himself in such a varied record commands our unqualified admiration. A native of Victoria township, Knox county, he has remained a resident of this county all his life, and for the last fifteen years has lived in Victoria, Copley township, where he is engaged in the mercantile business. He was born April 1, 1841, a son of Anson Sornborger, who moved from his native place, Dutchess county, New York, in the year 1838, coming with his parents to Victoria township, Knox county, Illinois. Like his father he followed farming as a pursuit, buying sixty acres of land in 1842. He sold this after a time and in 1849 bought another farm near Copley, where he lived till the end. He married Miss Catherine Wilber, also a native of Dutchess county, New York, and who accompanied Martin Van Buren's family to Illinois, where they settled in Victoria township when she was a young girl. She was a daughter of John Wilber and Dorothy (Freimeyer) Wilber. Of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Anson Sornborger, George M., the subject of this biography, and two brothers survive: F. W. Sornborger, who lives in Geddes, South Dakota; and Charles, residing in Victoria township. The grandfather, George Sornborger, was born in Holland and came to this country with his parents during colonial times. His wife was Miss Catherine Wolcott, of English lineage. By occupation he was a farmer and mechanic and during the Revolution took up arms in the cause of freedom. He is buried in Victoria cemetery, Knox county, the only Revolutionary war hero in any cemetery in this part of the county. His death occurred in 1840.

George M. Sornborger had a common-school education. At twenty-one he enlisted in the Eighty-third Illinois Infantry from Knox county, under the command of Colonel Harding of Monmouth, Illinois, a company which remained with General Grant for three years. Mr. Sornborger remained until their famous engagement at Fort Donelson, afterward becoming ill with pneumonia and on that account he had to be discharged after serving eleven months and seventeen days. He returned home and when sufficiently recovered to work, he took up farming and followed this for more than thirty years. He owned his farm and made a comfortable income in general farming and cattle raising. During this time he saw the wild prairies of Illinois transformed into beautiful tracts of cultivated land and the old difficult methods of transportation replaced by the railroads built through almost every county of the state. His father used to tell of the early hardships and difficulties with which the farmers had to contend, how, for example, he took his grain clear in to the Chicago markets by team and there sold it for fifty cents a bushel. In 1896 George M. Sornborger sold of his land, one hundred and sixty of his two hundred acres. His sons Claude and Floyd are now operating the old farm. Upon his withdrawal from agricultural labors he removed to Victoria and opened a general merchandise store which he has conducted since 1896.

The marriage of Mr. George M. Sornborger and Miss Frances E. Suydam occurred October 12, 1865. Born in New York state, she was a daughter of John G. and Henrietta (Cholette) Suydam, who removed from New York to Victoria township, this county, in 1849. Mr. Suydam enlisted in the Eighty-third Illinois Infantry, the same company to which Mr. Sornborger belonged, and died for the Union June 6, 1863. Miss Frances E. Suydam's paternal grandparents were Mr. and Mrs. Abraham (Smith) Suydam, natives of New York, while those on the mother's side were D. C. and Sarah (Mire) Cholette.

Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. George M. Sornborger, all of whom are living. They are: Clarence T., aged forty-four, who is married to Anna Doak and operates a farm in Copley township; George A., who is married to Nellie Hanson and lives in Copley township; Lolette Kate, residing at Nekoma, Illinois, the wife of W. Woodcock, and mother of two children, Ross and Bertha; Mary, the wife of Alfred Sanquist, who resides in Victoria township; Claude and Floyd, who live on their father's old place, the latter being married to Edith Johnson, of which union there is one child; Grace, the wife of C. A. Carlson, a farmer of Victoria township, and the mother of two children, Doris M. and Charles William; Fern, who is the wife of Emery Anderson, a farmer, of Dakota and has three children, Vera C., Clarence G. and Maurice G.

George M. Sornborger is well known in military organizations of the state, being a member of P. G. Tate Post No. 678, G. A. R., of Victoria, Illinois, and is now serving as commander of that post for his second term. From the time of casting his first vote, which was for Abraham Lincoln, he has been a consistent republican in his political faith and has been elected to office several times, once as assessor and for two terms as collector. Mr. Sornborger is a man of genial temperament and in his public and private relations has never failed to adhere to the principles of honor and truth which have constituted his guiding rule of life.

WILLIAM HENRY GIBBS.

William Henry Gibbs, a well known citizen of Galva, Illinois, is a native of Knox county, his birth occurring in Lynn township, January 27, 1843. He comes of a family of Quaker origin, which was founded in America at the time William Penn and his colony settled in Pennsylvania. Our subject's paternal grandfather, Martin Gibbs, was a native of Camden county, New Jersey, in which state he engaged in the sawmill business prior to coming to Illinois with the father of our subject in September, 1838. They located upon what became known as the old Gibbs homestead in Lynn township, Knox county. Here the grandfather erected a sawmill in 1849 and engaged in its operation. He and his son occupied a double log house during those pioneer days. He married Hannah Beck and they were prominently identified with the early development of this section of the state.

Jonathan Gibbs, the father of our subject, was born in Camden county, New Jersey, December 22, 1808, and remained with his parents until he had attained his majority, when he commenced learning the glass-blower's trade, following that occupation for nine years. As previously stated, he came to Knox county in September, 1838, and upon the home farm in Lynn township spent the remainder of his life. In connection with farming he assisted in the operation of the sawmill, which was the first erected in his part of the county. On coming to this state he was accompanied by his wife and one child, for he had previously married Tamar Norcross on the 14th of August, 1832. She was born May 11, 1812, and was a daughter of Joseph and Martha (Duball) Norcross, being one of their seven children. Her death occurred July 15, 1900.

To Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Gibbs were born nine children, of whom four are still living, namely: Phoebe, the wife of A. O. Bradley, of La Fayette, Illinois; Clayton A., who is connected with the Hayes Works at Galva; Richard F., of Lynn township; and William Henry, of this review. Jonathan Gibbs died September 16, 1889.

William H. Gibbs was reared and educated in much the usual manner of farmer boys and remained under the parental roof until twenty-two years of age, assisting in the work of the farm. He then went to La Fayette, where he engaged in business as a contractor in mason work until 1888. He was next employed as fireman on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad and later was promoted to engineer, in which capacity he served until 1901. For one year he had charge of the City Water Works of Galva and in 1909 entered the employ of the Hayes Manufacturing Company of that place, with which he is still connected.

On the 12th of May, 1864, Mr. Gibbs was united in marriage to Miss Julia A. Grant, who was born in Stark county, Illinois, August 30, 1844. Her father, Nelson Grant, who was a farmer by occupation and a native of New York state, was born on the 16th of February, 1810, and died February 27, 1892, in Stark county, Illinois. Her mother, who bore the maiden name of Mary Chatfield, was born November 10, 1814, and died May 12, 1906. Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs have become the parents of three children: Cora May, who is the wife of Herman R. Pelz, a traveling salesman living in Peoria; Clara Alice, the wife of Thomas E. Chilton, who is a native of England and a salesman for the Challenge Company of Batavia, living in Galva, Illinois; and Claude Irvin, a molder by trade, who married Alice Peterson, a daughter of John S. Peterson, of Galva, in which city they make their home. Mr. Gibbs has one grandchild, Dorothy May Chilton, who was born April 4, 1903, and is now attending school. By his ballot Mr. Gibbs supports the men and measures of the republican party and he has taken an active interest in local affairs. He served on the school board in Lynn township and his support is never withheld from any enterprise which he believes will prove of public benefit.

P. A. SUNWALL.

P. A. Sunwall, a successful agriculturist who makes a specialty of buying, selling and raising stock, is the owner of a fine farm of one hundred and thirty acres, located two miles north of Williamsfield. He is a native of Knox county, his birth having occurred in Truro township, in 1871, and a son of Jonas and Anna (Peterson) Sunwall, natives of Sweden. The father was born in Helsingland in 1826, and there he passed the first forty-three years of his life. Having heard many favorable reports regarding the opportunities and advantages afforded to enterprising men in the United States, in 1869, together with his wife and family, Jonas Sunwall took passage for the new world. Upon his arrival in this country he came directly to Knox county, settling on a farm in Truro township to the further development of which he devoted his energies until age compelled his retirement from active life. He passed away in 1907 at the venerable age of eighty-two years. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Sunwall numbered four: Nelson J., a resident of Texas; P. A., the subject of this sketch; Jennie M., of Colorado; and a son who died in infancy.

The period of his boyhood and youth, P. A. Sunwall spent on his father's farm, obtaining his education in the district schools. Like other farmer lads he was early assigned chores about the barn and fields, his duties increasing as his strength developed with the passing years. By the time he had attained his maturity he was a good practical agriculturist, having long been accustomed to plowing, sowing and harvesting the fields under the competent direction of his father. When qualified to begin farming for himself he undertook the operation of the home place, where he is now living and has met with increasing prosperity in its cultivation. His fields are rich and fertile and annually yield abundant harvests that well repay him for the labor expended in their cultivation. In addition to his general farming, Mr. Sunwall also raises and buys stock, that he ships to the Chicago and St. Louis markets. He has met with more than an average degree of success. In taking care of the soil and in the conservation of its fertility he follows the plans of the State University and is a faithful adherent of Professor Hopkins, whom he considers the foremost exponent of scientific soil renovation in the world. In his experiments with various crops Mr. Sunwall was the first in this section of the country to obtain satisfactory results in planting his land to alfalfa. He considers this legume the most valuable the farmer can raise and is proud to be set down as the pioneer alfalfa grower in these parts. During the period of his ownership of his present place he has put thereon many improvements indicative of the spirit of enterprise and progress that has characterized his undertakings.

Ever since age conferred upon him the right of franchise he has given his political support to the men and measures of the republican party. He has been called upon to discharge the duties of a number of township offices and for many years has been a school trustee. Keenly regretting the limited opportunities offered him in acquiring his own education he has become the earnest advocate of betterment in our school system and especially interests himself in bringing about the consolidation and grading of the country schools. Mr. Sunwall is unmarried. He is a man of enterprise and industry, whose success is attributable to intelligently directed effort.

W. B. ELLIOTT.

W. B. Elliott lives on the old homestead of two hundred and fifty acres four and one-half mile north of Williamsfield, in Victoria township. He was born within a mile and one-half of where he now resides, May 10, 1866. His parents were Burgess and Achsah Ann (Rue) Elliott, the father a native of this county and the mother of Indiana. The father was born in 1837 and the mother in 1846. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, two of whom died in infancy. Our subject is the elder of the two surviving, the other being C. W., who resides at 89 Arnold street, Galesburg. Burgess Elliott spent his entire life in this county, where for many years he was actively engaged in farming. His efforts at the venerable age of eighty-two years. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Sunwall numbered four: Nelson J., a resident of Texas; P. A., the subject of this sketch; Jennie M., of Colorado; and a son who died in infancy.

W. B. ELLIOTT AND FAMILY

The period of his boyhood and youth, P. A. Sunwall spent on his father's farm, obtaining his education in the district schools. Like other farmer lads he was early assigned chores about the barn and fields, his duties increasing as his strength developed with the passing years. By the time he had attained his maturity he was a good practical agriculturist, having long been accustomed to plowing, sowing and harvesting the fields under the competent direction of his father. When qualified to begin farming for himself he undertook the operation of the home place, where he is now living and has met with increasing prosperity in its cultivation. His fields are rich and fertile and annually yield abundant harvests that well repay him for the labor expended in their cultivation. In addition to his general farming, Mr. Sunwall also raises and buys stock, that he ships to the Chicago and St. Louis markets. He has met with more than an average degree of success. In taking care of the soil and in the conservation of its fertility he follows the plans of the State University and is a faithful adherent of Professor Hopkins, whom he considers the foremost exponent of scientific soil renovation in the world. In his experiments with various crops Mr. Sunwall was the first in this section of the country to obtain satisfactory results in planting his land to alfalfa. He considers this legume the most valuable the farmer can raise and is proud to be set down as the pioneer alfalfa grower in these parts. During the period of his ownership of his present place he has put thereon many improvements indicative of the spirit of enterprise and progress that has characterized his undertakings.

Ever since age conferred upon him the right of franchise he has given his political support to the men and measures of the republican party. He has been called upon to discharge the duties of a number of township offices and for many years has been a school trustee. Keenly regretting the limited opportunities offered him in acquiring his own education he has become the earnest advocate of betterment in our school system and especially interests himself in bringing about the consolidation and grading of the country schools. Mr. Sunwall is unmarried. He is a man of enterprise and industry, whose success is attributable to intelligently directed effort.

W. B. ELLIOTT.

W. B. Elliott lives on the old homestead of two hundred and fifty acres four and one-half mile north of Williamsfield, in Victoria township. He was born within a mile and one-half of where he now resides, May 10, 1866. His parents were Burgess and Achsah Ann (Rue) Elliott, the father a native of this county and the mother of Indiana. The father was born in 1837 and the mother in 1846. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, two of whom died in infancy. Our subject is the elder of the two surviving, the other being C. W., who resides at 89 Arnold street, Galesburg. Burgess Elliott spent his entire life in this county, where for many years he was actively engaged in farming. His efforts were crowned with success and he subsequently retired to Williamsfield, where he was living when he passed away at the age of seventy-one years.

W. H. ELLIOTT AND FAMILY.

Reared on his father's farm, W. B. Elliott obtained his preliminary education at his mother's knee, between the corn rows and in the district school. He attended Lombard College about a year and one-half and then spent three years at the State Normal University, completing the course in 1893. He spent seven years as teacher in the public schools of this state, being principal of schools at Saybrook, McLean county, Wyoming, Stark county, and Altona, Knox county. In 1895, while principal of the Altona school, Mr. Elliott turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, locating upon his father's farm, where he now lives. Here he engages in general farming and stock-raising and is meeting with very good returns from both. Having been reared on a farm, he possessed the practical knowledge that well qualified him for his present undertaking. A man of good business judgment, he has applied himself intelligently to the direction of his activities along the more progressive lines of modern agriculture. He has erected several new buildings on the place and remodeled many of those that were there, installing various modern conveniences and improvements that have added greatly to the comfort and attractiveness as well as the value of the property. In every respect it is a thoroughly up-to-date and model farm, manifesting in all its details the careful supervision and capable direction that indicate system in its operation. Mr. Elliott owns one hundred and twenty acres about a mile from where he resides, having purchased this tract several years ago.

For his wife Mr. Elliott chose Miss Jeannette Armstrong. She was the daughter of John and Mary (Montgomery) Armstrong, natives of Scotland, and was born at Darhead, Lanarkshire, Scotland, July 10, 1863. Her father was born in 1802 and died in 1885, while the mother was born in 1828 and still resides in this county. They were married in 1852 and emigrated to America in 1867, locating in Victoria township, where the mother now lives. Mrs. Elliott was one of a family of nine children, of whom but three others survive, namely: Mrs. Agnes Wycoff, of Peoria county; and James and Thomas, who live with their mother. W. B. Elliott and wife have become the parents of six children: Jennie Achsah, William Burgess, Edward Rue, Robert Montgomery, Charles Roland (deceased), and John Kenneth.

Mr. Elliott's fraternal relations are confined to his membership in the Modern Woodmen of America and the Royal Neighbors, his wife also being a member of the latter. He is a member of the Galesburg Club and maintains relations with his fellow agriculturists of Knox county through the medium of his membership in the Farmers' Institute, of which organization he has been president for the past two years. His political allegiance he gives to the republican party and now represents Victoria township on the county central committee. All local political affairs engage his attention, and for two years he served as supervisor of Victoria township and he is now discharging the duties of justice of the peace, while for fifteen years he has been a member of the board of school directors. He has been a delegate to county and state conventions of his party. Mr. Elliott is a representative modern agriculturist of progressive ideas, who believes that it requires as high a standard of intelligence, clear judgment and business sagacity to successfully direct the operation of a farm as any industrial enterprise. Agriculture is becoming recognized as one of the most lucrative as well as independent vocations and is annually attracting a more intelligent and capable class of men, who realize that it is a business in which success is as dependent upon foresight, sagacity and specific information as any in the whole field of commercial or industrial activities.

STEPHEN WYMAN.

A well known agriculturist of Knox county, who is now living retired on his beautiful homestead located on section 20, Persifer township, is Stephen Wyman, whose holdings in this county aggregate four hundred and sixty-five acres. He was born in Vinton county, Ohio, on the 21st of June, 1834, and is a son of Arthur and Annie (Soltz) Wyman. The father was born in the state of New York, but when a lad of eight years he came to Ohio with his people, who passed the remainder of their lives in the Buckeye state. Arthur Wyman was reared and educated in Vinton county, and there he met and subsequently married Miss Soltz, who was a native of Ohio. They began their domestic life on a farm in that state, where Mr. Wyman continued to engage in agricultural pursuits until 1852. In the latter year with his wife and family he came to Illinois, settling in Knox county. He subsequently acquired the title of two hundred and forty acres of land in Persifer township, northeast of the farm of their son Stephen, and now the property of Harvey England. A man of much energy and determination of purpose, he industriously applied himself to the further improvement and cultivation of his property, erecting thereon a comfortable dwelling and good substantial barns and outbuildings. His farming was conducted along general lines, the greater part of his time and attention being devoted to stock-raising, which proved to be very lucrative. He passed away on his homestead at the age of sixty-seven and was buried at Westfall cemetery, as was also the mother, who was seventy-five at the time of her death. They were members of the United Brethren church, and in his political views the father was a republican. He was always interested in all township affairs and served with efficiency in some of the minor offices. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Wyman numbered eleven, all of whom were born in Ohio. John, who passed away at the age of seventy years and was buried in Westfall cemetery in Persifer township, became one of the prosperous farmers of this county, owning at the time of his death eight hundred acres of land in Persifer township. He married twice, his first union being with Hannah Taylor, a daughter of Daniel Taylor, while for his second wife he chose Miss Katherine Mundwilder, who now resides in Knoxville. Minerva, the eldest daughter, married Noah Dawson, of Persifer township, and they are now both deceased. Edward J., who died at the age of sixty-nine years and was buried in Westfall cemetery, married Elizabeth Bradford. The next in order of birth died in infancy, and the fifth is Stephen, our subject. Levi died in Missouri, while in the Union army. Mary married Charley Taylor of Persifer township and they are now both deceased, as also are Eliza and Andrew, who were twins. Arthur, who was a volunteer in the Union service, died from yellow fever just after the battle of Vicksburg, and

George, the youngest member of the family, when last heard from was living in Idaho.

The first eighteen years of his life, Stephen Wyman passed in his native state in whose common schools he obtained his education. He accompanied his parents on their removal to Knox county in 1852, and remained at home until he had attained his majority, assisting with the operation of the farm. When he was twenty-one he began working for himself, so capably and intelligently directing his activities that he met with excellent success in his agricultural pursuits. He kept adding to his holdings as he was able until he now owns ninety-two acres of land in Knox township, and three hundred and twenty on section 20 of Persifer, where he has resided for many years and fifty-three in section 18, making in all four hundred and sixty-five acres. The dominant factors in the success of Mr. Wyman have unquestionably been his perseverance and energy, which have been utilized to most excellent advantage. He is most ambitious and applies himself conscientiously and painstakingly to whatever he undertakes, striving to excel in everything. No effort has been spared in the development of his farm, all of which is now under high cultivation and well improved. He has erected good substantial buildings on his place, to the value of which he has added at various times by installing many modern conveniences and improvements. Both his residence and grounds afford a most attractive and pleasing appearance from the public highway and he has built a fine private road on his grounds with cement bridges across the culverts. In connection with general farming Mr. Wyman raised stock, making a specialty of hogs annually, making large shipments to the near-by markets.

Mr. Wyman has been married twice. His first wife was Miss Katherine Miner, a native of Indiana and a daughter of Thomas Miner, who resided in Knox county only one year, and they became the parents of seven children. In order of birth they are as follows: Richard, a resident of Knoxville, who married Annie Swanson; Marion, who was drowned in the state of Washington; Electra, the wife of Cornelius Ward; Thomas, who married Bessie Brandt and is residing in Abingdon, this state; George, who lives in the state of Washington; Sanford, who died in Oregon and is buried in Westfall cemetery; and Viola, who died at the age of nine months. The mother died on the farm where she had passed the period of her married life and was laid to rest in the family lot at Westfall. She was a fine Christian character and held membership in the United Brethren church. Mr. Wyman subsequently married Miss Erma F. Rambo, who was born in Peoria, and is a daughter of George Rambo. They have five children: Jasper Newton, who is living in the northwestern part of Colorado; Walter Stephen, who is operating the home farm; Iva, the wife of Norman Arbogast, of Galesburg; Hattie, who married Martin O'Connor and is living in Galesburg, Illinois; and Lewis, who married Mary Arthur and is living in Douglas, Illinois.

Ever since granted the right of franchise upon attaining his majority, Mr. Wyman has given his political support to the men and measures of the republican party. He has never prominently figured in township affairs but he has given efficient service as a school director. Progressive and enterprising in matters of citizenship he takes a deep interest in all movements that he feels will benefit the community and assists in promoting their adoption. He is now rated as one of the prosperous agriculturists of his township, but the struggle to attain this position was fraught with much self-denial and years of unceasing labor. Upon him developed the hardships and discouragements that fall to the lot of the majority of people, and the money to provide some of the necessary improvements on his place was borrowed at an exorbitant rate of interest. However, he possessed those qualities that refuse to recognize defeat and kept persistently ahead until he had attained the goal. Now in addition to his valuable property he has a comfortable competence and is a stockholder in the Appleton & Victoria Telephone Company. Mr. Wyman is a man of many fine sterling qualities, the worth of which have been thoroughly tested during the long period of his residence in Knox county and never found wanting.

JENNIE H. REYNOLDS.

Jennie H. Reynolds, wife of the late Peter G. Reynolds, who during his lifetime was associated with agricultural interests in Knox county, resides on the farm which her husband operated for many years, a tract of one hundred and twenty acres in Sparta township. She was born in Knoxville, Illinois, January 29, 1864. Her father, Robert Higgins, who lives at Knoxville and is in his seventy-third year, is a native of Belfast, Ireland, arriving in America at the age of fourteen years. His parents located at Knoxville, Illinois, and there he was brought up to follow farming and also learned the butcher's trade, following this dual occupation until his retirement a number of years ago. He married Elizabeth Wallace, also a native of Ireland, and they had ten children, five boys and five girls, of whom two are deceased. The living are: Jennie, the subject of this review; Robert, residing in Minnesota; Samuel, living at home; Mayme, the wife of J. B. Grounds of Denver, Colorado; Martha, the wife of Ray Van Tassel, of Flint, Michigan; James and Charles, living in La Junta, Colorado; and Belle, the wife of A. Humphrey of Minnesota.

After the usual education in the public schools of her native locality Jennie H. Higgins remained at home for a time and in April, 1893, was united in marriage to Peter G. Reynolds. He was born on the old homestead in Sparta township in 1860 and was a son of E. B. Reynolds, at present a resident of Galesburg. Reared in the locality in which he passed his entire life he obtained his education here attending first the district schools of Sparta township and later Lombard College at Galesburg. He engaged in agriculture operating his father's farm for a number of years. He then farmed on his own account and after his marriage purchased the farm where Mrs. Reynolds is now living. Here he followed the pursuits of general farming and feeding cattle for market, meeting with substantial rewards for his untiring toil. In politics he was an ardent democrat and served for many terms as a director on the school board and as road commissioner. On August 3, 1898, Mr. Reynolds passed away after a lingering illness of two years, and although he had suffered long his untimely death came as a great shock to his family, for he had been a good husband and a devoted father. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds: Ralph J., born August 13, 1894; and John E., born February 24, 1897.

Mrs. Reynolds is a member of the Christian church of Knoxville, the faith to which her husband also belonged. He maintained fraternal relations with the Masonic order having been a member of the Knoxville lodge. Occupied with the responsibilities of motherhood, educating her children, seeing that they may be provided with the opportunities which will enable them to make their way in the world, the years of widowhood have passed rapidly for Mrs. Reynolds and have softened her grief and the loneliness that follows the bereavement of dear ones.

OWEN BETTERTON WEST.

Born in Yates City, Illinois, Owen Betterton West has been a resident of Knox county his entire life, the date of his birth being August 1, 1869. His father, Isaac N. West, was born in Clinton county, Ohio, in 1835, and came to Yates City with his parents, John and Elizabeth (George) West, who settled two miles north of Yates City on a farm which he owned, comprising one thousand acres of land, and grew to manhood in Elba township. John West was also a native of Clinton county, Ohio, being born May 3, 1809. His first American ancestor was Owen West, a brother to the father of Benjamin West, the celebrated artist, and was born in London, England, in 1729 and came to America in 1761, settling in Georgia. He was widely known for the strong views he held in opposition to slavery. Isaac N. West was twice married, his first wife being Charlotte Hull; he was married the second time to Eliza Ann Mason, a daughter of Jeremiah and Eliza (Sayler) Mason, who lived in Knox county, where Mrs. West was reared, although she claimed Ohio as her native state. There were nine children in the West family, of whom the following are still living: Charles, married to Susan Nixon, resides in Miami, Oklahoma, where he is engaged in the real-estate business; Owen B.; Nora, the wife of Frederick Soldwell, who resides in Yates City; and William Edwin, who operates a grain elevator in Yates City. The deceased are: Marion, Edith, Josephine and two who died in infancy. By his former union to Miss Charlotte Hull, Mr. West had a daughter, Charlotte, the wife of Frank Chamberlain, a merchant in Yates City. I. N. West resided north of Yates City where he owned a very fine farm of three hundred and twenty acres in Salem township, operating this until his death at the age of forty-eight years. He was not a politician but was loyal in his support of the republican policies. Mrs. West passed away at the age of seventy years and three months.

Owen B. West obtained his education in the common schools of Salem township and attended Lombard College, after which he took a course at Brown's Business College, at Peoria, Illinois. His first work was in the fields but he remained at this only a short time when he engaged in the grain business in Yates City meeting with much success in the enterprise. His desire to return to agricultural labors, however, and a good offer made him by M. W. Thompson induced him to sell his grain interests—which Mr. Thompson later sold to William Edwin West, Owen West's brother—and again resume the carefree and independent life on a farm. Being progressive and modern in his methods of cultivating the soil and breeding cattle he found much profit in this work and continued it until the spring of 1911 when he located in Yates City where he now lives. He is interested in several local business enterprises and is the president of the Farmer's Telephone Company.

The marriage of Mr. West and Miss Alpha Van Tassell occurred on March 14, 1895. She was a native of Peoria, Illinois, her parents being William W. Van Tassell, born in New York city, and Jane (Boardman) Van Tassell, born in England. Mr. Van Tassell brought his wife as a bride to Stark county, Illinois, and later removed to Peoria, where he lived for forty years, being employed on the railroad during much of that time and for a number of years was employed as government store keeper for the internal revenue department of the United States. He was an old soldier, having enlisted for the first time from New York and for the second time from Stark county, Illinois. At the time of his discharge he was a sergeant. He was a republican in politics and with his family belonged to the Methodist church. His death occurred at the age of seventy-two and his wife's at the age of sixty-five years. They had eight children of whom six are still living, Mrs. West being the only one of the number residing in Knox county. Mr. and Mrs. West are the parents of two children: Lloyd Alvin, born March 14, 1896; and Harriet Florine, born November 21, 1903.

In his political views Mr. West is a republican and was elected on the party ticket in the spring of 1910 to the office of supervisor, his term continuing until 1912. At previous times he has held the offices of assessor of Salem township, member of the board of auditors of Salem township, alderman, and mayor of Yates City. He is a Mason being a member of the Yates City lodge in which he has passed through all the chairs.

JAMES CATION.

James Cation was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1821, and died in Williamsfield, Illinois, in 1904, his parents being William and Margaret (Paul) Cation. The family were well known silk weavers of that country and were engaged in hand weaving fine Paisley shawls. In the land of his nativity James Cation was reared and educated and in 1843 accompanied his parents on their emigration to the United States, the voyage being made in a sailing vessel which encountered a severe storm while passing through the West Indies. The rigging of the vessel was torn away and lost, and for nine weeks they drifted but finally landed in New Orleans, whence they made their way to Peoria, Illinois.

The father of our subject settled on a farm on section 26, Millbrook township, Peoria county, and James Cation subsequently purchased the land which his father had obtained from the government. It was in 1870 that James Cation came to Knox county and located on a farm in Elba township, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1892. He then retired from active labor and removed to Williamsfield, where he passed away at the age of eighty-three years.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES CATION

William Edwin West, Owen West's brother—and again resume the carefree and independent life on a farm. Being progressive and modern in his methods of cultivating the soil and breeding cattle he found much profit in this work and continued it until the spring of 1911 when he located in Yates City where he now lives. He is interested in several local business enterprises and is the president of the Farmer's Telephone Company.

The marriage of Mr. West and Miss Alpha Van Tassell occurred on March 14, 1895. She was a native of Peoria, Illinois, her parents being William W. Van Tassell, born in New York city, and Jane (Boardman) Van Tassell, born in England. Mr. Van Tassell brought his wife as a bride to Stark county, Illinois, and later removed to Peoria, where he lived for forty years, being employed on the railroad during much of that time and for a number of years was employed as government store keeper for the internal revenue department of the United States. He was an old soldier, having enlisted for the first time from New York and for the second time from Stark county, Illinois. At the time of his discharge he was a sergeant. He was a republican in politics and with his family belonged to the Methodist church. His death occurred at the age of seventy-two and his wife's at the age of sixty-five years. They had eight children of whom six are still living, Mrs. West being the only one of the number residing in Knox county. Mr. and Mrs. West are the parents of two children: Lloyd Alvin, born March 14, 1896; and Harriet Florine, born November 21, 1903.

In his political views Mr. West is a republican and was elected on the party ticket in the spring of 1910 to the office of supervisor, his term continuing until 1912. At previous times he has held the offices of assessor of Salem township, member of the board of auditors of Salem township, alderman, and mayor of Yates City. He is a Mason being a member of the Yates City lodge in which he has passed through all the chairs.

JAMES CATION.

James Cation was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1821, and died in Williamsfield, Illinois, in 1904, his parents being William and Margaret (Paul) Cation. The family were well known silk weavers of that country and were engaged in hand weaving fine Paisley shawls. In the land of his nativity James Cation was reared and educated and in 1843 accompanied his parents on their emigration to the United States, the voyage being made in a sailing vessel which encountered a severe storm while passing through the West Indies. The rigging of the vessel was torn away and lost, and for nine weeks they drifted but finally landed in New Orleans, whence they made their way to Peoria, Illinois.

The father of our subject settled on a farm on section 26, Millbrook township, Peoria county, and James Cation subsequently purchased the land which his father had obtained from the government. It was in 1870 that James Cation came to Knox county and located on a farm in Elba township, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1892. He then retired from active labor and removed to Williamsfield, where he passed away at the age of eighty-three years.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES CAVETON

He was a member of the Presbyterian church and was formerly a republican in politics but later came a free-trade democrat. He took a very prominent and active part in township affairs and held a number of minor offices. He was successful in business and was a man honored and esteemed by all who knew him.

In 1855 he married Catherine Gray, who was also born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1838, and came to America in 1852 with a brother and two sisters, her parents having died in Scotland. She still resides in Williamsfield and is an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal church. To Mr. and Mrs. Cation were born eight children, namely: David, of Williamsfield, Illinois; William, a resident of Knoxville, Illinois; Alex, who lives in Walla Walla, Washington; John, of Elba township, Knox county; one who died in childhood; James L., a banker who died in Arizona at the age of thirty-seven years; Charles, who died in Oregon; and Mary, who died at the home of her parents when a young woman.

CLYDE H. MACHEN.

Clyde H. Machen, senior partner of the firm of Machen Brothers, wholesale and retail dealers in fuel, feed, flour and hay, at 133 East Waters street, Galesburg, was born in Columbus, Texas, on January 24, 1882. His parents are Henry S. and Mary J. (Brower) Machen, the father a native of Illinois and the mother of Pennsylvania. Henry S. Machen was born in Peotone, Will county, and there he was also reared. He was given the benefit of very good educational advantages and when old enough to become self-supporting engaged in teaching. This profession engaged his attention for several years, but having decided upon a commercial career he subsequently went to Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin, where he became identified with the lumber business. Later he was appointed manager of a large plantation and lumber mill in Texas, that he operated for a time and then went into the oyster business at Mississippi City, Mississippi. In 1887 he removed to Missouri and engaged in contracting and building at Marceline, that state. While engaged in this business he erected or supervised the construction of many of the leading buildings in the town. At the end of three years, in 1890, he entered the employ of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company, and has ever since continued in their service. In February, 1903, he was transferred to Galesburg in the capacity of passenger and freight agent, which position he still holds. The paternal grandparents of our subject were A. B. and Louise (Sultzbaugh) Machen, natives of Pennsylvania. In their early years they came to Illinois, locating in Will county, where they resided for many years and from there removed to Marceline, Missouri. There the grandfather passed away about 1885, having attained a ripe old age, but he is still survived by the grandmother, who continues to make her home in Marceline. Mrs. Henry S. Machen was the only child of her parents, her mother being Mrs. Ella L. (Evans) Brower. Three sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Machen, of whom our subject is the eldest, the other two being Harvey L. and Cecil E.

The earliest memories of Clyde H. Machen are associated with Marceline and Lexington Junction, Missouri, as he was only a child of three years when his parents located in the former place. When old enough to begin his education he entered the public schools of Marceline, but subsequently attended Woodson Institute. As soon as he was qualified to become self-supporting he laid aside his text-books and entered the employ of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company, at Lexington Junction, where he remained until 1901. In the latter year he was stationed at Laplata, Missouri, going from there to various other points on the company's lines until 1903, when he accompanied his parents on their removal to Galesburg. Very soon thereafter he was assigned duty elsewhere, and during the succeeding six years was employed in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico. In 1909 he returned to Galesburg and established the business he is now conducting. During the first three months he was sole owner, but the enterprise developed so rapidly that his brother Cecil E. became associated with him at the expiration of that period under the firm name of Machen Brothers. Their store is located at No. 133 East Waters street, and as they are both enterprising young men, who conduct their business in a straightforward, legitimate manner, they are accorded an excellent patronage that is constantly increasing.

On the 21st of December, 1908, Mr. Machen was united in marriage to Mrs. Nellie H. Wright, a daughter of Benson and Gertrude V. Hume, of Illinois, and they have become the parents of one son, Clyde Richard.

Mr. and Mrs. Machen hold membership in the Central Congregational church. His political support Mr. Machen gives to the republican party. During the brief period of his connection with the commercial activities of Galesburg, he has manifested the qualities that invariably characterize the successful business man, and the future of the enterprise with which he is connected seems assured.

MICHAEL WELSH.

In the death of Michael Welsh on the 28th of July, 1907, Knox county lost a citizen who had long been honored as a representative and worthy resident of this part of the state. He had occupied his home in Williamsfield for many years, becoming a resident of Truro township in the spring of 1856. From that time until his death he had maintained a creditable position as a business man and as a public official, and throughout his entire life he had wisely used the advantages and opportunities that came to him. While he never had any great ambition to obtain wealth, yet he made for his family a comfortable living and he continually added to his store of mental riches through his wide and diversified reading.

Mr. Welsh was born September 8, 1830, in Kilkenny county, Ireland, his parents being William and Mary (Holden) Welsh. His educational opportunities were equivalent to those of a common-school course in this land, and on the 14th of October, 1850, when he was twenty years of age, he was married to Miss Catherine Grace, and with his bride started for America, arriving in New Orleans on the 1st of January, 1851. This was the wedding journey of the young couple who, after a voyage of eight weeks upon a sailing vessel, reached the American port, and from the present city of New Orleans made his parents located in the former place. When old enough to begin his education he entered the public schools of Marceline, but subsequently attended Woodson Institute. As soon as he was qualified to become self-supporting he laid aside his text-books and entered the employ of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company, at Lexington Junction, where he remained until 1901. In the latter year he was stationed at Laplata, Missouri, going from there to various other points on the company's lines until 1903, when he accompanied his parents on their removal to Galesburg. Very soon thereafter he was assigned duty elsewhere, and during the succeeding six years was employed in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico. In 1909 he returned to Galesburg and established the business he is now conducting. During the first three months he was sole owner, but the enterprise developed so rapidly that his brother Cecil E. became associated with him at the expiration of that period under the firm name of Machen Brothers. Their store is located at No. 133 East Waters street, and as they are both enterprising young men, who conduct their business in a straightforward, legitimate manner, they are accorded an excellent patronage that is constantly increasing.

Michael Welsh

On the 21st of December, 1908, Mr. Machen was united in marriage to Mrs. Nellie H. Wright, a daughter of Benson and Gertrude V. Hume, of Illinois, and they have become the parents of one son, Clyde Richard.

Mr. and Mrs. Machen hold membership in the Central Congregational church. His political support Mr. Machen gives to the republican party. During the brief period of his connection with the commercial activities of Galesburg, he has manifested the qualities that invariably characterize the successful business man, and the future of the enterprise with which he is connected seems assured.

MICHAEL WELSH.

In the death of Michael Welsh on the 28th of July, 1907, Knox county lost a citizen who had long been honored as a representative and worthy resident of this part of the state. He had occupied his home in Williamsfield for many years, becoming a resident of Truro township in the spring of 1856. From that time until his death he had maintained a creditable position as a business man and as a public official, and throughout his entire life he had wisely used the advantages and opportunities that came to him. While he never had any great ambition to obtain wealth, yet he made for his family a comfortable living and he continually added to his store of mental riches through his wide and diversified reading.

Mr. Welsh was born September 8, 1830, in Kilkenny county, Ireland, his parents being William and Mary (Holden) Welsh. His educational opportunities were equivalent to those of a common-school course in this land, and on the 14th of October, 1850, when he was twenty years of age, he was married to Miss Catherine Grace, and with his bride started for America, arriving in New Orleans on the 1st of January, 1851. This was the wedding journey of the young couple who, after a voyage of eight weeks upon a sailing vessel, reached the American port, and from the present city of New Orleans made their way up the Mississippi river to St. Louis. After a brief period passed there they journeyed up the Illinois river to Peoria and thence by wagon traveled with Benoni Simpkins, one of Mr. Welsh's earliest friends, to Maquon, arriving there on the 19th of April, 1851. The following year Mr. Welsh aided in building a bridge across Spoon river, now known as the Long Bridge, receiving for his services the munificent sum of fifty cents per day! He turned his attention to agricultural pursuits when, in 1856, he removed with his young family to Truro township, where he continuously made his home until the time of his death. While residing there he formed the acquaintance and gained the friendship of Henry J. Corbin, whose willingness to assist young men in their struggles to get a start in those pioneer times endeared his memory to many. Mr. Welsh was always extremely grateful to Mr. Corbin, and one of the last things he planned before his death was a visit to the grave of this friend of his early manhood to remove some brush that had grown upon and around the last resting place of Mr. Corbin.

Michael Welsh

While Mr. Welsh carefully managed his business affairs with the laudable ambition to provide a good living for his family it was well known that he never took advantage of the necessities of another in a business transaction, nor was he ever so busy that he neglected the duties and obligations of good citizenship. It is said that his home was known from Galesburg to Chillicothe in the early days as the abode of hospitality and good cheer and that no worthy person was ever denied shelter and entertainment there. From time to time he was called to public offices and filled a number of local positions in a most creditable manner. He served as assessor for several terms, and for twenty years filled the position of justice of the peace at a time when country justices heard many cases. Much litigation occurred in the country between the years 1860 and 1880, and all through the fall and winter months, after crops had been harvested, Mr. Welsh was busy hearing the contested interests of litigating parties. He made a fine judicial officer, and at different times nearly every leading attorney of Knox county bar of that period practiced before him, including H. N. Keightley, Judge Leander Douglas, Judge Craig and C. K. Harvey. That his decisions were strictly fair and impartial is indicated in the fact that in the twenty years in which he presided over the justice court no litigant ever took an appeal from his decision. For a half century he had a personal acquaintance with all the members of the Knox county bar and he was a great admirer of Julius Manning and a lifelong friend and supporter of Judge Craig.

Mr. Welsh took a very deep interest in everything pertaining to the general progress and improvement of his home community, his county, state and nation. He was a stalwart democrat, giving unfaltering support to the principles of his party, yet he approved and commended the stand which President Roosevelt took concerning the anthracite coal strike, and he sympathized with President Lincoln in his determination to put down the war. He did not approve of the peace measures advocated at the time of the McClelland campaign. He had previously supported Stephen A. Douglas, and was present at the famous Lincoln-Douglas debate in Galesburg in 1858. All through his life he added to his knowledge through wide reading and was especially interested in works of a legal nature and in history. The rural daily mail brought many periodicals and papers to his home and he always kept in touch with current events. In the early days when it was difficult to obtain books he eagerly availed himself of every opportunity to secure reading matter and pored over the volumes of biography that contained the lives of Clay, Webster, Calhoun, Washington, Lincoln and the heroes of the Revolutionary war. Thus from the well supplied storehouse of his mind he could continually draw for anecdote, information, or fact to enrich his conversation or prove an argument.

Six months before his demise Mr. Welsh was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife. A half year passed and he was laid to rest by her side in St. Joseph's cemetery in Galesburg. Their family included the following sons and daughters: William M., F. F. and Jay of Williamsfield, Illinois; Mrs. Alice Cloonen, of Zearing, Iowa; J. D., of Galesburg; Dr. M. M., of Odell, Illinois; and Mrs. Mary Judge of Pontiac, Illinois. Mr. Welsh enjoyed good health and was a man of splendid physique. By the members of his family he was never regarded as old or decrepit for he continued young in thought and spirit. He planned to attend the 4th of July celebration at Galesburg, in 1907, but the excessive heat of the summer proved detrimental to him, and on the 8th of July, while sitting on the porch of his home, he was overcome by the heat. All through his life he had chosen those things which are most worth while. He entered largely into the realm of thought, and yet he remained an active factor in the world's work.

LYMAN P. WILSON.

Lyman P. Wilson, now serving for the second term as city attorney of Galesburg, to which office he was reelected in 1911, is one of the younger representatives of the bar of the city, yet since entering upon active practice has made substantial and continuous progress. He was born in Clarke county, Iowa, January 21, 1883. His father, John Wilson, was a native of Hermon, Knox county, Illinois, born August 11, 1856, and in the public schools of this county he pursued his early education, which was supplemented by a course in Hedding College. He then took up rail construction work and contracting, and after continuing in that line of business for a time, devoted several years to farming in Iowa, near the town of Leslie. He then returned to Knox county and filled the position of postmaster at Hermon for twelve years. In 1897 he removed to Galesburg and entered the employ of the city water department, while subsequently he became connected with the engineering department, where he is now to be found. He has always voted with the democracy and made for himself a creditable record during his three terms' service as postmaster of Hermon. On the 21st of July, 1881, near London Mills, he was united in marriage to Miss Amanda P. Phillippi, who was born in that locality, November 25, 1858. They are both members of the Methodist Episcopal church and well spent lives have won for them the kindly regard and confidence of all with whom they have been brought in contact.

Lyman P. Wilson, their only child, pursued his education in the public and high schools of Galesburg and in Knox College, from which he was graduated with the class of 1904. He then entered upon preparation for a professional career as a student in the law department of the University of Chicago, form which he was graduated in the spring of 1907. In the fall of the same year he opened an office in Galesburg, where he continues in general practice, and in the trial of cases he has proved his ability to successfully cope with the many intricate problems of the law. In the spring of 1909 he was elected city attorney and commendation of his first term's service was given him in his reelection, in the spring of 1911. He was chosen as the candidate of the republican party and has always been one of the stanch supporters of that political organization.

On the 21st of January, 1909, Mr. Wilson was married to Miss Edith Marks, a daughter of J. Warren and Mary Lillian (Houder) Marks, of Pontiac, Illinois. Her father, who was born August 2, 1857, followed farming for a long period at Pontiac and is now living at Lake Park, Iowa. It was on the 10th of January, 1883, that he wedded Mary L. Houder, who was born December 14, 1862. They became the parents of three children: Welford H., born July 24, 1884; Mrs. Edith Wilson, born December 31, 1886; and Florence L., born September 18, 1889.

During his college days Mr. Wilson was prominent in fraternal circles, becoming a member of the Phi Alpha Delta of the University of Chicago and the Delta Sigma Rho fraternity of Knox College. Both he and his wife are earnest and active members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in the work of which he has taken a helpful part, serving for a time as a teacher in the Sunday school. He also belongs to the Woodmen's lodge. Because nature endowed him with strong intellectual qualities and, furthermore, because he is ambitious and determined, one feels no hesitancy in predicting for him a successful future, for he has already well established himself in the practice of his chosen profession.

JOHN HALL.

John Hall, one of the venerable residents of this county, who is passing a peaceful old age in his home in Douglas, retired from active participation in farming interests several years ago, and although nearly eighty-two years of age he is as cheerful in spirit and keen in mind as many a man twenty years his junior. He was born in County Mayo, Ireland, June 13, 1830, his parents being James and Mary (Nash) Hall, natives of Ireland. There were nine children in the family, seven of whom came to America, John Hall being the only one who survived. On his arrival in the United States he settled in New York state and found employment in a machine shop, continuing in this connection for a number of years, until he came to Peoria county, Illinois. He remained there three years and then removed to Gallia county, Ohio, where he resided for twelve years. There he married Mary Jane Stewart, a native of Ohio, and subsequently removed to Salem township, Knox county, Illinois, buying a farm of eighty acres, situated on section 7 of Salem township, in 1867. Mr. Hall set about cultivating this land, which was partly improved, and constructed buildings and fences thereon. He was enterprising in his methods and met with excellent results in his work. In 1907 he discontinued his labors on the farm and retired to Douglas, Illinois, to pass the remainder of his life in the enjoyment of a well earned rest.

The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hall: Fred, deceased; John William; Robert S., who resides in Douglas and is married to Blanch Buffington, a daughter of Frank Buffington, of Farmington, Illinois, and has three children, Priscilla Bella, Floyd Vincent and Mary Elizabeth; Francis, who married Anna Kennedy, a daughter of James Kennedy, of McComb, Illinois, and has one child, Glenn, and two daughters deceased, one dying at the age of two years and the other at the age of six. Mrs. Hall passed away on the old home farm at the age of fifty-six years and is interred in the Uniontown cemetery.

Mr. Hall votes with the republican party but is not actively interested in politics although he is well informed on affairs of national and local interest. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, to which his wife also belonged.

HENRY SULTZBAUGH MACHEN.

Henry Sultzbaugh Machen, who has been freight and passenger agent for the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad at Galesburg since February 1, 1903, was born in McLean county, Illinois, on the 25th of February, 1861. He is a son of Amos and Louise (Sultzbaugh) Machen, both natives of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Amos Machen remained a resident of his native state until 1860, when he came to Illinois, locating on a farm in McLean county. He assiduously applied himself to the further cultivation and improvement of his land for some years thereafter, meeting with a reasonable degree of success. Later, however, he withdrew from agricultural pursuits and engaged in contracting and building. After identifying himself with this business he removed to Missouri, subsequently becoming a resident of Marceline, that state. He located there about the time the town was founded and engaged in the same business. As he was a good mechanic and capable business man, his undertaking thrived and he erected many of the leading public buildings and private residences in the town. He was numbered among the enterprising and successful citizens at the time of his death, which occurred in 1899, at the age of sixty-two years. The mother is still living and continues to make her home in Marceline and there recently celebrated the sixty-eighth anniversary of her birth. Mr. Machen was a veteran of the Civil war, having been in the service for three years and three months. He was clerk of his company and was mustered out with the rank of corporal. He was not a member of any denomination but was friendly to all, while his wife holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal church. They were the parents of eleven children, our subject being the eldest of the six who attained maturity. In order of birth the others are as follows: Levi B., who is deceased; Emma, the wife of William Houle, of Chicago; George F., who is deceased; May, deceased; and Guy, who lives in San Marcial, New Mexico. The paternal grandparents were Henry and Caroline (Brennemann) Machen, natives of Pennsylvania, but of German extraction. To them were born four children, Amos, the father of our subject; Ann; Peter; and Henry. Agricultural pursuits always engaged the attention of Henry Machen, who passed away in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, at the age of sixty-seven years. He was long survived by his widow, who was eighty-two at the time of her death. The maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sultzbaugh, were also natives of Pennsylvania, but they came in an early day to Peotone, Will county, Illinois, making their home with their son. Later they returned to the Keystone state and there they both passed away at a ripe old age. Their family was as follows: Philip; Henry; Louise, the mother of our subject; Mary Ann; Peter; and Rebecca.

The first year of his life Henry S. Machen passed in his native state, but at the expiration of that time he was taken to Pennsylvania, where he resided until he was seven. In 1868 he was brought back to Illinois, spending the succeeding two years in Will county. He then accompanied his parents on their removal to Linn county, Missouri, remaining there until he was a youth of thirteen, when he went to Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin. At the usual age he began his education, which was pursued in the public schools at his various points of residence, until he was graduated from the high school at Sturgeon Bay. For two years thereafter he engaged in teaching, but having decided that he preferred commercial activities at the end of that time he withdrew from this profession and began his business career. He was identified with the lumber interests of Wisconsin for some years thereafter, and then went to Texas. During the first eighteen months of his residence in the latter state he was overseer of a large cotton plantation, but later he was made manager of some shingle mills in Beaumont, Texas, continuing in this capacity for two years. From there he went to Mississippi City, Mississippi, where he engaged in contracting and building for a year, then established a wholesale and retail oyster business that he conducted for three years. At the end of that period he withdrew from commercial activities and entered the employ of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company. He began his services with this company in 1888 in the capacity of night ticket clerk at Marceline, Missouri, remaining there for five years. In 1903 he was transferred to Galesburg as freight and passenger agent and has ever since been identified with this position. A man of pleasing personality and gracious and accommodating manner, Mr. Machen has discharged his services in a manner highly acceptable to the company and the public, and is held in high esteem by all who have occasion to have dealings with him.

At Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin, on the 13th of April, 1881, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Machen and Miss Mary J. Brower, and they have become the parents of three children. Clyde H., who is mentioned at greater length elsewhere in this work, is engaged in the fuel, feed and flour business with his brother, Cecil E., who is the youngest member of the family. Harvey, the second in order of birth, who is now residing in Oklahoma, and married, having two children.

Mr. Machen is a trustee of the Central Congregational church, in which both he and his wife hold membership, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Masonic order, being identified with Vesper Lodge, A. F. & A. M. In politics he is a republican, giving his indorsement to the progressive faction of that party, and for one year he served as city clerk of Galesburg. Mr. Machen is a highly estimable citizen, progressive and enterprising in his ideas, who takes an active interest in all matters pertaining to the public welfare.

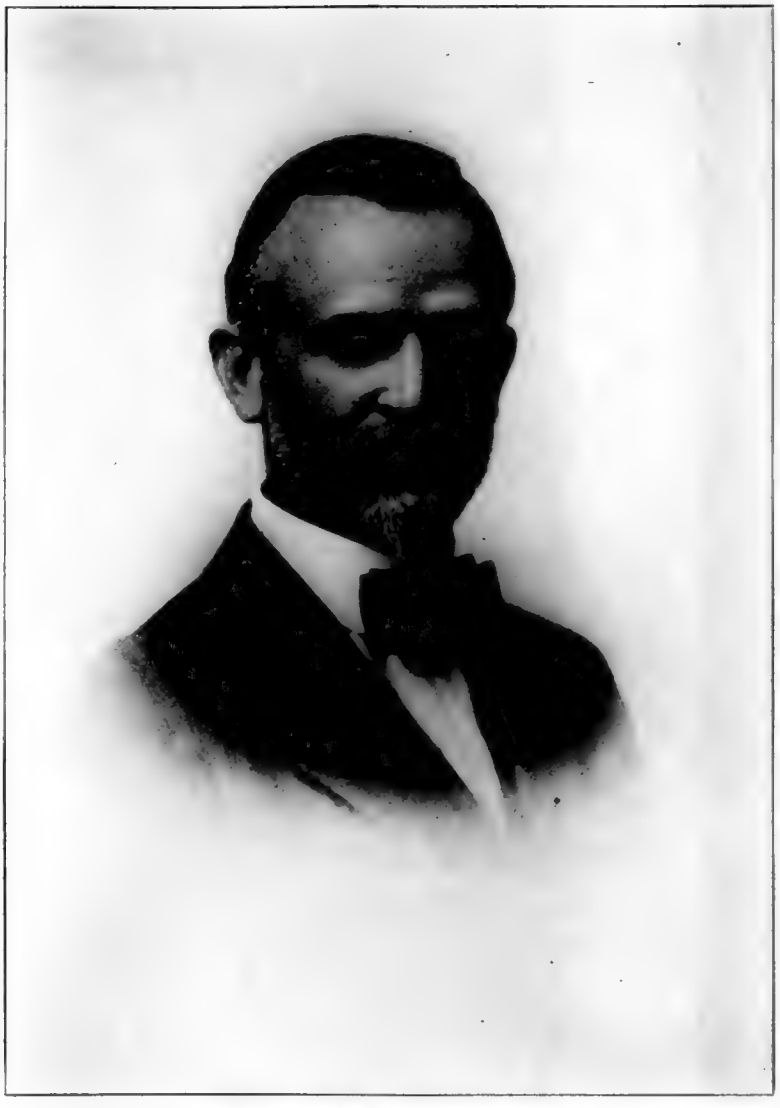
ERASTUS FULLER.

Erastus Fuller, now living retired at No. 630 Maple avenue, is one of the well known citizens of Galesburg, having resided here for forty-nine years, during the greater portion of which period he actively engaged in carpenter work, while for a time he also operated a planing mill. His birth occurred at Gardiner, Maine, a town located on the banks of the picturesque Kennebec river, on the 3d of May, 1830. The Fuller family originally came from England, the founder of the American branch having located in New England in 1634. The paternal grandparents of our subject were William and Lucy (Hodgkins) Fuller. The former was born in Ipswich, Massachusetts, March 10, 1761, and died in West Gardiner, Maine, in September, 1842. The grandmother was born June 10, 1764, and died May 3, 1846. In their family were eleven children: Hannah, born September 17, 1787; Lucy, born December 14, 1788; Catherine, February 3, 1791; William, February 1, 1793; David, January 19, 1795; James, January 12, 1797; Abigail, December 12, 1798; Daniel, February 1, 1801; Joseph, February 17, 1803; George, July 13, 1807; and Mary Ann, August 20, 1810. All were born in Ipswich, Massachusetts, with the exception of the last named, whose birth occurred in Gardiner, Maine. The father of these children was a cabinet-maker and carpenter by trade and was a veteran of the Revolutionary war, having enlisted in the service three times during the war for independence. The maternal grandparents of our subject were Elisha and Sarah (True) Drew, to whom were born five daughters: Mary, Charlotte, Sarah Ann, Adaline and Hannah. They were likewise residents of Massachusetts, where the grandfather followed the carpenter's trade during his active years.

The parents of our subject, David and Mary (Drew) Fuller, were both natives of the state of Massachusetts, and there they were likewise reared and married and passed the early years of their domestic life. Subsequently they removed to Gardiner, Maine, formerly a part of Massachusetts, where the father followed his trade during the remainder of his active life. He was a carpenter and cabinet-maker of rare skill and workmanship, having learned to do exquisite work with the broadax. He was one of the well-to-do citizens of his town, owning his own home, and there both he and his wife passed away at the venerable age of seventy-four years, his death occurring in 1869 and hers in 1877. In matters of faith they were strictly orthodox and his political support he gave to the whig party. When the second war with Great Britain opened, David Fuller was old enough to enlist and went to the front as the musician of his regiment but did not long remain in the service. He was a public-spirited man and always took much interest in all local political issues and for some years discharged the duties of justice of the peace. Eight children were born to Mr.

and Mrs. Fuller, our subject being the fifth in order of birth. The others are as follows: Elizabeth E., Elisha D., David H., Mary C., Sarah H., Rebecca A. and Ursula Anna, who died December 4, 1829.

Reared on his father's farm in Maine, Erastus Fuller obtained his education in the subscription schools of the vicinity. At the age of fourteen years he laid aside his school books and turned his attention to the carpenter's trade, which he learned under the capable direction of his father. This had been the occupation of the men in both the paternal and maternal lines of his family for several generations and to this fact in all probability can be attributed much of the mechanical skill Mr. Fuller has always manifested. By the time he had attained his majority he was a capable and most creditable representative of his craft, which he successfully followed during the entire period of his active life. He followed his trade in his native state until he was twenty-seven years of age, but, believing that the newer towns of the west offered greater possibilities, in 1857 with his wife and family he came to Illinois. Upon his arrival in the state he first located at Oquawka, Henderson county, where he resided until 1863. In May of the latter year he removed to Galesburg, where he has even since lived, having resided in his present home for forty-four years. During the long period of his residence here Mr. Fuller has erected and superintended the construction of many of the best dwellings in the town and has also done the carpenter work in some of the leading public buildings. He was always regarded as one of the best carpenters in the town and one of the most reliable. A man of high honor and integrity, he made it one of the guiding principles of his life to keep his word and to discharge each task to the best of his ability. Consequently he had little difficulty in commanding a high price for his work, as it was always found to be worth the amount charged. When he first located here he only did carpenter work but after his sons became old enough to go to work he leased the old Coulton planing mill, which he operated for fifteen years very successfully. A goodly degree of prosperity has attended the efforts of Mr. Fuller, who in addition to his comfortable residence and other property interests has a competence that provides him and his wife with all of the necessities and many of the comforts of life.



Mr. Fuller has been married twice. His first union was with Miss Elizabeth Merry, a daughter of Samuel and Frances (Barter) Merry, their marriage being celebrated in Maine, on December 9, 1851. Four children were born to them, as follows: Lizzie Flora, who died at the age of seven years; Elmer, who was a babe of eighteen months when he died; Hervey, whose death occurred at the age of one year; and Blanche, who died in infancy. The mother passed away on the 5th of April, 1867. On the 23d of April, 1868, Mr. Fuller married Miss Amelia D. Stancliff, who is a daughter of William and Esther (Belden) Stancliff. Mrs. Fuller was born in Knox county, on September 26, 1843, and here she has passed her entire life. Her father was a native of Pennsylvania and her mother of New York, but they were married in the former state, coming from Erie, Pennsylvania, to Knox county in 1843. They located at Center Point in June of that year and there they continued to reside until 1848, when they came to Galesburg. Here William Stancliff passed away on the 15th of August, 1851, at the age of forty-three years. The mother, however, survived until February, 1894, her death occurring at the venerable age of eighty-four.

Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Stancliff, as follows: William Henry Harrison, Mary Anna, Amelia Desire, Emma Arabel, James Russell, David Russell and Daniel Belden. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Fuller were Russell and Desire (Goodard) Stancliff, natives of Pennsylvania. They had two sons, William and James. Her maternal grandparents were David and Anna (Ensign) Belden, natives of New York, whence they removed to Pennsylvania, coming from there to Knox county in 1839. Here they both passed away and were laid to rest in Hope cemetery. They had seven children: Parmelia, Esther, Nathaniel, William, Sallie Ann, Daniel Dixon and Susanna Meriel. The family of Mr. Fuller and his second wife numbers six, three daughters and three sons. David, who is a traveling salesman, married Cora Elizabeth Barrer and they reside at Galesburg. Emma, the deceased wife of Dr. Ralph T. Edwards, passed away in Siam near Bangkok, in January, 1910, leaving three children, Ralph Stancliff, Emma Hammell and Mary Elizabeth. William Stancliff, a postal clerk on the fast mail running from Chicago to Omaha, married Mary Ellen Brooks and resides at La Grange, Illinois. They have one child living, Erastus Brooks. Walter Erastus, the youngest son, died just before graduating from high school in March of 1895. Bessie Mabel is a nurse in Mayo Brothers Hospital at Rochester, Minnesota. Mary Edith, who is the youngest member of the family, is at home with her parents.

In matters of faith Mr. and Mrs. Fuller are Congregationalists, holding membership in Central church of this city, and his political support he gives to the republicans. He was formerly a whig but when that party was merged into the republican he transferred his allegiance and has ever since cast his ballot for their candidates. Mr. Fuller has witnessed the marvelous development of Galesburg that has accompanied the introduction of modern commercial and industrial methods in keeping with the rapid progress of the times, the inventions that are now common household and business necessities being undreamed of luxuries when he first came here.

EDSON REIFSNIDER, D. D.

Edson Reifsnider, who is dean of Ryder Divinity School, Lombard College, was born in Aurora, Illinois, on the 28th of April, 1868, a son of Vincent and Frances Salina (Gurley) Reifsnider. He acquired his early education in the public schools of Chicago and subsequently entered the divinity department of Tuft's College, Boston, Massachusetts, from which institution he was graduated in 1898 with the degree of B. D. Before entering college Dr. Reifsnider spent ten years in mercantile pursuits in Chicago. During his senior year at Tuft's College he acted as pastor of the New Bedford, Massachusetts, Universalist church. Immediately after his graduation he accepted a pastorate in Danvers, Massachusetts. He remained there until 1892 and the following year removed to Galesburg, where he held a pastorate for six years. In 1903 he also accepted a position as instructor in Ryder Divinity School, Lombard College, and was thus engaged until 1909 when he was chosen dean of the school. He has since occupied that office. In 1911 Buchtel College, Akron, Ohio, conferred upon him the degree of D. D.

REV. EDSON REIFSNIDER

Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Stancliff, as follows: William Henry Harrison, Mary Anna, Amelia Desire, Emma Arabel, James Russell, David Russell and Daniel Belden. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Fuller were Russell and Desire (Goodard) Stancliff, natives of Pennsylvania. They had two sons, William and James. Her maternal grandparents were David and Anna (Ensign) Belden, natives of New York, whence they removed to Pennsylvania, coming from there to Knox county in 1839. Here they both passed away and were laid to rest in Hope cemetery. They had seven children: Parmelia, Esther, Nathaniel, William, Sallie Ann, Daniel Dixon and Susanna Meriel. The family of Mr. Fuller and his second wife numbers six, three daughters and three sons. David, who is a traveling salesman, married Cora Elizabeth Barrer and they reside at Galesburg. Emma, the deceased wife of Dr. Ralph T. Edwards, passed away in Siam near Bangkok, in January, 1910, leaving three children, Ralph Stancliff, Emma Hammell and Mary Elizabeth. William Stancliff, a postal clerk on the fast mail running from Chicago to Omaha, married Mary Ellen Brooks and resides at La Grange, Illinois. They have one child living, Erastus Brooks. Walter Erastus, the youngest son, died just before graduating from high school in March of 1895. Bessie Mabel is a nurse in Mayo Brothers Hospital at Rochester, Minnesota. Mary Edith, who is the youngest member of the family, is at home with her parents.

In matters of faith Mr. and Mrs. Fuller are Congregationalists, holding membership in Central church of this city, and his political support he gives to the republicans. He was formerly a whig but when that party was merged into the republican he transferred his allegiance and has ever since cast his ballot for their candidates. Mr. Fuller has witnessed the marvelous development of Galesburg that has accompanied the introduction of modern commercial and industrial methods in keeping with the rapid progress of the times, the inventions that are now common household and business necessities being undreamed of luxuries when he first came here.

EDSON REIFSNIDER, D. D.

Edson Reifsnider, who is dean of Ryder Divinity School, Lombard College, was born in Aurora, Illinois, on the 28th of April, 1868, a son of Vincent and Frances Salina (Gurley) Reifsnider. He acquired his early education in the public schools of Chicago and subsequently entered the divinity department of Tuft's College, Boston, Massachusetts, from which institution he was graduated in 1898 with the degree of B. D. Before entering college Dr. Reifsnider spent ten years in mercantile pursuits in Chicago. During his senior year at Tuft's College he acted as pastor of the New Bedford, Massachusetts, Universalist church. Immediately after his graduation he accepted a pastorate in Danvers, Massachusetts. He remained there until 1892 and the following year removed to Galesburg, where he held a pastorate for six years. In 1903 he also accepted a position as instructor in Ryder Divinity School, Lombard College, and was thus engaged until 1909 when he was chosen dean of the school. He has since occupied that office. In 1911 Buchtel College, Akron, Ohio, conferred upon him the degree of D. D.

REV. EDSON REIFSNIDER

On the 1st of October, 1906, Dr. Reifsnider was married in Galesburg to Miss Anna Louise Cutter. He gives his attention exclusively to the best interests of the Ryder Divinity School and is one of the valued members of the faculty of Lombard College.

JOHN PURDY.

John Purdy was known in business circles of Galesburg as a pattern-maker and through his well conducted activities reached a point of success that enabled him to spend his later years in honorable retirement from labor. In early life he learned the pattern-maker's trade, which he followed for a number of years, entering the employ of George Brown. In this connection he displayed marked skill and ability, so that he was able to fill a responsible position and command good wages for his services. His industry and careful expenditure at length brought him a substantial competence and with this he retired to private life about 1886.

Mr. Purdy was twice married, his second union being with Mrs. Anna Foote, whom he wedded on the 1st of June, 1887. She is a daughter of James and Sarah (Halley) McFarland, of Warren county, Illinois, their home being on the Monmouth road about six miles from Galesburg. Their daughter Anna was twice married, her first husband being Henry Foote, who was born in Illinois, February 5, 1834, and was a son of Francis and Hannah B. (Miles) Foote, both of whom were natives of the east and died in that part of the country when their son Henry was a small child. He afterward came to Illinois with an uncle, Bradley Miles, who settled at Lewistown, this state. Mr. Foote completed his education as a student in Knox College and for a few years engaged in farming but, believing that he was called to the ministry, he engaged in preaching in the Methodist Episcopal church. He was called to his last charge in Oneida, Knox county, in the fall of 1873 and there engaged in preaching until the following year, when he went to Tennessee, where he died on the 5th of January, 1874. His life was ever a consistent and honorable one and was a factor for good in the world's work. His widow afterward returned to her mother's home, where she lived for a year, and then came to Galesburg, placing her children in the high school here.

It was on the 26th of October, 1859, in Warren county, about six miles southwest of Galesburg, that Mr. Foote was united in marriage to Miss Anna McFarland, and the children of this marriage are: Harry Willis, who was born August 12, 1864, in Warren county, Illinois, and is now engaged in the live-stock commission business in St. Joseph, Missouri; and Winifred Louise, who was born July 31, 1870, in Warren county, Illinois, and is the wife of George Rakstraw, a banker of Wyoming, Illinois, by whom she has four children, Harry Eugene, Roy Delbert, Florence Margaret and Helen Louise. The mother of these children, Mrs. Rakstraw, was educated in Brown's Business College.

Some years subsequent to the death of her first husband Mrs. Foote, who was born in Warren county, Illinois, October 12, 1842, became the wife of John Purdy. In his political views he was a republican but never sought nor desired office in recognition of his party fealty. His religious faith was that of the Baptist church, while Mrs. Purdy belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church. She is widely known in this part of the state, where her entire life has been passed, and those who know her, esteem her highly because her life has been a force for good and because her Christian principles have found manifestation in her kindly spirit and charity toward others.

GEORGE A. GIBSON.

George A. Gibson is one of the representative agriculturists of Persifer township, where he engages in the cultivation of three hundred and twenty acres of land, two hundred and forty of which on section 17, Persifer township, he owns. He was born in Vermilion county, Illinois, on May 22, 1875, and is a son of John H. and Mary (Leadbetter) Gibson. In 1881, the father, who is now deceased, removed with his family to Knox county, locating in Persifer township, where he engaged in farming.

George A. Gibson was a child of six years when he removed with his parents to Knox county, and here he has ever since made his home. His youth was passed in the township where he now resides, his education being obtained in the common schools. While he was still in his early boyhood he began assisting his father about the home place, thus acquiring the knowledge that has enabled him to become the successful agriculturist and stockman he is today. When old enough to begin for himself, naturally he adopted the vocation to which he had been trained from childhood, and that his decision was a wise one is evidenced by his present prosperity. He is the owner of two hundred and forty acres of most fertile land on section 17, Persifer township, that is well improved and under high cultivation. His place is fully and thoroughly equipped with all the machinery and appliances deemed essential by the modern farmer for the operation of the fields, and he has introduced various other conveniences and improvements in keeping with the spirit of progress that characterizes all of his undertakings. In connection with the cultivation of his fields Mr. Gibson is engaged in stock-raising and is meeting with satisfactory success in both branches of the business. He takes great pride in his farm and his stock, the latter being of high grade, and everything about the place bespeaks the intelligent direction and capable supervision that accompany success. He is a man of progressive ideas, yet is not a theorist, being thoroughly practical in his methods, and directs all of his operations with as careful regard for system as is evidenced by the successful man in any other line of business. He makes a scientific study of his soil, its needs and requirements and the cereal to which it is best adapted, and by the careful and systematic rotation of his crops realizes abundant harvests each year. Mr. Gibson bought his farm of Charles Wyman, and located here immediately after his marriage. Although the previous owner had erected all of the buildings he has wrought many changes in the place during the period of his occupancy, and it is now one of the most attractive as well as valuable properties in the community.

For his companion and helpmate Mr. Gibson chose Miss Emma Kellar, and they have become the parents of one son, Roy H., who is attending the local school. Mrs. Gibson is well known in the vicinity being a daughter of William and Katherine Kellar.

His political support Mr. Gibson always accords to the republican party, and for the past three years he has been serving as road commissioner in Persifer township, and he is also a school director in district 89. He is meeting with financial success in his agricultural pursuits, and in addition to his well stocked farm he is a member and director of the Persifer Telephone Company. Mr. Gibson has at all times fortunately directed his activities so intelligently that he has achieved his purpose. This can be largely attributed to the fact that he is never in doubt about the course he shall pursue, but carefully concentrates his energies upon a definite end with the determination of attaining it.

DOUGLAS WILLIAMSON.

Douglas Williamson, living on section 13, Indian Point township, is one of the representative farmers of Knox county. His methods are at all times practical, as well as progressive, and the results achieved have placed him with the substantial and successful residents of his community. He was born in Cedar township, January 29, 1856, a son of James and Sophronia (Bland) Williamson, both of whom were natives of Indiana. The grandfather, Thomas Williamson, was a native of Kentucky and with his family removed to Illinois, settling first in Sangamon county, where he remained for a short time. In 1832 he came to Knox county and entered land from the government. Not a furrow had been turned, nor an improvement made upon the place and the family experienced all the hardships and privations of pioneer life, while converting the raw prairie land into productive fields. Thomas Williamson had been a resident of Knox county for only a brief period when he was drafted for service in the Black Hawk war and aided in quelling the Indian uprising in this state. The farm upon which he settled in Cedar township remained his place of residence until his death and his wife also died on the old homestead.

James Williamson, father of Douglas Williamson, accompanied his parents on their removal from Indiana to Illinois and was reared in this state. In boyhood he assisted in the arduous task of developing the home farm and later he purchased land and began farming on his own account. For many years he was thus connected with agricultural interests in Knox county, but eventually sold his farm and removed to Abingdon, where he lived retired until his death in 1902. He was then seventy-eight years of age. He married Sophronia Bland, whose father, Joshua Bland, was also one of the early settlers of Knox county, arriving here in 1832. She is still living in Abingdon at the advanced age of eighty-four years. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. James Williamson were nine sons and five daughters and twelve of these are still living. The eldest, Mrs. Mary Bateman is deceased. The oldest surviving member of the family is Stewart Williamson, now of Galesburg. He was born in an old log schoolhouse of Cedar township, March 10, 1847, was educated in the Brush creek school in that township, and then took up the occupation of farming. For fifteen years he resided in Abingdon, after which he settled on a farm near that town. Eventually, however, he took up his abode in Galesburg, where he now lives. He was married in Abingdon October 11, 1874, to Elizabeth Jones, a native of Monmouth and a daughter of John A. and Nancy (Hart) Jones, who came to Illinois from Virginia and were resident farmers of Knox county until their deaths. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Williamson were born eight children: Minnie, the wife of Harry Bloomfield of California; Guy, of this county; Clyde, of Cedar township; Myrtle, the wife of John Smith of Chicago; Lou, the wife of Allen Sweborg, living on a farm in Cedar township; Cora, Ethel and James, all at home. Frank M. Williamson, the third member of the family of Mr. and Mrs. James Williamson, is living in Cedar township where he follows farming. Annie, the next of the family, is the wife of R. McGahey. Rachel is the widow of George Swartz and lives in Abingdon. James M., is a resident of Colorado. Douglas is the next of the family. William is a resident of Colorado. Ellen is married and lives in Cedar township. John is a practitioner of osteopathy in Parsons, Kansas. Mary is the wife of Dwight Hunter of Cedar township. Daniel who was killed in a runaway accident in April, 1911, was among the first to go to the Klondyke country, traveling with a company of men who walked over the Chilkoot paths. He remained there one season when his provisions gave out and he was compelled to leave the north. He then went to California where he remained one year and then made his way to Seattle, Washington. While there he enlisted for service in the Spanish-American war and went to the Philippines, taking part in the first battle. He participated altogether in thirty-seven engagements, remaining in the islands for three years. On his return to the United States he was mustered out at Seattle and was discharged at Washington, D. C. Later he drew a piece of land in Oklahoma, remaining there for some time, but subsequently sold his claim. He then engaged in breaking horses and was killed while following that business. Charles, the next of the family, is a farmer living in Cedar township. Edward is an electrician and sketch artist, residing in Denver, Colorado, and the youngest of the family.

In taking up the personal history of Douglas Williamson, we present to our readers the life record of one of the well known and representative agriculturists of Knox county. He pursued his education in the Warren school and then took up the occupation to which he had been reared. For fourteen years he engaged in breaking horses and did a larger business of that kind than any other man in the county, breaking as many as one hundred and fifty horses in a year. Since then he has confined his attention entirely to general farming, including the cultivation of the cereals best adapted to soil and climate, and also to the raising of stock, making a specialty of thoroughbred Jersey cattle. For the past six years he has lived on his present farm on section 13, Indian Point township, and the neat and thrifty appearance of his place indicates his careful management and progressive methods.

On the 20th of March, 1894, in Galesburg, Mr. Williamson was married to Miss Cora Young, who was born in Fulton county, Illinois, February 24, 1872, a daughter of Asher and Susan (Parks) Young, both of whom were natives of New Jersey and on removing to Illinois settled near Fairview, Fulton county, when that was a pioneer district. Both Mr. and Mrs. Young are now living with Mr. and Mrs. Williamson. The three children of the latter are: Gladys, Marie and Otis, all at home. The parents are valued members of the Methodist Episcopal church and are loyal to its teachings. Mr. Williamson belongs to Abingdon Lodge No. 185, F. & A. M. and also to the Odd Fellows Lodge of Hermon and the Modern Woodmen Camp at Abingdon. His many sterling traits of character and his business enterprise and ability have gained him a place among the valued citizens of his township and his good qualities have won him many friends.

LORENTUS CONGER FERRIS.

Lorentus Conger Ferris, who is conducting a feed store and transfer line at number 109 South Prairie street, Galesburg, is a native of Knox county, his birth having occurred in this township on the 14th of January, 1869. He is a son of Fred and Elizabeth (Sherman) Ferris, who were also born and reared in this county, where their parents located during the pioneer days. The paternal grandfather, George Ferris, came here about the same time as the Gale family and was numbered among the founders of Galesburg. The maternal grandparents passed the greater part of their lives in this vicinity, where they attained a ripe old age. Their family numbered fourteen. Reared on a farm, during his early manhood Fred Ferris followed agricultural pursuits, but of recent years he has been engaged in gardening in the immediate vicinity of Galesburg. When the call came for troops in the early days of the war, Mr. Ferris responded by enlisting as a private and going to the front, where he remained for three and a half years. There he early displayed the courage and ability that qualified for a more responsible position and he was mustered out with the rank of lieutenant. Upon his return home he resumed the responsibilities of civil life as a farmer, continuing to follow that occupation for some years thereafter. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Ferris numbered thirteen, nine of whom lived to attain maturity, as follows: George, who is living at Bull Frog Fields, Nevada; Margaret, the widow of Mr. Beckwell, of Los Angeles, California; Lorentus Conger, our subject; Olmstead, who resides at Rock Island; James, of Kenosha, Wisconsin; Harry, who lives in Peoria; Albert, now a resident of Galesburg; Edward, who is living in Fairview; and Grant, who is a farmer in Warren township. The mother, who has now passed away was a Methodist in religious faith, and his political support the father accords to the republican party.

The first six years in the childhood of Lorentus Conger Ferris were passed on the farm where he was born, but he has ever since lived in Galesburg. He attended the public schools until he was old enough to make his own way in the world and engaged in lathing for two years. At the expiration of that time he gave up this trade and for three years thereafter drove a dray, continuing at home until he had attained his maturity. Four years ago, Mr. Ferris established the business he is now conducting and is meeting with a goodly measure of success in his undertaking. He is one of those who energetically apply themselves to whatever they engage in, and is using intelligence in the direction of his enterprise. During the four years he has been identified with this activity he has made marked progress in its development, and is now firmly established and thriving.

Mr. Ferris was married on the 1st of July, 1890, to Miss Ida Morgan, who was born in Indiana and is a daughter of Peter and Catharine (Harris) Morgan. The parents came from Indiana to Knox county many years ago settling on the Gale farm. Agricultural pursuits always engaged the energies of the father, who passed away at the age of sixty years. The mother, however, is still living. They had seven daughters, as follows: Ida, now Mrs. Ferris; Alice; Anna; Rhoda; Frances, who died at the age of fourteen years; Lillian; and one, who was seven at the time of her death. The father, Peter Morgan, was one of those who gave his services in defense of the Union during the Civil war. Mr. and Mrs. Ferris have two daughters, Ethel and Bessie. The family home is located at 198 Cedar avenue, where they own a comfortable and pleasant residence.

Mr. Ferris champions the political principles of the republican party, and although he takes an active interest in all municipal affairs, has never sought public office. Mrs. Ferris and their two daughters hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, and take a helpful interest in the work of its various organizations. He is a most worthy representative of one of the highly respected pioneer families, and is held in favorable regard by his many friends, the majority of whom have known him from early boyhood.

HENRY C. BLOOM.

Among the farmers of Persifer township who have prospered as the result of untiring and faithful labor is Henry C. Bloom, the owner of eighty acres of land on section 13. A native of Sweden, he was born September 21, 1865. His grandfather was Constan Sunderman Bloom, a wealthy sea captain, who on one of his voyages was wrecked at sea for three weeks and after five days of floating on the water was picked up by a passing ship. John Jaskrith Bloom, father of Henry C. Bloom, was also a native of Sweden, born in 1818. His occupation was that of agriculturist and he performed his duties with an additional degree of success because of the liberal education which he had received. He married Carolina Johnston, a countrywoman of his, born in 1828, who had also received a good education in the land of her birth. She was a daughter of Jonas Johnston. Mr. Bloom was ten years his wife's senior and after her death, in 1908, he survived her by only two years, both being buried in Saby cemetery, in Jankŏpinglan, Sweden. They were both zealous members of the Lutheran church. Their family consisted of four children, three girls and one boy, two of the girls being deceased. Only Henry C. and one sister now survive.

Henry C. Bloom after finishing his education, in 1887, when only twenty-two years of age, with the initiative and courage characteristic of those who make a success of life, set out unaccompanied for America, reaching Knox county, where he labored for three months as a section hand. Then going to Dahinda, Illinois, he worked for two years on the Santa Fe Railroad, after which he began his career as a farmer. On January 11, 1893, he married Christiana Matteson, a native of Sweden, born December 5, 1845, and the youngest child of John and Anna Catherine (Pearson) Svidbeurg. John Svidbeurg was born in 1805, and his wife, in 1809, both being natives of Sweden, where they spent their entire lives, he dying in 1876, and she in 1882. They were the parents of five children, three girls and two boys. One brother and one sister of Mrs. Bloom also came to America, the sister residing in Bloomington, Illinois, and the brother in Orange township, Knox county. After receiving her education Christiana Svidbeurg came to America at the age of twenty-five, living in Galesburg for two years and at Knoxville for six months prior to her marriage to her first husband, a Mr. Matteson, deceased. Two children were born of her first marriage: Ella Amanda, who is the wife of W. H. Webb, of Persifer township, and mother of Marion Eleanor, Margaret Christiana, and Maurice Matteson and Madeline, twins; and Minnie Esther, who is the wife of Henry Westergreen, residing in Copley township, and mother of Vivian Ione, Harold Love and Nellie Christiana.

After his marriage Mr. Bloom purchased a farm of Judge Craig, in Persifer township, which tract being unimproved he has cultivated, erecting on it good buildings and converting it into an attractive place. His farming has been along general lines and he also raises cattle, hogs and horses. Mr. Bloom has been very active in furthering the interests of his community. He is a stockholder in the Dahinda-Victoria Mutual Telephone Company, has given much attention to the schools of his district and has served one term as school director. He is loyal to the republican party and is socially connected with the Fraternal Reserve Life Association, Dahinda Lodge, No. 2, being chaplain of the local lodge. Mr. Bloom is a true representative of the land of his birth, sturdy, persevering, reliable, and these qualities have made him a highly honored citizen.

E. S. WILLARD.

E. S. Willard is one of the highly successful and capable business men of Williamsfield, where he located three years ago, founding the enterprise that he and R. L. Reed are now conducting under the firm name of E. S. Willard & Company. His birth occurred in Marshall county, this state in 1878, and he is the only child born of the marriage of J. E. and Martha (Schanck) Willard. His father, who is also a native of Marshall county, was for many years engaged in the restaurant business, but he now has charge of the cemetery at Princeville, and both he and the mother reside in that city.

When old enough to begin his education E. S. Willard entered the public schools of Lawn Ridge, which he attended until he had reached the age of sixteen years. Feeling that he had sufficient knowledge to enable him to begin preparations for his business career, he then laid aside his text-books and entered Ziegler's furniture and undertaking establishment of Peoria, of which there was a branch at Lawn Ridge. From there he went to Wyoming, where he continued to follow the same business for eight years, thus ably qualifying himself to conduct a similar place of his own. In 1908 he came to Williamsfield and opened the establishment of E. S. Willard & Company, which has developed in a most gratifying manner during the three years of its existence. Mr. Willard was at first alone in the business, but soon took in E. T. Merry as a partner. Upon the latter's death in 1910, Mr. Reed purchased his interest and has ever since been connected with the enterprise. It is the only furniture store in the town and they also carry a varied assortment of carpets, hardware, crockery, wall paper and musical instruments. In connection with their household furnishings they maintain an undertaking department, which is among the most complete to be found in a town of this size in the state. Mr. Willard gives his personal attention to this department of their business and discharges his duties in a manner becoming its dignity and solemnity. In their store, due to its excellent location and attractiveness, they have enjoyed a good and growing patronage from the first, and being pleasant and agreeable as well as accommodating they have succeeded in retaining satisfied customers and in adding to them continually. Every department of the store is flourishing, and they are having particularly large sales in musical instruments, especially pianos.

Mr. Willard was married while residing in Wyoming to Miss Ida Osborn, a resident of that place, the event being celebrated in April, 1901.

Fraternally Mr. Willard is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, having taken all degrees to the Encampment. He is one of the wide-awake, alert and progressive business men of Williamsfield, who is not alone interested in the development of his own enterprise but in that of the community at large, and he can always be depended upon to give his support and cooperation to every movement that he feels will be of general benefit to the citizens of the town and surrounding districts.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM EDWARD SIMONDS.

Professor William Edward Simonds, professor of English in Knox College since 1889 and a well known contributor to the text-books of the schools, was born in September 10, 1860, in Peabody, Massachusetts, a son of Edward and Mary A. (Chase) Simonds. The father was also a native of the old Bay state, having been born at Ipswich, Massachusetts, December 30, 1811. He was the second of the ten children of Charles and Mary (Stacy) Simonds, who were married in 1808. The former was born in 1786 and passed away in 1851, while his wife, who was born in 1788, died in 1874. Their children continued to live in Peabody or that vicinity until called from this life, the death of Edward Simonds there occurring July 4, 1873. In early manhood he had wedded Mary A. Chase, who was born in Bushwick, a borough of Brooklyn, New York, August 11, 1828. Shortly after her birth her parents removed to Massachusetts, occupying for two years the old Whittier homestead in East Haverhill, following the removal of the poet to Amesbury. Thereafter the family settled permanently in Hudson, New Hampshire. Her ancestry is traced back to Humphrey and Rebekah (Nichols) Chase. The former, who was born in 1779, died in 1860, and the latter, born in 1780, died in 1848. They were the parents of John Chase, who was born in Plaistow, New Hampshire, in 1802, and was married in 1827 to Martha L. Rhodes, of Lynn, Massachusetts, a daughter of Thomas and Ruth (Marston) Rhodes. John Chase died in Nashua, New Hampshire, in 1888. He was the first alone in the business, but soon took in E. T. Merry as a partner. Upon the latter's death in 1910, Mr. Reed purchased his interest and has ever since been connected with the enterprise. It is the only furniture store in the town and they also carry a varied assortment of carpets, hardware, crockery, wall paper and musical instruments. In connection with their household furnishings they maintain an undertaking department, which is among the most complete to be found in a town of this size in the state. Mr. Willard gives his personal attention to this department of their business and discharges his duties in a manner becoming its dignity and solemnity. In their store, due to its excellent location and attractiveness, they have enjoyed a good and growing patronage from the first, and being pleasant and agreeable as well as accommodating they have succeeded in retaining satisfied customers and in adding to them continually. Every department of the store is flourishing, and they are having particularly large sales in musical instruments, especially pianos.

PROF. WILLIAM E. SIMONDS

Mr. Willard was married while residing in Wyoming to Miss Ida Osborn, a resident of that place, the event being celebrated in April, 1901.

Fraternally Mr. Willard is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, having taken all degrees to the Encampment. He is one of the wide-awake, alert and progressive business men of Williamsfield, who is not alone interested in the development of his own enterprise but in that of the community at large, and he can always be depended upon to give his support and cooperation to every movement that he feels will be of general benefit to the citizens of the town and surrounding districts.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM EDWARD SIMONDS.

Professor William Edward Simonds, professor of English in Knox College since 1889 and a well known contributor to the text-books of the schools, was born in September 10, 1860, in Peabody, Massachusetts, a son of Edward and Mary A. (Chase) Simonds. The father was also a native of the old Bay state, having been born at Ipswich, Massachusetts, December 30, 1811. He was the second of the ten children of Charles and Mary (Stacy) Simonds, who were married in 1808. The former was born in 1786 and passed away in 1851, while his wife, who was born in 1788, died in 1874. Their children continued to live in Peabody or that vicinity until called from this life, the death of Edward Simonds there occurring July 4, 1873. In early manhood he had wedded Mary A. Chase, who was born in Bushwick, a borough of Brooklyn, New York, August 11, 1828. Shortly after her birth her parents removed to Massachusetts, occupying for two years the old Whittier homestead in East Haverhill, following the removal of the poet to Amesbury. Thereafter the family settled permanently in Hudson, New Hampshire. Her ancestry is traced back to Humphrey and Rebekah (Nichols) Chase. The former, who was born in 1779, died in 1860, and the latter, born in 1780, died in 1848. They were the parents of John Chase, who was born in Plaistow, New Hampshire, in 1802, and was married in 1827 to Martha L. Rhodes, of Lynn, Massachusetts, a daughter of Thomas and Ruth (Marston) Rhodes. John Chase died in Nashua, New Hampshire, in 1888. He was the father of Mrs. Mary A. Simonds, who was the eldest in a family of ten children and is now living in the home of her son, Professor Simonds, in Galesburg.

PROF. WILLIAM E. SIMONDS

The childhood and youth of Professor Simonds were passed in Peabody, Massachusetts, formerly known as South Danvers, a parish of the ancient town of Danvers, adjoining the city of Salem, noted in colonial history as the scene of the witchcraft delusion. South Danvers was the birthplace of George Peabody, who became prominent as a banker in London and famous as a philanthropist, and at his death the town took the name of Peabody in his honor. Professor Simonds pursued his education in the public schools of that place and afterward spent the year of 1878-9 in the Phillips Andover Academy. In 1879 he entered Brown University, from which he was graduated in 1883 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He was thirteen years of age at the time of his father's death. The family inherited little or no property and his education was obtained at considerable sacrifice and with much hard work. He has always accredited much of his success to his mother; she had been a school teacher prior to her marriage and was ambitious for her son and anxious that he should have a college education. While they both worked to accomplish the object before them, Professor Simonds has always said that he felt sure that his mother carried the larger burden. During his college days she boarded some of the students in her home and thus provided for the support of her family, while Professor Simonds at different periods worked in the Providence public library, taught in the evening schools and during the summer vacations engaged in such employment as usually claims the attention of college students. For two summers he was storekeeper at Rocky Point, a great shore resort on Narragansett Bay. He afterward acted as station agent for the Stonington line at Oakland Beach, another resort, through one summer, and undoubtedly these experiences, due to necessity, were not the least valuable part of his education.

Following the completion of his college course Professor Simonds engaged in teaching for two years in the high school of Providence, Rhode Island, to which place he and his mother had removed in 1879, making that city their home until the summer of 1885, when they went to Germany. During the fall and succeeding winter he was a student in the University of Berlin, after which he and his mother went to Strassburg, where he continued his studies until the spring of 1888, at which time he passed his examinations and received his Ph. D. degree from the university. His work had been in the field of English literature and Teutonic philology. On returning to the United States he spent one year at Cornell University at Ithaca, New York, as instructor in German, and in 1889 received a call to the chair of English in Knox College, where he has since remained, making this one of the most attractive departments of the institution. The work done is thorough and comprehensive, bringing to the pupils a wide knowledge of the best literature of our race. Professor Simonds has written and edited several text-books for the use of students of English literature, the first of these being the thesis which he prepared at Strassburg—Sir Thomas Wyat and his Poems (1889). He published an Introduction to the Study of English Fiction in 1894, a Student's History of English Literature in 1902, a Student's History of American Literature in 1909 and has edited school editions of Scott's Ivanhoe, De Quincey's Revolt of the Tartars, Mrs. Gaskell's Cranford, Scott's Quentin Durward, Washington's Farewell Address and Webster's First Bunker Hill Oration. Professor Simonds is also a contributor to The Dial. During 1904 he gave courses of lectures in the summer session of the University of Illinois and in 1907 and again in 1908 he taught through the summer sessions at the Ohio State University, while in 1911 he again taught at the University of Illinois. At its commencement exercises in June, 1911, Brown University honored him by conferring upon him the degree of Doctor of Letters. He has lectured frequently on subjects connected with literature and during the period when university extension was most popular, from 1890 until 1900, he gave many courses in cities and towns in Illinois, particularly in Peoria and Quincy and also in Burlington, Iowa. He has delivered many addresses before teachers' institutes in central Illinois and has taken an advanced position upon many points which have proven important elements in upholding the standard of education in the state.

Professor Simonds has cooperated in many projects which are allied interests of school work. He is a member of the Modern Language Association and the National Council of Teachers of English. For many years he has been a director of the Galesburg public library. In connection with his duties as professor of the college he is also discharging those of secretary of the faculty. He is a member of the Delta Upsilon, a college fraternity, and since 1876 has been a member of the Baptist church, serving at the present time on the board of trustees of the First Baptist church of Galesburg. He is president of the Associated Charities of Knox county and no good work done in the name of charity or religion seeks his aid in vain. His political allegiance has always been given to the republican party and it is a well known fact that Professor Simonds' position upon any vital question is never an equivocal one.

In 1898, at Chicago, Professor Simonds was united in marriage to Miss Katherine L. Courtright, daughter of Rev. Calvin W. Courtright, a Presbyterian clergyman. For some years prior to her marriage Mrs. Simonds followed the profession of teaching, conducting for a short time a private school for children and young women in Chicago. In 1896-7 she acted as dean of women in Knox College. By her marriage she has become the mother of three daughters, Marjorie, Katherine and Eleanor.

Such in brief is the history of Professor Simonds, who throughout his entire career has never chosen the second best but has sought always those things which are of greatest value to the individual and to the community and at all times has made his life a serviceable factor for good in the world's work.

JOHN A. JOHNSTON.

John A. Johnston, who owns and operates a farm in Walnut Grove township, Knox county, was born on the 18th of August, 1866, in this township. He is a son of Joseph and Jeannette (Anderson) Johnston, the former a native of Sorn, Ayrshire, Scotland, who came to America early in life and located in Altona. At first he was employed by the month on a farm but subsequently purchased a tract for himself. During this time he was also engaged in hauling merchandise by team from Galesburg to Pikes Peak, Colorado. He made two round trips, usually making thirty miles a day. After this he returned to engage in farming in Walnut Grove township but while thus occupied he secured a claim in a gold mine, which brought him some profits. During the war he deposited this money in the Galesburg Bank and later purchased the first eighty acres of the farm upon which he resided during the remainder of his life. He brought this farm under a high state of cultivation and devoted much of his time to stock-dealing. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and, though he never held political office, was greatly interested in the welfare of the community. Mrs. Jeannette (Anderson) Johnston is of Scotch ancestry, her father being James Anderson, a son of John Anderson, and the mother Miss Mary Borland. The father was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, and was a blacksmith by trade, following his occupation all his life in his native country. In 1860 he came to America and made his home with his son A. B. Anderson in Knox county, where he died in 1865. A. B. Anderson, the brother of Mrs. Johnston, is a prominent banker and the senior member of the firm of A. B. Anderson & Son, of Oneida. There were nine children in the Anderson family. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnston five children were born: Mary, who is the wife of Thomas Wade, of Galva, Illinois; John A., who is the subject of this review; and Isaac, Henry and Maggie, all residing in Galva. Mr. Johnston's second marriage was to Miss Maggie Meikle, who is now residing in Galva, and to this union two children were born: Jeannette, who is the wife of John Anderson; and William, who is living in Galva.

John A. Johnston spent his youth and boyhood attending the district school and on the home farm, where he was early trained to the best methods of tilling the soil and caring for the crops. He started upon his independent career on a part of the home farm, where he engaged in general farming and stock-raising, in which he has met with the success which is the reward of persistent effort, diligent labor and constant application.

Mr. Johnston was married to Miss Abbie Lytton, whose birth occurred in 1867 and who is a daughter of Ezra and Rhoda Lytton. To this union two children have been born, Ray, who is eight, and Loren, who is five years of age. Mr. Johnston devotes his whole attention to agricultural pursuits and has never been an active member of any political party, church or lodge. He has been a resident of the county throughout his life and is regarded as one of the substantial and progressive farmers, displaying in all of his undertakings an energy which has enabled him to overcome any difficulties and obstacles that have arisen.

THOMAS W. THOMSON, M. D.

Dr. Thomas W. Thomson, numbered among the alumni of Rush Medical College and successfully engaged in practice in Knoxville, was born in Truro township, Knox county, January 27, 1873, a son of P. W. and Mary S. (Lapham) Thomson, both of whom were natives of Ohio. The father was a mechanic and wood worker who in early life came to Illinois, where he was married. He settled first in Macon county but after a year came to Knox county and was identified with industrial interests here for a considerable period. For the past thirty-five years he and his wife have made their home in Yates City and their sterling worth has won for them the high regard and friendship of many with whom they have been brought in contact. In their family were the following children: Morton W., who is a resident of Calgary, Canada; LeRoy A., a retired farmer living at Galesburg; Frank D., the principal of a high school at Springfield, Illinois; Preston W., an attorney of Los Angeles, California; and Thomas W., of this review.

Dr. Thomson, whose name introduces this review, spent his boyhood days in Yates City, where he attended the public schools and after completing his course there received a certificate that entitled him to teach. He followed that profession for four years or from 1891 until 1895, when, desiring to make further advancement along educational lines, he matriculated in Knox College, where he spent the succeeding four years as a student. Even then he was not satisfied with his educational training and from 1899 until 1903 attended the University of Chicago, from which he was graduated on the 15th of January of the latter year, winning the degree of Bachelor of Science. His broad literary education served as an excellent foundation for his professional knowledge, which was gained in Rush Medical College of Chicago. In 1898 he had been awarded a state teacher's certificate. The success which he gained in that field foreshadowed the results which were to crown his efforts since he has entered upon active practice. In the meantime, however, the military chapter in his life history was written, covering his service in the Spanish-American war. He enlisted on the 16th of April, 1898, as a member of Company C, Sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was in the service at Porto Rico, returning to New York on the 13th of September, 1898. On the 25th of November he was mustered out at Springfield, Illinois, having done active duty in the West Indies and made for himself a creditable record.

Following his graduation from Rush, Dr. Thomson entered upon the practice of medicine and surgery in Elmwood, Peoria county, Illinois, where he remained for three years and then returned to Knox county, settling in Knoxville. He is said to be one of the busiest physicians and surgeons in the county, constantly overburdened by the demands which are made upon his professional service. He is very painstaking and conscientious in the performance of his professional duties, is most careful in the diagnosis of his cases and is seldom, if ever, at fault in predicting the outcome of disease, while as operator he has obtained wide recognition.

While Dr. Thomson's life work is that of the practice of medicine and surgery, he has become equally widely known in musical circles, having developed the marked talent with which nature endowed him until his ability has gained him wide recognition. For three years he was a director of the band at the University of Chicago and received there a baton, which was the highest honor for professorship. He was also solo cornetist of the Sixth Regiment Band and is now first violinist in the Conservatory of Music Band of Knox College. Moreover, he has done much to foster and stimulate musical taste and talent in this and other sections of the state.

It was on the 24th of June, 1903, in Galesburg, that Dr. Thomson was united in marriage to Miss Agnes Bollenbach, who was born in that city October 22, 1879, a daughter of Peter and Christina Bollenbach, both of whom were natives of Germany. The father is now deceased but the mother yet resides in Galesburg. Unto Dr. and Mrs. Thomson have been born four children: William H., Berwin, Florence H. and Frank. The family is well known socially and the hospitality of the best homes in Galesburg and the county is cordially extended them. Dr. Thomson holds membership in Pacific Lodge, No. 66, A. F. & A. M.; Ravinia Chapter, No. 95, R. A. M.; and Illinois Council, No. 91, R. & S. M. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, cordially and actively supporting the different departments of the church work. His professional relationships are with the Knox County and Illinois State Medical Societies and he is the official medical examiner for the United States Marine Corps at Knoxville. In every relation of life his labors have been actuated by a high sense of duty and a laudable ambition that has prompted him to reach out for the best, whether for his own benefit or for the community at large. Early in life he set his mark high and has used every available opportunity to reach that level.

DORRANCE W. ALDRICH, M. D.

A record of the medical profession in Galesburg would be very incomplete and unsatisfactory were not prominent reference made to Dr. Dorrance W. Aldrich, who for thirty years was a practitioner here, capable, energetic and conscientious. He was born in Boone county, Illinois, near Belvidere, April 1, 1846, his parents being William and Sarah Ann (Bassett) Aldrich, the former of whom was born at Binghamton, New York, September 25, 1809, and the latter a native of Pennsylvania, born at East Smithfield, July 26, 1812. They were married at Smithfield, Pennsylvania, March 30, 1834. Making the trip overland, they located in Boone county, where the father devoted his time to farming. Just before the Civil war he came to Knox county, settling about four miles north of Galesburg, in Henderson township, where he owned and cultivated a farm, making his home there until his demise. He was a republican in his political views and a Presbyterian in his religious faith. His wife also belonged to the same church. Following the death of her husband she removed to Abilene, Kansas, where she made her home with a daughter until she, too, passed away January 16, 1902. In their family were twelve children: Chauncey S., now deceased; Owen J., living at Grand Junction, Colorado; Francis, deceased; Julian B., whose home is in Omaha, Nebraska; Dorrance W.; Clara, the wife of James Dickson, of Quincy, Illinois; Laurin W., living in Council Bluffs, Iowa; Nora, the wife of Frank Morse, of Abilene, Kansas; Norman K., of Galesburg; Percy, Prentice and Jesta, all now deceased.

Dr. Aldrich pursued his preliminary education in the schools of Henderson township and afterward had the benefit of a course in Knox College, thus through broad literary training laying the foundation for his professional knowledge. He prepared for the practice of medicine as a student in Rush Medical College and entered upon the active work of the profession at Gilson, Illinois, where he remained for two and a half years. He then entered the Bellevue Hospital College of New York, and completed a course with the class of 1874. Thus still better equipped for the onerous and responsible duties which devolved upon him, he returned to Gilson, where he continued in practice until 1879.

That year witnessed his arrival in Galesburg, where he remained until his death, which occurred on the 8th of May, 1909. He held to a high standard of professional ethics and gave to his patients the benefit of unwearied service and of superior talent and wide knowledge. He was always most careful in the diagnosis of his cases and the excellent results which followed his labors secured him an extensive practice. Moreover, he was active in the establishment of the Galesburg Hospital and served on its staff for several years.

Dr. Aldrich was married twice. On the 1st of August, 1873, he wedded Miss Marguerite McBride, a daughter of A. D. and Sarah (McCandlass) McBride, of Knoxville. Unto them were born four children: Blanche, now the wife of Charles May, of Peoria, Illinois; Mabel, who was born November 29, 1875, and died May 16, 1898; Sarah Gertrude, now the wife of Anthony J. Caldwell, of Stoutsville, Missouri; and Julian Karl, also of Stoutsville. For his second wife Dr. Aldrich chose Miss Martha Graham, whom he wedded on the 3d of February, 1903. Her parents were William F. and Margaret (Hutchinson) Graham, who resided in Mercer county, Illinois, near Alexis. Her father was born in Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania, March 13, 1833, and her mother's birth occurred in the same state, August 14, 1836. They were married in Mercer county, Illinois, August 19, 1858, and Mr. Graham devoted his time to general farming. He had come to the middle west with his mother in 1839 and was educated near Oquawka, Henderson county, after which he concentrated his energies upon the work of tilling the soil and in his well directed efforts provided a comfortable living for his family. In 1894 he retired to private life with a comfortable competence and removed to Galesburg, where he died on the 26th of January, 1910. His wife had passed away at Denver, Colorado, August 9, 1892, when they were on a pleasure trip. Mr. Graham had given his political support to the democratic party and had served as township assessor. He attended the Presbyterian church at Norwood, Illinois, and was a man of many admirable traits of character. Mrs. Aldrich traces her ancestry back in the maternal line through several generations. Her great-grandfather, John Hutchinson, was a soldier of the Revolutionary war, rendering valuable aid in the establishment of American independence. His son, who bore the name of Henry Hutchinson, was born in Pennsylvania and devoted his life to farming. He and his wife, Mary Brown Hutchinson, were the parents of Margaret Hutchinson, who became the wife of William Graham. Unto this marriage six children were born, namely: Mildred, now the wife of Arthur Olin, of Alexis, Illinois; Mary, the wife of Charles E. Anderson, also of Alexis; Arthur H., who is living in the same place; Daniel H., a resident of Ursa, Illinois; Margaret, the wife of Sidney C. West, of Denver, Colorado; and Mrs. Aldrich. The last named was born in Alexis, in Mercer county, April 20, 1877, and supplemented her common-school education by study in the schools of Galesburg. By her marriage she became the mother of an interesting little son, Max William, who was born in Galesburg, December 3, 1903.

The family circle was broken by the hand of death, when on the 8th of May, 1909, Dr. Aldrich was called to his final rest. In his passing Galesburg lost a valued and representative citizen, who had done much for the public welfare. From the time that age conferred upon him the right of franchise he supported the republican party and in 1887 was called to the office of mayor, which he filled for a two years' term, making a good record as the chief executive of the city. He was also at one time county coroner. His religious faith was that of the Presbyterian church, but he was never narrowly sectarian, and in his charity and in his kindly thought he reached out in sympathy to all who needed aid or encouragement. He was entitled to wear the Grand Army button for in 1864 he enlisted as a private of Company E, One Hundred and Forty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. Later he was detailed for duty on the staff of General Dudley. He afterward joined the Galesburg post and thus maintained pleasant relations with his old army comrades throughout his remaining days. He also held membership with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. In strictly professional lines he was connected with the Knox County and the Illinois State Medical Societies and through their proceedings kept in close touch with the advanced work being done by the medical profession. He always remained a close student of the science of medicine and his ready understanding of its relation to practical needs made him very successful in his chosen life work. Many a household of Galesburg regarded him most kindly, not only because of aid he had rendered professionally, but also because of his sterling worth as a man whom to know was to respect and honor. January 1, 1886, he was appointed local surgeon for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad with headquarters at Galesburg, and served in that capacity up to the time of his death.

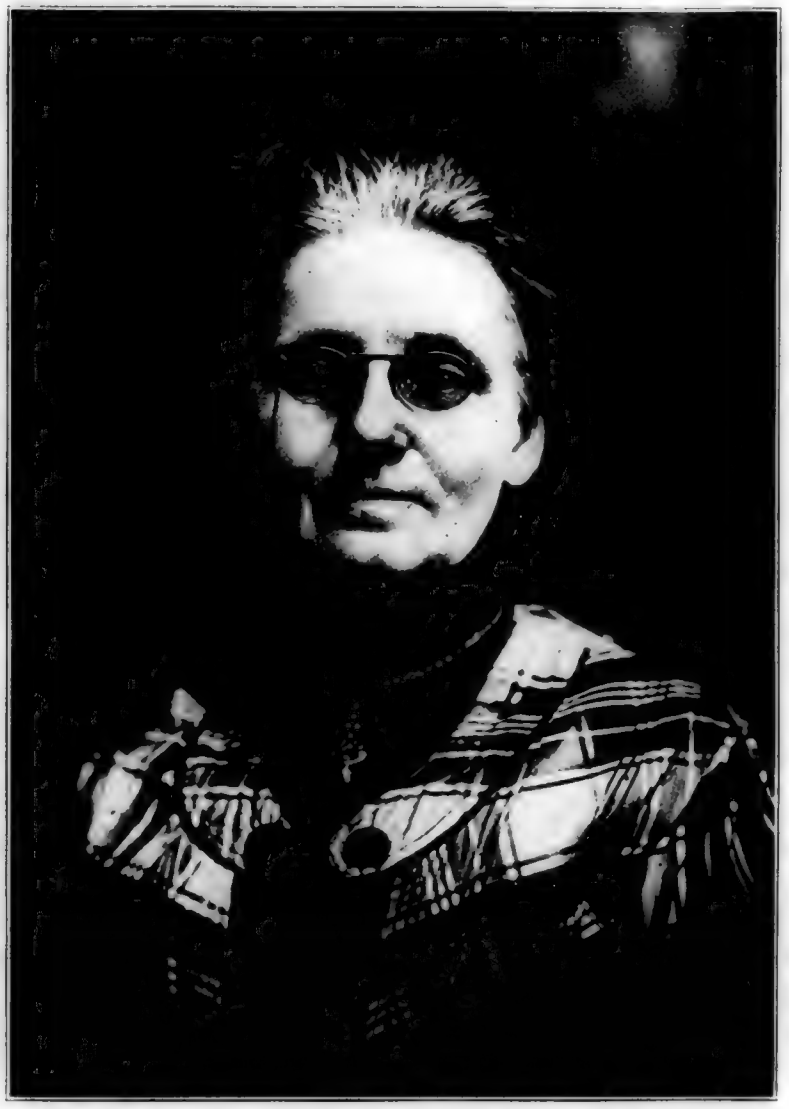
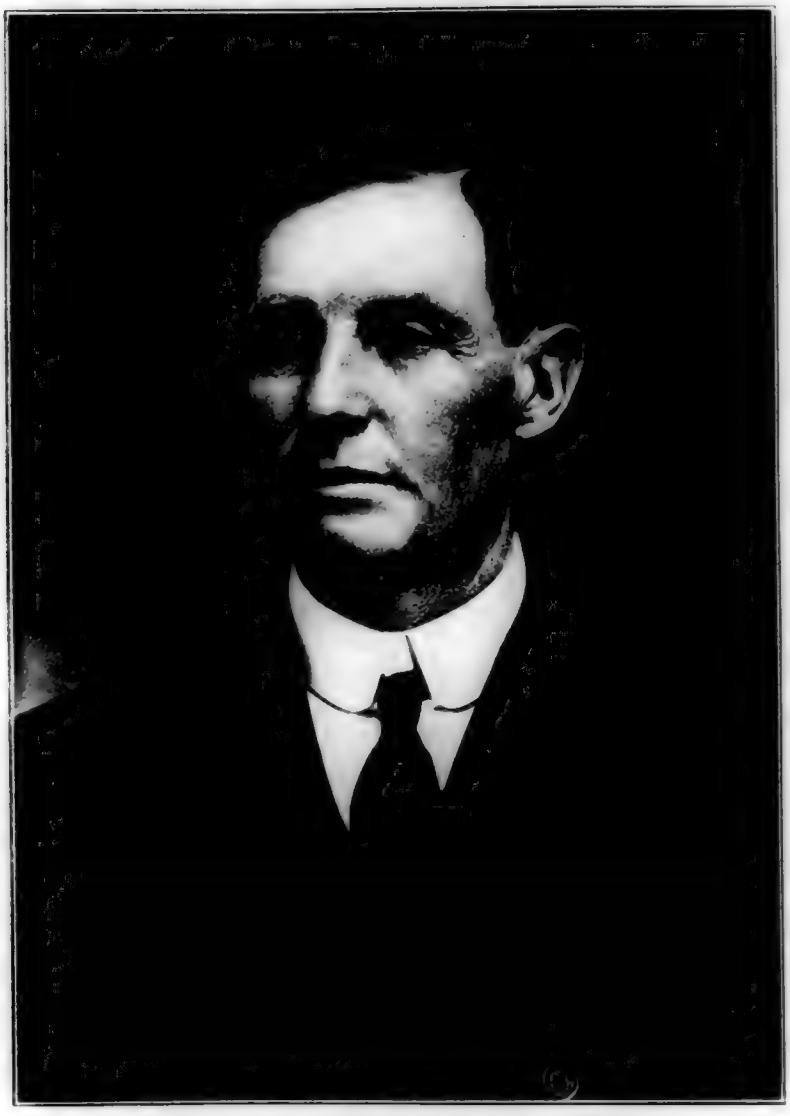
JOHN H. RICE.

John H. Rice is one of the well known business men of Williamsfield, where for many years he has been engaged in buying and shipping stock. He was born in Victoria township, Knox county, in 1854, and is a son of Foster and Harriet (Aldridge) Rice, the father a native of the state of New York and the mother of Indiana. When he was a very young lad Foster Rice came to Illinois with his parents, and the remainder of his life was spent in Peoria and Knox counties, where he engaged in farming. He was living in Victoria township, where for many years he had been engaged in agricultural pursuits, at the time of his death, which occurred at the age of sixty-seven years. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Rice there were born six children: Henry; Mrs. Eliza Aden; John H., our subject; George; Arthur; and Alvin.



As he was reared in the country John H. Rice acquired his education in the common schools, during which time he gave his father such assistance as he was able in the operation of the home farm. When he had obtained such knowledge as was deemed essential to enable him to assume the heavier responsibilities, he left school and devoted his entire attention to the work of the fields, remaining under the parental roof for five years thereafter. At the expiration of that time he began his independent agricultural career and farmed as a renter for several years. He next removed to Missouri, but at the expiration of two years he returned to Knox county, settling in Williamsfield, where he subsequently became associated with Peter A. Sunwall in buying and shipping stock. He has ever since engaged in this business in which he has met very good success.

Mr. Rice has been married three times. His first union was with Miss Ella Goodspeed, and unto them were born two children; Carl and Mrs. Maud Davis. He subsequently married Miss Hannah Hammond, while his present wife was formerly Miss Tillie Anderson, a daughter of the late Adolphus Anderson, who was a farmer in Victoria township. Unto Mr. Rice and his third wife there have been born two children, Vera and John.



Both Mr. and Mrs. Rice hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, and politically he is a republican. He always takes an active interest in all municipal and township affairs and has served with efficiency in a number of the township offices.

G. L. HEDSTROM.

A well improved and highly cultivated farm of four hundred acres located on sections 18 and 19, Victoria township, is a tribute to the agricultural skill of G. L. Hedstrom. His birth occurred at Victoria, on the 23d of August, 1853, his parents being Jonas J. and Deantha (Sornborger) Hedstrom. Jonas J. Hedstrom is supposed to have been born on the island of Aland, Sweden, where he was educated and reared to the age of nineteen years. His father was a corporal in the Swedish army and passed his entire life in his native land, as did also the mother, who died during the early childhood of her son. After completing his schooling, Jonas J. Hedstrom learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed in Sweden until he was nineteen years of age. He then joined his brother, the Rev. O. G. Hedstrom, a minister living in the state of New York. Soon after his arrival in this country, Jonas J. Hedstrom located in the vicinity of Victoria, where he followed his trade and also preached the gospel. He was the first Swedish minister in this vicinity and was the founder of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church in Victoria. The first services were held in a log house in Copley township, but he subsequently solicited funds in New York and thus obtained the means to form a permanent organization. In addition to the services he held in his native tongue, Mr. Hedstrom also preached to English audiences. During the early years of his residence in Victoria he was married to Miss Sornborger, who was a native of the state of New York and a daughter of George Sornborger. During the early years of their domestic life they removed to Farmington, Illinois, where he continued to work at his trade, and also discharged the duties of a local preacher. Later he returned to Victoria, helping to organize the village in 1839, he and his family thereafter making that place their home. Soon after his return he withdrew from his trade and began traveling through Minnesota and Iowa for the Swedish missions. In 1850 he organized the first Swedish Methodist church in Iowa at New Sweden. He was an efficient and capable worker, being tireless in his efforts to advance the cause of Christianity, and ultimately became presiding elder of the Swedish missions, discharging the duties of this office until his death. He passed away on the 11th of May, 1859, at the age of forty-six years, and was buried in the cemetery at Victoria. The mother, who was also a forceful Christian worker, survived until the 6th of July, 1874, and was laid to rest beside her husband. In his political views Mr. Hedstrom was a republican, considering that policy conducive to the interests of the majority. He was at all times too deeply engrossed with his Christian work to become prominently identified with public affairs, but he was a loyal citizen and always gave his cooperation and support to every movement that he deemed likely to promote the general welfare of the community at large. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hedstrom, the two eldest while they were residing in Farmington and the other three upon their return to Victoria. In order of birth they are as follows: Almina, the deceased wife of Charles S. Clark; Margaret Ann, who died at the age of eleven years and is buried in Victoria cemetery; Jane, who married Frederick Becker, son of Frederick Becker, now residing in Victoria, on the Copley township site; Charlotte, who died when eighteen months of age; and G. L., our subject. Mrs. Becker had two children: George, who married Lane Swickard, a daughter of Noah Swickard; and Ava, who died at the age of two years.

Emma L. Heckstrom

G. L. Hedstrom

Reared in a good home amid Christian environments, G. L. Hedstrom had inculcated in his mind from earliest childhood the substantial qualities essential to the development of character. He attended the common schools of Victoria in the acquirement of his education, and spent such time as was not there engaged in a manner similar to other lads of the period and surroundings. After laying aside his text-books he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, believing that these offered better opportunities to the young man without capital than any other occupation, and moreover, he liked the idea of living in the open. That his decision was a wise one is manifested beyond question by the success that has attended his efforts. When he was twenty-one he established a home of his own by his marriage to Miss Emma L. Tripp, and soon thereafter they located on a farm directly south of their present homestead. There they resided for three years and then removed to the place, where they now live. Mr. Hedstrom was an enterprising and industrious young man, applying himself assiduously to the further improvement and cultivation of his land. He directed his activities along practical lines, using intelligence and discretion in the methods employed in his agricultural pursuits and as a result he had the satisfaction of annually realizing abundant and lucrative returns from his labor. In connection with general farming he raised stock, using the greater part of his grain for feeding. His various undertakings have prospered and he is now known as one of the substantial and highly successful agriculturists of the community.

In 1874, Mr. Hedstrom was united in marriage to Miss Emma L. Tripp, who was born in Victoria, December 4, 1854, and was a daughter of David and Elizabeth (Suydam) Tripp. The parents were both natives of the state of New York, whence they came in the early years of their domestic life to Knox county. They subsequently returned to the east, locating in Venango county, Pennsylvania, where for four years Mr. Tripp worked in the oil fields. At the expiration of that time he and his family again took up their residence in this county and he engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death at the age of sixty-two years. The mother was seventy-two when she passed away and is buried beside her husband in the cemetery at Victoria. During her lifetime Mrs. Tripp was a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal church. His political support Mr. Tripp gave to the democratic party, but he held no other office save that of school director in Victoria township. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. Tripp numbered five, all of whom were born in Victoria: Emma L., now Mrs. Hedstrom; Charlotte, who is deceased; Luella, the wife of John Van Buren, of Victoria; and Alice and Edward, both of whom are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Hedstrom had four children. Florence J., the eldest, who was born on October 24, 1875, died on the 3d of August, 1903, and was buried in the family lot in the cemetery at Victoria. She was a very capable young woman and for some years prior to her death had been engaged in teaching. Ava Grace and Ethel May, the next two in order of birth, are both teaching music. The youngest member of the family was a son, who died in infancy.

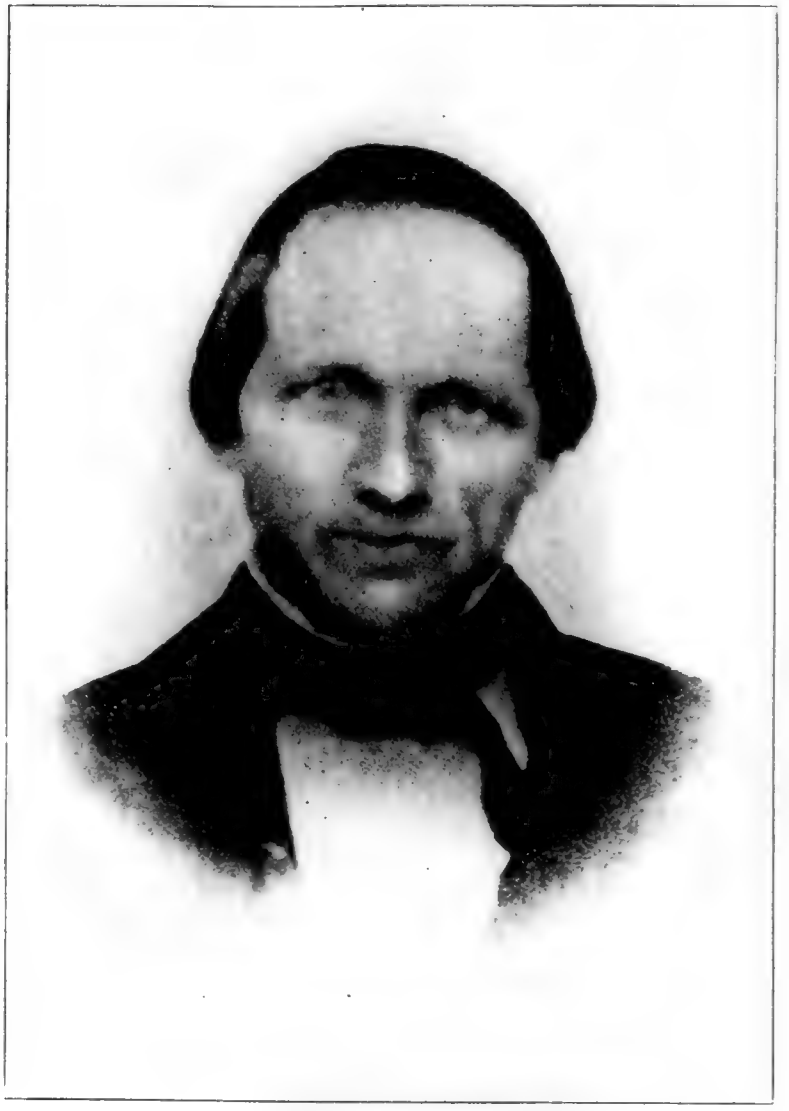
The parents hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, of which Mr. Hedstrom has been a trustee and a member of the board of stewards for many years. He votes the republican ticket, but has never sought political preferment, although he at one time discharged the duties of school treasurer. As the years have passed he has accumulated a comfortable competence and in addition to his valuable property is a stockholder and director of the State Bank of Victoria. Mr. Hedstrom is one of the self-made men of Knox county, his success being entirely attributable to his own efforts. His father died when he was a lad of barely six years, and the financial circumstances early compelled him to leave school and become self-supporting. He has applied himself tirelessly to whatever he has undertaken, possessing the indomitable will and determination of purpose that ultimately lead to success in any undertaking.

SIG B. NELSON.

Sig B. Nelson, cashier of the Wataga State Bank, is a native of Sweden, his birth having occurred at Christianstad, July 23, 1885. His father, Olof Nilsson, was born in Sweden on the 17th of January, 1850, continuing to be a resident of that country until 1886, when he emigrated with his wife and family to the United States. While living in his native land he had operated a mill and dye works, but upon coming to this country he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. Immediately following his arrival he came to Knox county, locating in Ontario township on a farm. He passed away in Ontario township on October 4, 1897. He was a man possessed of excellent capabilities, and despite the fact that he was not a trained agriculturist, made an unusual success of that vocation. His wife, the mother of our subject, was prior to her marriage Miss Sigrid Bennett, a daughter of B. P. and Ingra (Bahrstedt) Bennett, her birth having occurred in Sweden, February 27, 1857. The mother is still living, as are also four of the sons and two daughters born unto this worthy couple. In order of birth they are as follows: Anna E., the wife of Professor Grafström, of Augustana College, Rock Island, Illinois; Fred O., who is a farmer of Galva, Illinois; Sig B., our subject; Lincoln A., who is in the engineering department of Northway Motor Co., Detroit, Michigan; Harold T., who is living on the farm with his mother; and Hortense E., a student in Knox College. The parents are members of the Swedish Lutheran church, and it was in the faith of this denomination they reared their family.

Although a native of Sweden Sig B. Nelson was reared in Illinois, having

J. J. HEDSTROM



bered five, all of whom were born in Victoria: Emma L., now Mrs. Hedstrom; Charlotte, who is deceased; Luella, the wife of John Van Buren, of Victoria; and Alice and Edward, both of whom are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Hedstrom had four children. Florence J., the eldest, who was born on October 24, 1875, died on the 3d of August, 1903, and was buried in the family lot in the cemetery at Victoria. She was a very capable young woman and for some years prior to her death had been engaged in teaching. Ava Grace and Ethel May, the next two in order of birth, are both teaching music. The youngest member of the family was a son, who died in infancy.

The parents hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, of which Mr. Hedstrom has been a trustee and a member of the board of stewards for many years. He votes the republican ticket, but has never sought political preferment, although he at one time discharged the duties of school treasurer. As the years have passed he has accumulated a comfortable competence and in addition to his valuable property is a stockholder and director of the State Bank of Victoria. Mr. Hedstrom is one of the self-made men of Knox county, his success being entirely attributable to his own efforts. His father died when he was a lad of barely six years, and the financial circumstances early compelled him to leave school and become self-supporting. He has applied himself tirelessly to whatever he has undertaken, possessing the indomitable will and determination of purpose that ultimately lead to success in any undertaking.

SIG B. NELSON.

Sig B. Nelson, cashier of the Wataga State Bank, is a native of Sweden, his birth having occurred at Christianstad, July 23, 1885. His father, Olof Nilsson, was born in Sweden on the 17th of January, 1850, continuing to be a resident of that country until 1886, when he emigrated with his wife and family to the United States. While living in his native land he had operated a mill and dye works, but upon coming to this country he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. Immediately following his arrival he came to Knox county, locating in Ontario township on a farm. He passed away in Ontario township on October 4, 1897. He was a man possessed of excellent capabilities, and despite the fact that he was not a trained agriculturist, made an unusual success of that vocation. His wife, the mother of our subject, was prior to her marriage Miss Sigrid Bennett, a daughter of B. P. and Ingra (Bahrstedt) Bennett, her birth having occurred in Sweden, February 27, 1857. The mother is still living, as are also four of the sons and two daughters born unto this worthy couple. In order of birth they are as follows: Anna E., the wife of Professor Grafström, of Augustana College, Rock Island, Illinois; Fred O., who is a farmer of Galva, Illinois; Sig B., our subject; Lincoln A., who is in the engineering department of Northway Motor Co., Detroit, Michigan; Harold T., who is living on the farm with his mother; and Hortense E., a student in Knox College. The parents are members of the Swedish Lutheran church, and it was in the faith of this denomination they reared their family.

Although a native of Sweden Sig B. Nelson was reared in Illinois, having been only a babe of one year when his parents located in Knox county. His elementary education was obtained in the common schools in the vicinity of the home farm where he spent his childhood and youth. Upon the completion of the course there he went to Galesburg, where during the winter of 1903-4 he attended Brown's Business College, graduating in the latter year. Subsequently he entered Knox College, taking work in both the academic and collegiate departments, and was graduated from that institution with the class of 1910. He paid his own way through college and became a prominent member of the Literary Society, winning prizes in debates there.

J. J. HEDSTROM

After leaving school Mr. Nelson assisted in the organization of the Wataga State Bank, of which he is a stockholder as well as cashier and manager. He is also financially interested in the Peoples Trust & Savings Bank of Galesburg, the president of this institution being connected with the Wataga State Bank in the capacity of director. Mr. Nelson is also connected with the Woodhull State Bank of Woodhull, Illinois, being one of the four organizers of that bank, which was organized December 11, 1911, with a capital of twenty-five thousand dollars. A man of genial nature, gracious and accommodating, Mr. Nelson has been instrumental in building up Wataga State Bank and his business sagacity, clear judgment and incorruptible integrity serve to inspire trust and confidence in it. He is recognized as one well qualified to fill positions of trust and responsibility and is now serving his second term as treasurer of the Svea Mutual Protective Fire & Lightning Insurance Company of Knox, Henry and Mercer counties, which is one of the largest assessment insurance organizations of the state, insurance in force at eight million dollars, and of which he is the youngest acting official.

Fraternally Mr. Nelson is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, in which he is serving as banker, and is also financial secretary of the Mystic Workers at Wataga. Religiously he is a member of the Swedish Lutheran church. Although he is still quite young, he gives every indication of having a promising future as a financier judging by the ability he has developed during the brief period of his business career.

MRS. ALPHA B. McCALLISTER.

Mrs. Alpha B. McCallister, who with her son owns one hundred and forty-one acres of land on section 6, Haw Creek township, Knox county, was born in Salina, Kansas, on January 28, 1870. She is a daughter of A. G. and Mary (Anderson) Couse, the father a native of Boston, Massachusetts, where he was reared, and the mother of Knox county, her birth having occurred on the farm, where Mrs. McCallister now resides. This originally belonged to the maternal grandparents of our subject, Samuel and Irene Anderson, who were among the pioneer settlers of the county, having removed here from Dayton, Ohio. After their marraige Mr. and Mrs. Couse removed to Kansas, where the latter died in February, 1871, and was laid to rest in McCallister cemetery, Orange township, this county. The father lived until 1877 and is buried at Dwight, Illinois.

Having been but a child when her parents died, Mrs. McCallister was reared by her mother's sister and her husband, Elizabeth (Anderson) and C. H. Huggins, obtaining her education in the schools of Knox county. Mr. and Mrs. Huggins never had any children of their own but they reared seven. He was one of the prominent farmers and stockmen of Haw Creek township, where he was well known. In 1863 he went west and spent the following five years in California, Idaho, and Oregon, having been engaged in the hotel business in Idaho for a short time. Upon his return he settled down in Knox county, spending the remainder of his life in Haw Creek township. He passed away on October 26, 1004, at the age of seventy-seven. His widow survived for three years thereafter, her death occurring on the 10th of April. They were both laid to rest in McCallister cemetery. He was one of the highly esteemed men of his community and he and his wife held membership in the Knoxville Presbyterian church. Politically he was a republican, but not seeking public office or emoluments, although for many years he served as a school director in Haw Creek township.

Mrs. McCallister, who has been married three times, was first united to Harry Bowson, a native of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, their marriage occurring in 1892. One child was born unto them, Charles Huggins, who is now living with his mother on the farm, one-half of which belongs to him. On the 22d of February, 1901, she was married to S. H. McCallister, her third husband. Mr. McCallister was born and reared in Orange township, this county, and there he was also educated. He is the younger of the two children, born of the marriage of the late Wesley and Harriet McCallister. Together with his mother he owns a fine farm of two hundred and seventy-seven acres, and, as she has now attained the age of seventy years, he spends a large portion of his time there with her. Mrs. McCallister, with the assistance of her son, engages in general farming and is meeting with satisfactory returns in her undertaking.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McCallister are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Pythias. His political support he accords to the republican party, and is now serving his third term as clerk of Orange township. Mrs. McCallister is an intelligent and capable business woman and is highly esteemed in Haw Creek township, of which her family have been residents for four generations.

JOSHUA BETTERTON.

Joshua Betterton has for twenty-one years been engaged in general farming and stock-raising on a well cultivated tract of land containing sixty acres located on section 24, Chestnut township. He was born in Clinton county, Ohio, in the vicinity of Vienna, on the 28th of November, 1846, his parents being Owen and Anna (Moon) Betterton, also natives of Clinton county. In 1850 together with his wife and family Mr. Betterton came to Illinois, making the long, hard journey across the prairies with a wagon. Upon their arrival in Knox county he acquired a tract of government land in Chestnut township, upon which he erected such buildings as were needed for their comfort and then engaged in the cultivation of his soil. Through his unremitting energy, capable management and thrift he was later able to add to his holdings and at the time of his death in the late '80s owned over a half section of highly cultivated and fertile land. Mr. Betterton became one of the leading men in his township and for over a quarter of a century served as justice of the peace. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Christian church, as was also the mother, who passed away in 1872. They were both laid to rest in the cemetery at Hermon. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Betterton there were born ten children: Elizabeth, the widow of Henry Davis, of Abingdon; Mary Jane, who passed away in 1905: John, living in Norton county, Kansas, who was a member of Company D, Seventh Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, participated in the battle of Shiloh and all of the engagements of the Mississippi campaign; Cyrus, who is deceased; George R., of Littleton, Colorado, who was also a member of Company D, Seventh Illinois Volunteer Cavalry and took part in all of the battles along the river, remaining at the front for four years and seven months, during which time he participated in forty-two engagements; Joshua, our subject; Susan, who is deceased; Ellen, the wife of Pleasant Grice, of Winfield, Iowa; Laura, the wife of Henry C. Jones, of London Mills, Illinois; and Emma, the wife of Edwin White, of London Mills.

Joshua Betterton was only a child of four years when he accompanied his parents on their removal from his native state to Illinois. His youthful years were not unlike those of other lads of the pioneer days, his winters being largely devoted to the acquirement of an education in the district schools, while during the summer months he assisted his father in the work of the fields and the care of the stock. He remained under the parental roof until he was seventeen years of age when he enlisted in Company D, Seventh Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and went to the front. He served from February 1, 1863, until November on detached duty in the hospital. When mustered out he returned to Chestnut township where he remained until 1873, when he removed to Seward county, Nebraska. He spent three years in the latter state and then returned to Knox county, once more settling in Chestnut township, where he has ever since resided. Twenty-one years ago he removed to his present place on section 24, where he owns sixty acres of well tilled and highly improved land. Mr. Betterton is a man of progressive methods and practical ideas and his farm is provided with every modern facility that will expedite the work or give greater assurance of efficiency. His fields are successfully operated under his capable supervision and every year yield abundant harvests that bring the highest prices the market offers. In connection with his general farming he raises a good grade of stock, thus greatly increasing his annual dividends.

In 1876, Mr. Betterton was married to Miss Liza Pickerel, who is a native of Haw Creek township, Knox county, and a daughter of George and Maria (Richmond) Pickerel, natives of Ohio. They came to this county in 1836, locating in Haw Creek township, where they resided until 1873 when they removed to Seward county, Nebraska, and there spent the remainder of their lives. Their family numbered fourteen children: Charles, who is living in Seward, Nebraska; Harvey, who was a member of Company A, Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, now a resident of York, Nebraska; Mary M., the deceased widow of Henry Naris, who was a member of the Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry; Mrs. Betterton; Christ, deceased, also a member of the Fourteenth Illinois Cavalry; Anna, the wife of Perry Cope, of Seward county, Nebraska; Elizabeth, who is married and also living in Seward county, Nebraska; Booker and Caroline, both of whom are deceased; Emma, who married Fred Carlson, of Seward county; George, who is a resident of Omaha, Nebraska; Frank, who is living in Lincoln, Nebraska; William, of Seward, that state, and Ella, who is deceased. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Betterton there were born four children: Arthur and Elias, both of whom are deceased; Anne, the wife of J. P. Huybbanks, of Maquon; and Minnie, the wife of Harry Huybbanks, of Chestnut township.

His political support Mr. Betterton has always given to the republican party, his first presidential vote having been cast for U. S. Grant. He takes an active interest in all township affairs and served for two terms as assessor while for many years he has been a member of the board of school directors. He remembers Lincoln well, in the days of his private life, and was present at the Lincoln-Douglas debate at Galesburg. Mr. Betterton has always been a loyal member of the Grand Army of the Republic, through the medium of which organization he maintains relations with his comrades of the field. During the fifty-eight years he has been a resident of Chestnut township, Mr. Betterton has watched its wonderful development from a pioneer district to one of the richest agricultural sections of Knox county, during which time the log cabin of the first settlers has given place to modern residences and the unbroken prairie has been converted into productive farms.

HUGH C. SIMPSON.

Hugh C. Simpson is numbered among the native sons of Knox county and has been a lifelong resident of Walnut Grove township, where he is now devoting his time and energies to general agricultural pursuits. He represents one of the old families of the county and was born upon the Simpson homestead farm on the 14th of December, 1862. No event of special importance occurred to vary the routine of farm life for him in his boyhood and youth, his experiences being those which usually fall to the lot of the lad who divides his time between the duties of the schoolroom, the pleasures of the playground and the work of the home farm. His early training was of a practical nature, acquainting him with the best methods of tilling the soil and caring for the crops, so that when he started out in life on his own account he was well prepared to meet the duties that devolved upon him. He has never sought to change his occupation, being always content to engage in the tilling of the soil, knowing that the rich prairie land of Illinois will respond bountifully if the work of cultivation is carried on along modern and progressive lines. He now has a well improved property, the neat and thrifty appearance of his fields and the good improvements found upon his place constituting it one of the attractive features of the landscape.

Mr. Simpson was united in marriage to Miss Ada L. McLaughlin, who was born on the 13th of June, 1878, a daughter of James W. and Martha E. (Collinson) McLaughlin. Her father, who was a native of Ohio and was a son of John and Priscilla (Anderson) McLaughlin, came to Knox county in his boyhood days with his parents, and when he started out in life on his own account he began farming in Walnut Grove township upon the tract of land which is now being cultivated by his son-in-law, Hugh Simpson. There he carried on the work of the farm year by year until ill health compelled him to put aside business cares and he went to Colorado, hoping that the change of climate would prove beneficial. However, he did not improve as he had hoped and there passed away in 1893, when fifty-six years of age. In early manhood he had married Martha E. Collinson, a daughter of Simeon L. and Mary M. (Craver) Collinson, who came from England in 1833, having previously resided near Leeds. On crossing the Atlantic they settled first in Pennsylvania and in 1838 came to Knox county, Illinois, casting in their lot among the earliest settlers of this part of the state. They arrived here only six years after the Black Hawk war occurred and at that time there were but few evidences of modern civilization. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. James McLaughlin there were four children: Wilson T., who is now living in Kansas; Ada L., the wife of Hugh C. Simpson; Harriet, at home; and Netta, the wife of E. Van Patten, a resident of Chicago. Mrs. James McLaughlin is still living at the age of sixty-eight years.

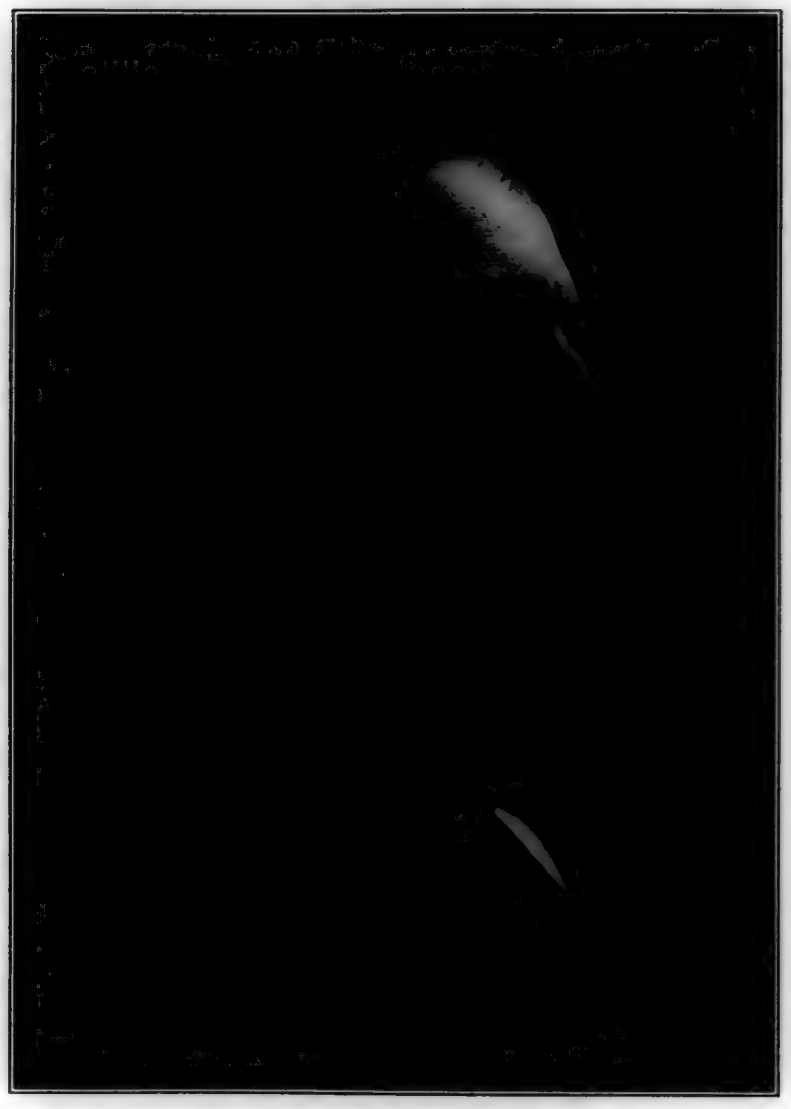
Mr. and Mrs. Simpson, having spent their entire lives in this county, are well known and their circle of friends is almost coextensive with the circle of their acquaintance. Mr. Simpson belongs to the Modern Woodmen camp at Altona and gives his political allegiance to the republican party. While the honors and emoluments of political office have had no attraction for him, he has rendered valuable service to the cause of education during the twelve years in which he has been a member of the school board. The greater part of his time and attention, however, are devoted to his farming interests and his capable management in this connection constitutes the basis of growing success.

RANSOM J. BROOKS.

Ransom J. Brooks was for many years actively identified with the agricultural development of Knox county, but is now living retired in Knoxville. He is a native of Illinois, his birth having occurred in the vicinity of Canton on the 8th of May, 1838, and he is a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Eggers) Brooks. The father was born and reared in the east. The mother was a daughter of Landrian Eggers, one of the state's earliest pioneers, in the time when many Indians roved in the country, constantly menacing the settlers who first located here. Samuel Brooks came to Illinois in his early manhood, purchasing land in the vicinity of Canton that he operated for several years. Later he removed to Knox county, settling in Chestnut township where he farmed for a time. He then went to Iowa, continuing to reside there until his death. The mother passed away in Chestnut township. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Brooks there were born two daughters and ten sons, of whom the following grew to maturity: Ransom J., our subject, who is the eldest; Landrian, who lives in the vicinity of Abingdon, this county; Jane, who is deceased; Charles, who makes his home in Kansas; Daniel, who passed away in Missouri; Matthew and Sarah A., both of whom are deceased; James, who is a resident of Missouri; and Cyrus.



The education of Ransom J. Brooks was obtained in an old log schoolhouse with puncheon floor and slab benches in Chestnut township. The method of instruction and the text-books used at that period were thoroughly in keeping with the unattractive schoolroom, and did not inspire in the average pupil a very great desire for study. Being the eldest of the family he early began assisting with the work of the farm, and when little more than a child had assumed many of the duties of manhood. The life of the average farmer lad of that period left little time for play, as there were always a multitude of duties requiring attention, as this was the time prior to the advent of modern agricultural implements. From his early youth agricultural pursuits engaged the energies of Mr. Brooks until 1896, when he withdrew from the active work of the fields and removed to Knoxville, where he has ever since lived retired. He met with success in both farming and stock-raising, acquiring a competence through his long years of industry and enterprise that enables him to enjoy in the evening of life comfort and ease.

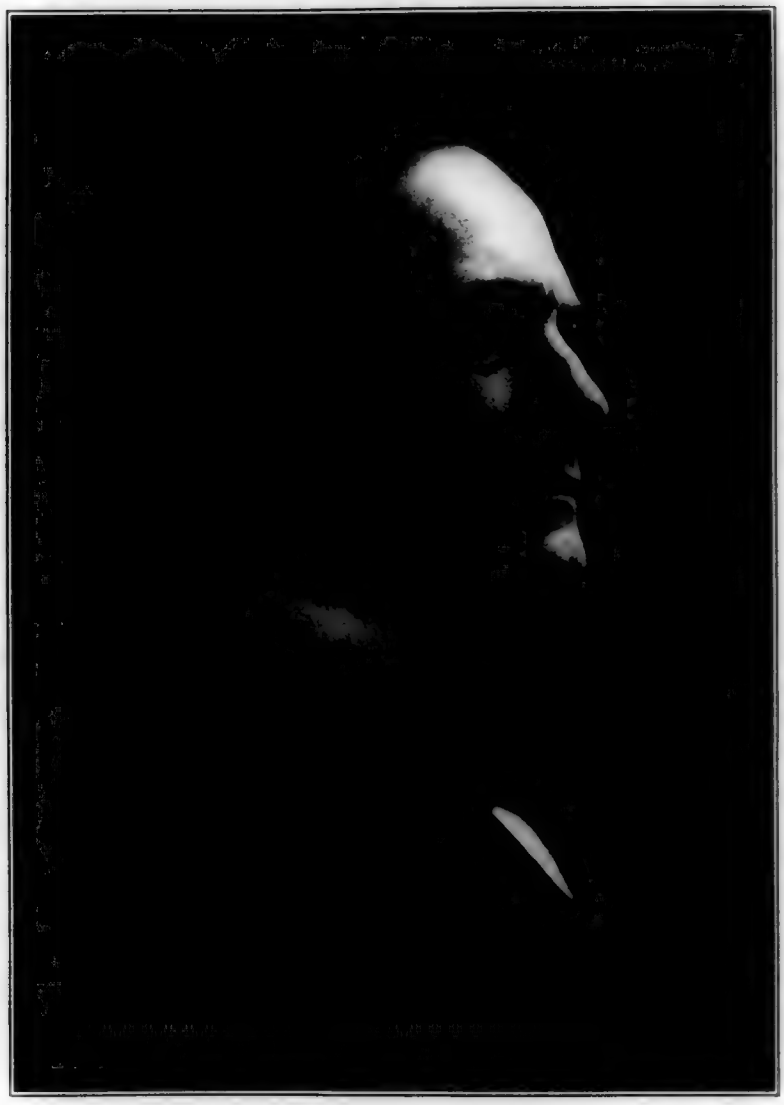
Chestnut township was the scene of the marriage of Mr. Brooks on the 5th of August, 1858, to Miss Lovina Goodenough, whose birth occurred in Michigan on the 6th of April, 1843. She is a daughter of Erastus and Louise (Phelps) Goodenough, who were also natives of Michigan, in which state the father passed away. There were six children in the family. In her early childhood Mrs. Brooks was brought to Illinois, where she was reared and educated. She first lived in Fulton county, whence she later removed to Knox, and here she has ever since made her home. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks have become the parents of three sons and one daughter. Albert, who is living in Minnesota and married Viola Wrenn. They have six children: Cleveland; Ethel, the wife of Charles Rulin, who lives near Knoxville, and has two children; Archibald; Blanche; Cecil and Dorothy. Emory, who lives in Knoxville, married Bertha Jennings, and they have three children: Orpha, Zora and Harry. Emma, who is now deceased, married Herod Peters of Galesburg, by whom she had two children, Merrill and Grace. Daniel, who is also a resident of Galesburg, married Hulda Freed, and they have two children, Carl and Gertrude.

In matters of faith both Mr. and Mrs. Brooks are Baptists, being devoted members of the church and active in its affiliated societies. He takes a lively interest in all local matters and has filled various offices in Chestnut township. Having resided in Knox county for over sixty years, Mr. Brooks has witnessed its marvelous development as pioneer conditions have given way to the conveniences and comforts of a modern civilization.

GEORGE W. THOMPSON.

Few lawyers are making a more forceful impression upon the bar of the state both for legal ability of a high order and for the individuality of a personal character which impresses itself upon the community than George W. Thompson. He is actively connected with the profession, of which he has been a prominent follower from early manhood. Of a family conspicuous for indomitable courage and energy, he entered upon his career as a lawyer and such were

JUDGE G. W. THOMPSON



The education of Ransom J. Brooks was obtained in an old log schoolhouse with puncheon floor and slab benches in Chestnut township. The method of instruction and the text-books used at that period were thoroughly in keeping with the unattractive schoolroom, and did not inspire in the average pupil a very great desire for study. Being the eldest of the family he early began assisting with the work of the farm, and when little more than a child had assumed many of the duties of manhood. The life of the average farmer lad of that period left little time for play, as there were always a multitude of duties requiring attention, as this was the time prior to the advent of modern agricultural implements. From his early youth agricultural pursuits engaged the energies of Mr. Brooks until 1896, when he withdrew from the active work of the fields and removed to Knoxville, where he has ever since lived retired. He met with success in both farming and stock-raising, acquiring a competence through his long years of industry and enterprise that enables him to enjoy in the evening of life comfort and ease.

Chestnut township was the scene of the marriage of Mr. Brooks on the 5th of August, 1858, to Miss Lovina Goodenough, whose birth occurred in Michigan on the 6th of April, 1843. She is a daughter of Erastus and Louise (Phelps) Goodenough, who were also natives of Michigan, in which state the father passed away. There were six children in the family. In her early childhood Mrs. Brooks was brought to Illinois, where she was reared and educated. She first lived in Fulton county, whence she later removed to Knox, and here she has ever since made her home. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks have become the parents of three sons and one daughter. Albert, who is living in Minnesota and married Viola Wrenn. They have six children: Cleveland; Ethel, the wife of Charles Rulin, who lives near Knoxville, and has two children; Archibald; Blanche; Cecil and Dorothy. Emory, who lives in Knoxville, married Bertha Jennings, and they have three children: Orpha, Zora and Harry. Emma, who is now deceased, married Herod Peters of Galesburg, by whom she had two children, Merrill and Grace. Daniel, who is also a resident of Galesburg, married Hulda Freed, and they have two children, Carl and Gertrude.

In matters of faith both Mr. and Mrs. Brooks are Baptists, being devoted members of the church and active in its affiliated societies. He takes a lively interest in all local matters and has filled various offices in Chestnut township. Having resided in Knox county for over sixty years, Mr. Brooks has witnessed its marvelous development as pioneer conditions have given way to the conveniences and comforts of a modern civilization.

GEORGE W. THOMPSON.

Few lawyers are making a more forceful impression upon the bar of the state both for legal ability of a high order and for the individuality of a personal character which impresses itself upon the community than George W. Thompson. He is actively connected with the profession, of which he has been a prominent follower from early manhood. Of a family conspicuous for indomitable courage and energy, he entered upon his career as a lawyer and such were his force of character and natural qualifications that he has overcome all obstacles and risen to a position of eminence among those whose abilities place them in the front ranks of the legal fraternity of the state. A native of Canada, he was born near St. Marys, August 9, 1850, his parents being Robert and Theresa (Lee) Thompson. They were natives of England emigrating to Canada, where they resided until 1872, when they came to Knox county, Illinois, engaging in agricultural pursuits on a farm in and adjoining the city of Galesburg.

JUDGE G. W. THOMPSON

George W. Thompson spent the days of his boyhood and youth amid the conditions and environments of the country life of Canada. His early educational advantages were supplemented by study in the grammar schools of St. Marys and the Upper Canada College of Toronto. Later he entered the University of Toronto, from which he was graduated in the class of 1874 with the degree of B. A. While a student in that institution and pursuing a full literary course in the classics he won a gold medal for the superior quality of his work. While still in college he determined upon a professional career and began reading law. Subsequently he studied in the office of William Davis, an English barrister, who had located in Galesburg, and he was admitted to practice law at Fort Madison, Iowa, in 1875. No dreary novitiate awaited him, for he soon demonstrated his ability to successfully handle intricate legal problems by his oratorical powers and logical reasoning, which enabled him to present his subject with great clearness and force. After practicing for two years at Sibley, Iowa, he was admitted to the bar of the state of Illinois in June, 1877. He immediately located at Galesburg. Professional advancement is proverbially slow, but his connection with the bar of Illinois has been marked by orderly progression. Ever thorough and painstaking in the preparation of his cases, unfaltering in his loyalty to the interests of his clients, and recognizing at the same time that he owed a still higher allegiance to the majesty of the law, he maintained in his practice the highest standard of professional ethics. His success has been won by reason of the fact that his position was in the eyes of the law a correct one as established by precedent and principle. In 1897, he was elected circuit judge for the ninth judicial circuit of Illinois, which office he has since held continuously. He was appointed to the appellate bench at Ottawa, Illinois, the second district of Illinois, in 1906, and acted as one of the appellate judges in that court until October, 1911, when he was transferred by the supreme court to Springfield as one of the judges of the appellate court of the third district.

On the 12th of September, 1884, Judge Thompson was married to Miss Hettie Linsley, a daughter of James H. Linsley, a roadmaster of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. To their union three children have been born, Alma C., Ruth L., and Wallace L. Mrs. Thompson was born in Galva, Illinois, and acquired her education in Knox College. Subsequently she acted as city librarian of the Galesburg library for five years before her marriage. In 1902 she was elected a member of the board of education of the city of Galesburg. She has performed the duties of that office so conscientiously and satisfactorily to the people that no person has ever been nominated to take her place in that situation. She is also a club woman, being a member of the Hawthorn Club, and the first president of the Federated Womans' Clubs of the city of Galesburg.

In politics Judge Thompson gives his support to the republican party. He served as city alderman in Galesburg from 1882 to 1886. He attends the Baptist church. It is not necessary to enter into any series of statements showing Mr. Thompson to be a man of broad mind, scholarly attainments, public spirit and lofty patriotism, for this has been evident throughout his career. In his profession he has always been conscientious and no one knows better the necessity for thorough preparation and no one more industriously studies his cases. His course in the courtroom as a lawyer and as a judge on the bench has always been characterized by a calmness and dignity that indicate reserve strength, and his analysis of facts is clear and exhaustive. He is able to see without effort their relation or dependence and consequently can so group the facts as to enable him to throw their combined force on the point they tend to prove. His rulings in the circuit court and his published opinions in the appellate court reports show that he has a clear comprehension of legal and equitable principles and ability to logically apply them to questions in issue before him. His name is one of note in the legal history of Illinois.

CLARENCE BINGHAM RIPLEY, M. D.

Dr. Clarence Bingham Ripley, engaged in the general practice of medicine in Galesburg, has made continuous advancement in his profession since he won his M. D. degree on graduation from the University of Michigan in 1902. His ability has increased because of his broad reading and the lessons he has learned from experience. He is now accorded a liberal patronage in this city and at the same time is recognized as one of the prominent representatives of the republican party in Knox county. Galesburg numbers him among her native sons, his birth having here occurred on the 11th of December, 1876. His parents were John Adams and Letitia (Shephard) Ripley. The father was born in Berlin Center, a town in northeastern Ohio, June 26, 1844, and the mother's birth occurred in New Haven, Connecticut, December 8, 1849. John A. Ripley was educated in the public schools of Ohio and following the outbreak of the Civil war his patriotic spirit prompted his enlistment for service in the army. While on active duty he became ill and on account of his physical disability was honorably discharged. As soon as he had recovered, however, he once more joined the army, reenlisting in the one hundred days' service. While the war was in progress his father's family disposed of their interests in Ohio and removed to Princeton, Illinois, where he joined them after the close of hostilities and in 1865 he removed to Galesburg, where he secured a position as brakeman on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. He afterward served as freight conductor for a time and later was advanced to the position of passenger conductor. For over forty years he was well known in connection with the railway service of that line. He died in Galesburg, December 20, 1911. It was on the 7th of October, 1870, that he wedded Letitia Shephard, who had come to the middle west with her parents and located in Knox county, where she formed the acquaintance of the man to whom she gave her hand in marriage. They became the parents of five children: Frederick, deceased; Edwin Shephard, a practicing attorney of Lincoln, Nebraska; Clarence B., of this review; and Caroline and Alice E., who have departed this life.

In the public schools of Galesburg, Dr. Ripley pursued his early education and later became a student at Hinsdale, Illinois. He afterward entered the high school of Lyons township, Cook county, from which he was graduated with the class of 1896. His college course was pursued in the University of Michigan, from which he won the Bachelor of Arts degree in 1900, while in 1902 he gained his professional degree, having determined to make the practice of medicine his life work.

Dr. Ripley then located in Riley, Michigan, where he opened an office and continued in practice for two years. He then came to Galesburg in April, 1904, and took a position in the relief department of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. In June of the same year, however, he was sent to Alliance, Nebraska, by the company and there continued until December, when he returned to this city. He continued in the service of the railroad company until the 1st of August, 1906, when he resigned and entered independently upon the general practice of medicine. He has since served as city and county physician, having been appointed to that office in the spring of 1908. His professional ability is widely recognized and the public confidence in his power is attested by the liberal patronage accorded him. He has studied continuously along professional lines, keeping in touch with the most advanced methods, and scientific principles find exemplification in the daily performance of his duties. He belongs to the Galesburg Medical Society, the Knox County Medical Society and the Illinois State Medical Society. He has been for several years a member of the medical staff of the Galesburg Hospital and a review of his professional career shows that he has done excellent work in the departments of both medicine and surgery.

On the 8th of June, 1904, Dr. Ripley was united in marriage to Miss Bertha Raymer, of Cleveland, Ohio, and they now have one son, Clarence Bingham, Jr., born in Galesburg, December 30, 1907. Both the Doctor and his wife are members of the Central Congregational church and in various lines of its work are actively interested. Dr. Ripley is now serving as president of the Men's League of Central Church and in addition is connected with other societies and organizations of the city, and the Country and Galesburg Clubs, serving for several years as a director of the last named. Politically he is a republican. In local politics he is taking an active part and served as chairman of central committee of the peoples party at the time of its greatest successes.

WILBUR F. WILLSIE.

Wilbur F. Willsie, who has been running out of Galesburg as a mail clerk for the past thirty-eight years, was born in this city on the 6th of April, 1856. He is a son of the late Colonel Horace H. and Betsey (Nichols) Willsie, the father a native of Canada and the mother of the state of New York. Horace H. Willsie was reared in his native country and there he also learned the tanner's trade. He located in Galesburg about 1853 and became a clerk in J. R. Gordon's clothing store, continuing in this capacity for some years. When the Civil war broke out he raised three companies and went to the front in defense of the Union, being mustered out at the close of hostilities with the rank of colonel. Upon his return to civil life he was appointed chief of police of Galesburg and he also ran a livery stable, while later he was elected sheriff. He was one of the public-spirited, enterprising citizens of the early days and did much toward developing the city. His death occurred in Galesburg in 1907, at the age of seventy-eight years. The mother, however, is still living and is now in her seventieth year. The family of Colonel and Mrs. Willsie numbered five, as follows: Wilbur F., our subject; Horace M.; Alfred N.; John; and Daisy, the wife of Edward Kulp. The paternal grandfather was John Willsie, a native of the state of New York. He was a farmer and subsequently removed to Minnesota, where he passed away at a ripe old age. In his family were the following children: Horace H., the father of our subject; Hiram; Milo; Asa; and George. Mr. and Mrs. Orson Nichols, the maternal grandparents, had three children: Leila, Betsey and Leroy. Mr. Nichols was for many years engaged in the livery business. He was also a veteran of the Civil war, having gone to the front as fife major to General John A. Logan and remained in the service until the close of hostilities.

Galesburg has always been the home of Wilbur F. Willsie, who was educated in the public schools. After laying aside his text-books he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits and for three years cultivated a piece of land belonging to his father. At the expiration of that period he entered the government employ as postal clerk and has been in the service continuously since 1873.

In May, 1879, Mr. Willsie was married to Miss Mary Boyce, a native of Ohio and a daughter of Henry and Abbie Boyce. The parents early came to Illinois and thereafter made this state their home, passing their latter days at Warsaw. They had five daughters and three sons: Kate; Ella; Mary, now Mrs. Willsie; Hattie; Gussie; Henry; George; and Fred. Mr. and Mrs. Willsie became the parents of four children: Maude, the wife of H. Clay Smith, of Galesburg, by whom she has had two daughters, Loreta and Fern; Wilbur, who died at the age of seven years; Florence, who is clerking in O. T. Johnson's store; and Harold, who is still attending school.

Mr. Willsie belongs to Alpha Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and his political support he accords to the republican party. He is one of the oldest postal clerks, from the point of years of continuous service, in his division, and is widely known in Galesburg where he has many friends, the majority of whom were comrades of his boyhood.

CHARLES ROBSON NEELY.

The agricultural interests of Knox county find a worthy representative in Charles Robson Neely, who is now engaged in farming in Sparta township. He is one of the native sons of this locality, having been born May 9, 1849, upon the farm which is now his home. His father, James Neely, was a native of Cayuga county, New York, born September 6, 1806. He early began earning his own livelihood and as a boy drove a horse on the canal. He was about clothing store, continuing in this capacity for some years. When the Civil war broke out he raised three companies and went to the front in defense of the Union, being mustered out at the close of hostilities with the rank of colonel. Upon his return to civil life he was appointed chief of police of Galesburg and he also ran a livery stable, while later he was elected sheriff. He was one of the public-spirited, enterprising citizens of the early days and did much toward developing the city. His death occurred in Galesburg in 1907, at the age of seventy-eight years. The mother, however, is still living and is now in her seventieth year. The family of Colonel and Mrs. Willsie numbered five, as follows: Wilbur F., our subject; Horace M.; Alfred N.; John; and Daisy, the wife of Edward Kulp. The paternal grandfather was John Willsie, a native of the state of New York. He was a farmer and subsequently removed to Minnesota, where he passed away at a ripe old age. In his family were the following children: Horace H., the father of our subject; Hiram; Milo; Asa; and George. Mr. and Mrs. Orson Nichols, the maternal grandparents, had three children: Leila, Betsey and Leroy. Mr. Nichols was for many years engaged in the livery business. He was also a veteran of the Civil war, having gone to the front as fife major to General John A. Logan and remained in the service until the close of hostilities.

CHARLES R. NEELY AND FAMILY

Galesburg has always been the home of Wilbur F. Willsie, who was educated in the public schools. After laying aside his text-books he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits and for three years cultivated a piece of land belonging to his father. At the expiration of that period he entered the government employ as postal clerk and has been in the service continuously since 1873.

In May, 1879, Mr. Willsie was married to Miss Mary Boyce, a native of Ohio and a daughter of Henry and Abbie Boyce. The parents early came to Illinois and thereafter made this state their home, passing their latter days at Warsaw. They had five daughters and three sons: Kate; Ella; Mary, now Mrs. Willsie; Hattie; Gussie; Henry; George; and Fred. Mr. and Mrs. Willsie became the parents of four children: Maude, the wife of H. Clay Smith, of Galesburg, by whom she has had two daughters, Loreta and Fern; Wilbur, who died at the age of seven years; Florence, who is clerking in O. T. Johnson's store; and Harold, who is still attending school.

Mr. Willsie belongs to Alpha Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and his political support he accords to the republican party. He is one of the oldest postal clerks, from the point of years of continuous service, in his division, and is widely known in Galesburg where he has many friends, the majority of whom were comrades of his boyhood.

CHARLES ROBSON NEELY.

The agricultural interests of Knox county find a worthy representative in Charles Robson Neely, who is now engaged in farming in Sparta township. He is one of the native sons of this locality, having been born May 9, 1849, upon the farm which is now his home. His father, James Neely, was a native of Cayuga county, New York, born September 6, 1806. He early began earning his own livelihood and as a boy drove a horse on the canal. He was about thirty-two years of age when in 1838 he left the Empire state and came with his family to Illinois, settling at Log City. Later he removed to Henderson and was employed at packing pork by J. Gay for ten years. On the expiration of that period he removed to what is now the Neely homestead farm, then a tract of wild prairie land practically destitute of improvements. With characteristic energy he began to break the sod and till the soil and as the years passed he converted the place into productive fields which he cultivated up to the time of his death, on the 27th of June, 1894. It was on November 2, 1836, in New York, that he married Miss Sabrina Arnold, a native of the Empire state. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. James Neely were nine children, of whom five are yet living: Mandeville, who is now retired in Galesburg; Mortimer, who was a soldier of the Civil war and is now a merchant of Blanchard, Iowa; Hannah, the wife of S. F. Johnson, now living retired in Galesburg; Lucy, the widow of Dr. Vivian, of Galesburg; and Charles Robson, of this review. Another member of the family who reached adult age was Maria.

CHARLES R. NEELY AND FAMILY

At the usual age Charles Robson Neely began his education in the public schools and when his text-books were put aside he devoted all of his time to the work of the farm, remaining with his parents until they were called to their final rest. He is busily employed in the cultivation and development of the fields and is also engaged in stock-raising on a farm he and his father purchased several years ago, both branches of his business proving profitable. The farm presents a neat and attractive appearance, everything about the place indicating his careful supervision and progressive methods.

On the 5th of October, 1871, Mr. Neely was united in marriage to Miss Mary J. DeLong, who was born July 28, 1850, at Center Point School House, in this county. Her father, Marshall P. DeLong was a native of Addison county, Vermont, born June 14, 1826, and in 1836, when a lad of nine years, he came with his parents to Illinois, the family settling at what was then Log City in Henderson township. For some time he engaged in teaching school as well as in farming. The purchase of land made him owner of seventy-seven acres in Sparta township upon which he resided until 1886, when he took charge of the county poor farm, there residing to the time of his death, which occurred in 1892, when he was sixty-six years of age. He had been somewhat prominent in public affairs for many years. For a long period he had served on the school board and was also postmaster at Center Point, Illinois. For a quarter of a century he filled the office of justice of the peace, to which position he was elected in 1861, his long continuance therein being proof of the thoroughness and impartiality of his decisions. For many years he held the office of supervisor and in 1886 he was appointed superintendent of the Knox county poor farm, which position he filled until his demise. He was also a member of the agricultural board of Knox county for a number of years and during three years of that time was its president. In early manhood he had wedded Mary Harding, who was born April 7, 1831, in the state of New York, a daughter of Jones and Mary (Rowley) Harding, who removed westward in 1837, settling in Knox county near Galesburg. Mary Rowley was born at Westport, New York, December 20, 1805, and was married to Jones Harding April 21, 1825. Jones Harding was a large land owner of this county and became one of the prominent farmers of his district. He was born at Rome, New York, December 11, 1799, and died August 11, 1896. Marshall P. DeLong was a son of Julius DeLong, who was a shoemaker and tanner and married Julina Sanford. Julius DeLong died August 22, 1870, when he was sixty-eight years of age, and his wife, who was born in 1806, passed away March 6, 1871. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall P. DeLong were the parents of a son and two daughters, the brother of Mrs. Neely being Walter DeLong, who is now in the transfer business in Galesburg. The sister is Hattie, the wife of Addison Hastie, an attorney of Seattle, Washington. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Neely have been born four children: Arthur M., who married Mattie Crandall and is a motorman on the Rock Island Southern Railway and lives at Monmouth; W. D., who married Henrietta Newton and is assistant postmaster of Butte, Montana; Cora A., the wife of Guy D. Root, of Galesburg; and James Ray, who is at home with his parents.

Charles R. Neely holds membership in Galesburg Camp, No. 667, M. W. A., and his political support is given to the republican party but he has never sought nor held political office. He has, however, served as a member of the school board for fifteen years and is now acting as its president. His long connection with this office indicates his deep interest in the cause of education and his efforts toward advancing the high standard of the schools have been far-reaching and beneficial. His influence has always been found on the side of progress and improvement, whether in public affairs or in private life. The more progressive spirit is manifest in his business interests and finds tangible evidence in the methods which he follows in carrying on the work of the farm.

HUGH ENNIS.

Few men who have reached the age of Hugh Ennis are still actively engaged in business. The great majority prefer to retire but with him indolence has always been foreign to his nature and he still gives his attention to business as a dealer in sand. He is today one of the oldest residents of Galesburg and has witnessed its development from a village. He was born in County Meath, Ireland, in 1830, a son of William and Nancy (McGovern) Ennis, both of whom were natives of the Emerald isle. The former was a son of Hugh and Betty (Killeen) Ennis who were farming people of Ireland, and there reared their family of five sons and two daughters, William, James, John, Lawrence, Patrick, Hannah and Margaret. William Ennis also took up the occupation of farming as a life work and always remained a resident of his native land where he died at an advanced age. His wife, however, passed away in early womanhood in the year 1835. Both were members of the Catholic church. Their family numbered five children: Elizabeth, now deceased, who married Patrick Ennis, who, however, was no relation of the family; Bridget, the deceased wife of Michael Mooney; Hugh, of this review; Patrick, deceased; and Mary, who has also passed away.

Hugh Ennis was reared in his native land and acquired his education there in the parochial schools. He came to America in 1852 and worked for five months in Brooklyn, New York. He then went to Bridgeport, Connecticut, and was employed on a construction train on a railroad extending from Bridgeport to Pittsfield, Massachusetts. The year 1856 witnessed his arrival in Galesburg, where he has since made his home. For three and a half years he was employed in the foundry of J. P. Frost & Company, after which he began business on his own account as a dealer in sand, in which line he has since continued. He furnished sand for all the streets south of Main street from Cherry to the old Beiderman building, and also for the jail and many of the large buildings of Galesburg. He has always been accorded a liberal patronage and his straightforward business methods, promptness in delivery and his enterprising spirit have constituted the salient forces of his success.

On the 28th of April, 1858, occurred the marriage of Mr. Ennis and Miss Margaret Ryan, a daughter of Cornelius and Alice (Ryan) Ryan. The father died during the early girlhood of Mrs. Ennis and the mother afterward came to America with her two daughters, settling in Galesburg where all passed away. The death of Mrs. Ennis occurred May 28, 1906, when she was sixty-nine years of age. By her marriage she had become the mother of nine children, six sons and three daughters: William, who died at the age of forty-two years; Daniel, who died when about twenty-one years of age; John, at home; Elizabeth and Alice, both of whom died when but two years old; Margaret, the wife of Fred Bohnenberger; and three who died in infancy.

Mr. Ennis has been a life-long communicant of the Catholic church. He has now reached the age of eighty-one years and yet is a hale and hearty man, and well preserved mentally. His residence in Galesburg covers a period of fifty-five years and he has seen it develop from a small town of little business importance to one of the chief commercial centers of the state, having important trade and manufacturing interests. While he has never sought to figure prominently in any public connection the sterling worth of his character has gained him the warm regard of those with whom he has been associated.

WILLIAM ARTHUR THOMPSON.

Prominent among the industrious and enterprising agriculturists of Walnut Grove township is William Arthur Thompson, the owner of the well developed farm which he now cultivates. His birth occurred on this farm August 4, 1879, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson. David Thompson was born September 11, 1835, in Elkhart, Indiana, the son of John and Catherine (Livingston) Thompson, natives of Ohio, who settled in Indiana for a short time and came to Knox county, Illinois, where they located on a part of what is now the Thompson farm, near Altona. David Thompson in 1862 enlisted and served for three years in the Civil war. Being mustered out, he returned to Altona, where he followed farming and largely engaged in stock buying until his death on September 11, 1902. In 1868 he married Catherine Richmond, who was born September 22, 1845, near Wheeling, West Virginia, and is a daughter of Joseph Richmond and Susan Thess. She comes of an old family of Virginia, in which state her grandfather and father followed the occupation of farming, and the father later entered the ministry of the Methodist church as circuit rider.

William A. Thompson received his early education in the common school and afterward completed the regular course in the Altona high school, from which he was graduated previous to his matriculation in the Gem City Business College at Quincy, in 1899. Thus equipped with more than an ordinary school training, he returned home to take up agriculture as his life work. He bought a farm opposite his father's property and took entire charge of the management of both places, this being an undertaking which has called for skill, judgment and constant application. In his general farming pursuits he has made rapid progress and in stock-raising he has gained more than ordinary success, having proceeded along well approved scientific lines in raising registered sheep. His sheep farm is the largest in this section and is well stocked with recorded pedigree stock.

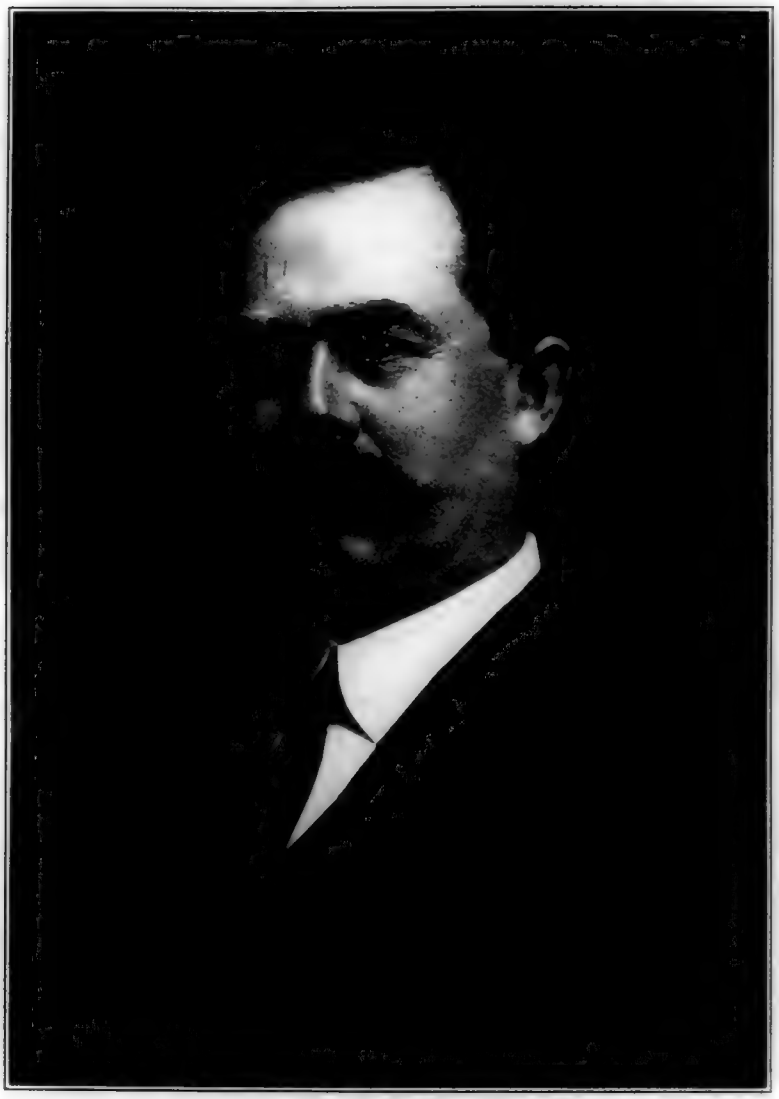
On the 24th of September, 1903, Mr. Thompson was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. McMaster, who is the daughter of John McMaster and whose birth occurred December 12, 1877. John McMaster, a retired farmer, living now in Altona, was born May 15, 1827, in Sorn, Ayrshire, Scotland. The family emigrated in 1850 and came down from Chicago by way of canal to Peoria and by team to Copley township, where they settled. He followed farming in Walnut Grove township until 1898, when he retired and is now living in Altona. He married Lorinda H. Multer, who was born in New York state, May 10, 1832, a daughter of Joseph and Susan (Becker) Multer, who were of German descent. She came to Knox county in 1860, where she married John McMaster August 22, 1861. To Mr. and Mrs. William A. Thompson two children have been born: Helen Augusta, whose birth occurred October 23, 1904; and Mary Maxine, who was born August 7, 1907.

In politics Mr. Thompson is a democrat and has served his party well by filling the offices of township clerk, clerk of the school board and judge of election at various campaigns, duties which he discharged with promptness and fidelity. He and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian church. Both Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are favorably known throughout the township, having gained many friends during their residence there.

WALTER F. BOYES.

No name is more closely interwoven with the history of the educational institutions of Knox county than is that of Walter F. Boyes, who for eighteen years has been connected with the schools as teacher and superintendent. He was born in Knox county, October 8, 1865, his parents being Robert D. and Emily A. (Bird) Boyes. His paternal grandfather, Robert Boyes, was a native of England and came to New York with his family in 1827. Subsequently he removed to Belleville, Canada, and about 1864 settled in Knox county, Illinois. His wife was Miss Frances Douglas, who was born in England of Scotch ancestry. Stephen and Ann Bird, his maternal grandparents, were born in the north of Ireland and emigrated to Canada while they were young, subsequently coming to Illinois in 1863. The father was born in northern New York and the mother in Ontario, Canada, where they were married. One year after their marriage they removed to Knox county, arriving here in 1864.

WALTER F. BOYES



and afterward completed the regular course in the Altona high school, from which he was graduated previous to his matriculation in the Gem City Business College at Quincy, in 1899. Thus equipped with more than an ordinary school training, he returned home to take up agriculture as his life work. He bought a farm opposite his father's property and took entire charge of the management of both places, this being an undertaking which has called for skill, judgment and constant application. In his general farming pursuits he has made rapid progress and in stock-raising he has gained more than ordinary success, having proceeded along well approved scientific lines in raising registered sheep. His sheep farm is the largest in this section and is well stocked with recorded pedigree stock.

On the 24th of September, 1903, Mr. Thompson was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. McMaster, who is the daughter of John McMaster and whose birth occurred December 12, 1877. John McMaster, a retired farmer, living now in Altona, was born May 15, 1827, in Sorn, Ayrshire, Scotland. The family emigrated in 1850 and came down from Chicago by way of canal to Peoria and by team to Copley township, where they settled. He followed farming in Walnut Grove township until 1898, when he retired and is now living in Altona. He married Lorinda H. Multer, who was born in New York state, May 10, 1832, a daughter of Joseph and Susan (Becker) Multer, who were of German descent. She came to Knox county in 1860, where she married John McMaster August 22, 1861. To Mr. and Mrs. William A. Thompson two children have been born: Helen Augusta, whose birth occurred October 23, 1904; and Mary Maxine, who was born August 7, 1907.

In politics Mr. Thompson is a democrat and has served his party well by filling the offices of township clerk, clerk of the school board and judge of election at various campaigns, duties which he discharged with promptness and fidelity. He and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian church. Both Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are favorably known throughout the township, having gained many friends during their residence there.

WALTER F. BOYES.

No name is more closely interwoven with the history of the educational institutions of Knox county than is that of Walter F. Boyes, who for eighteen years has been connected with the schools as teacher and superintendent. He was born in Knox county, October 8, 1865, his parents being Robert D. and Emily A. (Bird) Boyes. His paternal grandfather, Robert Boyes, was a native of England and came to New York with his family in 1827. Subsequently he removed to Belleville, Canada, and about 1864 settled in Knox county, Illinois. His wife was Miss Frances Douglas, who was born in England of Scotch ancestry. Stephen and Ann Bird, his maternal grandparents, were born in the north of Ireland and emigrated to Canada while they were young, subsequently coming to Illinois in 1863. The father was born in northern New York and the mother in Ontario, Canada, where they were married. One year after their marriage they removed to Knox county, arriving here in 1864.

WALTER F. BOYES

Walter F. Boyes acquired his early education in the public schools of Elmwood, Illinois. A spirit of thoroughness and diligence was early manifest and led him constantly forward in his school career. Recognizing that success is due in largest measure to the individual and the exercise of his inherent qualities rather than to environment, Mr. Boyes determined to work his way upward, brooking no obstacle that could be overcome by persistent and earnest effort. For more than twenty-five years he has been connected with public schools as teacher and superintendent. He began teaching because it seemed the most expedient occupation he could find at the time and continued it because he found it most congenial and pleasing work. For four years he was a teacher in the ungraded schools of Peoria county, for two years served as principal of the Monica public schools and for three years was principal of the Princeville public schools and principal of the Yates City high school for eight years before becoming superintendent of schools of Knox county. Since 1902 he has held this position. That he is industrious, capable and faithful is indicated by the fact that he has been three times elected to the office. He is watchful of all the details of the school system and of all indications pointing toward progress and from the beginning he has had great faith in the ultimate success of establishing the school system of Knox county, so that it will rank second to none in the state.

In Princeville, Illinois, in March, 1896, Mr. Boyes was married to Miss Minnie M. Klinck, a teacher in the schools, and a daughter of Graham and Sarah (Alexander) Klinck. Her grandparents were among the early settlers of Peoria county. Her paternal grandmother died in Princeville in 1887, at the age of one hundred and five years, and an aunt, Mrs. Zillah (Klinck) McMurtrie, of Lacon, Illinois, reached in October, 1911, the age of one hundred years and is still in good health. Mrs. Klinck, the mother of Mrs. Boyes, is the oldest person living in Princeville township, who was born there. Mr. and Mrs. Boyes have two children, Norma Kathleen and Herbert Klinck.

Mr. Boyes' political support is given to the republican party. His entire active career has been devoted to pedagogical pursuits and he has the confidence of those associated with him in school work. Various honors of a professional nature have come to him, among these being a service of ten years as member of the Illinois State Teachers' Reading Circle Board. Geniality, consideration and kindliness have bound him to his fellowmen and the value of his life does not consist in the improvement of opportunities for the attainment of success more than it lies in the attitude which he maintains toward his fellow citizens and which they in turn hold toward him. He has been a member of the Masonic order since 1890, holding membership in the blue lodge and the Royal Arch chapter. In religious faith he is a Presbyterian.

JOSHUA MAJOR LAMOREUX.

Dr. Joshua Major Lamoreux is a well known representative of dentistry in Galesburg and is prominent in the professional circles where he has been recognized for years as one of the useful men in the profession in Knox county. He was born in Lehman township, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, on the 17th of February, 1842. His parents, Josiah Cease and Ellen (Major) Lamoreux, were farming people. The mother was born in Yorkshire, England, and came to America with her parents when she was about three years of age. The father in addition to carrying on his agricultural pursuits frequently engaged in carpenter work and at one time owned and operated a sawmill in Pennsylvania. The family removed to Ohio in the autumn of 1860 and located near Monroeville in Huron county, where Mr. Lamoreux was subsequently engaged in agricultural pursuits. Family tradition is that the Lamoreux family came from France, two brothers, Thomas and John, arriving in this country about the time of the Revolutionary war. They both served in the American army and were active soldiers until the close of hostilities. One of these brothers, John, settled in New York state while the other, Thomas, settled in Jackson township, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania. It is from this latter branch that Dr. Lamoreux is descended. The mother's family arrived from England about 1820. There were eleven children, of whom Mrs. Lamoreux was the tenth.

Dr. Lamoreux acquired his early education in the schools of Lehman, Pennsylvania, at the same time giving his father such assistance as he could in the duties on the farm. He has always been more or less of a student and was frequently found studying at home. The opportunities which the district schools in Pennsylvania and subsequently in Ohio afforded him were meager in that he was able to take up only the common branches usually taught in country schools. He continued working on the home farm in Ohio until he enlisted in Company A of the Hoffman Battalion Prison Guard at Johnson's Island, Ohio, for service in the Civil war. His enlistment took place in December, 1862, and he served for two years and three months. The Hoffman Battalion was later recruited to a full regiment known as the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Dr. Lamoreux was mustered out of service at Columbus, Ohio, in the spring of 1865. In the summer of that year he removed to Oneida, Illinois, and entered the service of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company. He was first made night watchman and caller with headquarters in the baggage room. Being eager to advance and having an apt mind, he learned telegraphy during his leisure hours, having obtained permission from Mr. W. H. Hall, who was at that time superintendent of the telegraph department. For about two years Dr. Lamoreux was employed at different stations on the railroad and was later made traveling operator with headquarters at Galesburg. Subsequently he served as train dispatcher and was thus employed for about twenty years. In 1892, however, he severed his connections with the railroad company in order to devote more time to the practice of dentistry. Early in his career he had taken up for a short time the study of dentistry in the offices of the late Dr. J. A. W. Davis, of Galesburg. At that time the law did not require a regular course as obligatory to enter into the profession and he began to practice in the state of Illinois, opening his first office in Oneida in 1877. He would go to Oneida in the morning, returning in the early evening to be ready for his work in the railroad office. Early in the summer of 1878 he removed his dental offices to Galesburg, and has since been practicing in this city, obtaining, about 1882, as soon as a law was passed to that effect, his registration as a dentist. In his practice he has met with excellent success, being recognized as one of the able members in the profession in Galesburg. That his labors have been attended with gratifying results when viewed from a professional standpoint is indicated by his constantly increasing patronage which comes from the best class of citizens.

In Oneida, February 20, 1869, Dr. Lamoreux was married to Miss Amy Jane Tracy. To their union five children have been born, four of whom survive, namely: Daisy Louise, who is married to Frank G. Matteson, of Galesburg; Olive Ellen, who is the wife of Samuel J. Hoffheimer, of Decatur, Illinois; Mabel Jane, who is married to Clement Whittier, of Webster Groves, Missouri; and Philip Major, who is residing in Kalispell, Montana, and who married Helen Hill, of Galesburg. The first son, Frederick Tracy, has passed away.

In politics Dr. Lamoreux was a republican when he cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1864. He voted for Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Harrison, but in 1896 changed his political affiliations and has since cast his vote for the candidates of the democracy. He holds membership in the Soangetaha Club.

SWAN PETERSON.

Among the public-spirited and enterprising citizens that Sweden has contributed to Knoxville must be numbered Swan Peterson, who during the fifty-nine years of his residence here has always taken an active interest in promoting and advancing the development of the community. He is not only one of the pioneer settlers but he was one of the early school teachers, and he also established one of the first grocery stores which he conducted for twenty years, and although for some years he has been living retired he has not lost his interest in public affairs.

His birth occurred on the 27th of September, 1827, and he is a son of Peter and Bodel (Johnson) Peterson, both of whom passed their entire lives in Sweden, where the mother died in 1843 and the father in 1863. Their family consisted of five sons and two daughters, of whom our subject, who is the eldest and Bengt, the youngest, who is living in Lee county, Illinois, are the only two now surviving. Those deceased are: Christina, John, Nels, Hannah and Ola.

Swan Peterson was reared in his native land where he was given the advantages of a good education. He began his career as a teacher in the schools of Sweden, continuing to follow this profession for several years. Early recognizing that the future held little prospect of his attaining a position commensurate with his abilities he decided to seek new opportunities in the United States and in 1852 crossed the Atlantic to the new world. He landed in New York city, after spending twenty-one days on the ocean, and came directly west, stopping for a time in Chicago and Peoria, this state, after which he came to Knoxville. During the first two years of his residence here Mr. Peterson worked on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, devoting all of his spare time to perfecting his knowledge of English. At the expiration of that period he obtained a position in one of the district schools, and followed teaching during the winter months of 1855-56 and 57, and in the summer peddled merchandise in the country. By exercising thrift and self-denial he managed to accumulate sufficient money to enable him to embark in business and in 1859 he opened a grocery store in Knoxville, that he successfully operated for twenty years. He then withdrew from commercial activities and went into the insurance business, which he followed until his retirement. Mr. Peterson has always been very loyal to his fellow countrymen and has taken a deep interest in their welfare, and it is largely due to his efforts that the first Swedish school was established here.

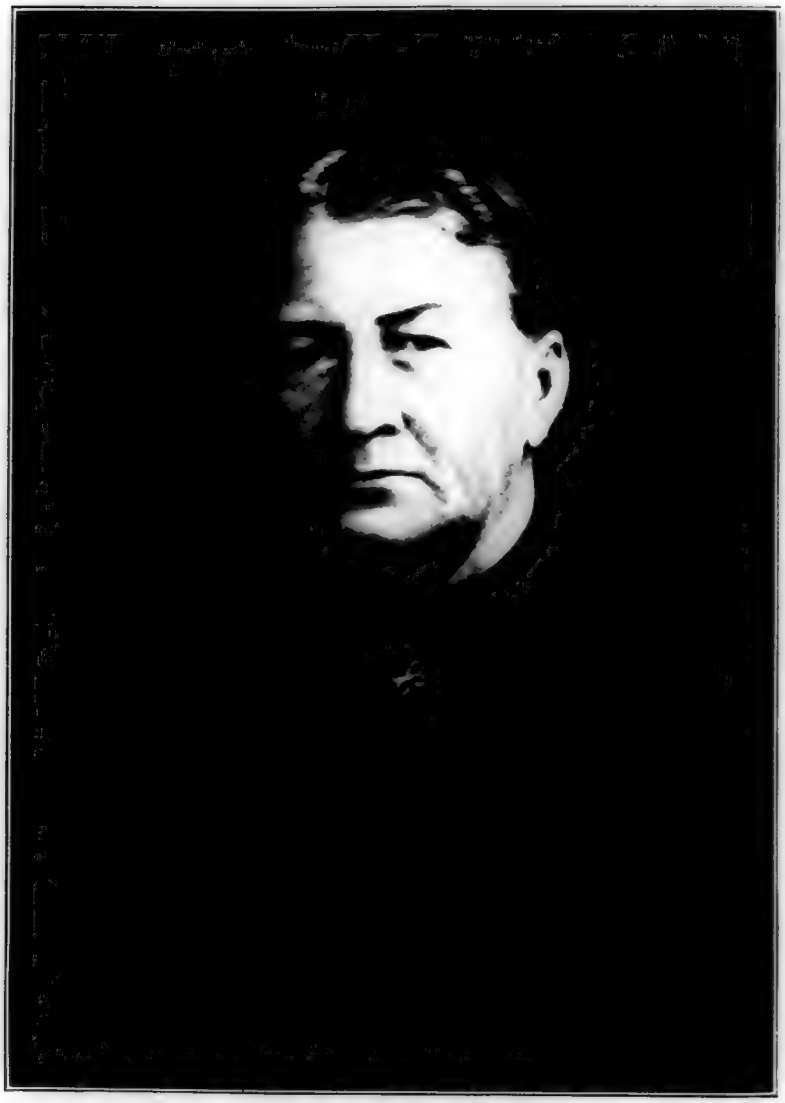
In Knoxville, on the 10th of February, 1855, Mr. Peterson was united in marriage to Miss Bengta Nelson, who was born and reared in Sweden, where her parents always lived. She emigrated to the United States, in 1854 settling in Knoxville, and here she passed away on the 2d of January, 1896. Eight children were born unto Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, all but three of whom are now deceased. Matilda, who is the eldest, lives at home. Emma, the next in order of birth, married Nels Larson, who is connected with the grocery of N. Peterson, of Knoxville. Nicholas, who is engaged in the grocery business in Knoxville, married Elizabeth Fielding and they have two children, Herbert and Inez.



Mr. Peterson is affiliated with the Swedish Evangelical church, in which his wife also held membership, and in politics he is a republican. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, and has ever since given his unqualified support to the men and measures of that party. One of the most striking characteristics of Mr. Peterson is his intense loyalty, particularly in matters of citizenship, as at all times he has manifested a deep interest in the welfare of the community toward the development of which he has contributed his full quota, through his cooperation and indorsement of every progressive measure. He was one of the founders of the Old Settlers Society and has held the offices of both president and secretary of this organization, in the annual meetings of which he takes an enthusiastic interest. Although Mr. Peterson in all probability has not realized the dreams of his early manhood in America, he has never had occasion to regret the transference of his allegiance to this country, as he has met with a fair degree of prosperity and is now able to spend his latter days in ease and comfort.

MRS. FRANCES BARRY.

Mrs. Frances Barry, for fifty-nine years a resident of Knox county, is the widow of James Barry, a wealthy farmer, who was for many years extensively engaged in stock-raising and later retired. A native of Sommersetshire, England, born on March 8, 1845, she was a daughter of George and Elizabeth (Wagland) Edwards. When she was seven years of age her parents came to America locating in Ontario township, Knox county, Illinois, where her father rented a farm and engaged in agricultural pursuits. When he had become sufficiently acclimated and had decided upon Knox county as his permanent home he bought what is known in the vicinity as the old John Tate farm, which he developed and operated. There he died at the age of seventy-nine; his wife passing away at the age of sixty-five. They were the parents of twelve children, of whom eight are now living. These are: Elizabeth, the widow of James Main, residing in Oneida; George, living in Boise City, Idaho; Frances, the subject of this biography; Edwin, in Cambridge, Nebraska; Albert, a horseman in Chicago; William, in Nebraska; and Lucy and her sister Mary, both widows living on the old homestead in Ontario township, Knox county, Illinois.

JAMES BARRY

MRS. JAMES BARRY

Mrs. Barry came of an old family of the substantial English yeomanry. Her paternal grandparents were George and Elizabeth Edwards and her maternal grandparents were John and Mary Wagland. When nineteen years old Frances Edwards was united in marriage to James Barry the ceremony being performed on December 15, 1864. Mr. Barry was a native of Limerick, Ireland, born in August, 1838. When nineteen years of age he came to America hoping to find broader fields for his activities and larger opportunities open to an ambitious young man. At the very outset, on landing in New York, he met with a very disheartening experience. Bent on finding his aunt, who was living in the city, he walked forty blocks through the streets of New York only to find his aunt's family and their home under quarantine for small-pox. He left his luggage with them, however, and went elsewhere to find a lodging for the night. In the morning when he returned, he found that every vestige of his possessions had been burned during his absence. With one dollar in his pocket he set out and, working his way westward, he arrived at length in Ontario township, Knox county, Illinois. Here he worked for seven years at fourteen dollars a month, out of which he saved enough to enable him to marry and buy a farm of eighty acres. Many of his sterling qualities which made his rise possible, his splendid initiative, his undaunted courage and his tireless industry, were inherited from his sturdy stock of ancestors. His father, who remained in the enjoyment of all his faculties until his death at the age of ninety-three, was John Barry, a farmer, son of James Barry. His mother, whose maiden name was Mary Healey, was a daughter of Patrick Healey.

James Barry proved to be a very efficient farmer meeting with much success in his career. Besides general farming he raised stock to a considerable extent and traded in land, buying and selling farms. He bought the farm of three hundred and seventy acres, which he cultivated, in 1884, and left at his death a thousand acres of fine farm land in Knox county. He passed away November 17, 1910. In his religious faith he was a Catholic and in his political allegiance he was an ardent democrat, and represented his district as delegate in all the conventions of his party. He was one of the school directors for fourteen years and worked earnestly to assist the community in its desire to improve educational facilities. Mrs. Frances Barry lives in retirement, cherishing her husband's memory and continuing his spirit of helpfulness in her relations with the community in which she lives. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Barry. John W., married to Julia Bierderman, lives in Chicago, Illinois. George H., married to Ida Bradley, is a farmer in Knox county. He is the father of two children, Lloyd and Georgiana. Lilly C., the widow of George Rockwell, of Galesburg, is the mother of one child, Frances. Mary E. is the wife of James Barry, retired, living in Galesburg. Lucy, the wife of H. Welsh, a farmer of Knox county, is the mother of three children, Morris, Frances, and Florence. Winefred, the wife of Charles Welsh, a farmer in Sparta township, has one child, Anna May. Morris J., married to Blanche McDermott, is the father of one child, James. He is living at home.

Mrs. Frances Barry is an active worker in the Catholic church at Wataga, where she has a large circle of friends who hold her in high esteem. Devoted to her children and grandchildren her life is a full and happy one and she finds her true delight in the service of those who are dear to her.

WILLIAM EDWIN WEST.

William Edwin West, the mayor of Yates City, is a grain dealer and operates a grain elevator, being the successor to M. W. Thomson from whom he bought the business in November, 1905. He was born in this town July 10, 1876, his parents being Isaac N. and Eliza Ann (Mason) West, both natives of Ohio who came to Knox county when children accompanying their parents hither. Passing his childhood days in Salem township, William Edwin West obtained his early education in the common schools of this locality and later attended high school at Yates City and Lombard College in Galesburg, Illinois, after which he prepared himself for a business career by taking a commercial course at the Quincy Business College. The first position that he obtained was as bookkeeper for a firm in Chicago and after remaining there for two years he found another position at an increased salary. Two years later he returned to Yates City and has resided here ever since. He is one of the able business men of the town, being wide-awake and full of well directed energy, capable of aiding in the promotion of the public welfare as well as attending to his private interests. He has served as alderman of Yates City, being elected on the republican ticket, and in August, 1911, was appointed mayor of the city to finish out the unexpired term of former mayor, L. A. Lawrens, who resigned. Although the period since assuming the responsibilities of his office is a brief one, Mr. West has already given sufficient proof of the fact that, as a public official occupying the position of highest honor accorded by the administration of a municipality to any of its citizens, he is thoroughly reliable and consicentious in the performance of his duties, having only the best interests of the community at heart.

In 1899 Mr. West was united in marriage to Miss Vena Ewalt, a daughter of J. M. and Ella Ewalt of Yates City, the mother being deceased. Fraternally Mr. West is associated with the Masonic Lodge of Yates City, in which he holds the office of secretary. In politics he is a republican and always gives his active and helpful cooperation to every measure designed to advance the interests of the people for their moral and material good.

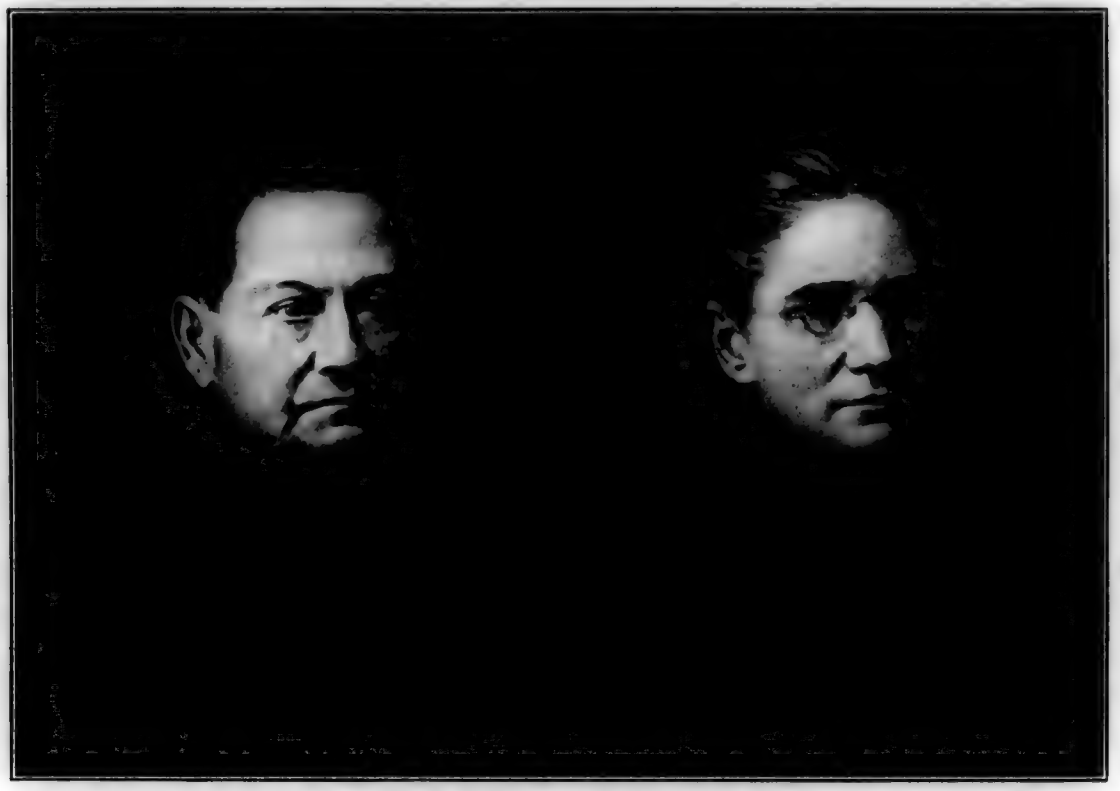
JAMES W. NEALE.

A very notable record of service in the Civil war was made by James W. Neale, for many years a carpenter in Victoria, Copley township, who has the distinction of having been in forty-nine engagements without receiving a wound. To be so favored by fortune at the outset of one's career is a good omen which, in Mr. Neale's case, has in the main been borne out in the many years that followed.

Born in Springfield, Illinois, October 20, 1840, he is a son of John M. and Celia A. (Wilson) Neale, the former a native of Boonville, Kentucky, and the latter of Virginia. The grandfather, James Neale, was a noted planter in Virginia and the grandmother, whose maiden name was Martha March, was directly descended from the famous Scottish Earl of March. John M. Neale, the father of James W. Neale, was born in 1807. He was educated in the public schools of Kentucky and after his father's death attended medical school at Lexington, Kentucky, receiving his M. D. degree from that institution. Later he enlisted in the Fourth U. S. Corps of Dragoons. During the Indian war he served as second sergeant, his company being engaged chiefly with the Comanche Indians. Upon receiving his discharge he settled in Springfield, Illinois, and there met Abraham Lincoln with whom he became fast friends. Together they were commissioned to survey Logan county. James W. Neale was only a baby when the family lived in Springfield, where they remained two years but in after years he was often told by his elders of their next-door neighbors, the Lincoln family, and how the great man had many times dandled him on his knees. The Neales then removed to Athens, Illinois, and there Dr. Neale practiced medicine during the years 1839 and 1840. From there he went to Troy, Knox county, and after a year took up his residence and practiced in Abingdon, where he remained until 1848. From 1848 to 1856 he practiced in Moore county, coming at the end of this time to Victoria where he lived until his death in 1885, at the age of seventy-eight years, continuing in the exercise of his profession till the last. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and joined the Masonic lodge at Keithsburg, Illinois. His widow is still living, being now in her ninety-second year and the oldest woman residing in this part of the county. She makes her home with her son, James W. Neale, and not infrequently calls back memories of the early days in the history of Illinois when her father, Jesse Wilson, came from Virginia to this state and settled in Sangamon county.

James W. Neale obtained his schooling in Illinois and at the age of twenty was prepared to enter college, when the war broke out and, becoming enthusiastic, he enlisted from Victoria, Illinois, in Captain Clayton Hall's company at Knoxville. He was the first man on the roll after Giles Cook, who enlisted in Knox county when the first rally call was made for service and was introduced as the first volunteer when the people met to cheer the soldiers. His company was not assigned, however, and therefore he enlisted in Knoxville county, Company D, First Illinois Regulars, commanded by Captain J. B. Smith serving under General Fremont. They departed for Missouri and there on September 20, 1861, he was captured in the battle at Lexington. He was discharged on parole by special order July 14, 1862, and was recalled to drill the company regulars under Captain Carr of Peoria. Later he came to Victoria, Illinois, and reenlisted in the Ninth Illinois Cavalry, Company K, at Camp Butler and was detailed as sergeant major. He joined his regulars at Memphis at the close of the war when the reorganization of the government of Alabama was taking place, and soon after retired to his home in Victoria. Desirous of continuing his interrupted education, he now entered business college at Monmouth, Illinois, and upon completing the course engaged in the mercantile business at Victoria.

He remained in this until 1872 when his establishment was entirely destroyed by fire. For the following three years he engaged in the manufacture of brushes and at the end of this time took up carpentering, working at this occupation until the present time.



In 1869 the marriage of James W. Neale and Lydia J. Finch occurred. She was born October 30, 1848, in Stark county, Illinois, and was a daughter of Louis and Harriet (Wittier) Finch of Ohio. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. James W. Neale: Frank, living in North Dakota, who has one child, Kenneth M.; William Arthur, a city contractor and builder in Los Angeles, California; and Nina E., the wife of W. A. Stubbins, who lives in Los Angeles, California, and has one child, Richard C.

Mr. and Mrs. Neale are devoted members of the Congregational church, in which they take great interest as well as in its affiliated societies. Mr. Neale is an aggressive prohibitionist and is a strong adherent of his party. He maintains relations with his comrades of the great war through his membership in Victoria Post, No. 698, G. A. R. He is a man of sterling qualities, though unobtrusive in manner, letting his actions speak for him, instead of proclaiming his own virtues. He is a man of worth and character, gentle and kind, and has many warm friends.

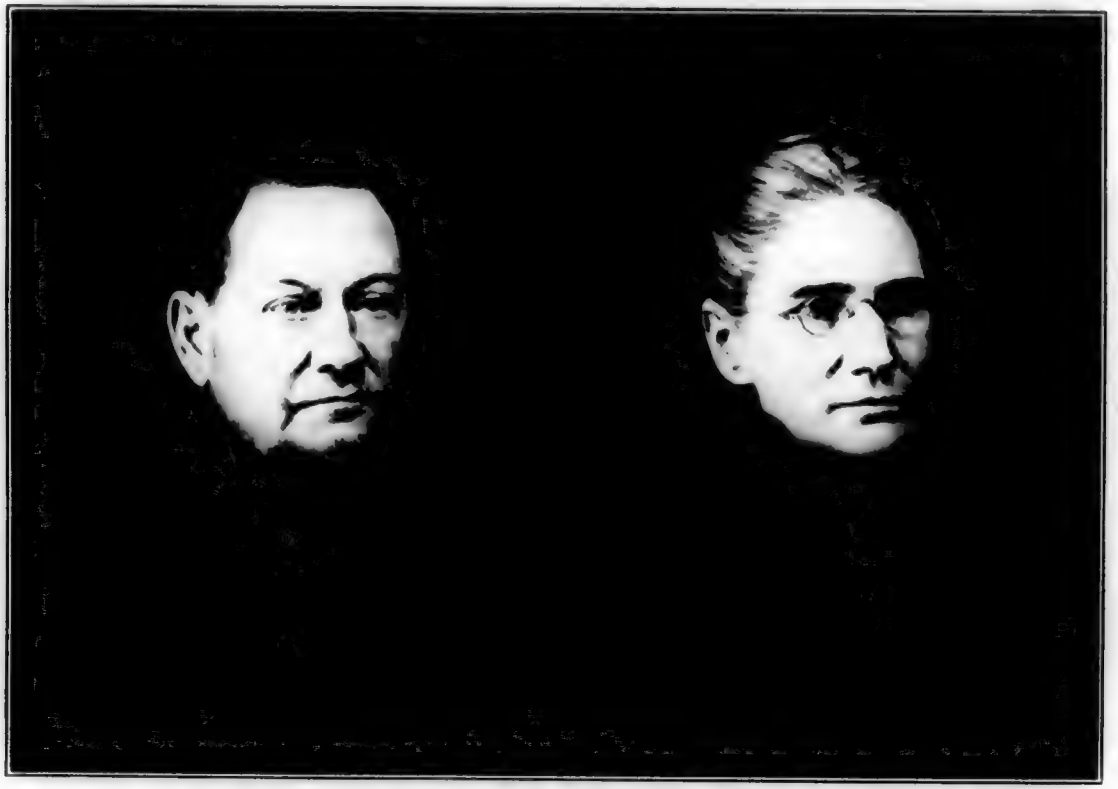
MR. AND MRS. DAWSON BURGESS ELLIOTT.

Among the respected citizens and representative agriculturists of Knox county must be numbered the late Burgess Elliott who, with the aid of his good wife, and by industry, frugality, and enterprise acquired a farm of two hundred and fifty acres in Victoria township together with a very comfortable home and valuable business property in Williamsfield.

The parents of Burgess Elliott were Thomas, a native of Ohio, born November 8, 1812, and Hannah (Reece) Elliott, a native of South Carolina, born March 14, 1818. They were married in Ohio, December 16, 1835, and the next year they came overland, by wagon, there being no railroads here at that time, and settled in Persifer township. They were especially attracted to this part of western Illinois which was then little known, by the glowing accounts of the beauties of the country and of the fertility of it's soil brought back to Ohio by an older brother of Thomas Elliott. A few years previous this brother had visited Illinois and returned to Ohio on horseback. He reported that when near the Illinois river he had frozen his legs nearly to his body and had been kept all winter and nursed back to health by the Indians of a village near where Peoria now stands. Thomas Elliott, like most of the pioneers, located in a timbered country near a stream for the conveniences of those two great necessities, wood and water. From Persifer township he removed to Victoria township in 1856, remaining there until he moved to Missouri in 1868. There he died May 30, 1882, and his wife followed him October 21, 1901. The paternal family consisted of fourteen children, six of whom are still living. They are George W. Elliott, Mrs. Elizabeth Robinson, and Mrs. Hannah Fields, all of whom now

MR. AND MRS. BURGESS ELLIOTT

He remained in this until 1872 when his establishment was entirely destroyed by fire. For the following three years he engaged in the manufacture of brushes and at the end of this time took up carpentering, working at this occupation until the present time.



In 1869 the marriage of James W. Neale and Lydia J. Finch occurred. She was born October 30, 1848, in Stark county, Illinois, and was a daughter of Louis and Harriet (Wittier) Finch of Ohio. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. James W. Neale: Frank, living in North Dakota, who has one child, Kenneth M.; William Arthur, a city contractor and builder in Los Angeles, California; and Nina E., the wife of W. A. Stubbins, who lives in Los Angeles, California, and has one child, Richard C.

Mr. and Mrs. Neale are devoted members of the Congregational church, in which they take great interest as well as in its affiliated societies. Mr. Neale is an aggressive prohibitionist and is a strong adherent of his party. He maintains relations with his comrades of the great war through his membership in Victoria Post, No. 698, G. A. R. He is a man of sterling qualities, though unobtrusive in manner, letting his actions speak for him, instead of proclaiming his own virtues. He is a man of worth and character, gentle and kind, and has many warm friends.

MR. AND MRS. DAWSON BURGESS ELLIOTT.

Among the respected citizens and representative agriculturists of Knox county must be numbered the late Burgess Elliott who, with the aid of his good wife, and by industry, frugality, and enterprise acquired a farm of two hundred and fifty acres in Victoria township together with a very comfortable home and valuable business property in Williamsfield.

The parents of Burgess Elliott were Thomas, a native of Ohio, born November 8, 1812, and Hannah (Reece) Elliott, a native of South Carolina, born March 14, 1818. They were married in Ohio, December 16, 1835, and the next year they came overland, by wagon, there being no railroads here at that time, and settled in Persifer township. They were especially attracted to this part of western Illinois which was then little known, by the glowing accounts of the beauties of the country and of the fertility of it's soil brought back to Ohio by an older brother of Thomas Elliott. A few years previous this brother had visited Illinois and returned to Ohio on horseback. He reported that when near the Illinois river he had frozen his legs nearly to his body and had been kept all winter and nursed back to health by the Indians of a village near where Peoria now stands. Thomas Elliott, like most of the pioneers, located in a timbered country near a stream for the conveniences of those two great necessities, wood and water. From Persifer township he removed to Victoria township in 1856, remaining there until he moved to Missouri in 1868. There he died May 30, 1882, and his wife followed him October 21, 1901. The paternal family consisted of fourteen children, six of whom are still living. They are George W. Elliott, Mrs. Elizabeth Robinson, and Mrs. Hannah Fields, all of whom now reside in Knox county; and Mrs. Samantha Labar, Mrs. Sarah Marley, and Thomas Elliott, who are now living in Missouri.

MR. AND MRS. BURGESS ELLIOTT

Burgess Elliott was the oldest of the children, being born in Persifer township August 7, 1837. In the days of his boyhood people existed with less of the necessities and very few of the luxuries of the present time. Educational advantages were very limited, there being no public schools. As more settlers came in, neighborhood schools were organized, each patron paying in proportion to the number of pupils sent. These schools were far between and lasted but a few months in a year. They were held in log buildings in which the old-fashioned fireplace served as heating system. The furniture consisted of puncheon benches on which the pupils sat. These benches were made by splitting out logs similar to slabs of the present day. To complete them the flat side was made as smooth as possible and on the opposite side four holes were bored to receive legs of a suitable length. Among these surroundings Burgess Elliott spent his youth and gained the rudiments of his early education. In those early days the cultivation of flax for weaving into cloth came next to the raising of grain for food. The old loom with which the mother of Burgess Elliott wove the material to clothe her large family was in use in Victoria township until 1905. There is still some of this cloth in the family after over fifty years of use.

There was great rejoicing in the early '50s when it was learned that the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad was to be built through Knox county. Thomas Elliott was among the early ones to profit by its coming, he having taken a contract to supply several thousand ties to be delivered between Galva and Altona. At this time Burgess was too young to cut and hew ties but he did his part in delivering them. There were few roads and no bridges then, so that teams hauling across the prairies encountered many difficulties. Whenever a miry creek or swampy place was reached the line of wagons stopped and each man took a tie from his load and carried it forward to improvise a bridge. When all had crossed they loaded up their ties and continued on their journey. Burgess Elliott remained at home and assisted his parents until he was twenty-seven years of age. During the winter he worked in the timber, from whence, by the aid of the ax and other simple implements, the pioneers derived their furniture, building material, and other household and farm necessities. He devoted the warmer months to agricultural labors, especially to breaking prairie. This he accomplished with oxen, sometimes driving four yoke of oxen to his breaking plow. He was married June 14, 1865, to Achsah Ann Rue, who was born in Indiana, March 29, 1846.

Mrs. Achsah Ann (Rue) Elliott was the daughter of Michael Rue, a native of Pennsylvania, and Mary (Fudger) Rue, a native of Ohio. The immediate family consisted of three girls, Lucy, Hannah and Achsah, who was the youngest. The mother died when Achsah was an infant and the father followed in 1855. Thus the children were early deprived of the care and comforts of a home. They were separated and changed from place to place, Achsah living in Indiana for a while and then in Ohio. At the age of sixteen she came to Knox county, Illinois, with a half-sister, Sarah Rhodes, who engaged in school teaching in Victoria township in the early '60s.

Mr. and Mrs. Burgess Elliott were the parents of four children; William Burgess, born May 20, 1866; Charles Wesley, born June 19, 1867; and Hannah and Mary, who died in infancy. William B. Elliott married Jannette Armstrong, November 14, 1888. To this union were born six children, Jennie Achsah, William Burgess, Edward Rue, Robert Montgomery, Charles Rolland (deceased), and John Kenneth. William B. Elliott and family now live on the old family homestead in Victoria township. Charles W. Elliott was married to Marie Johnson, September 5, 1894. They are the parents of three children, Virgil Donovan, Marie Achsah, and Maude Arsula. Charles W. Elliott and family live at 89 Arnold street, Galesburg, Illinois.

Burgess Elliott and wife felt keenly the lack of educational advantages that surrounded their early days and for that reason they desired to provide amply for the education of their children. Accordingly, W. B. Elliott entered Lombard College in 1887, remaining there until the winter of 1888. Later he entered the State Normal University at Normal, Illinois, from which school he was graduated in 1893. Charles W. Elliott entered Lombard College in 1888 and was graduated from that institution in June 1892. In 1893 he received the degree of M. S. from this school. Later he took up the study of law and enrolled with the American Correspondence School of Law, receiving his diploma in 1911.

Mr. and Mrs. Burgess Elliott remained on the farm until the fall of 1895 when they moved to Williamsfield to occupy a new home which they had purchased there. Here Burgess Eliott spent the remainder of his life, having died April 7, 1908. Mrs. Elliott now lives here, still retaining in a large measure that characteristic fortitude, perserverance, and congeniality which so materially aided her husband through all the years of their married life. The religious faith of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott was manifested through the Methodist Episcopal church, and in political matters Mr. Elliott was generally in support of the principle of the republican party, his first presidential vote having been cast for Abraham Lincoln. He always took an active interest in national and local political matters. He never aspired to political preferment, although he held several minor offices, the duties of which he discharged with that degree of efficiency which characterized all his undertakings in life. A man of clean judgment, high principles, and progressive spirit, he contributed his quota toward promoting the community welfare along the highest lines of citizenship.

JOHN THOMAS DICKINSON.

John Thomas Dickinson, one of Abingdon's prominent citizens and foremost business men, is the general manager of the Dickinson Drug Company, which conducts two stores in Abingdon and one at Knoxville. His birth occurred in Onarga, Illinois, on the 1st of September, 1876, his parents being John Thomas and Elvira (Cleveland) Dickinson, the former a native of Binghamton, New York, and the latter of Griggsville, Illinois. Their marriage was celebrated in Abingdon, where John T. Dickinson, Sr., was president of the college for a number of years.

John Thomas Dickinson, Jr., was reared under the parental roof and pursued his education in the public schools until he was graduated from the high school at Mount Pleasant, Iowa. Subsequently he attended the Iowa Wesleyan College at Mount Pleasant, from which institution he was graduated with the class of 1897, winning the degree of Bachelor of Science. He then returned to Abingdon and began the study of pharmacy in the drug store of F. P. Foltz, there remaining for three years. In 1900 he went to Des Moines, Iowa, there securing a position as clerk in the house of representatives. While employed in that capacity he completed his pharmaceutical studies, passed the required examination and in 1900 was given his certificate as a graduate pharmacist in Iowa. In the spring of 1901 he again returned to Abingdon and passed another examination, receiving his Illinois certificate as a registered pharmacist in June of that year. For a year following he clerked for Drs. Creel and Dickinson in the drug store at this place. In 1902, in association with Dr. Dickinson, he purchased Dr. Creel's interest in the business and organized the Dickinson Drug Company, under which style the enterprise has since been conducted. In March, 1909, they established a branch at Knoxville, this county, and in December, 1910, purchased the opposition drug store in Abingdon. In December, 1909, in partnership with M. R. Hunter, Mr. Dickinson opened a drug store in Avon, Fulton county, which is conducted under the name of the Hunter Drug Company. He is a man of keen discrimination and sound judgment and his executive ability and excellent management have brought to the concerns with which he is connected a large degree of success.

In October, 1907, Mr. Dickinson was united in marriage to Miss Rose McClure, a teacher in the public schools of Abingdon, by whom he has one child, Leanna Grace. He gives his political allegiance to the republican party and belongs to the following organizations: Abingdon Lodge, No. 185, A. F. & A. M.; Abingdon Lodge, No. 373, K. P.; and Abingdon Lodge, No. 194, I. O. O. F. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, to which his wife also belongs. They are people of the highest respectability, enjoying in large measure the friendship of those with whom they have been brought in contact, and well directed activity has gained Mr. Dickinson a creditable place in business circles.

WILLIAM D. GODFREY.

William D. Godfrey, a member of the Galesburg bar, who since 1893, has practiced continuously in this city and is now accorded a large and distinctively representative clientage, was born near Roseville, Warren county, Illinois, August 11, 1867. The family was founded in this state at any early period in its development, his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Godfrey, having been farming people of Warren county, where they spent their last days. Their family numbered two sons and four daughters, including David C. Godfrey, the father of William D. Godfrey. He was born in Indiana and on starting out in life took up the occupation of farming, to which he had been reared. Later he turned his attention to merchandising. He married Miss Nancy M. Kretzinger, a native of Ohio, who in her girlhood days went to Warren county, with her parents, Rev. Isaac Kretzinger and wife, who lived there for some time and afterward in Knoxville, while subsequently they became residents of Latham, Logan county, where they died when well advanced in years. Their family numbered three sons and two daughters, George W., Joseph, William, Nancy M. and Sarah.

Unto David C. and Nancy M. Godfrey there were born five children; William D.; Nellie, who married L. E. Payne and resides in Galesburg; August J., of Kansas City, Kansas; David C., Jr., of New Orleans, Louisiana; and Nae D., of Kansas City, Kansas. It was some years after their marriage that the parents removed to Missouri settling near Kirksville, and the father now makes his home in Kansas City, Kansas, where he is living retired. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist church and are ever loyal to their professions. Mr. Godfrey is a veteran of the Civil war, having for three years served as a member of the Eighty-third Illinois Infantry. On one occasion he was wounded in battle. After the war he returned to his father's farm and subsequently took up his abode on a farm near Kirksville, Missouri.

William D. Godfrey spent his youth in Missouri and attended the public schools of Kirksville, and Green City, being graduated from the high school in the latter place and also from the Green City College. Later he attended the Kirksville State Normal School, and seven terms he engaged in teaching, proving a capable educator because of his ability to impart clearly, readily and concisely to others the knowledge that he had acquired. He then took up the study of law in the Northern Indian Law School at Valparaiso and was graduated in 1893. He was then admitted to the bar and began practicing in Galesburg in 1893, since which time he has here followed his profession. He prepares his cases with great thoroughness and care, and his careful analysis enables him to present in logical form the salient points bearing upon his cause. He is also seldom, if ever, at fault in the citation of principle or precedent and his ability is manifest in the many favorable verdicts which he has won.

On the 6th of September, 1904, Mr. Godfrey was married to Miss M. Ada Bubb, a daughter of General J. W. Bubb. They have three children, Helen, Mary Ada and William D. The parents are members of the Christian church and Mr. Godfrey also belongs to the Vesper Lodge, F. & A. M.; Galesburg Chapter, R. A. M.; Galesburg Commandery, No. 8, K. T.; the Galesburg Club and the Soangetaha Country Club. In his life professional activity and social and recreative interests have maintained an even balance that has made him a valued citizen, and his public spirit has all times prompted his support of the projects and plans for the public good.

EDWARD P. ROBSON.

Edward P. Robson, who is intimately connected with the agricultural and financial interests of Knox county, was born on January 5, 1875. He is the grandson of John Robson, who was born near Newcastle, in Northumberland county, England, and who was married to Mary Brown, and he is a son of William Robson, whose birth occurred in Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, on the 5th of September, 1831, and who came to America with his parents when a young man. They located first at Beaver Point, Pennsylvania, and in the spring of 1850 removed to Knox county, near Rio. After his marriage he purchased they died when well advanced in years. Their family numbered three sons and two daughters, George W., Joseph, William, Nancy M. and Sarah.

Paul Robeson

Unto David C. and Nancy M. Godfrey there were born five children; William D.; Nellie, who married L. E. Payne and resides in Galesburg; August J., of Kansas City, Kansas; David C., Jr., of New Orleans, Louisiana; and Nae D., of Kansas City, Kansas. It was some years after their marriage that the parents removed to Missouri settling near Kirksville, and the father now makes his home in Kansas City, Kansas, where he is living retired. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist church and are ever loyal to their professions. Mr. Godfrey is a veteran of the Civil war, having for three years served as a member of the Eighty-third Illinois Infantry. On one occasion he was wounded in battle. After the war he returned to his father's farm and subsequently took up his abode on a farm near Kirksville, Missouri.

William D. Godfrey spent his youth in Missouri and attended the public schools of Kirksville, and Green City, being graduated from the high school in the latter place and also from the Green City College. Later he attended the Kirksville State Normal School, and seven terms he engaged in teaching, proving a capable educator because of his ability to impart clearly, readily and concisely to others the knowledge that he had acquired. He then took up the study of law in the Northern Indian Law School at Valparaiso and was graduated in 1893. He was then admitted to the bar and began practicing in Galesburg in 1893, since which time he has here followed his profession. He prepares his cases with great thoroughness and care, and his careful analysis enables him to present in logical form the salient points bearing upon his cause. He is also seldom, if ever, at fault in the citation of principle or precedent and his ability is manifest in the many favorable verdicts which he has won.

On the 6th of September, 1904, Mr. Godfrey was married to Miss M. Ada Bubb, a daughter of General J. W. Bubb. They have three children, Helen, Mary Ada and William D. The parents are members of the Christian church and Mr. Godfrey also belongs to the Vesper Lodge, F. & A. M.; Galesburg Chapter, R. A. M.; Galesburg Commandery, No. 8, K. T.; the Galesburg Club and the Soangetaha Country Club. In his life professional activity and social and recreative interests have maintained an even balance that has made him a valued citizen, and his public spirit has all times prompted his support of the projects and plans for the public good.

EDWARD P. ROBSON.

Edward P. Robson, who is intimately connected with the agricultural and financial interests of Knox county, was born on January 5, 1875. He is the grandson of John Robson, who was born near Newcastle, in Northumberland county, England, and who was married to Mary Brown, and he is a son of William Robson, whose birth occurred in Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, on the 5th of September, 1831, and who came to America with his parents when a young man. They located first at Beaver Point, Pennsylvania, and in the spring of 1850 removed to Knox county, near Rio. After his marriage he purchased his present homestead near Wataga and afterward engaged in stock-raising and general farming. William Robson was twice married. His first union was to Miss Jane Goff, who was a daughter of Louis Goff, one of the early settlers of Rio township. To this union three children were born, one of whom survives, Cora Alice. Mrs. Robson passed away in 1867. Mr. Robson's second union occurred in 1871 to Mary E. Gordon, who was born in Victoria, Knox county, November 7, 1847, and was a daughter of Peter Gordon, a native of Scotland, who came to America when a young man and settled at Peoria, where he was employed for three years at six dollars per month. Later, in 1841, he removed to Victoria and was engaged in agricultural pursuits throughout his life. He was married to Miss Mary A. McDowell, who was a daughter of John McDowell, who came to America in 1838, going directly to Knox county. Mrs. Gordon, who had been previously married to William Tate, died in 1900, at the age of eighty-six years. Mrs. Robson is at present sixty-nine years of age and is residing at the home of her son, E. P. Robson, who was the second of three children born to his parents, the others being: Gordon, deceased; and Henry Stewart, whose birth occurred May 18, 1892, and who is residing with his brother. Mrs. Robson is a graduate of the North Western Normal School of Ohio and is a member of the Congregational church of Wataga and of its Ladies' Aid and Missionary Society. Mr. Robson, whose death occurred January 10, 1901, was one of the organizers of the Galesburg National Bank and at the time of his death was serving in the capacity of vice president. In politics he gave his support to the republican party and was one of its active members, among the offices to which he had been elected being that of school director for several years, of highway commissioner for two terms and member of the county board of supervisors for twenty-one years.

Edward P. Robson attended the common schools in his youth and at the age of thirteen years entered Knox College for a three years' course, after which he graduated from Brown's Business College in 1895. Having thus completed his education, he returned home and undertook the management of his father's farm because of the latter's ill health. In addition to general farming he also engaged in stock-raising and in both lines met with immediate success. But he has also interested himself in other undertakings, among these being the Western Tool Works of Galesburg, in which he became interested in 1905 and which is now principally owned by him and known as the Robson Manufacturing Company of Galesburg. Three years previous he and his brother opened the Bank of Wataga, at Wataga, and he has since served in the capacity of president. His success in this financial undertaking was so great that, in 1905, he opened the Victoria Exchange Bank of Victoria and has always acted as its president and since his father's death has filled the vacancy caused thereby in the directorate of the Galesburg National Bank. Mr. Robson has always had the support and confidence of the residents of his community and under his able management these banks have become solid financial institutions. Their policies have ever been such as to commend them to the public and Mr. Robson has always surrounded himself with such men as officers that are well-known for their reliability and trustworthiness.

In 1899 Mr. Robson was married to Miss Helen McCall Sisson. She was born November 27, 1871, near Galesburg, in Henderson township, and is a daughter of Henry M. and Elizabeth (Miller) Sisson, the former deceased and the latter, who is seventy-three years of age, a resident of Galesburg. They have become the parents of two children: William Henry, born February 10, 1902; and Mary Elizabeth, whose birth occurred on the 29th of July, 1907.

In politics Mr. Robson gives active support to the republican party. He has served as a member of the board of supervisors for nine years, since 1903 has been a member of the township school board and has been a delegate to state conventions. In religious faith he is a Congregationalist and Mrs. Robson also holds membership in the Congregational church of Wataga. They are both active in its various departments, Mrs. Robson being at present president of the Ladies' Aid Society and her husband is acting as church treasurer. In fraternal circles Mr. Robson is equally prominent, holding membership in Wataga Lodge, No. 291, A. F. & A. M.; Oneida Chapter, R. A. M.; Galesburg Commandery, K. T.; and Mohammed Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He also belongs to the Galesburg Lodge of Elks and the Galesburg Business Men's Club. Mr. Robson is constantly working for the industrial, commercial, financial and social development of his district and high regard is tendered him by reason of business enterprise and integrity and his sterling personal worth.

CHARLES B. PENN.

For twenty years Charles B. Penn has been engaged in bricklaying and plastering in Galesburg, and during much of this time has carried on business on his own account as a contractor, his success being due to the fact that he is energetic, industrious and reliable. He was born in Kirton-Lindsay, Lincolnshire, England, August 11, 1853. His father, Thomas Penn, a native of England, came to America in 1857 and one year later brought his wife and family to the new world. He was a shoemaker by trade, and upon his arrival here immediately secured employment in the town of Knoxville, where he has since made his home. He began learning his trade when but seven years of age and followed it continuously until about ten years ago when he retired. He is now nearly eighty-six years of age and enjoys very good health for one of his years. Indolence and idleness are utterly foreign to his nature, and while he no longer engages in shoemaking, he does give considerable attention to the cultivation of strawberries, and has as fine a garden of that fruit as anyone in the town. He is known by all the citizens of Knoxville, and is held in the highest respect. Throughout the county, too, he has a wide acquaintance, and his well spent life has gained him warm regard. He married Susan Oglesby, an English lady, who was also a native of Lincolnshire. After her husband came to America she remained in England with the family until 1858, when Mr. Penn felt convinced it would be advantageous to establish his home in the United States and made plans for his family to come here. Like her husband, Mrs. Penn was well known in Knoxville where she passed away in 1910. In their family were three children, a daughter and two sons, namely: Eliza, who became the wife of Isaac Gumm of Knoxville, and is now a widow living in that place; Charles B., of this review; and Henry, who was a resident of Knoxville but is now deceased.

Charles B. Penn was about six years of age when brought to the United States by his mother, so practically his entire life has been spent in Knox county. He attended the public schools, and as soon as old enough to work secured a position as a farm hand in the vicinity of his father's home. For a quarter of a century he followed the occupation of farming and during part of that time was engaged in the business on his own account. At the expiration of that period he turned his attention to bricklaying and plastering, which trades he has now followed through two decades, being still active in this work. He is a member of Bricklayers' Union No. 12.

Mr. Penn was married at Knoxville, Illinois, June 30, 1876, to Miss Ella Ingle, a daughter of Asa and Elizabeth (Bershire) Ingle, of Knoxville. They are the parents of three children: Elvira, now the wife of Bert Bunker, a well known shoe merchant of Galesburg; Hazel, who is married to Lloyd McCulluck, an employe of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, residing in Galesburg; and Edythe, who is at home.

In all the years of his residence in Knox county, Mr. Penn has enjoyed the respect and good-will of his fellowmen. Whatever success he has achieved is due to his own labors, and his life has been a busy and useful one. He has not sought to figure prominently in any public connection, being content to faithfully perform his duties day by day in his relations of citizenship to his country and in his relations as a man among his fellowmen.

Mr. Penn is the proud possessor of a very unique table. It is entirely his own work and was done during leisure hours, mostly by lamp-light. The table contains two hundred and ninety pieces of wood, all visible and many of them having a historic record. It contains pieces of handsome black walnut from one of the pioneer residences of Galesburg, white oak from remains of the first jail in Knox county, built in 1832, and from the first courthouse, built in 1831. In the center of the beautiful inlaid top appears a star made from wood cut from the oak tree under which Pemberton surrendered to General Grant, July 4, 1863, with thirty-three thousand men.

C. H. UPP.

C. H. Upp, who engages in general farming and stockraising in Haw Creek township, of which he has been the supervisor since April, 1910, was born in the township where he now resides on the 15th of December, 1866. His father, W. C. Upp, was born and reared in Highland county, Ohio, the son of Milton and Karlitha Upp. The grandfather passed away in the Buckeye state, after which his widow with five sons and two daughters removed to Knox county, Illinois, where she resided for a number of years. For his wife W. C. Upp chose Miss Emily Sherman, a native of Haw Creek township and a daughter of Isaac and Eliza Sherman. After their marriage they located on a farm in Haw Creek township, but subsequently removed to Persifer township. There Mr. Upp passed away at the age of seventy-one years and was laid to rest in the cemetery at Gilson. He was an active member of the United Brethren church to which his widow also belongs. Although she has attained the age of sixty-seven Mrs. Upp continues to reside upon her homestead of two hundred and fifty acres, the cultivation of which she superintends. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Upp numbered eight children: C. H., our subject; A. E., who is living in Boone Grove, Indiana; Isaac and Eliza, both of whom are deceased; Eva, the wife of Hubard Keller, who resides east of Knoxville; George, who is also living east of Knoxville; Ella, the wife of Joseph Mastin, now living east of Knoxville; and Garrold, who is living on the home farm in Persifer township.

Practically the entire life of C. H. Upp has been devoted to agricultural pursuits in Haw Creek township. His boyhood and youth were very like those of other lads of the same period and like circumstances. In the acquirement of his education he attended the district schools in the winter until he had mastered the common branches, his summers being devoted to the mastery of the practical methods of agriculture, under the supervision of his father. When he had attained the age of twenty-two he left the parental roof and started to make his own way in the world. He now owns eighty acres of land on section 2, Haw Creek township, all of which is in pasture, while he leases two hundred and fifty acres on the northeast corner of section 16 that he devotes to general farming. He makes a specialty of the breeding and raising of Percheron horses, in which he has engaged for the past ten years.

In 1889 Mr. Upp was married to Miss Ada Houser, who was born in Haw Creek township, a daughter of Jonathan and Mary Houser. Of this union there was born one child, Isal, who is still at home. Mr. Upp is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and politically he is a republican. He has always been one of the public-spirited citizens of his community, taking an active interest in all political matters. He was assessor of the township for eight years, while he was township supervisor and clerk and member of the township high school board for a similar period. He is now acting as supervisor, having succeeded F. M. Lawrence in April, 1910, and during the year and a half he has been identified with this office has discharged his duties in a manner to meet with the approval of his constituency as well as the community at large.

FRED T. DU VON.

Fred T. Du Von, senior partner of the firm of Du Von & Brown, wholesale bakers, was born in Warren county, Illinois, five miles west of Galesburg, on the 1st of June, 1877. He is a son of the late Nels T. and Johanna (Linberg) Du Von, natives of Christianstad, Sweden, the father's birth having occurred on January 27, 1827, and that of the mother on the 19th of February, 1842. Nels T. Du Von followed farming in his native land until 1870, when he emigrated to the United States, locating in Warren county. There he continued to engage in agricultural pursuits until 1884, when he removed to Knox county. In 1895 he withdrew from the active work of the fields and came to Galesburg, where he lived retired until his death, on the 14th of August, 1899. The mother passed away on the 10th of March, 1892. Their marriage occurred in Galesburg in the month of August, 1875, and unto them were born four children: Fred T., our subject; Jay H., who is also a resident of this city; Alice, who is a resident of Peoria, Illinois; and Hannah, who is deceased. Both Mr. and Mrs. Du Von were members of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church, and his political support he gave to the republican party.

Fred T. DuVon

The public schools of Galesburg provided Fred T. Du Von with an education, after which he spent two years assisting his father on the farm. At the expiration of that time he began to make his own way in the world. His first position was that of a teamster in Galesburg, but he subsequently entered the employ of N. J. Gottschall, a baker. He remained in his service for two years, during which time he learned the trade. He next found employment in the establishment of Gust Hawkinson and worked there for a year, when he went to Chicago. After a year's sojourn in the latter city, he returned to Galesburg and worked for two and a half years at his trade as a baker. His next removal was to New Mexico, and after being employed there for a year he once more became a resident of Galesburg. Upon his return he bought the business of T. R. Wilson on Main street, which he operated alone for eight months. On the 20th of September, 1906, Mr. Brown bought a half interest in the enterprise which they have ever since conducted under the firm name of Du Von & Brown, meeting with excellent success. The business was originally established in 1857 and is one of the oldest concerns of the kind in the city. They do an exclusive wholesale business in bread, pies, cakes and cookies, and enjoy an extensive trade, their products being shipped to practically every town of any size within a radius of fifty miles. During the five years of their ownership Messrs. Du Von and Brown have practically revolutionized the business, having erected a fine new brick building at Nos. 541 to 557 East Main street, that they have occupied since 1910. It is fully equipped with all modern conveniences and appliances essential to the operation of a thoroughly modern and sanitary bakery. They give employment to fifteen people, four of whom are salesmen, and their business is constantly increasing, each year showing a marked advance over the one previous.

Mr. Du Von manifests his religious views through his membership in the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church, in the work of which he takes a deep interest, and is now serving as secretary of the official board. He is a worthy exemplar of the Masonic fraternity, holding membership in Vesper Lodge, No. 584, A. F. & A. M.; Galesburg Chapter, No. 46, R. A. M.; Galesburg Commandery, No. 8, K. T.; Illinois Council, No. 1, R. & S. M.; Mohammed Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., and also has attained the thirty-second degree in Peoria Consistory. He has served at various times as worshipful master of the lodge, high priest of the chapter and eminent commander of the commandery. He also belongs to the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the Galesburg and Country Clubs, while he maintains relations with the business men of the city through his connection with the Retail Merchants' Association. His political allegiance Mr. Du Von gives to the democratic party and he is now serving on the board of supervisors. He is not only a most capable and progressive business man, but a public-spirited, enterprising citizen who fully appreciates his obligations to the municipality and conscientiously strives to discharge them by assisting in every possible way the city's development. His prominence in trade circles is indicated by the fact that he has been honored with the presidency of the Illinois Master Bakers' Association, which position he filled in the year 1911. He has been very active along this line, doing much to advance the interests of the trade and to stimulate a desire for a higher standard of service to the public. His own business ability is manifest in the success which has crowned his labors in the years which have chronicled his advancement from a humble position to one of prominence. The business in which he is now interested as senior partner is today an extensive enterprise, owing its success in large measure to the capable management, laudable ambition and enterprising spirit of Fred T. Du Von.

GEORGE ABNER PERRY.

George Abner Perry, who is business manager of the Galesburg Printing & Publishing Company, publishers of the Republican-Register, was born in Payson, Illinois, July 20, 1868, his parents being William Dodd and Clarissa Fitch (Whitman) Perry. The father was at one time owner and publisher of the Adams County News and was also connected with agricultural pursuits. The maternal grandfather, Charles Whitman, was born in West Hartford, Connecticut, July 28, 1802, and on the 13th of November, 1833 at Windham, Connecticut he was married to Miss Henrietta Perkins. Almost immediately afterward they came to Illinois locating in Payson, where they resided throughout the remainder of their lives. He was engaged in farming. Mrs. Whitman was born September 4, 1814. To their union two children were born: Clarissa Fitch, whose birth occurred in Payson, Illinois, December 8, 1835; and Edward Perkins, who was born August 13, 1837, and died in November of the same year. Mr. Whitman was married in Salisbury Connecticut, in 1842 to Miss Jane Holmes and by this union he had two children, a daughter who died in infancy and a son, Charles Holmes, whose birth occurred December 4, 1844. Mrs. Whitman's death occurred in Payson, June 19, 1874. Charles Whitman died May 14, 1877, at Payson. William Dodd Perry was born September 30, 1835, a son of Abner and Adaline (Dodd) Perry, the former a native of Holden, Massachusetts, and the latter of Rutland, Massachusetts. Mr. Perry's marriage to Miss Clarissa Fitch Whitman occurred June 14, 1855. To their union three sons were born: Arthur Henry, born December 30, 1857; Edward Perkins, whose birth occurred April 13, 1861; and George Abner, who is the subject of this review.

In the common and high schools of Payson, George A. Perry pursued his early education, which prepared him to enter Knox College in 1887. He completed the full course offered in the scientific department and was graduated in 1891. Throughout his college career he found it necessary to aid in his support and he engaged in newspaper work and advertising soliciting. Early in life he realized that in newspaper work he would find his most congenial occupation. After graduating from Knox College he accepted a position in the business department of the Daily Mail at Galesburg, which was being started at that time under the management of George W. Colville, W. R. Colville and W. B. Barnes. For four years he worked on this paper. In 1895 Ben B. Hampton and D. H. Hampton purchased the stock in the Daily Mail which had been owned by the Colville brothers and Mr. Barnes, and for a few months Mr. Perry remained in the employ of the Messrs. Hampton. At the end of that time, at the request of the Colville brothers and Mr. Barnes, Mr. Perry purchased an interest in their job printing and binding business. After several months Mr. Barnes disposed of his holdings to the partners and the firm became known as Colville Brothers & Perry. Mr. Perry remained interested in the concern until December, 1902, when, at the unanimous request of the directors of the Galesburg Printing & Publishing Company, publishers of the Republican-Register, he became business manager of their corporation. He also purchased some stock and has since occupied that position. Mr. Perry's prominence in the community has largely been due to his connections with newspaper work. In molding public opinion the power of the newspaper cannot be estimated, but at all events its influence is greater than that of any other single agency. The rule is that good papers are found in good towns; inferior journals in towns of stunted growth and uncertain future, it being not so much a matter of size as the excellence and adaptability to the needs of its locality. These conditions given, in an appreciative and progressive community, the size of the paper will take care of itself in a way mutually satisfactory to publishers and patrons. Galesburg is one of the most progressive and active cities of Illinois and the press which records the items of its advancement is always a leader in the work of progress and improvement. As one of its foremost newspaper men Galesburg finds in Mr. Perry a man worthy of occupying this influential position.

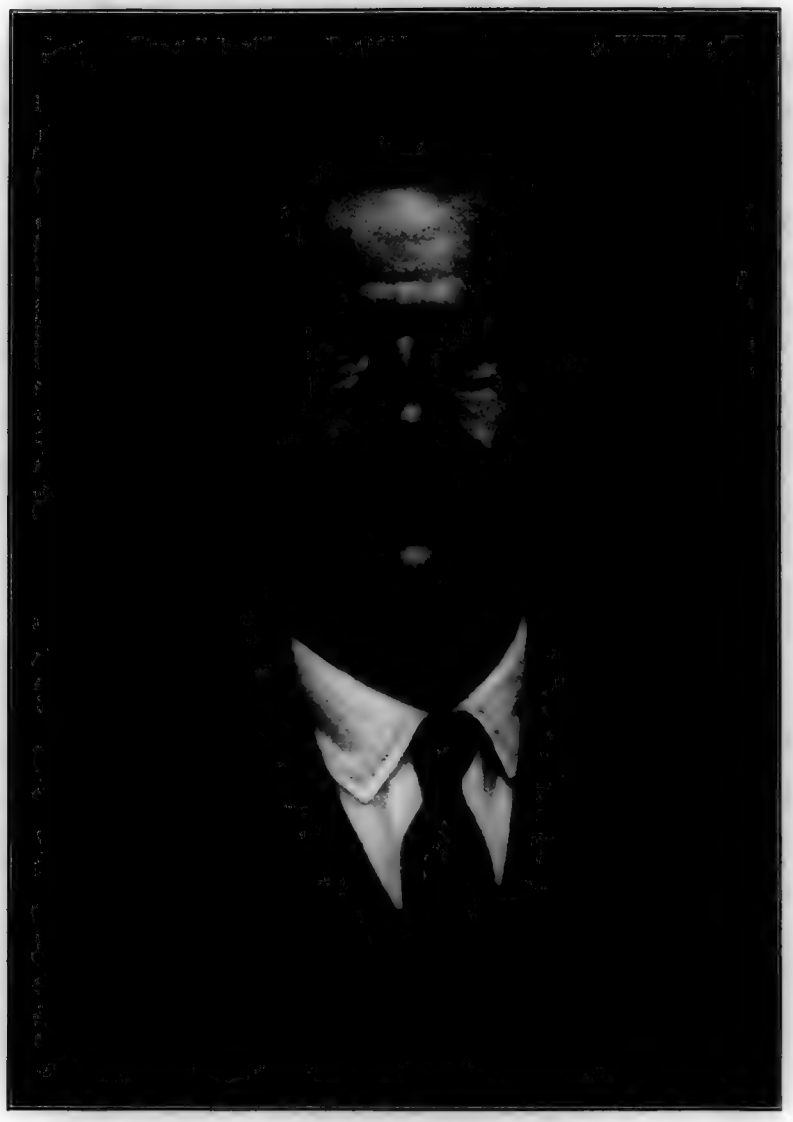
In Chicago, on the 11th of September, 1895, Mr. Perry was married to Miss Marie Louise Gregg, a daughter of Raymond and Mary Elizabeth (Mason) Gregg. Her grandparents were Aaron Phillip and Annis (Ward) Mason, of Godfrey, Illinois. Mrs. Perry was educated at Monticello Seminary, from which she graduated as a member of the class of 1891. To their union one son, George Mason, was born, his birth occurring June 30, 1898. In politics Mr. Perry gives his support to the republican party. He is a member of the Galesburg Club, Soangetaha Club of Galesburg, the Press Club of Chicago, the Knights of Pythias, the Young Men's Christian Association and the Central Congregational church.

JAMES WILLOUGHBY JONES.

James Willoughby Jones, who is engaged in farming and stock-raising in Lynn township, was born October 27, 1867, in the old log house upon the family homestead, his parents being Walter N. and Addie E. (James) Jones. The father was born in Wayne county, Ohio, and came with his wife and two children to Illinois, locating in Galva and there engaging in the restaurant business. A fire, however, destroyed his establishment and he removed to a farm in Lynn township. He lived on this property until he retired fourteen years ago and again made Galva his home, later removing to St. Joseph, Missouri. Here he died on September 9, 1908, in his sixty-fifth year, while his wife, who is surviving him, is now seventy years old. There were seven children in the family of Walter N. Jones, beside our subject three sons and three daughters, namely: Edith Hathaway, who is deceased; Charley, of Galva, Illinois; George W. and William, both of St. Joseph, Missouri; and Lottie Jones Mason and Tensie Jones Mason, also of St. Joseph, Missouri.

J. W. Jones spent his early life attending the common schools and later received tuition in the old schoolhouse in the winter, and devoted his summers to farm work. After his marriage he removed to his present farm, which he purchased at that time and where he has since been engaged in general farming and stock-raising. But he has not confined his attention wholly to agricultural pursuits. Business ability and progressiveness have led him into mercantile pursuits and he has become a stockholder in the Galva elevator of the Farmers Grange Company and he is also a stockholder in the La Fayette Fair Association and in the Farmers Bank of Galva.



On February 11, 1896, Mr. Jones was married to Miss Susie Mabel Shreck, who was born February 1, 1874, and who is a daughter of Jesse and Mary (Fickling) Shreck. The father was an agriculturist of Henry county until his recent retirement and the mother's death occurred January 19, 1911. Mrs. Jones attended the Geneseo schools, after which she taught school until her marriage. Jesse Shreck was born November 9, 1840, in Vinton county, Ohio, where he farmed until he came to Illinois at the age of fourteen years with his parents, Paul and Bethema (Moss) Shreck, and located in Henry county, where they again took up agricultural pursuits. Mrs. Mary (Fickling) Shreck was born on the 28th of November, 1850, in Peoria county, and was a daughter of Jacob and Susan (Draper) Fickling. Mr. Fickling's birth occurred on the 6th of February, 1812, and he died at the age of ninety years, while Mrs. Fickling was born near Cincinnati on the 18th of December, 1824, her death occurring on the 19th of January, 1906. Of the ten children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Shreck four are living, of whom Mrs. Jones is the eldest, the others being: Clara Gertrude, who was born in 1875 and is the wife of Arthur Baltimore, an agriculturist of La Fayette, by whom she has two children; Frank Jesse, who is married to Jennie Sellon, by whom he has three children; and Harry, who was born January 27, 1891, and is residing at home. To Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jones were born three children: Harry, on May 3, 1897; and Arthur and Hazel, both of whom died in infancy.

In politics Mr. Jones gives his support to the republican party and he has been a member of the school board for the past seven years. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist church of Galva. Lynn township owes much of its development and of its progressive business spirit to the activities of Mr. Jones.

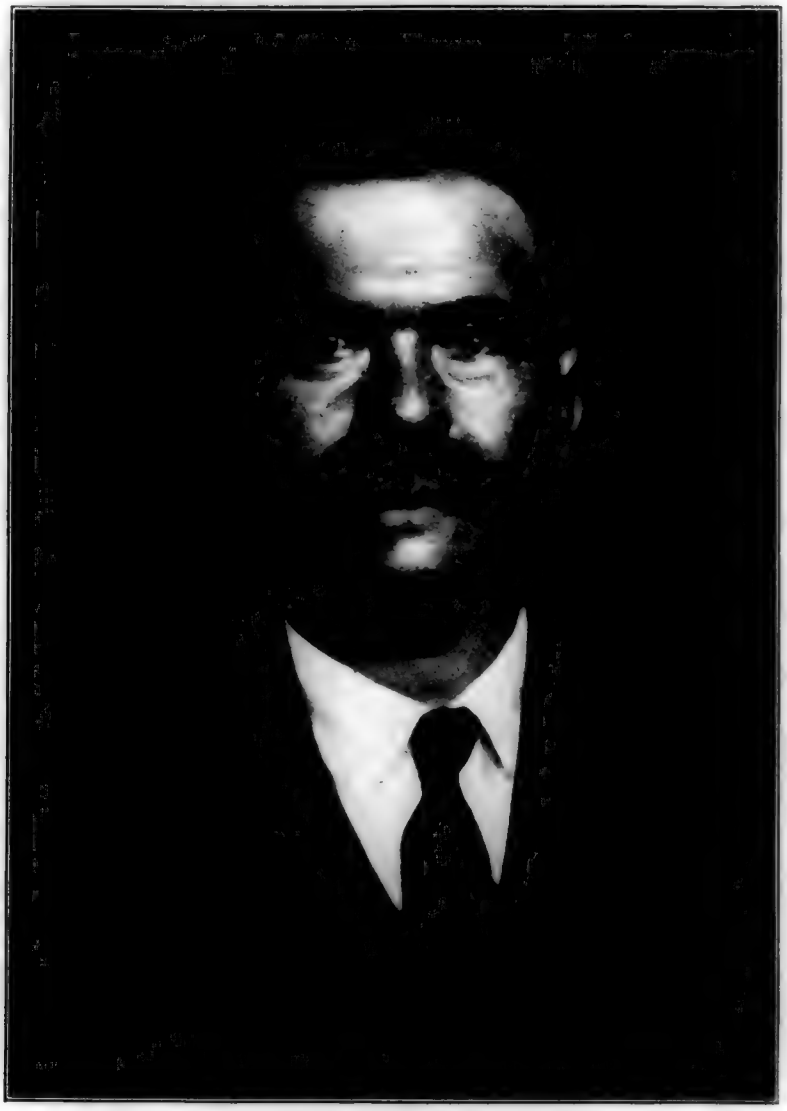
MARTIN THISTED.

Among the many thrifty sons of Denmark who have been factors in the agricultural development of Knox county, must be numbered Martin Thisted, of Chestnut township. He was born in Jerslev, on the 20th of May, 1854, and is a son of Geert Sorenson and Inga Christina (Peterdater) Thisted. The parents who were farming people spent their entire lives in Denmark. Unto them were born six children, as follows: Soren Peter, who is living in Denmark; Martin, our subject; Anna T., the wife of Jasper Jones, of Orange township; Martina and Caroline, both of whom are living in Denmark; and one, who died in infancy.

Reared in the land of his birth, Martin Thisted attended the common schools

MARTIN THISTED

J. W. Jones spent his early life attending the common schools and later received tuition in the old schoolhouse in the winter, and devoted his summers to farm work. After his marriage he removed to his present farm, which he purchased at that time and where he has since been engaged in general farming and stock-raising. But he has not confined his attention wholly to agricultural pursuits. Business ability and progressiveness have led him into mercantile pursuits and he has become a stockholder in the Galva elevator of the Farmers Grange Company and he is also a stockholder in the La Fayette Fair Association and in the Farmers Bank of Galva.



On February 11, 1896, Mr. Jones was married to Miss Susie Mabel Shreck, who was born February 1, 1874, and who is a daughter of Jesse and Mary (Fickling) Shreck. The father was an agriculturist of Henry county until his recent retirement and the mother's death occurred January 19, 1911. Mrs. Jones attended the Geneseo schools, after which she taught school until her marriage. Jesse Shreck was born November 9, 1840, in Vinton county, Ohio, where he farmed until he came to Illinois at the age of fourteen years with his parents, Paul and Bethema (Moss) Shreck, and located in Henry county, where they again took up agricultural pursuits. Mrs. Mary (Fickling) Shreck was born on the 28th of November, 1850, in Peoria county, and was a daughter of Jacob and Susan (Draper) Fickling. Mr. Fickling's birth occurred on the 6th of February, 1812, and he died at the age of ninety years, while Mrs. Fickling was born near Cincinnati on the 18th of December, 1824, her death occurring on the 19th of January, 1906. Of the ten children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Shreck four are living, of whom Mrs. Jones is the eldest, the others being: Clara Gertrude, who was born in 1875 and is the wife of Arthur Baltimore, an agriculturist of La Fayette, by whom she has two children; Frank Jesse, who is married to Jennie Sellon, by whom he has three children; and Harry, who was born January 27, 1891, and is residing at home. To Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jones were born three children: Harry, on May 3, 1897; and Arthur and Hazel, both of whom died in infancy.

In politics Mr. Jones gives his support to the republican party and he has been a member of the school board for the past seven years. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist church of Galva. Lynn township owes much of its development and of its progressive business spirit to the activities of Mr. Jones.

MARTIN THISTED.

Among the many thrifty sons of Denmark who have been factors in the agricultural development of Knox county, must be numbered Martin Thisted, of Chestnut township. He was born in Jerslev, on the 20th of May, 1854, and is a son of Geert Sorenson and Inga Christina (Peterdater) Thisted. The parents who were farming people spent their entire lives in Denmark. Unto them were born six children, as follows: Soren Peter, who is living in Denmark; Martin, our subject; Anna T., the wife of Jasper Jones, of Orange township; Martina and Caroline, both of whom are living in Denmark; and one, who died in infancy.

Reared in the land of his birth, Martin Thisted attended the common schools in the acquirement of his education, at the same time assisting his father in the work of their little farm. By the time he had attained the age of twenty-seven he realized that if he were ever to attain the position to which he aspired, it would be necessary for him to go to a new land of greater opportunities, and he took passage for the United States. He landed at Castle Garden, May 20, 1881, after being one month en route, having spent a week in England. Upon his arrival thirteen dollars constituted all his resources and he immediately made his way inland, in order to find employment in agricultural lines. He located in Benton county, Indiana, where he resided for ten years, subsequently coming to Knox county, where he invested his capital in a farm on sections 8 and 9, Chestnut township. This has ever since been his home and he has extended his holdings and now owns two hundred and six acres in this place. Energetic and capable, Mr. Thisted has so intelligently directed his efforts that he has met with a most gratifying degree of success. His homestead is well cultivated and here in connection with his agricultural pursuits he engages in breeding and raising Polled Angus cattle, and he also buys and sells horses, making his shipments to the St. Louis market. Regarding real estate as the most desirable safe and conservative investment, Mr. Thisted has acquired property as his means permitted and in addition to his fine homestead now owns seven acres of land adjoining Galesburg, and a fine residence and property on the corner of Berrien and Day streets, Galesburg. He also has a store building and a house and three lots in East Galesburg, the rentals from this property affording him a very good monthly dividend.

MARTIN THISTED

In 1878, while still a resident of his native land, Mr. Thisted was united in marriage to Miss Johanna Mary Peterdater, and unto them have been born five children, as follows: Caroline, the wife of Oscar Freeze, of Rock Island, Illinois; Anna, who married Fred Sharp, also of Rock Island; Maria, who is unmarried, a resident of Galesburg; Rena, who married Roy Grabell, of Maquon; and Ida, the wife of James Stout, of Hermon.

Mr. and Mrs. Thisted are faithful church attendants. Politically he is a republican and meets the requirements of good citizenship. Success has attended his efforts as the result of unremitting energy, business sagacity and thrift.

PETER F. LAWSON.

Peter F. Lawson, managing editor of the Evening Mail of Galesburg, was born in Bermuda in the British West Indies, September 8, 1875. His father, Thomas Lawson, was a native of Scotland and a son of Thomas Lawson, Sr., who was also born in the land of hills and heather. The latter was a weaver by trade, following that business throughout his entire life. Both he and his wife lived to old age and reared a large family including Thomas Lawson, Jr., who spent his youth in his native land but when a young man crossed the Atlantic to the new world. He followed general merchandising in Grafton, Nova Scotia, afterward residing for a time in Philadelphia and in Baltimore. He still makes his home in Nova Scotia and he and his wife are faithful members of the Reformed Presbyterian church there. He wedded Agnes Fearn who was also born in Scotland, as were her parents, Alexander and Mary (Urquhart) Fearn. Her father was a ship builder on the Clyde river and both he and his wife had long traveled life's journey when they were called to their final rest. They were parents of four children, Alexander, John, Christina and Agnes. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lawson there were also born four children, as follows: Thomas, of Ottawa, Canada; Peter F., of Galesburg; David A., a resident of Chicago; and Christina, living in Grafton, Nova Scotia.

Peter F. Lawson spent his youthful days at his father's home in Canada until he reached the age of sixteen years, and acquired his education in the common schools of Nova Scotia. He then went to sea, following the life of a sailor for a year or more, but realizing the further need and value of education he resumed his studies as a student in Dalhousie University at Halifax. Later he again went to sea and acted as correspondent for a number of Canada papers and periodicals. At length he crossed the border into the United States, establishing his home in Chicago in 1905. For over two years he was associated with the R. R. Donnelley & Sons Company and on the 1st of June, 1909, came to Galesburg, accepting the position of managing editor of the Evening Mail. In the meantime his literary ability had been developed in his business connections as well as the executive force necessary in his present position. During the two years of his association with the Mail he has labored continuously and effectively toward raising the standard of the paper which is today one of the popular journals published in central Illinois, having a wide circulation and therefore becoming an excellent advertising medium.

On the 4th of September, 1908, Mr. Lawson was married to Mrs. Maude Tryon, who was born in Nilwood, Illinois. She was the widow of Frank A. Tryon and a daughter of Dr. H. T. and Etta (Metcalf) Jones, who were likewise natives of this state. Her parents are now living in Alton, Illinois, and their family numbers two children, the elder being a son, Fred W. Jones. Mr. and Mrs. Lawson have become the parents of a daughter, Agnes. During the period of their residence in Galesburg they have won many warm friends and their home is attractive by reason of its cordial hospitality. Mr. Lawson belongs to Glace Bay Lodge, at Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, and in politics is a republican whose interesting discussions of the questions and issues of the day through the columns of the Mail show his thorough understanding of the topics that are now engaging public attention.

FRANK OSCAR GUSTAFSON.

Frank Oscar Gustafson is living retired in Altona. His birth occurred on the 6th of January, 1855, in Sandstad, Ydre Harrar, Linköping Lan, Ostergötland, Sweden, his parents being Gustav and Maria (Israelson) Johnson. The father's birth occurred in 1812 in Sweden and throughout his life he engaged in farming. Mrs. Johnson was a daughter of Ian and Eva Israelson and was born in 1822. They both passed away in 1877, Mrs. Johnson having died very suddenly on Sunday while going home from church on account of a violent seizure. Mr. Johnson's death occurred a few weeks later and both were laid to rest in the same cemetery. They were the parents of a large family, three of whom survive: Gustav Adolph, who is a carpenter of Hunter, Oklahoma; Anton L., of Holdredge, Nebraska; and Frank Oscar the subject of this review.

After attending the common schools in his native land, Frank Oscar Gustafson began at the age of fifteen years to work on his father's farm and until his emigration on the 21st of April, 1875, was engaged in farming and railroading. He made the trip to America in company with his sister, who later died in Monroe, Nebraska, coming directly to Altona, where he arrived on the 11th of May. On the same day he hired out to Andrew Main and the next year was in the employ of William Main for one season. Upon his arrival in America he had almost no financial resources and because of his inadequate knowledge of the language and of the customs of the country, was forced to accept any work that offered. In the fall he engaged in husking corn and cutting broom corn and for fourteen summers was engaged in tiling. During the intervening winters he worked in the Clifford coal mine, in Walnut Grove township, and for five years was employed in Culbertson's meat market and for an equal length of time was employed by S. M. Whiting.

On the 17th of March, 1902, he left Illinois and removed to Clark county, South Dakota, where he took up farming on his own account. Having always saved his money carefully he was now able to purchase one hundred and sixty acres of land and subsequently acquired an additional quarter section, and had five hundred acres in crops under cultivation, all of which gave good yields. While there Mr. Gustafson served as juror in the United States court of the Black hill division. He was elected to the school board and served as chairman until 1910. In 1906 he was a central committee man from his division and also was appointed judge of election of his district in that year; in 1908 he received the appointment of superintendent of election for his precinct. In that year he sold one of his farms dividing the proceeds between his sons, and returned to Altona, where he now lives retired. Prior to his departure for the west he was elected repeatedly constable of Walnut township and served as such for eight years, or until 1889.

Mr. Gustafson has been twice married, his first union occurring on the 4th of August, 1884, to Miss Emma Carolina Nelson. She was a daughter of Swan and Bangda Nelson, and was born January 3, 1858, in Galesburg, Illinois. Her parents were among the pioneers of Knox county and she was one of ten children. Her death occurred September 15, 1892, in Altona. To Mr. and Mrs. Gustafson three children were born: Anthony Leonard, who is a teacher in Brown's Business College of Peoria; Arthur Paul, who is residing in Clark county, South Dakota, where he is engaged in farming; and Edward Cline, who is married and is engaged in cultivating his father's farm in Clark county, South Dakota. Mr. Gustafson's second union was to Miss Sigrid Swanson, whose birth occurred October 8, 1854, in Christianstad, Sweden and who is a daughter of Swan and Eva (Anderson) Olson. Her mother died when she was but three years of age and she was reared by her father and his parents. In 1882 she left her native land for America and settled first in Geneseo, Illinois, but later came to Altona. Mr. Gustafson is a member of the Swedish Lutheran church and also of the Modern Woodmen of America of Altona. In America Mr. Gustafson found the opportunity he sought in the freedom and appreciation of the growing country. Born in a foreign land and proud of his native land and sturdy ancestry, he is patriotic and sincere in his devotion to the land of his adoption. His career is actively identified with the history of the development of the middle and far west, and as a result of incessant labor and application he now lives in retirement at Altona in most comfortable circumstances. He arrived there years ago practically penniless but is now numbered as one of the honored and respected citizens.

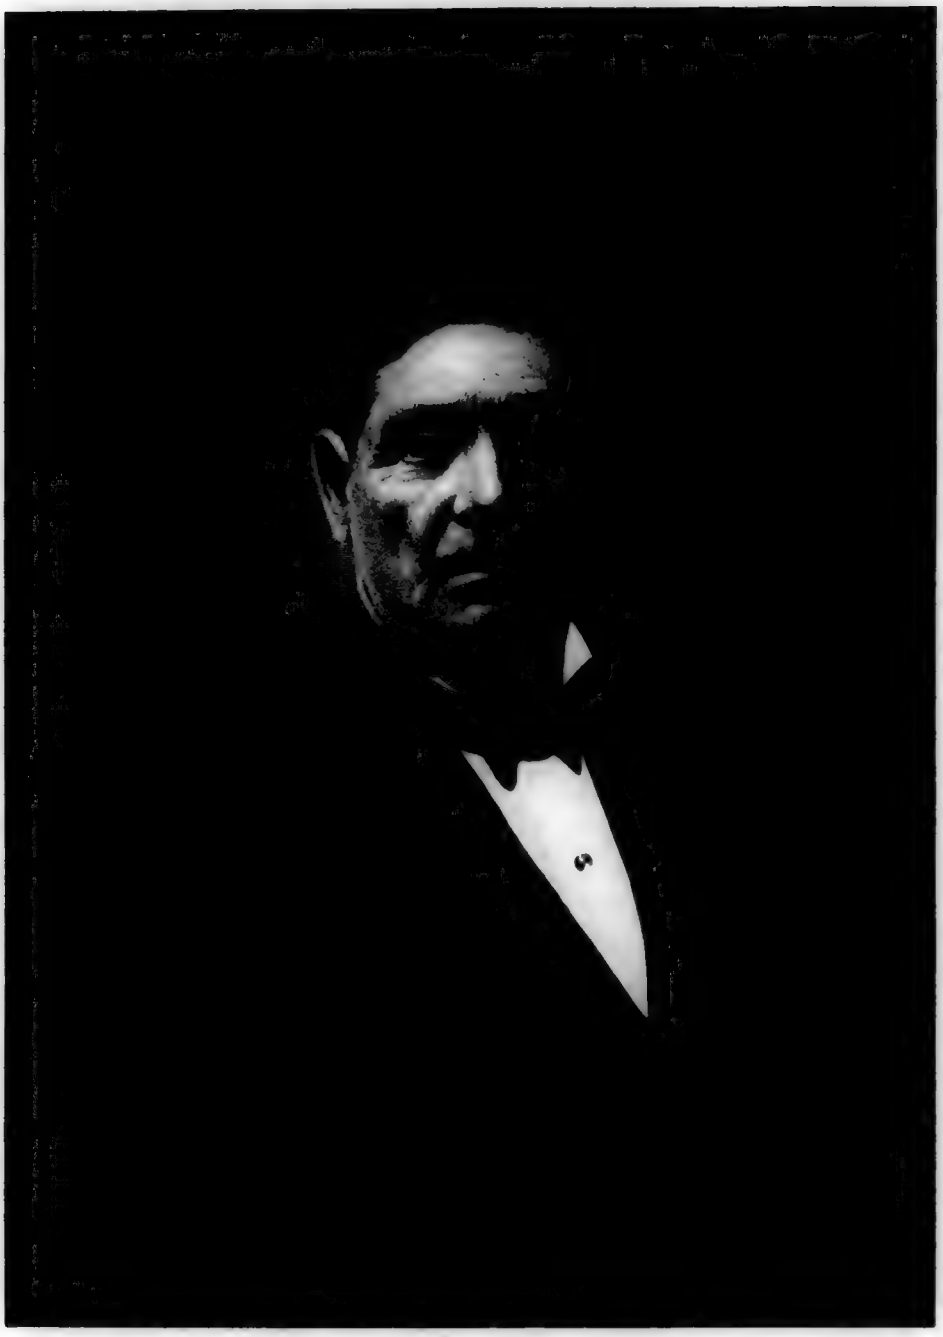
CHAUNCEY S. COLTON.



Chauncey Sill Colton, a son of Justin and Abigail Colton, was born on the 21st of September, 1800, in Springfield, Pennsylvania. He was the first merchant of Galesburg and erected a store on land which is now the northwest corner of the public square. From 1836 until his death in 1885, he was a conspicuous figure in the public life of Galesburg, where he was well and favorably known. He was interested in all of the institutions which were established to promote the public welfare and he was regarded as one of the best friends of Knox College. At the time of his death Newton Bateman, then president of Knox College, wrote the following letter to his family:

"Sea Cottage, York, Maine, July 30, 1885.

"The sad news of the death of Mr. Colton pains me deeply. Knox College had no truer friend. He was an honest, upright, just and good man. He was my personal friend. He gave me a kind welcome when I first came to Galesburg and was my friend, ever generous and true, from that day till he died. My respect for him and confidence in his unswerving integrity increased with every year of my acquaintance with him. I honored and loved him in his life and I mourn for him now that he is gone. I shall never see my venerable friend again in this world. God's will be done. The college he loved so long and well will now be dearer to me than ever, if possible, and my life shall be consecrated anew to its interests while I have strength to think and plan and work for its prosperity.

"Yours in sorrow,
"NEWTON BATEMAN."

For nearly a score of years C. S. Colton developed his business, constantly enlarging its scope, until it assumed large proportions. He built and operated a large packing establishment—the first one in that large section of Illinois. He packed and shipped the first pork, beef, corn and wheat from that part of the country. Hundreds of farmers' wagons annually hauled this freight to the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, down which he shipped it to New Orleans, and thence to New York and Liverpool for sale. Mr. Colton annually bought large quantities of sugar, molasses and other heavy goods cheaply, of first hands, in New Orleans, and shipped it at "high water" to Oquawka, to be hauled to Galesburg, enabling him to sell these products cheaper than his competitors in other towns, and thereby increased his trade and built up Galesburg as a trading center.

Chas S Cotton

Finally, Mr. Colton appreciated that the mode of transportation to water, by "horse power," was too slow and cumbersome. He therefore decided that a railroad was needed so he went to the legislature and secured a charter for the Central Military Tract Railroad, to run from Galesburg to Chicago.

At this time Mr. Colton fortunately made the acquaintance of James F. Joy, the leading spirit of the Michigan Central Railway, then just completed to Chicago. Mr. Joy contracted with Mr. Colton to secure the cooperation of his company in the building of this first branch road from Chicago to the interior of Illinois. The Boston directors demanded a considerable local subscription to the stock. The time limit was expiring, when, at James F. Joy's urgent appeal, Mr. Colton and another gentleman subscribed for the balance of the stock, which they carried five years without any dividends. Then the Boston people had to carry out their contract. The railroad was completed to Galesburg in 1854. About this time a road was built from Peoria to Oquawka. The company got into financial troubles. General A. C. Harding, of Monmouth, the leading spirit in this road, proposed to his friend, C. S. Colton, to get his company to take over the P. & O. Railroad. Mr. Colton went to Boston and got his directors together and laid the offer before them, and finally induced them to buy this cross-country railroad. Later on, the Quincy people undertook to build the Northern Cross Railroad, and had about fifty miles built when their money gave out. Mr. Colton was an intimate friend of the president of the Northern Cross Company. The two men had an interview, and finally Mr. Colton proposed that if the Northern Cross people would build to Galesburg, he would try to induce his Boston directors to back them with the money. Mr. Colton's arguments again prevailed with his directorate. The result of these three enterprises was a completed line connecting Chicago, Burlington and Quincy. Then the joint owners dropped their original titles and named their system the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway.

The village of Galesburg became the local center of this railway system, and later on was developed by this railway into the important city it is today.

In 1868 the Mississippi was bridged, both at Burlington and Quincy. Over these bridges the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy spread eventually to the Missouri river, and later on to the mountains beyond. It was at the suggestion of Mr. Colton that his company purchased the Rockford, Rock Island and St. Louis Railway, and also the skeleton of the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad, which was completed and extended indefinitely.

Chauncey S. Colton, by his constant study and work in the interests of these great railroad enterprises, lived to see less than a hundred miles of railway develop and extend four thousand miles in a quarter of a century, while he was the only western director in the company. He had initiated every extension of the system from its incipiency. Today, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway has ten thousand miles of track spanning a dozen states.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

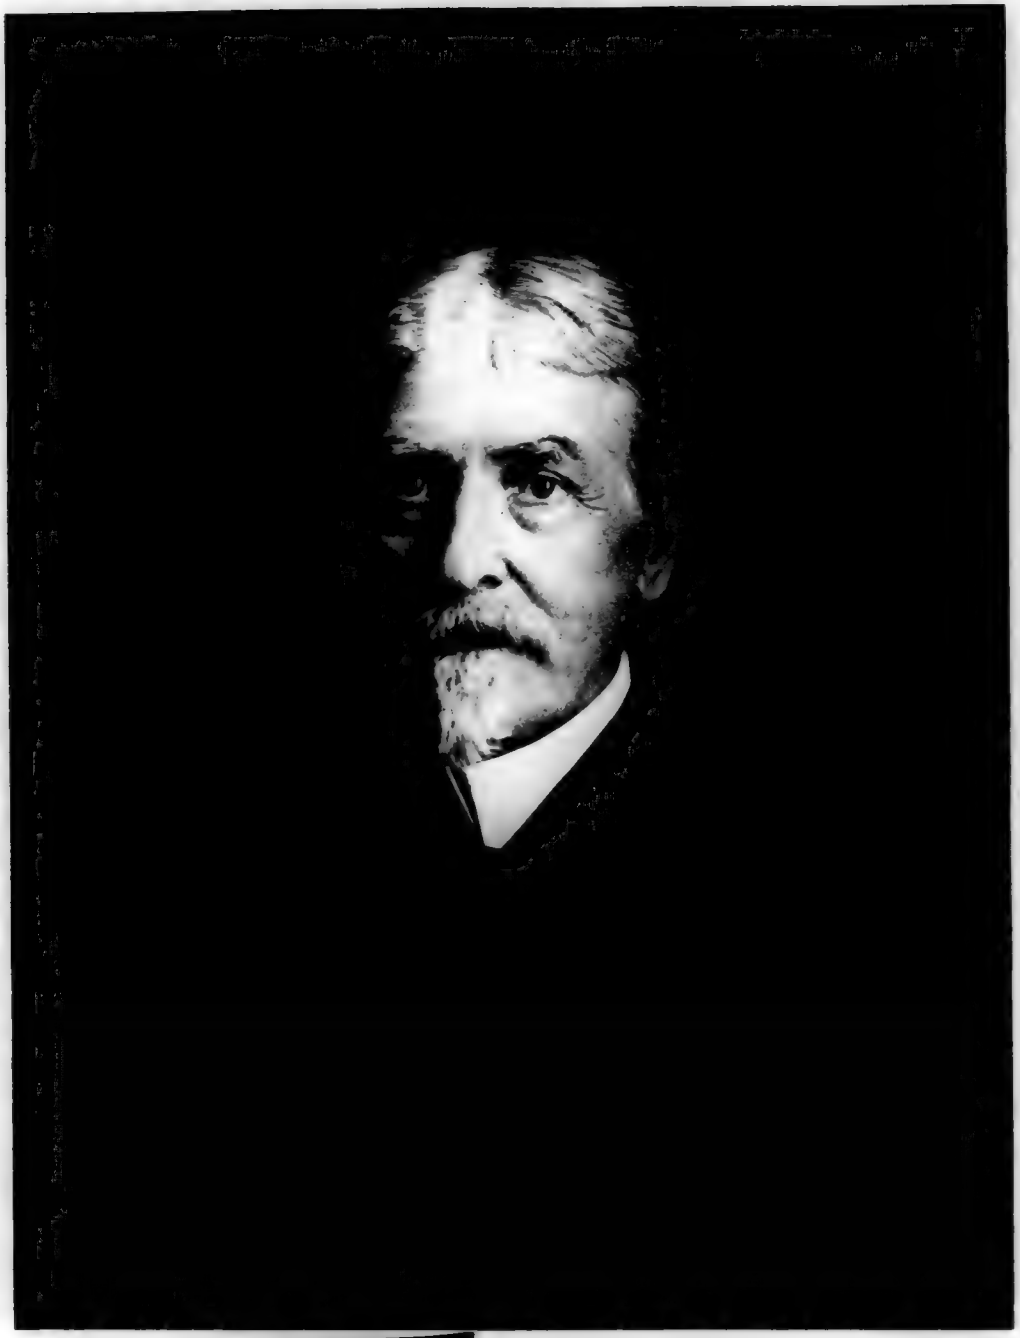
The directors of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, at their August meeting in Boston, added their tribute to the memory of the late Hon. Chauncey S. Colton:

"Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.

"At a meeting of the board of directors of this company, held August 12, 1885, it was voted to adopt the following resolution:

"The board of directors of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company has learned with sincere regret of the death of Mr. Chauncey S. Colton, who took a prominent part in the organization of the company, and served as a director from that time until 1876. To the earnest efforts of Mr. Colton in the early days of the company is largely due the successful inauguration of the enterprise, and this board desires to place on record the fact of its appreciation of Mr. Colton and his valuable services to the company.

"T. S. HOWLAND, clerk pro tem."



FRANCIS COLTON.

To place a specific value upon the labors of the Hon. Francis Colton is impossible and yet there is no individual that has not been at least indirectly benefited by his life work. Moreover, in the consular service of the nation his course reflected credit and honor upon the country he represented. Capable of solving important and intricate problems, he at all times has been actuated by a patriotic devotion to his native land and his work in behalf thereof has ever been of a practical and resultant character that furthered American interests and promoted the high standing of this country among Europeans.

While Mr. Colton made Galesburg his home during the greater part of the time spent in this country he was born in Monson, Maine, May 22, 1834, his parents being Chauncey Sill and Emily (Hamilton) Colton, who removed with their family from New England to Galesburg in 1836. The progenitor of the Colton family in the new world was Quartermaster George Colton, an officer of the English army and descended from an old family of England. "Quartermaster George," as he was known during his life and since, was the first settler of Long Meadow, now a suburb of Springfield, Massachusetts, where he took up his abode in 1640, since which time the family has regarded that place as the ancestral home. Its cemetery is filled with monuments to different members and collateral descendants of the Colton family. Almost without exception the members of the family have held to the faith of the Congregational church.

When Chauncey S. Colton brought his family to Galesburg in 1836, Francis Colton, the youngest child, was only two years of age. The journey from New England to Illinois was an arduous undertaking with four small children and a mother who was in delicate health. It required six weeks to travel by water and stage. The only railroad in the United States at that time was a short line extending from Boston half way to New York, over which they traveled.

Francis Colton was educated in the Galesburg schools, in Knox Academy and Knox College. He was graduated from the college in 1855 when twenty-one years of age. In June, three days after his graduation, he entered business life in connection with his father and brother John, under the firm name of C. S. Colton & Sons. On the 11th of May, 1864, Mr. Colton became director and vice president of the First National Bank and later was appointed United States collector of internal revenue. From each experience and activity of life he learned the lesson therein contained and stored up his knowledge for future use. He has never faltered in the accomplishment of any purpose or task to which he seriously set himself and his entire career has therefore been characterized by progress and by successful achievement.

J. M. Colton

On the 26th of June, 1857, occurred the marriage of Francis Colton and Miss Frances A. Garey, who died March 21, 1869, in Paris, France. There were two sons of that marriage but the elder, Albion Garey, who was born Februay 15, 1859, died August 10, 1860. The younger son, George Radcliffe, born April 10, 1865, is now governor of Porto Rico. It was in 1875 that Francis Colton was again married, his second union being with Annie C. Snively, of New York. Their children were: Emily Marian, the wife of Captain Davis of the navy; Julia Carina, deceased; and Annie Marguerite.

During the Civil war Francis Colton spent two years in settling up the widely scattered business affairs of his firm and was then called to public service, being in June, 1866, appointed as United States consul to Venice, Italy, to succeed William Dean Howells, the well known author, who returned to America to assume the editorship of the Atlantic Monthly Magazine. On the 24th of August, 1866, Mr. Colton's resignation as director of the First National Bank of Galesburg was received and accepted and his father, C. S. Colton, was at once elected to fill the vacancy both as director and vice president of the bank. This change was rendered necessary because of the absence of Francis Colton occasioned by his consular service in Venice. While in that city on the Adriatic he was the correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing concerning the "Unification of Italy." This was an important historic period for in the first year of his residence in Venice came the "Battle Summer"—the great conflict between Germany and Austria which, together with other great transformations in European history, also resulted in the freedom of Venice from Austrian domination and the uniting of it to Italy. During Mr. Colton's residence abroad he opened a chapel at his consulate for American and English travelers, presided over by a Scotch Presbyterian preacher. It became the nucleus for a Protestant mission among the Venetians. Finally they purchased a Venetian palace through the liberal subscriptions of chapel attendants and other generous people in England and the United States. This palace was used for church and school purposes under the charge of the old Waldensian Protestant church of Savoy. King Victor Emmanuel issued a royal decree putting this palace property in the legal possession of the Waldensian church which is the oldest church in Europe. This royal decree is considered to have been the entering wedge which resulted in a statute allowing all Protestant churches to own property in Italy

In 1869 Francis Colton returned to America just as the first Pacific railroad was completed, spanning the continent. He was appointed general passenger agent with headquarters in Omaha. The first year in office Mr. Colton attended a railway convention in Chicago in which all of the railroads of the country were represented. He introduced a measure for through tickets and reduced rates. The railroad people at first were strongly opposed to the scheme but Mr. Colton carried his motion on the last day of the session, after a week's contest.

This was the beginning of reduced through passenger tickets, a system which has grown and expanded continuously since. As a result the passenger traffic of the Pacific roads was doubled and the earnings of the other lines were largely increased. In 1871 Mr. Colton was appointed general foreign agent of the Union and Central Pacific Railways and was sent to Japan and China to turn the tea trade to San Francisco, the result of which was a greatly increased freight business for both roads and connecting lines. Fast tea trains from San Francisco to Chicago and New York could successfully compete with the all-water lines by way of the Suez canal to London and New York. Mr. Colton traveled through India and finally completed the circuit of the globe. He arranged with all the steamer and railway lines for a "round-the-world" ticket. This was the first of the long distance passenger tickets ever put on sale which led in time to the present extensive sale of tourist tickets to every part of the globe. When in this country or abroad he was constantly studying situations, figuring out possibilities and making preparations to meet any emergency or condition that might arise. He reasoned out logically from cause to effect and his solution of intricate and involved problems was a most accurate one. While still working in the interests of the railway companies he established a general agency in London for booking passengers to China, Australia and India by way of America, which largely increased the business of the Pacific railways and all connecting lines. During the stay in London he negotiated with all of the Atlantic steamer lines to unite with American railways in diverting the regular passenger traffic by way of the Suez canal to our new route to the Orient by way of New York and San Francisco. Each steamer company joined in instructions to their hundreds of agents all over Europe to advertise this new route by way of America, which furnished travelers with a temperate line of travel, thus avoiding the old hot route by way of the Red sea. To further emphasize this new departure in Oriental traffic Mr. Colton wrote and published a book, illustrated with pictures of American sleeping and dining cars and other attractive features of "Our New Way Around the World." This was circulated from the London office of the Pacific railways and the new venture proved a success.

Mr. Colton purchased many thousands of acres of railway lands in Nebraska during this period and the investment proved a profitable one. Today these same lands in their present owners' hands are worth millions, which shows what the railway systems have done for the development and growth of the far west. In 1872 he became president of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank of Galesburg and the first year in which he had executive control and administrative direction he doubled the capital and the deposits of the bank. Its business steadily grew during the twelve years of his management and made him a prominent factor in the financial circles of his home city, second only to the prominence and importance of his labors in public connections. Mr. Colton was again called to public office when in 1876 he was appointed by the governor of Illinois as a commissioner to the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia. At the opening of the fair, he stood with the other commissioners by the side of Dom Pedro, emperor of Brazil, and General Ulysses S. Grant, president of the United States, when the latter touched the button in the presence of tens of thousands of enthusiastic people and set in motion all of the machinery of that remarkable exposition, celebrating the one hundredth birthday of the American Republic. In 1884 Mr. Colton retired from active business and removed to Washington, D. C., where he now resides at 1635 Connecticut avenue. For a quarter of a century he has been a member of the Metropolitan Club, whose membership includes the president and his cabinet, all of the foreign legations and the principal army and navy officers. Mr. Colton was fifty years of age at the time of his retirement and almost thirty years of leisure in which to enjoy those activities and interests which are most pleasurable to him have been accorded him. His life has indeed been a serviceable one to the world's work, his labors being of far-reaching value and of both national and international importance.

GEORGE W. JONES.

George W. Jones, the well known auctioneer, who owns and operates a farm in Lynn township and is one of the heaviest stock-raisers and shippers in the northern part of the county, was born on the 17th of August, 1872, on the old home farm called the Lynnwood stock farm, upon which the old log house stands which was built by J. Heiter, the pioneer. George W. Jones is a son of Walter N. and Addie E. (James) Jones. The father was born in Wayne county, Ohio, but after his removal to Illinois settled permanently with his wife and two children at Galva. As a boy he learned and followed the art of photography, but here he engaged in the restaurant business. Soon, however, after starting this establishment it was destroyed by fire and he removed with his family to Lynn township on to his farm, but the last few years of his life were spent in Galva and in St. Joseph, Missouri, where he died on the 9th of September, 1908, at the age of sixty-four years. Mrs. Jones is still living and is seventy years of age. Mr. Jones was one of the most prominent farmers in the northern part of Knox county.

After finishing school George W. Jones remained at home and farmed on the home place and on his brother's farm, while his parents were in Galva. After continuing in this occupation for eleven years he was married and moved to Galva, but still retained the ownership of his farm. He attended the Trenton (Mo.) Auctioneering School and received the training which has helped to make him one of the most successful auctioneers in these parts. In addition to this Mr. Jones is also extensively engaged in feeding and shipping cattle and hogs, and is one of the largest taxpayers in the northern part of the county. During the past three years he has sold over ten thousand dollars worth of hogs besides grain and other farm products. By careful management and unabating energy he has built up a large stock-raising and shipping business and has become one of the best known stockmen in this section. In addition to these various enterprises in Illinois he is also interested in business undertakings in St. Joseph, Missouri.

Mr. Jones was married to Miss Lucy M. Cree, a daughter of Simeon R. and Eva L. Lowe Cree. She was born on the 12th of April, 1873, in Lynn township, and her mother is living in Toulon, Illinois. To Mr. and Mrs. Jones four children have been born: Walter, who is ten years of age; Clarence, who is eight; and Evalyn and Ivan, who are five and three years respectively.

His extensive undertakings have prevented Mr. Jones from any active participation in political affairs and he has never desired nor sought public office. Yet he finds time to consider it his duty as citizen to carefully weigh the qualifications of measures and candidates, and uses his vote and influence in behalf of the interest of the commonwealth. He holds membership in the Methodist church of Galva and is also a member of the Woodmen of America. He has shown industry and perseverance and has step by step made his way in the world until he is now numbered among Knox county's substantial and very successful men and one of its most highly valued citizens.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN SHADLEY.

The name of Benjamin Franklin Shadley at once indicates the regard of his ancestors for those men who have been foremost in molding the destiny and shaping the policy of America. He was born in Shelby county, Indiana, June 3, 1867, and comes of German lineage, his grandfather, William Shadley, having been a native of Germany and an early settler of Licking county, Ohio. He removed westward to Illinois in pioneer times and died in Clark county of milk sickness—a disease prevalent in an early day. Both he and his wife were well advanced in years when called to their final rest. They had reared a large family including Nathaniel Shadley, who was born in Licking county, Ohio, in which state he was partially reared although spending a portion of his youth in Indiana. Having reached man's estate he wedded Emily Fouty, a native of Shelby county, Indiana, and a daughter of William Fouty, who was born in Pennsylvania and was of German descent. Mr. Fouty was a farmer and stock-raiser and was thus associated with the business interests of Shelby county where both he and his wife died in old age. They, too, had a large family including Mrs. Emily Shadley, who is still living and now makes her home with her daughter, Nancy, in Fairland, Indiana. Her husband, the father of our subject, passed away in Shelby county at the venerable age of eighty-three years. He had been a worthy and respected citizen there and for many years had capably filled the office of surveyor. His life conformed to the teachings of the Methodist church of which he was long an active member and to which his widow still belongs. They had a family of seven sons and three daughters: Ephraim, of Los Angeles, California; John, a resident of Fairland, Indiana; Nancy, who married J. W. Fausler, also of Fairland; Isaac, who died at the age of twenty-three years; Fanny, the wife of A. C. Jeffries, of London, Indiana; Benjamin F., of this review; Tilson, of Greenwood, Indiana; Francis, living in Galesburg; Charles, of Indianapolis, Indiana; and Jennie, who passed away at the age of five years.

Benjamin Franklin Shadley was reared in the county of his nativity, spending his youthful days on the home farm where he early became familiar with the duties and labors that fall to the lot of the agriculturist. The summer seasons were devoted to the task of tilling the soil and winter months to the acquirement of an education in the district schools. He was twenty-one years of age when he left Indiana for Illinois, becoming a resident of Canton in 1888. There he worked in the plow shops for a year and a half, after which he removed to Galesburg and became a brakeman on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, June 23, 1889. For about twelve years he followed railroading and for five years of that period he was depot master and also ran trains occasionally as a conductor. On the expiration of that period he was appointed chief of police under Mayor Shumway's first administration and continued in the office for about sixteen months. He was then appointed by Governor Yates on the state board of arbitration, representing organized labor, and was chairman of that board for about seven years. In June, 1911, he received the appointment to his present position as parole commissioner for Pontiac, Illinois.

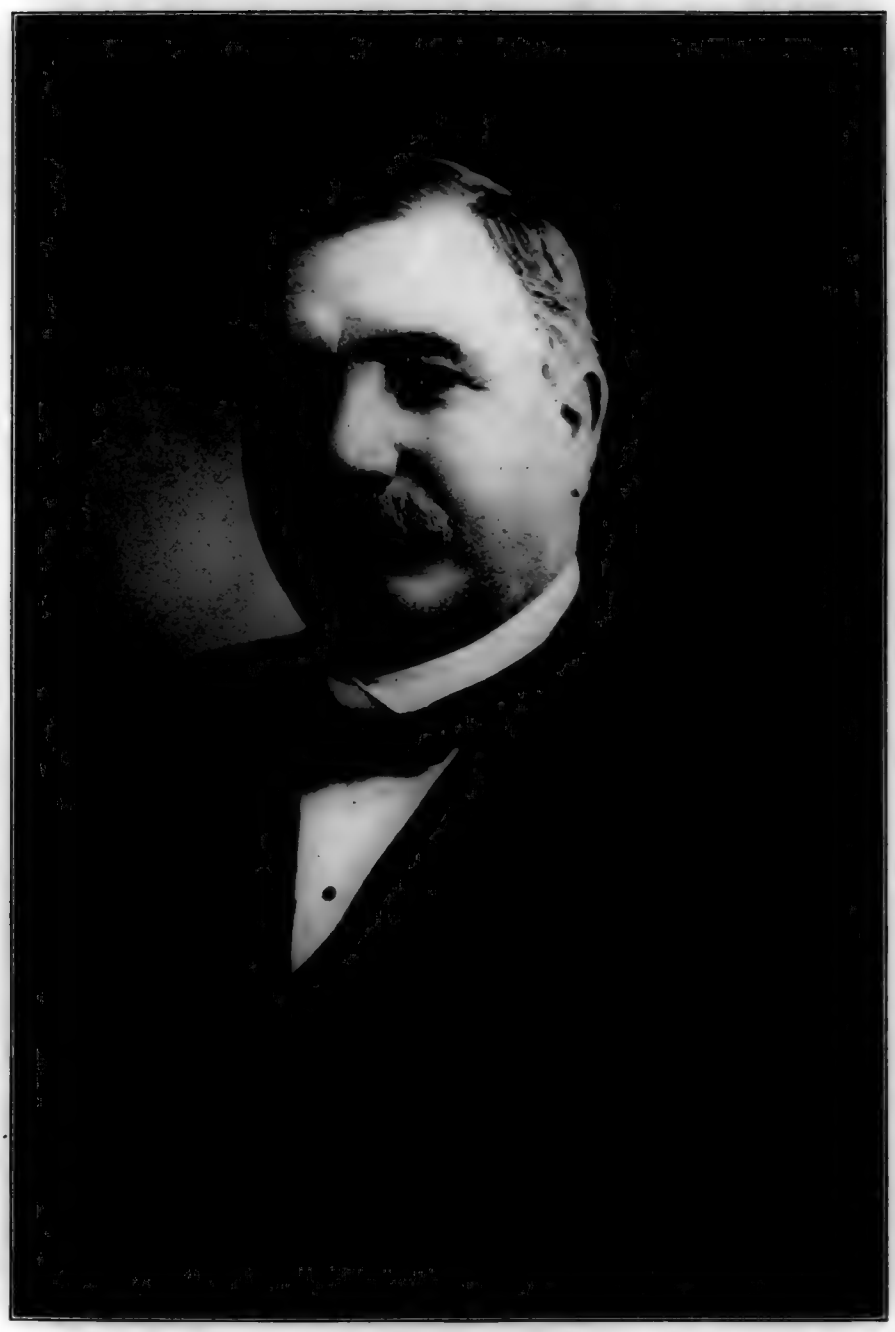
On the 22d of December, 1890, Mr. Shadley was married to Miss Alice Prichard, who was born in Lewiston, Illinois, a daughter of John E. and Laura Murphy Prichard, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Illinois. Her father died in Galesburg, October 24, 1902, at the age of fifty-six years, but her mother is still living. Mr. Prichard had served as a soldier in the Civil war, doing duty with Company G, One Hundred and Third Illinois Volunteer Infantry. Mrs. Shadley was their only child and by her marriage has become the mother of two children, Harold M. and Hazel Marie.

Mr. Shadley is well known in fraternal and club circles. He has attained high rank in Masonry and in the order has a wide acquaintance, belonging to Alpha Lodge, No. 155, A. F. & A. M.; Galesburg Chapter, R. A. M.; Galesburg Council, R. & S. M.; Galesburg Commandery, No. 8, K. T.; and Mohammed Temple of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. His name is likewise found on the membership roll of the Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias and Elks lodges and the Modern Woodmen of America. He belongs also to the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, No. 24, the Fraternal Reserve Life Association, of which he is a supreme director, and to the Galesburg Club. His political prominence as a leading member of the republican party and his membership relations with many fraternal and social organizations have made him very widely known and his personal characteristics have gained him warm friends wherever he has gone.

PETER F. BROWN.

Peter F. Brown has long been a prominent and leading factor in financial circles in Knox county, having for almost a quarter of a century served as president of the Galesburg National Bank. His birth occurred in Mercer county, Illinois, in the year 1851, his parents being Harrison and Martha Brown. They were both natives of Kentucky and came to Illinois in 1834.

Peter F. Brown supplemented his preliminary education by a course of study in Lombard College of Galesburg, Illinois. He made his initial venture in the business world as a clothing merchant of Galesburg but subsequently became identified with financial interests as the teller and cashier of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank at that place. In 1889 he was chosen president of the Galesburg National Bank and in that important capacity has since guided the interests of the institution in such a manner as to insure its continued growth and success.



On the 24th of June, 1875, in Galesburg, Mr. Brown was united in marriage to Miss Clara Maud Tenney, a daughter of Hammond Marshall and Lorette (Low-ther) Tenney. They became the parents of three children, as follows: Maurice Tenney, who wedded Mary E. Johnson; Mildred, who gave her hand in marriage to Edward E. Pearce; and Curtis Harvey Brown. In politics Mr. Brown is a republican, loyally supporting the men and measures of that party. He is a charter member of the Galesburg Club and was three times honored by election to the presidency of that organization. Such in brief is the life history of Peter F. Brown, who is known as a dependable man in any relation and in any emergency. His right conception of things and his habitual regard for what is best in the exercise of human activities are notable assets in his career. His frankness and cordiality of address have gained him many friends, while his genuine personal worth has won for him well merited confidence and trust.

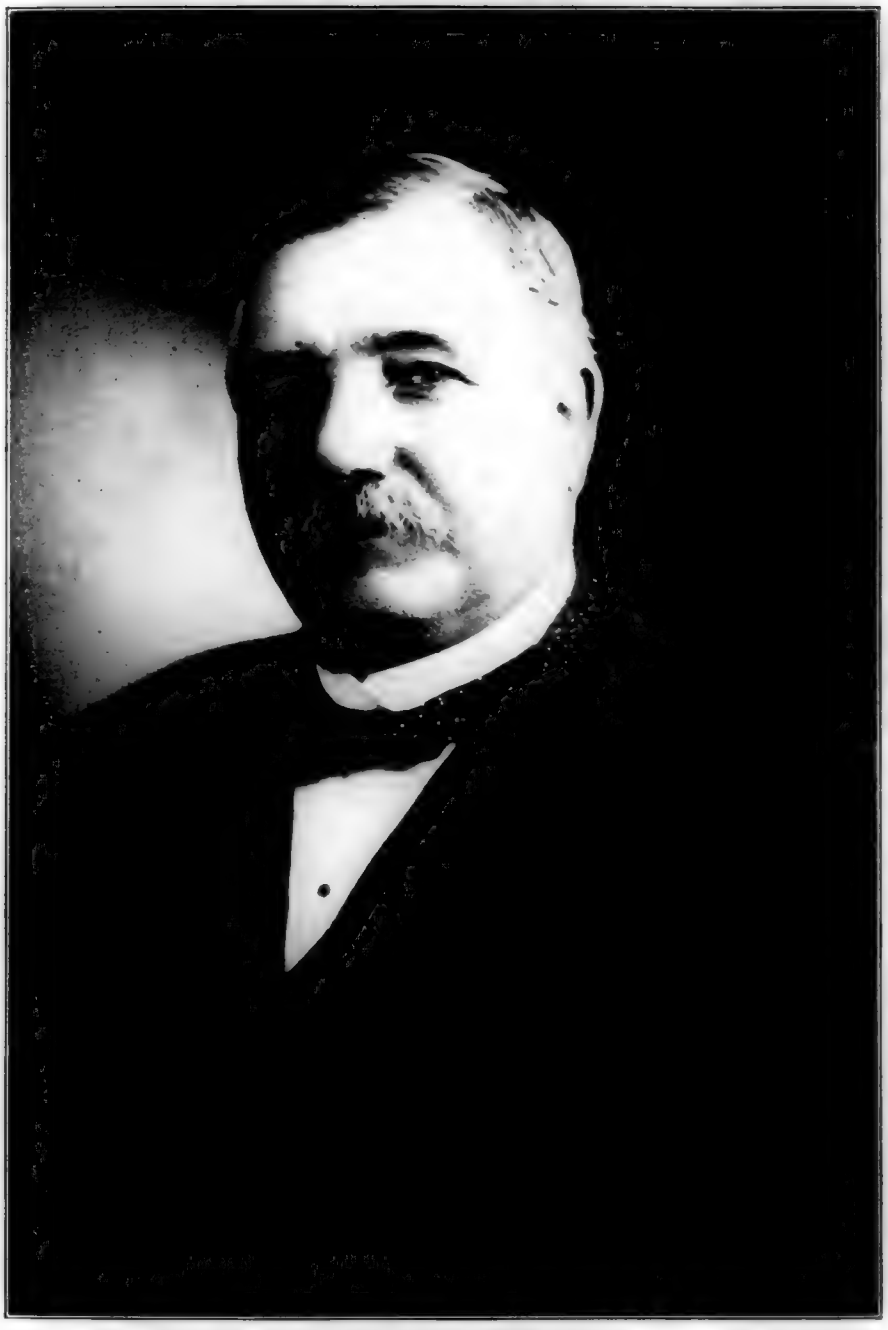
ALBERT JAMES PERRY.

Albert James Perry was born in Alden, Erie county, New York, December 10, 1841. Since 1889, he has been engaged in business in Galesburg, Illinois, as a mortgage broker—his efforts, however, extending to various lines of business which have constituted forces in public progress and improvement as well as in individual advancement.

His father, Colonel James Perry, was born at Brimfield, Massachusetts, September 19, 1796. He was the son of Isaac Perry, who enlisted as a soldier in the Revolutionary war. After a short time, he was detailed as an army nurse in the city of Boston. After his death, his widow, Mrs. Mary Tiffany Perry, was granted the usual pension. Isaac Perry died in 1843 or 1844 when about eighty-six years of age, and his wife passed away in 1857 at the same age. Both are buried at LeRoy, New York. Their son, Colonel James Perry, was well educated for his time and acted as superintendent of schools. He was also lieutenant colonel of the New York militia in Erie county. In the community where he lived, he figured prominently in various connections. He was a pension and bounty land attorney and likewise attended to all kinds of business for his neighbors that required a knowledge of legal forms and procedure. His death occurred at Alden, New York, November 29, 1860. His wife, Mrs. Sophronia Perry, was born in western New York, May 22, 1804, and died October 30, 1880. She was descended from the grim old Quaker, Stephen Hopkins. Hopkins was born at Scituate, Rhode Island, in 1707 and died in Providence, Rhode Island, in 1785. He was a colonial governor of Rhode Island and one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. His daughter, Lydia Hopkins, the great-grandmother of Mrs. Sophronia Perry, married Colonel Daniel Tillinghast, and the ancestry of the Tillinghast family includes Richard Warren, who came to America in the Mayflower. Mrs. Sophronia (Pengra) Perry was a woman of liberal education and a successful school teacher. In other lines, too, she displayed marked capability, notably in the rearing of her large family of four sons and six daughters, namely, M. Antoinette, Edgar H., Mortimer, Mary A., James B., Amanda M., Adaline J., Albert J., Adelia R., and Ellen Louise. Of these, James died in infancy and all are now deceased with the exception of Mrs. Antoinette Dodge, Albert J. Perry and Mrs. Adelia R. Taylor.



ALBERT J. PERRY

ther) Tenney. They became the parents of three children, as follows: Maurice Tenney, who wedded Mary E. Johnson; Mildred, who gave her hand in marriage to Edward E. Pearce; and Curtis Harvey Brown. In politics Mr. Brown is a republican, loyally supporting the men and measures of that party. He is a charter member of the Galesburg Club and was three times honored by election to the presidency of that organization. Such in brief is the life history of Peter F. Brown, who is known as a dependable man in any relation and in any emergency. His right conception of things and his habitual regard for what is best in the exercise of human activities are notable assets in his career. His frankness and cordiality of address have gained him many friends, while his genuine personal worth has won for him well merited confidence and trust.

ALBERT JAMES PERRY.

Albert James Perry was born in Alden, Erie county, New York, December 10, 1841. Since 1889, he has been engaged in business in Galesburg, Illinois, as a mortgage broker—his efforts, however, extending to various lines of business which have constituted forces in public progress and improvement as well as in individual advancement.

His father, Colonel James Perry, was born at Brimfield, Massachusetts, September 19, 1796. He was the son of Isaac Perry, who enlisted as a soldier in the Revolutionary war. After a short time, he was detailed as an army nurse in the city of Boston. After his death, his widow, Mrs. Mary Tiffany Perry, was granted the usual pension. Isaac Perry died in 1843 or 1844 when about eighty-six years of age, and his wife passed away in 1857 at the same age. Both are buried at LeRoy, New York. Their son, Colonel James Perry, was well educated for his time and acted as superintendent of schools. He was also lieutenant colonel of the New York militia in Erie county. In the community where he lived, he figured prominently in various connections. He was a pension and bounty land attorney and likewise attended to all kinds of business for his neighbors that required a knowledge of legal forms and procedure. His death occurred at Alden, New York, November 29, 1860. His wife, Mrs. Sophronia Perry, was born in western New York, May 22, 1804, and died October 30, 1880. She was descended from the grim old Quaker, Stephen Hopkins. Hopkins was born at Scituate, Rhode Island, in 1707 and died in Providence, Rhode Island, in 1785. He was a colonial governor of Rhode Island and one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. His daughter, Lydia Hopkins, the great-grandmother of Mrs. Sophronia Perry, married Colonel Daniel Tillinghast, and the ancestry of the Tillinghast family includes Richard Warren, who came to America in the Mayflower. Mrs. Sophronia (Pengra) Perry was a woman of liberal education and a successful school teacher. In other lines, too, she displayed marked capability, notably in the rearing of her large family of four sons and six daughters, namely, M. Antoinette, Edgar H., Mortimer, Mary A., James B., Amanda M., Adaline J., Albert J., Adelia R., and Ellen Louise. Of these, James died in infancy and all are now deceased with the exception of Mrs. Antoinette Dodge, Albert J. Perry and Mrs. Adelia R. Taylor.

ALBERT J. PERRY

After attending the common schools and the Alden (N. Y.) Academy, the subject of this sketch was admitted in 1860 to the sophomore class of the Rochester University at Rochester, New York. He was without financial resources, and owing to this and the out-break of the Civil war and the death of his father, he did not find it possible to pursue his university course. Moreover, his mother needed his assistance in the support of herself and her invalid daughter. Mr. Perry entered business life as a telegraph operator and railroad station agent in 1861, remaining in the employ of the New York & Erie Railroad in that capacity until 1865. In the latter year he came to Galesburg as bookkeeper in the building department of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, in which position he continued until 1873. He afterward engaged in teaching for two terms, and then entered the office of the clerk of the circuit court and recorder of Knox county in July, 1873, in a clerical capacity. The following year he was appointed deputy, which office he held until December, 1882. In this year he was elected county clerk of Knox county and held the office most acceptably for eight years, making a period of seventeen years in the service of the county. He began reading law while in the circuit clerk's office under the tutorage of Honorable E. P. Williams, and in 1877 was admitted to the bar, but he has never engaged in practice other than to use his knowledge of the law in the conduct of his private business. In 1889 he began conducting a mortgage brokerage business and also acted as administrator and guardian of numerous estates. He has also been treasurer of the Mechanics' Homestead & Loan Association and has been connected with banking interests in various capacities. He was president of the Second National Bank of Galesburg from January, 1891, until February 24, 1904. In the latter year he became a director of the First National Bank of Galesburg. Activities of a public nature, relative to educational interests and benevolent projects have divided his time with his business affairs. He has been treasurer of Knox College since 1891 and was at one time president of the board of trustees of the Galesburg Hospital Association. He has also been a director of the public library from 1896 and for three years was its president.

On the 9th of December, 1866, at Savona, New York, Mr. Perry was married to Miss Albina Hughes, a daughter of Dr. Hiram and Lurissa (Boone) Hughes. Her father was a self-made man and in early life followed the millwright's trade, but afterward became a successful physician. His wife, a representative of the family to which Daniel Boone belonged, was a loving wife and mother, whose life was quietly devoted to her own home.

In politics, Mr. Perry has always been a republican and twice represented the fifth ward in Galesburg on the board of aldermen. He has belonged to Alpha Lodge, No. 155, F. & A. M. since 1866, and was its secretary for eleven years and senior warden for one year. He also holds membership in Vesper Lodge, No. 584, I. O. O. F. He belongs likewise to the Galesburg Club and to the Sequanota Club which has a resort on Pine Lake near Charlevoix, Michigan. Mr. Perry's activities have largely touched public interests and have constituted a feature in the general progress and improvement of Galesburg. He is extremely modest and unassuming "in relating the saga of his own doings." However, the specific and distinctive office of biography is not to give voice to a man's estimate of himself and his accomplishments, but rather to leave a perpetual record, establishing his position by the consensus of public opinion. Judged in this light, Mr. Perry deserves the recognition that should come to those who unselfishly and effectively labor for the best interests of the community with which they are identified.

MRS. ALBINA HUGHES PERRY.

JULY 31, 1841-MARCH 11, 1912.

Miss Albina Hughes was born in Savona, Steuben county, New York, July 31st, 1841. She was the daughter of Doctor Hiram Hughes and Lurissa Boone Hughes. She continued to reside in her native village until her marriage to Mr. Perry. The early life of Mrs. Perry was spent studying and teaching. She attended the common schools of her native village and had the privilege also of attending the Sonora Academy, where she enjoyed an advanced course of study. For a time she was also the preceptress of this institution. She was a successful teacher when but sixteen years of age. From earliest youth she revealed a clear, perceptive mind and she made rapid progress in all her studies. It was characteristic of her that while following one course of reading she would memorize another course read in her presence by pupils of a higher grade. This alertness of mind has characterized Mrs. Perry throughout her entire life. As a teacher she was marked by exceptional skill as a disciplinarian. While possessed of a lively and humorous nature, her students were somewhat awed by her presence and the promptest obedience always followed the expression of her requests. In some respects her pupils scarcely discovered the kind and sympathetic nature so thinly veiled by her outward manner, and yet all dearly loved her.

Thus as student and teacher and as daughter in the home she grew to maturity. Her marriage to Mr. Perry occurred on December 9th, 1866. Mr. Perry had preceded her to Galesburg by about a year and a half, but in January, 1867, they came to our city and here for forty-five years they have remained, sharing in all the higher life of our community, and gathering about them a very large circle of loved and loving friends. In this fellowship they have received and contributed unceasing pleasure.

Throughout her life Mrs. Perry has not been physically strong. Even at the time of her marriage she showed signs of failing health. It is therefore a great tribute to her that she attained the good age of seventy and one-half years. This was due almost entirely to her methodical life, her innate knowledge of hygiene, and her constant recognition of and her obedience to the laws of right living. These careful habits became characteristic of her in all departments of her life. Order and economy became the law of her household. Under the stress of a limited income she planned that there should always be at least a small surplus. Realizing that age might bring its own problems of finance, she did her part toward making an annual increase to this small surplus. Her conscience took on much of the same formal and judicial character and her moral and social nature was dominated by it. Indeed, one might quote that somewhat austere verse of Pope in order to describe her in this direction:

Mrs. Albina Hughes Perry

"What conscience dictates to be done,
Or warns me not to do,
This teach me more than hell to shun,
That more than Heaven pursue."

But while submitting all her life to order, Mrs. Perry so directed her affairs as to leave time for the reading of the choicest literature in history and fiction, and for acquiring those treasures of the mind which became so characteristic of her. She was a charter member of the Clio Club of this city and for two years its president. That she contributed very much to the success and to the pleasure of the club, all its members lovingly testify. In all matters her judgment was excellent, and it was always at the service of her husband, whether upon matters of the domestic arrangement or in the larger affairs of life.

While no children were born to the home, it is to be recorded that many children and youth have here found a true home. Many grown to maturity recall with exquisite pleasure the kindness of Mrs. Perry, and some of them were fortunate in finding here the love of true parents.

MICHAEL J. DAUGHERTY.

Michael J. Daugherty, a prominent and successful attorney of Galesburg, has there practiced his profession continuously for the past third of a century. He is also a leading factor in the public life of his community, serving as a member of the forty-third and forty-fourth Illinois general assemblies. His birth occurred in Monongahela, Pennsylvania, on the 18th of March, 1850, his parents being Thomas and Isabella (Campbell) Daugherty. The father came to Illinois "by water," that is he made the trip by steamboat down the Ohio from Pittsburg to Cairo, thence up the Mississippi to Alton, and from that point up the Illinois river to Liverpool, which was then a flourishing river town but is now extinct. He thence drove overland to St. Augustine and settled on a farm.

Michael J. Daugherty acquired his early education in the common schools of St. Augustine. In 1862, when a boy of eleven years, he became an active factor in the work of the farm. It was hard to find men who wanted employment at farm labor in those days as the war of the Rebellion was then raging and as the boy could not guide the plow and hold the team at the same time, his younger brother rode one of the horses and drove the other while Michael J. Daugherty handled the plow. In 1865 he entered St. Vincent's College at Wheeling, West Virginia, from which institution he was graduated on the 18th of June, 1869. He then returned to the west for fifteen months, after which he left home to make his own way in the world. He was identified with general agricultural pursuits for a period, and also followed the profession of teaching for a time and likewise engaged in the drug business. In 1876 he began the study of law and was admitted to the bar in 1878, whereupon he opened an office at Avon, Illinois, where he remained until 1879, when he came to Galesburg, entering into a partnership relation with F. A. Willoughby. He has remained a legal practitioner of this city to the present time, enjoying an extensive and gratifying clientage.

On the 18th of May, 1882, Mr. Daugherty was united in marriage to Miss Jennie E. Brown, a daughter of James E. Brown and a granddaughter of George W. Brown. Unto them has been born one son, Edwin M., who wedded Miss Mabel Dunbar of Riverside, California. Mr. Daugherty is a valued member of the Galesburg Business Men's Club and also belongs to the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the Knights of Columbus. He is a communicant of the Catholic Church and a member of the board of Hope Abbey. His has been an active and useful life, crowned with success and enriched by the kindly regard of many friends who recognize and appreciate his worth.

Mr. Daugherty has been an active member of the democratic party. He was nominated in 1884 for secretary of state on that ticket, Carter H. Harrison, Sr., then running for governor. The ticket made the best showing of any democratic ticket in the state up to that time since the war. Mr. Daugherty, in 1885, was appointed postmaster on the 18th day of April and continued until May 1, 1889. In 1892 and 1896 he took an active part in the campaigns, speaking throughout this and other states. He was elected a member of the forty-third general assembly of Illinois as minority representative for this district. He was again elected without opposition for the forty-fourth general assembly. He was strongly urged to accept the third term without opposition, but refused to permit his name again to go upon the ticket, desiring to return to the active practice of law. While in the legislature he introduced the first direct primary law doing away with conventions, and although there were but fifty-one democrats to support his bill and it took seventy-seven to pass it through the house, enough republicans rallied to his assistance to give his bill seventy-six votes, or only one vote short of enough to pass it. Mr. Daugherty has always taken an active part in public affairs and has used every endeavor in his power to assist the making of improvements in the public service. He took an advanced stand on questions of municipal regulation of public utilities and has steadfastly and persistently urged the necessity of the government controlling and directing all corporations using the public property for private purposes, such as running street cars and other franchises on the public highways. Mr. Daugherty, while on the committee of hard roads in the legislature, took a bold stand for the improvement of the public highways, insisting that the public alone should have the dominant right to the use of public highways and that when a franchise was given to any person or private corporation upon the highways, that they should take a subservient right therein and that they should be regulated by public officers. As far back as 1900 Mr. Daugherty took the position in public affairs that the aggressiveness of those owning public utilities would control the community and the laws, unless the laws were made to curb their ambition to do this, and he has insisted that the great corporations would sooner or later become masters of the situation and grasp the reigns of government, or at least enough power to give them control in directing the trend of law making.

Mr. Daugherty has always sought for advancement, progress and improvement. He has taken an advanced stand on questions of municipal ownership and as showing his ability as a writer as well as his logical reasoning and his advanced position concerning one of the vital questions of the day, we quote an address which he delivered before the good roads committee, as follows:

The pride of the English people for centuries was "The King's Highway." It was the subject of bard, poet and patriot. On its course distinctions of rank melted away and the beggar stood equal to the nobleman—the chariot of the King turned out for the peasant's cart.

The very mention of the name suggests equality and justice. It is singular how popular the ancient laws of the road grew among the people.

The unwritten laws were cherished as boons by the peasantry and respected by the nobility, even the crown.

The meat of this was the satisfaction that a people find in sacred precincts of a place, where the artificial barriers that "hedge about" classes, are broken down and the people who generally feel, without admitting it, that they are underlings—

"For one sacred moment touch Liberty's goal."

The highways are constructed for the general good, not for special accommodation. Their office is to facilitate travel and commerce. For that reason they should be free from private interference and jealously guarded by the laws for untrammeled public use.

This is the recognized law from the very earliest ages of national roads, and it is only of late years an imperium in imperio has obtained where the word quasi was added to private corporations to give them advantages of public power—the power to condemn land for their use. Early governments found it necessary to establish neutral grounds where the citizen or subject should with equal right pass over or enjoy it in common. The Greeks, Romans and other ancient countries establish baths, parks and highways that were open to all alike. The rights of commerce, not the rights of commercial corporations, and military movements had the dominant right on such roads. Bandits and robbers exercised dominion over these ancient ways, sometimes with the acquiescence of the government just as they do now. The construction of these highways was sometimes made at enormous cost. Sometimes they were maintained by tolls collected but oftener were free to the public.

The most wonderful of these highways that history records is what is known as the "Appian Way." This great thoroughfare was constructed over three hundred and fifty miles of country, considered theretofore impassable. Appius Claudius, knowing the delays of coast commerce from the east, that had to be carried hundreds of miles around the Italian peninsula, conceived the idea of cutting a road through the miasmatic marshes, from Rome to the Adriatic Sea. This shortened the travel from Rome to the east about one-third what it had been.

The work was begun three hundred and twelve years B. C., and not completed until thirty years B. C. But it made Rome the mistress of the world in commerce and in war. We have no data informing us of any attempt by any syndicate to obtain a charter to the Appian Way.

The American idea of having the government build roads for private individuals, as the Pacific railways were built, had not occurred to the grand old heathen Appius or his fellow politicians. This wonderful road gave Rome all the advantage over her neighbors in the movements of troops and enabled her citizens to outstrip their competitors, and yet it has always been free from monopoly. In every age the streams, harbors, parks, streets and highways have been conceded to be public property and free from private control. The government in its sovereign capacity demanded the right to condemn private property for public use under the right of eminent domain. None but a sovereign of people has that right and it is class legislation to concede it.

When the application of steam power to motor engines was discovered ambitious men laid the foundation of the present system of private ownership of public highways. Within a century and a quarter the nations have abdicated the greatest power they possess to private individuals and have made laws carrying out the abdication.

Along with this change of ownership of public utilities has been started a school of instruction teaching people that public ownership is a phantasmagoria, a dream of diseased minds.

The Roman, Appius, found his nation struggling with other maritime powers to win trade. Such a project was unheard of before, but he saw and succeeded. It is quite different with modern civilized governments. Special privileges and special laws have placed in the hands of private individuals the most dangerous weapons to do with as they please. Consolidation and combination, with the wealth of the country, their influence in every city and hamlet, their army of employees and a subsidized press—what reform affecting them can obtain when they have thoroughly organized. Then we can easily understand that the "King's Highway" has been surrendered to trunk lines, interurban lines, street car lines and electric and gas companies, monopolizing every right that they want.

Marco Polo laid the foundation of another great commercial thoroughfare that brought the Indies and East in commercial relations with Germany, France and other European nations. This was by way of Greece up the Danube and down the Rhine. It is singular how modern methods assert themselves. The Roman government, not Christian, protected the travelers on the Appian Way. It was built and maintained as a national highway. The Danube route, however, running through Christian countries, fell under the detestable yoke of "The Robbers of the Rhine Valley," who laid tribute on all who passed that way. Caravans of merchants were plundered and robbed and finally settled down by paying a "tribute, a tariff to the robbers who ran infant industries," amid the crags of the German hills. Those who coasted through the Mediterranean ocean and around the Atlantic coast of Europe were assessed by similar robbers, who infested Tenneriffe. Our word tariff comes from the tribute the merchantmen paid these robbers. The United States in the early part of the last century, following the example of foreign nations, began the construction of military roads throughout the United States principally westward. The great "Washington Pike," built from Washington, D. C., to Columbus, Ohio, was the greatest and about the last. Fulton and others discovered the force and steam and how to apply it to motive power. Here the modern methods stepped in. The construction of railways sprung into existence and the legislatures ceased to make national roads and assigned to individuals the almost exclusive right to construct them.

To do this another form of abdication took place.

The right of eminent domain is a sovereign prerogative. None but a sovereign should wield that authority. By a fiction of law the courts give this right to individuals and the constitutional inhibition against a legislative body legislating away its sovereign power has been violated and acquiesced in until it is a fixture. Now we know that the roads, bridges, waterways and harbors were the exclusive property of the people, until steam railways came into vogue. We have steamboats on our rivers, but no one ever thinks of permitting them to appropriate our water ways. Steam and electricity have almost monopolized the travel and movements of commerce. Private individuals have succeeded, not only in monopolizing these highways, but have gone into our cities and have bound them under a net work of street car lines. They have subsidized the press, and controlled legislation, courts, and executive officers until the average American citizen shouts, "Anarchist," "Socialist," or other appellations at any one who dares to challenge the right of these monopolists to own our streets and use them for their own good.

The supreme court of Illinois has decided that a street car company has a dominant right to that portion of the street covered by its lines. The corporations influence the city authorities to grant them franchises to use the streets to lay pipes, mains, and tracks, erect telephone and telegraph poles and string wires and give them authority to compel the public to step aside for them. The fact is that franchises worth thousands of dollars are donated to them and they have enjoyed these privileges so long that they imagine they own the streets. Nay more, they point with pride to their magnanimity in letting the public use the parts of the streets they do not want.

The denizens of our cities have slept on in a dream of fancy until their waking hours have been dominated with the dream illusion. The public has been gradually shunted from its inheritance in public highways and private enterprise has taken and monopolized them. It is deemed treason to talk of municipal ownership and a crime to advocate municipal control of public utilities.

The municipal ownership of railroads would naturally require or demand a revolution in public carriage and commerce. It has passed to that stage where it is doubtful whether the government could make the transfer without serious inconvenience to the public and an upheaval in the departments.

With the great power of men and money at its disposal, what might be the result of nationalizing the great trunk line system of this country? The time is past when such a project can be attempted with impunity and leave the results to be regulated by succeeding events. It is a serious question and one that but few attempt to solve. The government has assumed control of these by an inter-state commerce law that will best control and care for the welfare of all concerned. It is late—too late to talk of Government Ownership; that should have been years ago.

The smaller public utilities, however, demand immediate attention. They are growing fast and waxing strong and aggressive. They consist of street and interurban lines, waterworks, gas works and electric plants. A law exists in Illinois prohibiting cities and villages from selling gas or electricity. Many cities have their own plants to light their own streets and yet they cannot sell the surplus even. Why? Because certain influences dominate the political field and forbid it. The people not only acquiesce in this outrage on their rights, but reelect the men who defeated the bill that restored to the people the right to manufacture and use their own electricity and gas as they now furnish water. The people groan and sweat under a load of extortionate prices, bad service and supercilious conduct toward the public, and yet tie themselves year after year by party bonds to the chariot wheels of these corporations. The country cannot flourish without these corporate monopolies; it cannot do so long if their encroachments continue. It is surprising that a free people in this enlightened age submit to the arrogant manipulation of our laws by corporate greed. The cry of socialism is misleading. It is the sophistry of the demagogue who is paid by the corporations that own him.

The demand for municipal ownership and municipal control is simply a demand to restore to the people the "King's Highway," the streets and roadways. Let the uncrowned, yet despotic princes of commerce turn their chariot wheels aside and not run over or into every poor man's vehicle in the way. Let us return to the principles that have controlled commerce in every age, let the nation, at least, have control of public thoroughfares and protect every man who travels them. Let the republic give us a highway of commerce as free and safe as the "King's Highway."

JAMES FULTON PERCY, M. D.

Determination, energy, natural aptitude and a life long devotion to the highest professional ideals are the qualities which have placed James Fulton Percy in a prominent position, not only among the members of the medical fraternity in Illinois but in the nation as well. His whole professional career and his advance have been based upon a mastery of medicine and surgery as a science. These characteristics have placed him in the position that he now occupies.

Dr. Percy was born in Bloomfield, New Jersey, March 26, 1864. The ancestral history in the paternal line is traced back to France, in the year 1100 and the name was written De Percy. In less remote generations the ancestry has become largely Scotch-Irish. The great-grandfather, Francis Percy, was born in Belfast, County Antrim, Ireland, but he was connected directly with the house of Percy to which belonged the distinguished Percy, Earl of Northumberland, whose deeds have filled many a page of English history. Another of the great-grandfathers of Dr. Percy was Stafford Wilson, who was born, lived and died, at Gatside, in County Antrim, where was also the birthplace of his daughter, Isabel, who became the wife of the paternal grandfather of Dr. Percy. His father, James Percy, was born in Soho, Essex county, New Jersey, and wedded Sarah Ann Fulton, a native of New York city and the daughter of James Fulton, who was born in County Downs, Ireland. The last named wedded Mary Rogers, who was a native of County Antrim, having been born within the shadow of Gilhall Castle. Her grandparents were McCormicks. James Fulton, for whom Dr. Percy was named, went out from New York city, where he had made his home, as a contractor under the French in the building of the Panama Canal. He lost his life there from yellow fever—that scourge which brought defeat to the French project. His wife, Mary Fulton, removed with her five children to Oronoco, Minnesota, securing a homestead claim there in pioneer times. She died in the state hospital at Rochester, Minnesota, at an advanced age. Her daughter, Sarah Ann, became the wife of James Percy. He was a contractor, becoming well known as a builder of flour mills, woolen mills and veneer sawmills. He constructed many such plants in the middlewest.

J. F. Bowers.

Dr. Percy attended the public schools of Bloomfield, New Jersey, until fourteen years of age when because of ill health he was sent by his parents to Minnesota with the hope that a change of climate would prove beneficial. While in that state he attended the public schools of Oronoco and of Rochester. It was at the latter place that he met W. J. and C. H. Mayo, who have since become world-renowned surgeons. The acquaintance formed at that time has ripened into a friendship that has not diminished as the years have passed. After this period spent in the public schools of Minnesota, during which time he regained his health, Dr. Percy went to New York city where he pursued a four years' course in the Bellevue Hospital Medical College. This was at a time when the law required but two years in a medical school in order to obtain a license to practice. It is believed that Dr. Percy was the first medical student in this country who took a four years consecutive graded course. He was graduated in 1886 and was honored with the presidency of his class. At the time of his graduation he was offered by Dr. Joseph D. Bryant of New York city, the family physician of President Cleveland, the position of surgeon to the Rhode Island Hospital at Providence, Rhode Island. After seriously considering the offer for some weeks Dr. Percy declined on the ground that he had not sufficient experience either with the world of life or the medical world in order to be fully qualified to accept so responsible a position.

Following his graduation in New York Dr. Percy went to Minnesota and located for practice in Mazeppa where he remained for two years. His practice grew rapidly and reached extensive proportions; realizing that he could practice with a measure of success and that if he was ever to change his residence it should be done early in his professional career, he resolved to come to Galesburg. While living in the north he had formed the acquaintance of the Rev. J. W. Bradshaw, pastor of the "Brick" Congregational church of Galesburg. On the occasion of his single meeting with the Rev. Mr. Bradshaw the latter incidentally mentioned his home city as a desirable place of residence. When he had decided to make a change in his place of residence Dr. Percy remembered the praise given this city by Mr. Bradshaw and visited Galesburg only to be told by the minister that he could not hope for any success here because the field was overcrowded and he "would starve to death" if he located here. Dr. Percy, however, saw an opportunity that the good minister could not see and subsequent events have amply vindicated his judgment. It has been a characteristic of the Doctor that he does his own thinking and bases his conduct on his own judgment. Indeed, his position as a representative of the profession is further indicated in the fact that he has been honored with the presidency of the Illinois State Medical Society. His success gradually grew and he has today probably the finest physician's office in the world under one management. Viewed from a practical and artistic standpoint it certainly approaches perfection. It contains twenty-two rooms and in connection therewith but in a separate building he has probably the finest private laboratory in the state. Dr. Percy has done much post-graduate work in New York, Philadelphia and Boston. He spent six months in the state hospital at Braunschweig, Germany, under the famous surgeon, Professor Sprengel. During the same year he also spent six months with the equally famous surgeon, Professor Dr. Kraske, in Freiburg, Baden. While in that place Dr. Percy also studied pathology under Professor Zeigler, one of the world famous teachers of that subject. He obtained his first experience in abdominal surgery in the Chicago Veterinary College under Professor Fred Byron Robinson. He did this with the idea of not subjecting the human being to his inexperience when valuable experience could so easily be gained on the lower animals. He has continually advanced in skill and efficiency in the practice of both medicine and surgery and the eminent position which he now occupies has been well won. He is a valued member of various medical and scientific societies. He was president of the Military Tract Medical Society in 1892, became a member of the Chicago Gynecological Society in 1904 and was president of the Illinois State Medical Society in 1907. He is also a member of the Western Surgical Association. He called the first meeting out of which grew the Galesburg Hospital, now an institution of eighty-five beds. A meeting was held February 9, 1891, and the hospital was formally opened on the 5th of July, 1893. He is serving as the Illinois representative of the National Legislative Council of the American Medical Association for 1912-13. He had held the chair of surgery and surgical clinics in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Keokuk, Iowa, in 1898, and it was there that he learned the futility of a medical school trying to teach medicine as a science and paying professors and the running expenses of the school from the fees of the students. At the end of the college year, therefore, he resigned. He afterward served as a member and in 1911 was made chairman of the committee on medical education in the Illinois State Medical Society. While chairman of this committee he read a paper at Aurora at the Illinois meeting of this society which set forth the deplorably low grade of all but three of the many medical schools of Chicago. This report accomplished for medical education in Illinois what the Flexner report did in exposing the almost uniformly low grade of medical school methods in the entire country. He stands at all times for high ideals which find practical fulfillment in the service rendered by the profession to the public. Dr. Percy has written many articles on surgery which have attracted wide attention and have contributed to the advancement of the profession along that line. He has been a member of the council of the Illinois State Medical Society for eighteen years and he was secretary of the section on the practice of medicine of that society in 1894. He limits his practice to general surgery.

Dr. Percy is a member of the University Club of Chicago and has a wide acquaintance among prominent residents of the state. Aside from professional lines he has written largely upon sociological subjects and has made a close study of conditions bearing thereon. His standards of life in every relation are high. He seeks that which contributes to the world's progress as well as to the individual advancement. The wide acquaintance and prominence which he has gained through his professional ability have made him known throughout the country and stand in contradiction to the prediction of Dr. Bryant of New York city who, when Dr. Percy declined to accept the position at Providence, Rhode Island, remarked, "Yes, and this is the last we will ever hear of James Percy."

Dr. Percy was married on June 12, 1888, to Miss Josephine L. Robinson, the only child of Prosper and Katharine Robinson of Mazeppa, Minnesota, the former a merchant of large financial interests in the southern part of that state.

Dr. and Mrs. Percy now have one child, a daughter, Katharine, who was born in Galesburg, September 4, 1891, and is at present occupying the chair of domestic science and household economics in Hedding College at Abingdon.

When Dr. Percy located in Galesburg in February, 1888, there was a strong sentiment in favor of the union of the two Congregational churches which existed within a half block of each other. This sentiment crystalized in the Doctor's Bible class and resulted in the calling of the meeting at his home which was largely attended by members of both churches. The sentiment was strongly in favor of the union but as the "Old First" church had extended a call to the Rev. Dr. Sherrill the final union which occurred subsequently was not consummated at that time. Dr. and Mrs. Percy greatly interested themselves and were the prime movers in the establishment of the East Knox Street Congregational church which was dedicated June 23, 1895. Out of this work grew the establishment of the East Main Street Congregational church. From the foregoing it will be seen that a spirit of broad humanitarinism has actuated Dr. Percy in all of his relations throughout his entire life.

JOHN WILLSIE.

John Willsie is a locomotive engineer on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad and resides at No. 1432 East Knox street, Galesburg. He was born in this city August 13, 1867, and is a son of Horace and Betsey (Nichols) Willsie, natives of Canada and of New York respectively. The father was a son of John Willsie, also a native of Canada, whose family numbered nine children of whom three are living, Milo, George and Asa. Among those deceased were Charity, Julia and Polly. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Willsie was Alfred Nichols whose wife was Eliza (Felt) Nichols. Both were natives of New York but became early settlers of Galesburg, where Mr. Nichols conducted a hotel on the present site of the Metropolitan block. He lived to old age but his wife died in middle age. Of their children three are now living, namely: Betsey; Louise, the wife of William Cobb, of Schoolcraft, Michigan; and Le Roy Nichols, also of that place. The first named became the wife of Horace Willsie, who resided near Perry's Mills in Canada until twelve years of age. When a young man he came to the United States and settled in Marion, Iowa, where he engaged in clerking in a store. He then removed to Missouri where he did railroad contracting. In 1853 he came to Galesburg and clerked in a store while subsequently he conducted a livery stable. He also served as city marshal and as sheriff, remaining in public office for fifteen years, and later he carried on a livery business. At the time of the Civil war he enlisted in defence of the Union, becoming captain of his company and winning promotion to the rank of colonel. He recruited two or three companies in Galesburg where he was a man of influence and of prominence. He died June 17, 1906, at the venerable age of seventy-nine years, respected and honored by all who knew him. His wife, who was born in 1839.

still survives him. She holds membership in the Methodist church, to which Mr. Willsie also belonged and his life was ever honorable and upright in harmony with his professions. They had four sons and one daughter, all of whom were born in Galesburg, as follows: Wilbur F.; Horace N.; Alfred N.; John; and Daisy, the wife of Edwin Kulp.

John Willsie was reared in Galesburg and attended the public schools, his course there being supplemented by five terms of study in Lombard University. He afterward worked at the machinist's trade for four and a half years and then turned his attention to railroading as fireman on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. He spent ten years in that way and during the past twelve years has been locomotive engineer, capably filling this position of responsibility. He is most careful in the discharge of all of his duties, realizing that human life depends upon his watchfulness and fidelity, and he has made for himself a most creditable position among the trusted representatives of the road.

Mr. Willsie was married February 2, 1890, to Miss Juniata Stiers, a daughter of James and Martha (Cornell) Stiers. Mrs. Willsie was born in Woodhull, Illinois, July 11, 1870. Her paternal grandfather, Ralph Stiers, was a native of Germany. He married Catharine Foraker and both lived to old age, dying near Cambridge, Ohio. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Willsie was William Cornell who was born in London, England, and wedded Agnes Jeffers. They were early settlers of Ohio, living near Cambridge and Marietta, and Mrs. Cornell died in that state. Her husband afterward established his home upon a farm near Woodhull in Henry county, Illinois, but later returned to Ohio. Their children were Mary, Martha, Harrison, Hannah, Cynthia, James and Joseph.

James Stiers, the father of Mrs. Willsie, was born in Pennsylvania and wedded Martha Cornell, a native of Ohio. They became early residents of Woodhull, Illinois, and afterward removed to Peoria, where Mr. Stiers died July 6, 1909, at the age of eighty-one years. His wife still survives at the age of sixty-eight years. They were the parents of ten children of whom eight are now living, Vibert O., Wallace R., Flora E., Juniata F., Ona L., Fred L., Clay B. and Thurlow S.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Willsie was born but one child, Majorie N., who is now a student in the Art Institute of Chicago. Both Mr. and Mrs. Willsie are well known in Galesburg. The former is a member of the Odd Fellows society and the latter holds membership in the Presbyterian church.

DANIEL WILLIAM SHEAHAN.

During the many years in which Daniel William Sheahan was connected with the agricultural interests of Knox county he was numbered among the progressive and intelligent farmers of this county. His birth occurred on the 15th of August, 1843, at Saratoga, New York, and he was a son of John and Margaret (Goodwen) Sheahan. The father was born in County Kerry, Ireland, on the 19th of February, 1819. He came to this country alone, his wife having been injured while boarding the vessel at Queenstown. He arrived at New York in 1843 and immediately went to Saratoga, where he engaged in farming, his wife arriving seven weeks later. In 1855 Mr. Sheahan removed to Altona, Illinois, with his wife and three children. From that town they walked to the eighty acres of land which he had purchased in Copley township and there they took up farming. Subsequently they removed to Lynn township and in 1870 began farming on the old Heaton farm. After living on that property for many years he retired and removed to Galva, where his death occurred on the 27th of April, 1904. Mrs. Sheahan, who was a daughter of Richard and Mazie (Murphy) Goodwen, died at the age of seventy-seven years, on the 19th of February, 1897.

Daniel W. Sheahan removed to Altona with his parents when but a child. After he finished his education in the district schools he was employed as a laborer by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad for one summer. Subsequently he farmed for his father until he enlisted at Oneida, Illinois, in Company I, One Hundred and Second Illinois Infantry, on the 24th of July, 1862. He was one of the first to enlist, his captain being the late E. E. Conger, who later was minister to China. Mr. Sheahan won rapid promotion and after serving as first sergeant became first lieutenant. His most important service was under Sherman on the march to the sea. He was mustered out on the 4th of June, 1865. Returning home, he entered Bryant & Stratton Business College in Chicago and took a thorough commercial course in that institution. Later he took up agricultural pursuits at Oneida and subsequently at Galva. He remained thus engaged until 1873, when he left with his family for Clay Center, Nebraska. In 1881 he again returned to Illinois and located upon the property which was his home at the time of his death. During the latter part of his life he gave up his activities and lived retired, the competence which he had earned earlier in life affording him the necessities and comforts in his later years.

Mr. Sheahan was married August 20, 1866, to Miss Sarah Jane Brown, whose birth occurred near Chicago, in Dupage county, on the 22d of December, 1845, her parents being Mr. and Mrs. William Brown. To Mr. and Mrs. Sheahan ten children were born. Adelaide, the eldest, is the wife of E. S. Potter, of Galva. John P. is residing on the home farm. He married Miss Wilbur and to their union one child, Daniel, has been born. William W. is married to Iona Fuller. To their union two children, Gladys and Anita, have been born. Albert G., who is living in California, is married to Bessie Masterson, and to their union one child, Marie, has been born. Mary E., who is the wife of William F. Sipes, is residing in Missouri. Catherine is deceased. James F. makes his home in Galva. Frances A. is a caterer at Galva and local correspondent for the Galesburg Register. Florence, her twin sister, is deceased. Daniel E., the youngest of the family, is an auctioneer. Mr. Sheahan's death occurred on the 25th of February, 1911. Throughout his life he had been one of the most active promoters of any measures, undertakings or organizations which were started for civic or social development and welfare. He was one of the promoters and the secretary of the Grange of Walnut Creek and Knox districts for nine years and was also a director of the Knox County Fire Insurance Company, an office to which one of his sons has fallen heir.

Much of his time and effort were given to the public welfare and he was a powerful factor in the democratic party in the township, which often sought and heeded his counsel. He served for twelve years as the town clerk and for four as assessor, with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of his constituents. To such a man as Mr. Sheahan the community owes a debt of gratitude for the activities which he both supported and actively assisted during his lifetime. Much of the progress of the community in which he lived was due to the impetus which it received from him. His friends and neighbors—and they are many—found him to be a loyal citizen, a progressive agriculturist and a man of the strictest integrity.

WALTER WATSON WHIPPLE.

Walter Watson Whipple, city editor of the Galesburg Evening Mail, entered upon his present connection with journalistic interests in Knox county in 1910, but also received his initial newspaper experience in this city and the impetus gained in early life has carried him forward to his present position. With the exception of a brief period spent in the west he has always been a resident of Illinois, his birth having occurred in Birmingham township, Schuyler county, April 11, 1880. His parents are Heman Oscar and Anne Estelle (Lawton) Whipple. The ancestry of the Whipple family can be traced back in direct line through eight generations to Captain John Whipple, who was born in Milford, Wales, in 1617. He came to America when a young man and was married in Massachusetts. The Whipple family then remained in New England until Edward Whipple, grandfather of W. W. Whipple, removed to Illinois, coming to this state from Vermont. Captain John Whipple was a contemporary of Roger Williams and on his arrival in the new world first settled in Rhode Island. In the Lawton line the ancestry can be traced back to 1630, in which year occurred the birth of John Lawton, probably in Connecticut. Heman O. Whipple, the father, was born in Illinois and is now a well-to-do farmer and stock raiser. His wife was born in Massachusetts.

In the district schools near Plymouth, Illinois, Walter W. Whipple pursued his studies to the age of ten years and afterward attended the graded and high schools in Plymouth, followed by a five years' course in Knox College, of Galesburg, from which he was graduated A. B. with the class of 1903. He resided on the home farm until he had completed his college course and then took up newspaper reporting for the Daily Republican Register, at Galesburg. That he seemed to have entered a field for which he had natural aptitude and ability was evidenced in the fact that he was made city editor in 1905. In 1907-8-9 he did newspaper reporting and handled the state news for the Denver Republican, at Denver, Colorado, but in 1910 returned to Galesburg and has since been city editor of the Galesburg Evening Mail, his efforts contributing largely to the success of the paper which is regarded as one of the leading journals of the Military Tract.

On the 9th of June, 1907, at Bloomington, Nebraska, Mr. Whipple was united in marriage to Miss Maud Olivia Scogland, a daughter of Charles J. and Emily Scogland, of Galesburg, but the former died in 1900. Mrs. Whipple was educated in the schools of this city, being graduated from the high school with the class of 1897.

Mr. Whipple gives his political support to the republican party and the columns of the paper which he edits advocates its principles, so that his influence in this connection is of no restricted order. He has an interesting military chapter in his life history as a member of Battery B, First Artillery, Illinois National Guard, with which he served from 1900 until 1903. He belongs to the Congregational church and his social nature finds expression in his membership in the Country Club. He has never sought to figure prominently in any public relation and is perhaps not widely known in the state outside of the newspaper guild but in his home city sterling and attractive traits of character have firmly established him in the regard of his fellow townsmen.

AXEL GABRIELSON

AXEL GABRIELSON.

Called to the office of assistant cashier in the Farmers & Mechanics Bank of Galesburg in 1906, Axel Gabrielson has made for himself a creditable position in the business circles of his native city. He was born March 4, 1860, a son of Andrew G. and Maria C. Gabrielson. The father was born July 15, 1822, and died August 26, 1904, while the mother, whose birth occurred January 20, 1818, passed away December 27, 1899. They emigrated from Östergötland, Sweden, to America in 1857, reaching Galesburg in July. The father was a carpenter by trade and was employed by the G. W. Brown Company and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company to the time of his retirement from business. In his family were five children: Mrs. Minnie Anderson, who lived in Binghamton, New York, but is now deceased; John A., a resident of Stromsburg, Nebraska; Mrs. Annie Swanson, of Brooklyn, New York; Charles D., a resident of Salem, Oregon; and Axel, of this review.

The last named was a pupil in the public schools of Galesburg, also in Knox Academy and in the high school at Binghamton, New York. His specifically literary education being completed he then began preparation for the ministry as a student in the Swedish Methodist Theological Seminary at St. Paul, Minnesota. However, much of his life has been devoted to business pursuits. He was employed for four years by the E. F. Thomas Dry Goods Company and for four years in the millinery store of F. N. Gay. He spent eleven years successively in the Second National Bank, Farmers and Mechanics Bank and The Bank of Galesburg and in 1889 organized the Bank of Galesburg, of which he was the first cashier, occupying that position for three years or until he resigned to enter the ministry of the church. While engaged in preaching the gospel he acted as pastor of Methodist churches in Wataga, Bishop Hill and Peoria, and for six years was Sunday school missionary in Henry county, Illinois. For the past six years he has been assistant cashier of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank, thus resuming active relations with financial interests in Galesburg, his previous experience along this line well qualifyng him for his present responsibilities.

On the 25th of May, 1886, in Stoughton, Wisconsin, Mr. Gabrielson was married to Miss Christina Myron, a daughter of Ole O. and Karina Myron. Her father was born August 21, 1825, and died June 22, 1893. The mother, born in 1827, passed away in 1867. Mr. Myron was a shoemaker by trade and connection is of no restricted order. He has an interesting military chapter in his life history as a member of Battery B, First Artillery, Illinois National Guard, with which he served from 1900 until 1903. He belongs to the Congregational church and his social nature finds expression in his membership in the Country Club. He has never sought to figure prominently in any public relation and is perhaps not widely known in the state outside of the newspaper guild but in his home city sterling and attractive traits of character have firmly established him in the regard of his fellow townsmen.

AXEL GABRIELSON

AXEL GABRIELSON.

Called to the office of assistant cashier in the Farmers & Mechanics Bank of Galesburg in 1906, Axel Gabrielson has made for himself a creditable position in the business circles of his native city. He was born March 4, 1860, a son of Andrew G. and Maria C. Gabrielson. The father was born July 15, 1822, and died August 26, 1904, while the mother, whose birth occurred January 20, 1818, passed away December 27, 1899. They emigrated from Östergötland, Sweden, to America in 1857, reaching Galesburg in July. The father was a carpenter by trade and was employed by the G. W. Brown Company and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company to the time of his retirement from business. In his family were five children: Mrs. Minnie Anderson, who lived in Binghamton, New York, but is now deceased; John A., a resident of Stromsburg, Nebraska; Mrs. Annie Swanson, of Brooklyn, New York; Charles D., a resident of Salem, Oregon; and Axel, of this review.

The last named was a pupil in the public schools of Galesburg, also in Knox Academy and in the high school at Binghamton, New York. His specifically literary education being completed he then began preparation for the ministry as a student in the Swedish Methodist Theological Seminary at St. Paul, Minnesota. However, much of his life has been devoted to business pursuits. He was employed for four years by the E. F. Thomas Dry Goods Company and for four years in the millinery store of F. N. Gay. He spent eleven years successively in the Second National Bank, Farmers and Mechanics Bank and The Bank of Galesburg and in 1889 organized the Bank of Galesburg, of which he was the first cashier, occupying that position for three years or until he resigned to enter the ministry of the church. While engaged in preaching the gospel he acted as pastor of Methodist churches in Wataga, Bishop Hill and Peoria, and for six years was Sunday school missionary in Henry county, Illinois. For the past six years he has been assistant cashier of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank, thus resuming active relations with financial interests in Galesburg, his previous experience along this line well qualifyng him for his present responsibilities.

On the 25th of May, 1886, in Stoughton, Wisconsin, Mr. Gabrielson was married to Miss Christina Myron, a daughter of Ole O. and Karina Myron. Her father was born August 21, 1825, and died June 22, 1893. The mother, born in 1827, passed away in 1867. Mr. Myron was a shoemaker by trade and followed that pursuit in Wisconsin, following his emigration from Christiania, Norway, to America in 1862. He first settled in Madison but afterward removed to Stoughton where he lived until his death. In the family were seven children, three of whom are yet living. Mrs. Gabrielson was born in Madison, Wisconsin, April 13, 1865. By her marriage she has become the mother of six children: Frederick, Mabel, Ervin, Katherine, Bertha, and Julian, but the first named has passed away. The parents are members of the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church and are deeply and actively interested in its work. Mr. Gabrielson votes with the republican party and recognizes the obligations as well as the privileges of citizenship. He for two terms represented the third ward in the Common Council in the city of Galesburg. He has ever held to high ideals and has sought to make his life a serviceable factor in the world's work. Wherever known he is spoken of in terms of high regard and the circle of his friends is constantly increasing as the circle of his acquaintance grows.

HAROLD MAY HOLLAND.

The career of one who has been accorded the superior advantages of the higher educational institutions is favored with splendid and special opportunities. At the outset it affords him an independence which in itself is of an inspirational nature and gives him confidence to reach higher and attempt greater things than his fellow citizens who have been denied those advantages. Withal, however, the university with its learning is one thing and the business world with its practical experience and competition is quite another. The world calls for real value.

Harold M. Holland, after graduating from Dartmouth College made his start in the business world in 1903. At that time he engaged in the retail and wholesale athletic goods business with John F. McLean, under the firm name of McLean & Holland. After remaining in partnership with Mr. McLean for some time he purchased the entire business and has since continued to conduct the store independently, although the firm name, McLean & Holland, is still used.

Mr. Holland was born in Galesburg, Illinois, on the 15th of April, 1878, a son of Joseph Basset and Mary Otis (May) Holland. The father's birth occurred near Brattleboro, Vermont, July 11, 1830. After being graduated from Dartmouth College, Hanover, New Hampshire, in 1858, he entered the medical department of Dartmouth. While an undergraduate he was admitted to the Psi Upsilon fraternity, and because of the excellent record he made in his studies he was admitted to the Phi Beta Kappa. Later he was a special student at Amhurst College, Harvard University and Columbia University. For several years he was demonstrator in microscopical and pathological anatomy at Dartmouth and subsequently was associated with D. Appleton & Company and William Wood & Company in wholesale publishing. He holds membership in the American Association for the Advancement of Science and was the first American to be elected as a member of the British Economic Society. At one time he was vice president of the New England Agricultural Society, and for years has been president of the Galesburg Public Library Association. His name also appears on the directorate of the First National Bank of Galesburg. On the 18th of November, 1872, he was married at Galesburg to Miss Mary Otis May, a daughter of Henry Harvey and Delia (Ray) May. Mr. H. H. May was one of the early settlers in Knox county, having arrived here in 1837. He was the inventor of the first successful horse-power reaper and made the first steel plow. Mrs. Joseph B. Holland is now residing in California with her son, Hubert Ray.

Harold M. Holland first attended school at Galesburg where he pursued his early education in the public schools. In 1893 he entered Knox College Academy and for several years was a student in Knox College. He was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1900 with the degree of A. B. While a student there he was chosen a member of Phi Delta Theta.

On the 3d of April, 1909, Mr. Holland was married to Miss Beula Mary Hunt, of Galesburg. He is a member of the Soangetaha Club, of which he has been a director for three years. He also holds membership in the Cooper Ornithological Club of California and is an associate member of the American Ornithologists' Union. In 1908, 1909 and again in 1912 he was elected president of the Galesburg Base Ball Company. In religious faith he is affiliated with the Central Congregational church of Galesburg. In politics he is a republican. Mr. Holland bears the reputation of being very progressive in his business ideas and has been most successful in promoting and introducing new lines and methods which tend to further the welfare of his business.

WILKINS SEACORD.

Wilkins Seacord, deceased, was for many years an active and honored resident of Galesburg and Knox county, many business interests feeling the stimulus of his activity, his commercial and industrial connections being at all times of such a character as contributed to general progress and prosperity as well as to individual success. Moreover, the methods pursued would ever bear close investigation and scrutiny so that he was honored and respected wherever known, and most of all where he was best known. His life history constitutes a creditable chapter in the annals of Knox county. His birth occurred in Orange county, New York, September 20, 1833, and his ancestry can be traced back to the Huguenots of France. His grandfather was subordinate officer under Marquis de la Fayette and came to America with that gallant French hero who aided in the establishment of American independence. Pleased with the new world and its prospects he decided to remain and established his home in the Empire state.

His son, Wilkins Seacord, father of him whose name introduces this review, married Hulda J. Morris, also a native of New York. He was a prominent citizen of that state and for many years represented his district in the general assembly, leaving the impress of his individuality upon the laws which were enacted during his connection with the state legislature. He continued a resident of New York until called to his final rest in 1862, when sixty-two years of age. His widow survived him for about fifteen years and passed away at the age of seventy-two years.

In their family were five children of whom Wilkins Seacord, of this review, was the fourth in order of birth. He had the advantage of training in a home of culture and refinement, enjoyed good educational privileges and in early manhood came to the middle west. In his youth he learned something of the blacksmith's trade and also worked at farming for a time. He was twenty-two years of age when he left home and for a brief period he drifted about in Ohio, Michigan and Indiana but found what he regarded as a suitable place of residence when in October, 1855, he arrived in Galesburg. He then devoted his attention to teaching school for a brief period and also broke prairie, but in the spring of 1857 took up commercial pursuits, engaging in business in Oneida. In the spring of 1862 he turned his attention to the meat and live-stock business which he carried on with considerable success for about six years but abandoned that line in 1868 and removed from Oneida to Knoxville, which was then the county seat. There he filled the office of sheriff for a two years' term but in 1870 returned to Galesburg and took charge of the stock yards at this place. In 1876 his duties were further extended to include the superintendency of the stock yards at Quincy, the two places being under his care for many years. He also had supervision over the yards at Ottumwa and at Burlington, Iowa, and over the large sheep yard at Montgomery. He became recognized as one of the best judges of live stock in the Mississippi valley and in connection with his activity as superintendent of stock yards he also conducted an extensive rendering establishment. In fact he was associated with many prominent business enterprises of this city and state, was the owner of three large farms, had extensive banking interests and was also connected with other business concerns. He became one of the early stockholders of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank and served on its directorate. He was also a director of the First National Bank for many years and became one of the original stockholders of the Purington Paving Brick Company, of which he served as a director for several years. He was active in promoting the Galesburg Electric Motor & Power Company, took considerable stock in the enterprise and served as its president for a number of years, and also as a member of its board of directors. This company purchased the old horse-car lines, installed electric power and after successfully conducting the system for several years sold to the McKinley interests.

It was on the 1st of October, 1857, in this county, that Mr. Seacord was united in marriage to Miss Keren L. Courtwright, who died in November, 1869, leaving three children: Fred, of Galesburg; Louise, the wife of John Wilcox; and De Forrest, who is familiarly known as Judd. On the 20th of September, 1883, Mr. Seacord was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Fannie M. Hollowell, nee Turner, of Kansas City, who still survives him. The death of Mr. Seacord occurred July 3, 1900, and in his demise the county lost one of its most valued and representative citizens. His political allegiance was given to the republican party and he belonged also to the Masonic fraternity, exemplifying in his life the beneficent spirit of the craft. He was a man of social disposition and of unfeigned cordiality, whose attractive qualities made him a congenial companion. His friendship always stood the test of time and he was loved by all. In fact there were few citizens in Knox county as popular and highly esteemed as was Wilkins Seacord, and the death of none has been more deeply deplored.

WILLIAM D. SMITH.

William D. Smith, depot master for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad at Galesburg, was born in Portageville, New York, August 16, 1857. He comes of an old family of the Empire state. His grandfather was there born and became a soldier of the War of 1812. In days of peace he followed the occupation of farming and was called to his final rest when in middle life. His wife, Mrs. Lavina Smith, also a native of New York, long survived him and died at the age of eighty-six years. They were the parents of three sons and four daughters, of whom one son died in childhood. The others were Joseph, Franklin, Abigail, Betsey, Louise and Laura. Of these, Franklin C. Smith was the father of William D. Smith. He, too, was born in New York and was reared in Wyoming county, where he practiced law for a few years. He afterward became a contractor on the Erie canal and in 1859 removed to Illinois, settling in Galesburg, where he lived for two years. He next located at Oneida, Illinois, where he engaged in the practice of law and also filled the office of internal revenue collector for one term. He was a soldier of the Civil war and served for three years in the One Hundred and Second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, holding the rank of colonel. He made an excellent record, inspiring his men with much of his loyalty, zeal and bravery. He married Sarah M. Gilbert, who was born in New York, as were her parents. Her mother was a Miss Weed in maidenhood. Her father was proprietor of a hardware and tin store in Portage, New York, and died in middle life, while his wife reached the age of eighty-nine. Their family numbered three daughters and a son, including Caroline, Sophia, Sarah and Charles. As previously stated, Sarah M. Gilbert became the wife of Franklin C. Smith and unto them were born four children: Anna E., now deceased, who had been married twice, her first husband being Dr. Edwin Card and the second Edwin E. Terry; William D., of this review; Franklin C., who passed away at the age of three years; and Ella, who died when seven years old.

William D. Smith was reared in Oneida, Illinois, between the age of four and sixteen years, and attended the public schools there. Coming to Galesburg, he served as brakeman and conductor in the service of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company from 1874 until 1887. He then went to Elgin, Nebraska, where he resided until 1891, devoting his time to farming upon a tract of one hundred and sixty acres which he owned. At length he sold that property and returned to Galesburg, reentering the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company as a brakeman. For the past twelve years he has been depot master, and his long connection with the line indicates the faithfulness and loyalty of his service and his capability.

In October, 1882, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Mary D. Pike, a daughter of William Pike, whose wife in her maidenhood was Letitia D. Bull. They were residing in the outskirts of Galesburg at the time of Mrs. Smith's birth. They had come to this state from New York and her father died at Woodhull, where he was proprietor of a general store. Her mother passed away in Galesburg at the age of sixty-four years. In their family were but two children, Charles and Mary D. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been born four children, Louise D., Gilbert C., Frank C. and Stanley W., the first named a graduate of the high school. Mrs. Smith belongs to the Congregational church and the family are well known socially in the community. Mr. Smith is a republican in his political views and conversant with the principles of the party and the leading questions of the day but has no ambition for office, his time and energies being given to his business duties, which are always most faithfully performed.

M. O. WILLIAMSON.

M. O. Williamson was born on the Atlantic Ocean, July 14, 1850, while his parents were on their way from Sweden to this country. They located in Knox county, where since has been the family home. The father died in 1853, leaving the mother with a family of six children. This family she cared for until they were all grown to man and womanhood. The mother died in 1886.

When a lad of thirteen years, M. O. Williamson learned the harness trade with Olson & Gray at Wataga, Illinois, serving an apprenticeship of three years, and worked at the bench thereafter for twenty-five years. His educational advantages were limited. He attended the district school up to the age of thirteen and stayed for a term of six months in the village school when seventeen years of age.

Mr. Williamson was married October 18, 1871, to Mary A. Driggs, of Wataga, Illinois, and there were born to them one son, who died in infancy, and two daughters. Adelaide F., born May 6, 1878, married May 13, 1902, Edward Clyde Slocumb and their home is at present at Artesia, New Mexico. Nellie M. was born April 22, 1883, and married May 8, 1907, H. A. Whipple, her home at this time being at Galesburg, Illinois. M. O. Williamson was elected and served as town and city clerk, alderman and justice of the peace. He was elected county treasurer of the county of Knox in 1886, and was elected county clerk of the same county in 1890, 1894 and 1898. In 1900 he was nominated and elected state treasurer. He was one of the organizers and is an active member of the Swedish-American Republican League of the state of Illinois, and was its president in 1897. In political faith, he is an earnest and consistent republican. He believes in his party creed, and has done much for the success of his party candidates and party principles. In 1884 he was made lington & Quincy Railroad Company as a brakeman. For the past twelve years he has been depot master, and his long connection with the line indicates the faithfulness and loyalty of his service and his capability.

M. O. WILLIAMSON

In October, 1882, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Mary D. Pike, a daughter of William Pike, whose wife in her maidenhood was Letitia D. Bull. They were residing in the outskirts of Galesburg at the time of Mrs. Smith's birth. They had come to this state from New York and her father died at Woodhull, where he was proprietor of a general store. Her mother passed away in Galesburg at the age of sixty-four years. In their family were but two children, Charles and Mary D. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been born four children, Louise D., Gilbert C., Frank C. and Stanley W., the first named a graduate of the high school. Mrs. Smith belongs to the Congregational church and the family are well known socially in the community. Mr. Smith is a republican in his political views and conversant with the principles of the party and the leading questions of the day but has no ambition for office, his time and energies being given to his business duties, which are always most faithfully performed.

M. O. WILLIAMSON.

M. O. Williamson was born on the Atlantic Ocean, July 14, 1850, while his parents were on their way from Sweden to this country. They located in Knox county, where since has been the family home. The father died in 1853, leaving the mother with a family of six children. This family she cared for until they were all grown to man and womanhood. The mother died in 1886.

When a lad of thirteen years, M. O. Williamson learned the harness trade with Olson & Gray at Wataga, Illinois, serving an apprenticeship of three years, and worked at the bench thereafter for twenty-five years. His educational advantages were limited. He attended the district school up to the age of thirteen and stayed for a term of six months in the village school when seventeen years of age.

Mr. Williamson was married October 18, 1871, to Mary A. Driggs, of Wataga, Illinois, and there were born to them one son, who died in infancy, and two daughters. Adelaide F., born May 6, 1878, married May 13, 1902, Edward Clyde Slocumb and their home is at present at Artesia, New Mexico. Nellie M. was born April 22, 1883, and married May 8, 1907, H. A. Whipple, her home at this time being at Galesburg, Illinois. M. O. Williamson was elected and served as town and city clerk, alderman and justice of the peace. He was elected county treasurer of the county of Knox in 1886, and was elected county clerk of the same county in 1890, 1894 and 1898. In 1900 he was nominated and elected state treasurer. He was one of the organizers and is an active member of the Swedish-American Republican League of the state of Illinois, and was its president in 1897. In political faith, he is an earnest and consistent republican. He believes in his party creed, and has done much for the success of his party candidates and party principles. In 1884 he was made secretary of the county central committee, and was either secretary or chairman for twenty years.

M. O. WILLIAMSON

In 1890, he with his family removed to Galesburg, Illinois which has since been his home. He is a member of the Business Men's Club of Galesburg, the Hamilton Club of Chicago, and is a Knight Templar Mason, an Odd Fellow, a Knight of Pythias, and an Elk. He was for two years a member of the Lincoln Monument Association of Illinois, and it was during his term that the rebuilding of the Lincoln monument at Springfield was completed, and the remains of the martyred president were laid in their final resting place in the monument. Mr. Williamson is at this time president of the People's Trust & Savings Bank, of Galesburg, Illinois, one of the largest and most successful financial institutions in the state outside of Chicago.

GEORGE W. BROWN.

We know of no better biography of the late Hon. George W. Brown of Galesburg, the inventor of the corn planter, than the following address delivered by Hon. Clark E. Carr at the formal opening of Mr. Brown's great shops in Galesburg on September 22, 1875.

The address is copied from the Illinois Prairie Farmer in which it appeared in full.

"Fellow Citizens: I have prepared this paper at the request of some business men of this city, who deemed it proper that during the inaugural ceremonies now being celebrated, a brief history should be given of the invention of the corn planter and the founder of these great shops, Mr. George W. Brown. If Mr. Brown had his own way tonight, nothing would be said about him; but his friends have now the entire control of the buildings, and can say just what they please.

"Like most men who have conferred lasting benefits upon humanity, Mr. Brown commenced life poor. He was born in Clifton Park township, Saratoga county, New York, on the 29th of October, 1815, and is sixty years old. He remained upon the farm where he was born until he was fourteen, when he learned the carpenter's trade, in which he worked many years. He remembers distinctly the first boat which came through the Erie canal, with Dewitt Clinton and other distinguished persons on board, with band playing and flags flying. He worked at his trade on the railroad, built from Albany to Schenectady, sixteen miles long, which, when completed, was regarded as one of the triumphs of the age. This was then the only railroad in the United States, except a line of about the same length, running out of Baltimore. He remembers the first trip made over the road, by a distinguished party in cars a little larger than our hacks. Of those excursionists, Thurlow Weed is the only survivor. The company owned one wheezy little engine, named the 'John Bull.' Mr. Brown had the honor of being appointed roadmaster or trackmaster of this celebrated railroad, a position which he did not find to be lucrative. He was married before he was of age, to Maria Turpening, with whom he has lived happily all of these years, and to whom he is largely indebted for his success. They were both members of the Methodist church, and have continued their membership for over forty years. The old church which they joined on the banks of the Mohawk, in their halcyon days is still in existence.

"Some near relatives of the young couple had gone to Illinois, who sent back glowing accounts of the prairie and of the possibilities of the future. There was room for the young mechanic—a chance to own a farm, make a home, establish a hearth-stone; an opportunity to become independent. Besides, was there not an opportunity to build up that church and help plant the seeds of that religion to which they had consecrated their lives? They did not hesitate, but bought a team and wagon, loaded all their available property, and started upon their long journey. It rained nearly all the way, and the roads were dreadful. Still the white covered wagon kept on; but the driver had as much work as had the horses, lifting and prying wheels when stuck fast in swamps and sloughs. Worn and weary they reached their destination, and located in July, 1836, before many who hear me were born, upon a farm near what was afterwards Tylerville, in Warren county, nine miles northwest of here. At that time there was not a house on this prairie. He traded his team for an eighty of land and went to work. He had a log house to build for himself, and the neighbors needed the services of a carpenter. For a long time he went out to work at his trade, and his wife conducted the farm. There was no pine lumber here, nothing but the hard woods of our groves, and it was no child's play to work them. Carpenters thoroughly appreciate the difference between pine and the oak and walnut of our forests.

"Money was hard to get when ten cents a bushel was a good price for corn, and three dollars a hundred a good price for pork. But where there was a will there was a way, and Mr. Brown, with plow and hoe, and saw and chisel, managed to make a living, although he laid by scarcely anything. There are many houses in the neighborhoods of Shanghai and Tylerville upon which he worked. He built the Alfred Brown house on this side of Henderson Grove. He also worked considerably in Galesburg and Knoxville. He built the house on the corner opposite the Universalist and Episcopal churches, owned and occupied by Mrs. Wells. He worked a winter in Knoxville, for Hon. James Knox, and built, among others, the building occupied by the First National Bank of that city.

"Mr. John S. Winter, county clerk, remembers being at his house in 1846, near Tylerville, a small log building. He found Mr. Brown barefooted, his only clothing a straw hat, hickory shirt and jean pants, literally in a brown study upon farm implements. Among other implements used were cultivators, and in 1848 Mr. Brown conceived the idea of turning a cultivator into a corn planter. His first idea was to drop three rows at once, placing the shovels of the cultivator as wide apart as he wished to have the corn rows, and boxes of corn on the beam's back of the shovel, so fixed that the center of each box would be over the middle of the furrows made by the shovels. A slide was so adjusted that by moving it there would be an aperture at the center of the bottom of each box large enough for from three to five kernels of corn to slip through, which would of course fall into the middle of each furrow behind the shovels. This slide was to be operated by a man walking behind the machine. He attached heavy wheels to the cultivator back of the boxes, which were made of sections sawed off from logs, and which would roll the ground after the corn was dropped in, filling and leveling the furrow.

"How simple all these contrivances seem now! We naturally exclaim, 'Why, anybody can do that!' That is true, almost anybody can do it—after he is shown how. You remember the story of Columbus. When he was told that many men had sailed to America, he called for an egg and asked any of those present to set it upon the small end and make it stand. None could do it, when he took it and tapping it on the table until slightly broken in, let go and it stood upright. Several voices shouted, 'Why, anybody can do that.' 'Yes,' answered the great discoverer, 'after he is shown the way.'

"Out of these simple experiments upon a cultivator came the perfected corn planter, with which two men and a team can plant from sixteen to twenty acres of corn in a day.

"In the spring of 1851, Mr. Brown made the first complete corn planter of the present style, and planted corn with it the following May. Prior to that he was experimenting, but it was his corn planter drop attached to a cultivator already described. In 1852 he planted with his improved machine sixteen acres for himself, and eight acres for Alfred Brown. That same spring he commenced the manufacture of ten machines, but, on account of poverty and embarrassments, only one was completed. About this time he determined to stake all he possessed upon the success of his invention. He had already sold everything about the place, including his last horse, to furnish means to secure his patents. He then sold his little farm for what he could get, went deeply into debt for more money, and took the chances of success. Times were hard and the facilities for manufacturing poor. He had no such machinery as you have seen here tonight; but everything had to be done by hand. Very soon he was so much involved that, had he been called upon to pay, he would not have been worth a dollar. But he was an upright man; had a good name; was full of enthusiasm for his new invention; and his largest creditors were willing to give him a fair trial. But he was frequently obliged to pay exorbitant rates of interest—sometimes from one to two per cent a month, and once three per cent for one month, and a short month at that. He commenced manufacturing at Shanghai, and in 1853 completed twelve machines, one of which that season planted three hundred acres of corn. In 1854 he made a hundred machines, and in 1855 he made three hundred machines, after which he removed to Galesburg. In 1856 he made six hundred machines, and in 1857 he made a thousand machines. It is not necessary for me to give in detail the number of machines in detail manufactured since that time. It is enough to say that last year Mr. Brown manufactured six thousand machines, and had orders which came too late been a little less tardy, he would have manufactured and sold many hundreds more.

"Everyone knew that corn could be planted with a hoe and would come up, but would it grow when run through the hopper of this newfangled machine? All could see that the machine would run very prettily through a field, but did it leave the corn in the right places in the proper quantities? Was it well covered, and would it grow? It was a serious matter for the manufacturers to answer these questions.

"It is not necessary to go through the years of long wearisome lawsuits. Shakespeare in Hamlet's soliloquy makes the 'law's delay' an excuse for suicide, and Dickens vividly protrays the miseries produced by the slow court of chancery in the imaginary case of Jarndyce and Jarndyce. It is enough for our purpose to state that in May, 1874, after hearing all the evidence and arguments, the supreme court of the United States, the highest judicial tribunal on this continent, declared that George W. Brown was the inventor of the corn planter. Soon after this decision was announced, most of those who had been engaged in the manufacture of planters came forward and paid Mr. Brown a royalty upon the machines they had made.

"The completion of these magnificent shops, with their monstrous capacity for turning out corn planters, marks an era in the history of Galesburg well worthy of inaugural ceremonies. The buildings comprise foundry, polishing rooms, blacksmith shops, wheel building (they do not use logs for wheels now) and office, besides this immense building. There are in these buildings thirty thousand square feet of floors. This building with some other improvements made this summer, cost sixty thousand dollars. With the present facilities, Mr. Brown can manufacture twenty thousand planters a year.

"I have thus as briefly as possible given a history of inventor and invention. Concerning Mr. Brown, I would be glad to say all that is in my heart. These great shops, Brown's Hotel, the Methodist Church edifice, proclaim his enterprise and public spirit more eloquently than any mere words can do. He has little of the learning of schools, and no mere accomplishments; yet there are very few more competent mechanics, and he is always a gentleman. He will not be ranked as either statesman or philosopher; yet there are no purer patriots, nor more practical common-sense men. He never preaches morality, but always practices it. He never wrangles upon doctrine, but is always a Christian. Would that we had more such men! Who can estimate their influence upon humanity? Give me the name, if you can, of a statesman whose whole life of lofty endeavor has given him a claim to gratitude equal to that of Johan Gutenberg, the inventor of printing. Call to mind, if you please, a military hero whose memory humanity has so much reason to bless, as that of George Stephenson. The mighty deeds of Alexander and Hannibal, of Cæsar and Napoleon—what are they compared with the triumphs of Galileo and Milton, of Stephenson, Fulton and Morse!

"How many men during the war represented in the army McCormick's reapers and Brown's corn planters; or what would have been the difference in the muster rolls if wheat had been cut by cradles and the corn planted with hoes, when the interest of our great armies depended upon wheat and corn? We in Galesburg can see how many families are fed and clothed by the seventy-five thousand dollars paid out annually in wages by Mr. Brown and how this money finds its way into and stimulates every branch of business; but who can estimate the comforts and advantages derived from this one machine in the Mississippi valley?"

The above glowing tribute is the history of George W. Brown to 1875, paid to him by one of the closest observers of the economic conditions of the state of Illinois and of the nation. From 1875 until 1892 Mr. Brown had active management of the shops. The business increased and flourished and was incorporated under the name of George W. Brown & Company. Mr. I. S. Perkins was general manager for a number of years. Loren Stevens was secretary, A. O. Peterson was master mechanic, and James E. Brown, son of George W. Brown, was treasurer. The shop buildings were enlarged to more than double their original size and a great deal of other machinery besides corn planters was manufacturned there, such as corn shellers, rakes, cultivators, discs, and other farming implements. During the year 1886 Mr. Brown purchased a ranch at Riverside, California, and spent a great deal of the winter months in his western home. He had one of the most beautiful orange ranches in the Santa Ana valley and spared neither time nor expense in putting it in shape.

Mr. Brown was always an active participant in public affairs and even in his declining years did not cease to take a helpful interest in matters relative to the general good. He served for one term as mayor of Galesburg and during his administration the first attempts were made to establish hard-road streets.

In 1891 Mrs. Brown, who had by her loving example and industrious life and her worthy counsel, assisted Mr. Brown in his brightest as well as his darkest days, expired at Galesburg, surrounded by her family, consisting of Mrs. Elizabeth Perrin, Mrs. Jennie S. Cowan and James E. Brown. Her death was a sad blow to Mr. Brown and apparently he never recovered from the effects. In the winter time he would go, first with one daughter and then with the other, to California, there to spend his winters, his health being very much impaired. In the spring of 1895 he returned to Galesburg earlier than usual. Anxious to see the old place of his early struggles in Illinois and his old friends who were living near Tylerville, he took his team and buggy and drove to Tylerville. The day was fair enough when he started, but before night it developed into a roaring, blustering storm. Not being acclimated to such weather Mr. Brown contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia and he died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Cowan, on the 2d of June, 1895. He left surviving him an only son, James E. Brown, who was manager of the Brown & Company Planter Works from the withdrawal of I. S. Perkins until the death of his father, George W. Brown. Immediately afterward the son went to Riverside, California, to take care of the large financial interests which his father had acquired there. He purchased the shares of the other heirs in the property there and added three or four other ranches to the holdings which his father had acquired. The surviving daughters are Mrs. M. T. Perrin, and Mrs. Jennie S. Cowan. Both live in Galesburg, surrounded by their children.

Mr. James E. Brown is residing in California now. He is a director of one of the banks and a director of the La Mesa Fruit Packing Company. His wife died at Galesburg in November, 1910, while they were visiting his daughter, Mrs. M. J. Daugherty. Mr. Brown has two daughters living, Mrs. M. J. Daugherty and Mrs. A. L. Woodill. The latter lives near her father in Riverside, California. Mr. James E. Brown was for many years a director in the Galesburg National Bank of Galesburg. He was a public-spirited man and although of a retiring nature was admittedly one of Galesburg's financiers. Mrs. Cowan and Mrs. Perrin have spent their lives in Galesburg and can enjoy the many incidents that George W. Brown's life left in the history of the city.

George W. Brown was a free giver to every enterprise that came to Galesburg. He was one of the donors to the Santa Fe railroad and he liberally contributed toward other public enterprises of all kinds. He owned two farms two miles east of Galesburg and on each of them he constructed a lake. The first was a small one, which he called Lake Washington, and then he constructed another lake partly in Galesburg township and partly in Knox township, just north of Main street, which he called Lake George. This lake he offered several times to the city of Galesburg, together with the property surrounding it, for less than what it cost him, the intention being to establish a public park there with water supply for the city. The offer was refused. Finally the heirs sold the property to the Burlington road for their water supply and they changed the name to Lake Rice. It is not denied or questioned that the most public-spirited man that Galesburg ever had was George W. Brown. It is further not denied or questioned that George W. Brown made many valuable donations to public enterprises, especially to religious and educational institutions, and yet, singular to say, with all that, no place has been dedicated to his name, no effort made to assist the citizens of Galesburg in preserving the memory of a man whose works for thirty years contributed the largest revenues the city ever had, with the exception of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. The great achievements of George W. Brown in a business way will long survive his memory as a great and good citizen. In the past Galesburg has failed to realize what she has lost but his name and good works will be a monument to his memory for years to come.

RILEY ROOT.

In the history of the pioneers of Knox county it is imperative that mention be made of Riley Root who arrived at Log City in the latter part of July, 1836. From that time forward until his death he was closely associated, save for a brief period, with the development and progress of this part of the state. His talents were varied and along many lines he displayed more than ordinary ability. He was an inventor whose ideas have become practical in mechanical circles, and he possessed talents of seemingly diverse nature in that he was a musician of considerable skill and ability. His impress for good was also felt along many other lines and Galesburg has reason to honor him as one of her worthy and valued early settlers. He was born at Durham, Greene county, New York, August 29, 1795, and passed away February 24, 1870. He was descended from good old Anglo-Saxon stock, his ancestry being traced back directly to John Root who emigrated to America from Badby, England, in the year 1630. Ten years later he married Miss Mary Kilbourne who came to America in 1635. They settled in Farmington, Connecticut, and became the progenitors of the family whose representatives for many generations continued to reside in New England. Thomas Root, the father of Riley Root, was born in Westfield, Massachusetts, September 25, 1765, and died at Camden, New York, January 22, 1826. He was married in Westfield, Massachusetts, February 10, 1791, to Princess Noble, who was born in Westfield, May 8, 1766, and died at Camden, New York, April 5, 1830. At the time of their marriage they removed to Durham, Greene county, New York, where Thomas Root purchased a farm on which he resided until 1821. He then bought land in Camden and removed to that place where he and his wife continued to reside until called to their final rest. They were the parents of five children, Roland, Mrs. Clarissa Phelps, Riley, Reuben and Royal.

Riley Root early developed traits of character that foreshadowed upright purpose and honorable manhood. He remained with his parents upon the home farm through the period of his youth and his educational advantages were somewhat limited but he attended the district school as opportunity offered.

Riley Root

This however, did not satisfy his thirst for knowledge. So anxious was he to increase his fund of information that, in an age when books were very scarce he kept a dictionary on the mantel and utilized every spare moment in poring over its pages. He thus stored his mind with many valuable bits of knowledge and such was his mental power that he was able to systematize these and use the information at will. In early youth he was a pupil in the Westfield (Mass.) Academy for a time, there preparing for teaching and also pursuing a course in surveying. For many years he taught school and displayed particular ability in imparting readily and clearly to others the knowledge he had acquired. In 1821 he purchased a farm at Camden, New York, and resided thereon until 1836 but spent much time in the interim in surveying in addition to performing the work of the fields. In 1835, when a company was organized for the purpose of building a college town in what was then considered the far west, he became one of the number and in the latter part of July, 1836, arrived at Log City, Knox county, Illinois. Possessing expert mechanical ability he aided in erecting the first house in Galesburg and also assisted largely in the building of the old First church. In 1837 he procured some big stones and at his own fireside, with the aid of only a small chisel and hammer, he shaped these into millstones. Then in company with another, he erected a horse-power gristmill, and thus furnished the only means for the colonists within a radius of fifty miles to get their grain ground until a waterpower mill, known as Olmstead's mill, near Monmouth, was erected. He continued an active factor in the work of progress and development here until April, 1848, when, in company with others, he traveled in a train of twenty-five wagons drawn by oxen, overland for Oregon, arriving at his destination in the autumn. In the following spring he went to California where gold had just been discovered. He remained for some time searching for the precious metal but ill health forced him to return home and taking the route via the Isthmus of Panama and New Orleans he arrived in Knox county on the 8th of January, 1850, being the first man to return from the gold fields of California. Upon his return he wrote a book concerning his travels, giving a graphic account of the trip and a description of the processes of mining gold on the Pacific coast. He possessed considerable literary ability and in 1866 he wrote a treatise on musical philosophy and made a keyboard to illustrate the transposition of the scale. He was very fond of music and during his later years devoted much time to the study of the art. He was recognized as a musician of much more than ordinary skill although he shrank from appearing in public as an interpreter of the art. With only the simple tools at his command he made, working at his own fireside a violin of such excellent tone and quality that it was purchased by one of Galesburg's leading musicians. His skill along mechanical lines was variously shown and he gave to the world a number of valuable inventions. In 1857 he secured a patent for the first rotary fan blower—a machine for clearing the snow from the railroad tracks. The device proved successful beyond his expectations, but through lack of funds he was unable to demonstrate its usefulness to the skeptical public and the officials of the new railroad enterprise who could not grasp the importance of such a machine. The patent therefore was allowed to expire. Later the efficiency of his invention became apparent to officials of western roads, and today his principle is employed in the machines for clearing the tracks where the greatest snow blockades occur. About the time he was perfecting his snow plow he secured the patent on a device for holding a spirit level in surveying, besides a number of other patents of value. He ordered made the first glass fruit jars ever used. They were closed with corks and sealed with wax and held four and six quarts. He also devised a magnetic battery and took magnetic treatments in his own home. Whenever he realized a need it seemed he could meet it by reason of his superior inventive skill and ingenuity.

On the 7th of October, 1821, Mr. Root was united in marriage to Miss Lavinia Butler who was born at Durham, New York, April 9, 1803, and died at Camden that state on the 25th of June, 1834. Five children were born to them but only two, Dency Elizabeth and Clarissa Noble, reached years of maturity. During his later years Mr. Root lived a more retired life, dividing his time between his two daughters. To him was accorded the precious prize of keen mentality to the last, and his physical powers were also but slightly impaired in the closing years of his life. In 1870 he walked two miles on a bitter cold day, notwithstanding the protest of his daughters, to obtain castings for a steel sphere to be magnetized —a work which had not then been accomplished. He contracted a severe cold which brought on pneumonia and he passed away three days later.

Mr. Root was always a man of retired disposition and of few words. He spent his leisure in research along many scientific lines and remained a student to the last. Few college-bred men possessed as comprehensive a knowledge of scientific laws and principles, and in addition, Mr. Root was a man of more than ordinary literary attainments. During his travels, which covered many sections of the country, he gathered many choice curios and rare geological specimens. Although more than four decades have passed since he was called from this life it is well known that his contributions to the world's work were valuable, and some of these have not yet reached their full fruition. As the pioneer inventor of the rotary snow plow, who can measure how great is the influence and result of his work or who can estimate how much suffering as well as delay in time has been prevented by the use of this device which he brought forth? His investigation and researches along scientific lines were ever a stimulus to others. Death gives the perspective which places man in his true relations with his fellows and his age, and in this instance indicates clearly how far reaching in its efforts was the life of one of Galesburg's most honored pioneers.

FRANK E. JOHNSON.

Frank E. Johnson, proprietor of the Johnson Fuel Company located at 646 Chambers street, Galesburg, was born in this city on the 7th of March, 1868. His parents were Andrew F. and Anna (Peterson) Johnson, both natives of Westergotland, Sweden. There the father, whose birth occurred on Christmas day, 1823, learned the carpenter's trade and he also served in the Swedish army. Both parents emigrated to the United States in 1852, locating in Galesburg, where they were subsequently married. Andrew F. Johnson was a skilled mechanic, and for many years was successfully engaged in carpentry work and contracting, thus acquiring a competence that enabled him to spend his latter the tracks where the greatest snow blockades occur. About the time he was perfecting his snow plow he secured the patent on a device for holding a spirit level in surveying, besides a number of other patents of value. He ordered made the first glass fruit jars ever used. They were closed with corks and sealed with wax and held four and six quarts. He also devised a magnetic battery and took magnetic treatments in his own home. Whenever he realized a need it seemed he could meet it by reason of his superior inventive skill and ingenuity.

FRANK E. JOHNSON

On the 7th of October, 1821, Mr. Root was united in marriage to Miss Lavinia Butler who was born at Durham, New York, April 9, 1803, and died at Camden that state on the 25th of June, 1834. Five children were born to them but only two, Dency Elizabeth and Clarissa Noble, reached years of maturity. During his later years Mr. Root lived a more retired life, dividing his time between his two daughters. To him was accorded the precious prize of keen mentality to the last, and his physical powers were also but slightly impaired in the closing years of his life. In 1870 he walked two miles on a bitter cold day, notwithstanding the protest of his daughters, to obtain castings for a steel sphere to be magnetized —a work which had not then been accomplished. He contracted a severe cold which brought on pneumonia and he passed away three days later.

Mr. Root was always a man of retired disposition and of few words. He spent his leisure in research along many scientific lines and remained a student to the last. Few college-bred men possessed as comprehensive a knowledge of scientific laws and principles, and in addition, Mr. Root was a man of more than ordinary literary attainments. During his travels, which covered many sections of the country, he gathered many choice curios and rare geological specimens. Although more than four decades have passed since he was called from this life it is well known that his contributions to the world's work were valuable, and some of these have not yet reached their full fruition. As the pioneer inventor of the rotary snow plow, who can measure how great is the influence and result of his work or who can estimate how much suffering as well as delay in time has been prevented by the use of this device which he brought forth? His investigation and researches along scientific lines were ever a stimulus to others. Death gives the perspective which places man in his true relations with his fellows and his age, and in this instance indicates clearly how far reaching in its efforts was the life of one of Galesburg's most honored pioneers.

FRANK E. JOHNSON.

Frank E. Johnson, proprietor of the Johnson Fuel Company located at 646 Chambers street, Galesburg, was born in this city on the 7th of March, 1868. His parents were Andrew F. and Anna (Peterson) Johnson, both natives of Westergotland, Sweden. There the father, whose birth occurred on Christmas day, 1823, learned the carpenter's trade and he also served in the Swedish army. Both parents emigrated to the United States in 1852, locating in Galesburg, where they were subsequently married. Andrew F. Johnson was a skilled mechanic, and for many years was successfully engaged in carpentry work and contracting, thus acquiring a competence that enabled him to spend his latter days in retirement. He passed away in November, 1899, at the age of almost seventy-six years. Both parents held membership in the Swedish Lutheran church, which the father erected in 1868, and for many years, he was one of its officers. In his political views he was a republican. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson numbered four, of whom our subject is the youngest. The others were as follows: Charles F., who is deceased; Tillie M., who is at home; and Oscar F., who died in infancy.

FRANK E. JOHNSON

The education of Frank E. Johnson was begun in the public schools and completed by a commercial course in Brown's Business College. After laying aside his text-books, he worked with his father at the carpenter's trade for seven years, and then entered the employ of the Simpson Lumber Company. For fifteen years he held the position of manager of the latter enterprise, and during that time he bought out the business he is now conducting, which was founded by Cline & Shaw. In 1908 he gave up his position with the lumber company and has ever since given his undivided attention to the development of his fuel business. It has made a very substantial growth since he undertook its management three years ago, and gives the most gratifying assurance of prospering. He carries both hard and soft coal as well as coke and wood and every other variety of fuel, maintaining both a wholesale and retail department. Mr. Johnson is the type of man who makes anything he undertakes succeed, having not only the enterprise and industry but the determination of purpose that refuses to recognize defeat.

In this city on the 6th of October, 1896, Mr. Johnson was united in marriage to Miss J. Pauline Anderson, a daughter of Hans and Hannah Anderson, and they have become the parents of two daughters, Helen Frances and Ruth Margaret.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are members of the First Swedish Lutheran church. His fraternal relations are with the order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. His connections with organizations of a more purely social nature are confined to the Galesburg and Country Clubs, while he keeps in touch with his fellow business men through the medium of the Retail Merchants Association. His political support is given to the republican party, but he has never sought public honors, preferring to give his entire time and attention to the promotion of his business interests. The Johnson Fuel Company was founded on the 4th of July, 1903, and its development must be entirely attributed to his clear judgment, sagacity and unceasing effort.

THOMAS McCLELLAND, D. D., LL. D.

Thomas McClelland, D. D., LL. D., was called to the presidency of Knox College in 1900. He has sustained during his administration its high reputation —it being one of the oldest colleges in the state. He was born in Quilly, County Derry, Ireland, May 1, 1846. His parents were William and Margaret (Smiley) McClelland, the former a teacher of considerable experience. The family on both sides comes of Scotch ancestry.

Doctor McClelland was only three years of age when brought by his parents to the new world. He early displayed special aptitude in his studies and his fondness for learning led him to continue his education beyond the public schools. He prepared for college in Denmark Academy, Denmark, Iowa, and was graduated from Oberlin College in 1875 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Eight years later, his alma mater conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts. In the meantime, he had been a student in the Oberlin Theological Seminary in 1876-7, and in the Union Theological Seminary, in 1877-8, and in 1880, he was graduated from the Andover (Mass.) Theological Seminary, having thus thoroughly qualified for the ministry. However, his work has been mostly done in the college class room, rather than in the pulpit. In 1880, he accepted the position of professor of philosophy at Tabor College, where he remained until 1891. In the fall of that year, he became president of the Pacific University of Oregon, where he continued until 1900. In September of the latter year, he was called to the presidency of Knox College. During his administration, the college has made most gratifying progress, both in its educational standing and in its material and financial resources.

On the 19th of August, 1880, in Denmark, Iowa, Doctor McClelland was married to Miss Harriet C. Day and by this union three children were born to them, Kellogg Day, Cochran Bruce and Ruth Marjory.

Doctor McClelland has become widely known in educational circles. In 1891, Tabor College conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. In 1905, the University of Illinois honored him with the degree of Doctor of Law. He has been a trustee of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching since its establishment in 1905.

CHARLES ALFRED HINCKLEY.

Charles Alfred Hinckley at one time lived on a farm that embraced the district between Seminary and Chambers streets in Galesburg and north of Grove street and the fields which he once cultivated are converted into a thickly populated and splendidly improved district of that city. With the history of Knox county from pioneer times he was closely associated, arriving here in 1846—the year in which he attained his majority. He was born January 23, 1825, in Meredith, Delaware county, New York, and was descended from Samuel Hinckley, who came of good English stock, and was born at Tenderden, in the county of Kent, England, in 1595. He brought his family to the new world, accompanied by Nathaniel Tilden, an ancestor of Governor Samuel J. Tilden, of political fame. They embarked on the sailing ship Hercules, a vessel of two hundred tons, in 1634, sailing from Sandwich, the seaport of Kent, and several months later reached Boston, taking up their abode at Scituate, about twenty miles from Boston. Later they removed to Barnstable, where the parents died. Their youngest son was John Hinckley, the founder of the branch of the family to which Charles A. Hinckley, of Galesburg, belonged. He settled in Stonington, Connecticut. Mrs. Hannah (Wheeler) Hinckley, the grandmother of Charles A. Hinckley, was a descendant of John Howland, of the Plymouth colony. Alfred Hinckley, the father of Charles A. Hinckley, was born in Berne, Albany county, New York, December 6, 1799, and died at Galesburg, March 10, 1888. He followed agricultural pursuits and also conducted a sawmill in New York. In that state he married Eliza Stanley Van Devort, who was born in Cork, Ireland, June 25, 1797, and died in Galesburg, March 4, 1874. Mrs. Hinckley had been brought to America by her parents in 1799, when about two years of age. The voyage, undertaken by a sailing vessel, was a stormy one and it was feared that they would not reach their destination. During one severe storm the mother put her two little daughters in a wooden chest and locked them in so that in case the boat sunk they would not be devoured by sharks. Mrs. Hinckley was reared in the Empire state and in Delaware county, March 23, 1824, gave her hand in marriage to Alfred Hinckley. The year 1846 witnessed their removal to Illinois, at which time they settled on a farm south of Knoxville, but later removed to Galesburg. In their family were six children, Charles Alfred, Mary Eliza, George Wheeler, William Stanley, Francis Edward and Harriette Amelia. Of these Mary E. and George W. are still living.

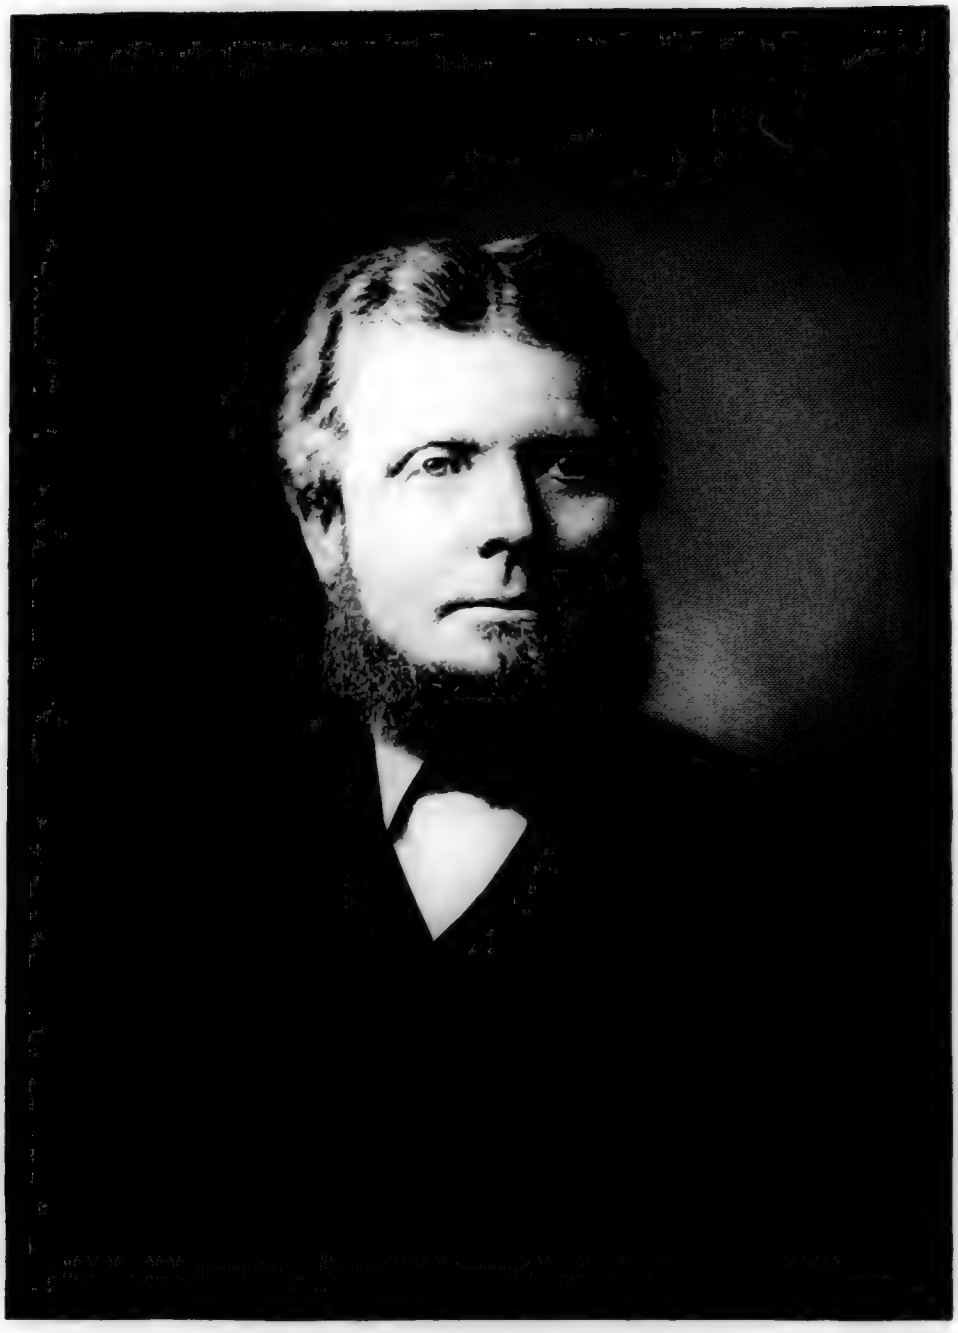
Like many other boys of his day the opportunities which Charles Alfred Hinckley had for obtaining an education were quite limited. He spent the three months' winter term as a pupil in the district schools while the remainder of the year was devoted to hauling logs to his father's sawmill or to the work of the farm. When sixteen or seventeen years of age he secured the position of driver on the towpath of the Erie canal. When twenty years of age, in company with his sister Mary he journeyed westward to Illinois, with Knoxville as his destination. For a time he lived with his uncle, W. H. Holcomb, where he proved his usefulness in doing any tasks that were assigned him. For his labor he received the munificent sum of nine dollars per month, a sum paid him in provisions for the family when they arrived in Illinois the following spring. During the winter of 1845-6 he carried the mail on horseback from Princeton to Macomb. The winter was severe with deep snow, and it was not an easy task to follow the trail over the unbroken prairie, many times through blinding snow storms. The following spring he rented a farm south of Knoxville and thus had a home in readiness for his parents and the other members of the family upon their arrival in June. In 1849 they removed to Galesburg, renting what was then known as the Kellogg farm, situated between Seminary and Chambers streets and north of Grove street. The old barn which they used still remains in about the middle of the block. In 1852 the family purchased from the trustees of Knox College a quarter section in the northeast part of the city. In 1857 he arranged to buy out the interests of the others of the family in that property and they removed to a farm across the street to the west, leaving Charles A. Hinckley in possession of the farm upon which he lived until his death, on the 15th of October, 1910. It was not an easy task to make payments upon the place and carry on the work of improvement. Many were the vicissitudes, struggles and trials, but with the encouragement and aid of his wife, who was judicious in management, far-seeing and helpful, he paid for the original farm and added something to the first purchase.



It was in Galesburg, on the 17th of March, 1861, that Mr. Hinckley was married to Miss Clarissa N. Root, the wedding ceremony being performed by the Rev. Kingsbury of the First Baptist church. Mrs. Hinckley is the daughter of Riley and Lavinia (Butler) Root, and was born in Camden, New York, November 22, 1831. She is one of the few survivors of the founders of Galesburg and is at present the only living member in Galesburg of that memorable canal boat party that came from New York to Illinois by water, the trip extending over a period of three months through the heated season of the year, being terminated when they reached Log City, August 2, 1836. Her father, Riley Root, was born August 29, 1795, and died February 24, 1870. He was of good old English stock, being a descendant of John Root, the emigrant ancestor who came to America in 1630. The wife of Riley Root was born April 9, 1803, and passed away June 25, 1834. Five daughters were born of their marriage but only two, Dency E. and Clarissa N., reached maturity. The father was a mechanic and inventor of rare ability, bringing out a number of valuable inventions, the most important of which was a rotary fan blower, a machine for clearing the snow from the railroad tracks. The device proved successful but for lack of funds he was unable to demonstrate its usefulness to the skeptical public and officials of a new railroad enterprise, and the patent was allowed to expire. Later its efficiency was noted by officials of the western roads and today the principle which he used is employed in machines for clearing the tracks where the greatest snow blockades occur. In 1837 Mr. Root cut millstones and built a horse-power grist mill which was the only mill within a radius of fifty miles until the erection of Olmstead's water-power mill near Monmouth, Illinois. The Root mill was a great convenience to the settlers, being chiefly used to grind corn and sorghum. Mr. Root also assisted in erecting the first house built in the city of Galesburg and in other ways took a most active and helpful part in promoting public progress and in laying the foundation for the city's present prosperity.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinckley became the parents of four children: Pluma E.; Mrs. Ada P. Chapman; Arthur E.; and Alice G. Lavinia, who departed this life February 20, 1904. In his political views Mr. Hinckley was a republican from the time of the organization of the party. His first vote had been cast for General Zachary Taylor. He joined the First Baptist church of Galesburg on its organization and at his death was its oldest member. Both the Hinckley and the Root families have taken a very active and helpful part in matters relating to general progress and improvement in Galesburg and Knox county, and no history of this section would be complete without according to them due recognition of what has been done in laying the foundations for the present development of this part of the state.

JOSEPH THIRLWELL.

When keen business judgment supplements tireless labor the result is certain. Those qualities were dominant factors in the life of Joseph Thirlwell and gradually he worked his way upward in the business world to a place of distinction. He was born at Combhill, Northumberland, England, July 5, 1827, a son of John and Ruth Thirlwell. The father died in England after which the mother married again and with her son Joseph came to America, settling in Galesburg. They landed on American shores on the 4th of July, 1849, and made their way direct to Knox county.

Joseph Thirlwall

In the meantime Joseph Thirlwell had obtained a fair education in the common schools of his native town and had learned the stone mason's trade. After arriving in Galesburg he purchased a farm that now lies in the outskirts of the city and was a part of the college grant land. In addition to the cultivation of his fields he worked at his trade, building culverts on the land of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, then in the course of construction. He also worked on various buildings in Galesburg. He was a natural mechanic and very efficient in all tasks of a mechanical nature. Whatever he did was characterized by thoroughness and this was one of the elements that brought him success. His first house on his farm was of frame but he later erected one of brick and that still stands. Mr. Thirlwell burned the brick for his second building, and he did much to further the work of improvement upon his homestead. He was very thrifty, had keen business judgment and was possessed of unfaltering industry. As the years passed he became interested in investments and speculation and amassed a fortune. His opinion of the value of a business proposition was usually sound. He seemed to know where the most advantageous investments could be made and time proved the wisdom of his opinions. When he passed away he had many financial interests and was a director of the First National Bank and the Farmers & Mechanics Bank, both of Galesburg. He lived and died on the farm which he purchased on his removal to Knox county, having in the meantime brought it to a high state of cultivation. For years it was the "first premium" farm of the county and also won the cash prize and gold medal at the Illinois State Fair.

In 1876, at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, England, Mr. Thirlwell was married to Miss Charlotte Bullman of England, who died April 23, 1891. The following year Mr. Thirlwell wedded Miss Caroline Giddings of Galesburg and for nine years they traveled life's journey happily together, being separated by the death of Mr. Thirlwell on the 14th of February, 1901. In politics he was a republican and fraternally was connected with the Masons. He was domestic in his tastes and loved his home and fireside, spending his happiest hours there. While he had membership in no church he was actuated in all he did by high principles and was a liberal giver to all denominations. He also gave generously to charitable organizations and to the needy individual, in fact, his hand was ever outreaching in aid and sympathy to those in distress, and in matters of citizenship he was public spirited, seeking ever the welfare and best interests of the community; in a word, he stood for helpfulness and for progress and he accomplished much good in the span of life allotted him which covered almost seventy-four years.

CHARLES WESLEY LEFFINGWELL, D. D.

Although Dr. Charles W. Leffingwell has since 1908 made his home in Pasadena, California, he yet gives a portion of his time to St. Mary's school at Knoxville, of which he was the founder and of which he still continues rector. Moreover, he was an honored citizen of Knox county for forty years and his life's labors have constituted an important chapter in its history. A man of scholarly attainments, whose talents have been devoted to the work of assisting and instructing his fellowmen along intellectual and moral lines, his influence has been of no restricted order, for from the platform and through the press he has left the impress of his thought and purpose upon the lives of many. He was born in Ellington, Connecticut, December 5, 1840, a son of Lyman and Sarah Chapman (Brown) Leffingwell, both of whom were natives of Connecticut and were representatives of old families of that state. The father was a descendant of Lieutenant Thomas Leffingwell, a leader in the colony which settled in Norwich, Connecticut, about 1637.

Although born in New England, Dr. Leffingwell spent a portion of his youth in Knox county and was graduated from Knox College in Galesburg with the class of 1862. In recognition of the excellent work which he had done in connection with the ministry his alma mater conferred upon him the Doctor of Divinity degree in 1875. Ere he pursued his college course he took up the profession of teaching and was principal of the Galveston Academy in 1859-60. He also served as deputy surveyor of Galveston county. Following his graduation from Knox College he became military instructor in the Poughkeepsie Military Institute, where he remained from 1862 until 1865. In the meantime he had determined to enter upon the active work of the ministry and was graduated at the Nashotah Theological Seminary with the class of 1867. The same year he was ordained deacon and priest and was assigned to the position of assistant minister of St. James church in Chicago. The following year he founded St. Mary's school at Knoxville, Illinois, with which he has been more or less actively connected to the present time. He has also been rector of the school since 1868. Along varied and constantly broadening lines his usefulness has extended and in many fields of labor his work has been a vital element for moral and intellectual progress. He was connected with St. Alban's school in 1890 and for twenty-one years he was editor and publisher of The Living Church, a paper published weekly in Chicago to further the interests of his denomination. In every possible way he has promoted the growth and extended the influence of his church, being an active factor in its organized and in its individual efforts. He has been president of the standing committee of the diocese of Quincy (Ill.) since its organization in 1878 and has been deputy to the general convention since 1877. He has also been secretary and treasurer of Jubilee College, rector of St. Alban's school since 1890 and visitor of St. Martha's school of Knoxville. He is likewise a trustee of the Western Theological Seminary at Chicago and is a lecturer on church history in the Training School for Deaconesses in Los Angeles, California. He has likewise proved himself a capable business man in connection with more material interests, being the president of the Leffingwell Rancho, Inc., of Whittier, in California. Along the lines of general progress and improvement he has likewise been active and especially in the fields of scientific investigation. He is a member of the American Geographical Society, the Chicago Geographic Society, the National Geographic Society and the Archaeological Institute of America.

In 1862, at Westfield, New York, Dr. Leffingwell was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Francis, daughter of John Francis, who came from Kent, England, to the new world. The children of this marriage are: Charles Warring, who married Virginia Rowland, and resides in Pasadena, California; Ernest De Kovin, an Arctic explorer; Hortense Nesbit, the wife of Harlan R. Wilson; Gertrude, the wife of Dr. John Walter Vaughan; and Alice, who became the wife of Dr. John T. Binkley, of Chicago, and died leaving one child, Madeline, who is now living with her grandparents. As stated, Dr. Leffingwell now makes his home in Pasadena, California, although his various duties, interests and activities call him frequently elsewhere. He belongs to the Valley Hunt Club of Pasadena and the Annandale Country Club, but he also still holds membership in the University Club and the Church Club of Chicago and in the Galesburg and Knoxville City Clubs. It would be tautological in this connection to enter into any series of statements showing Dr. Leffingwell to be a man of broad intelligence and genuine public spirit, for these have been shadowed forth between the lines of this review. Strong in his individuality, he never lacks the courage of his convictions but there are as dominating elements in his individuality a lively human sympathy and an abiding charity, which, as taken in connection with the sterling integrity and honor of his character, have naturally gained for him the respect and confidence of men.

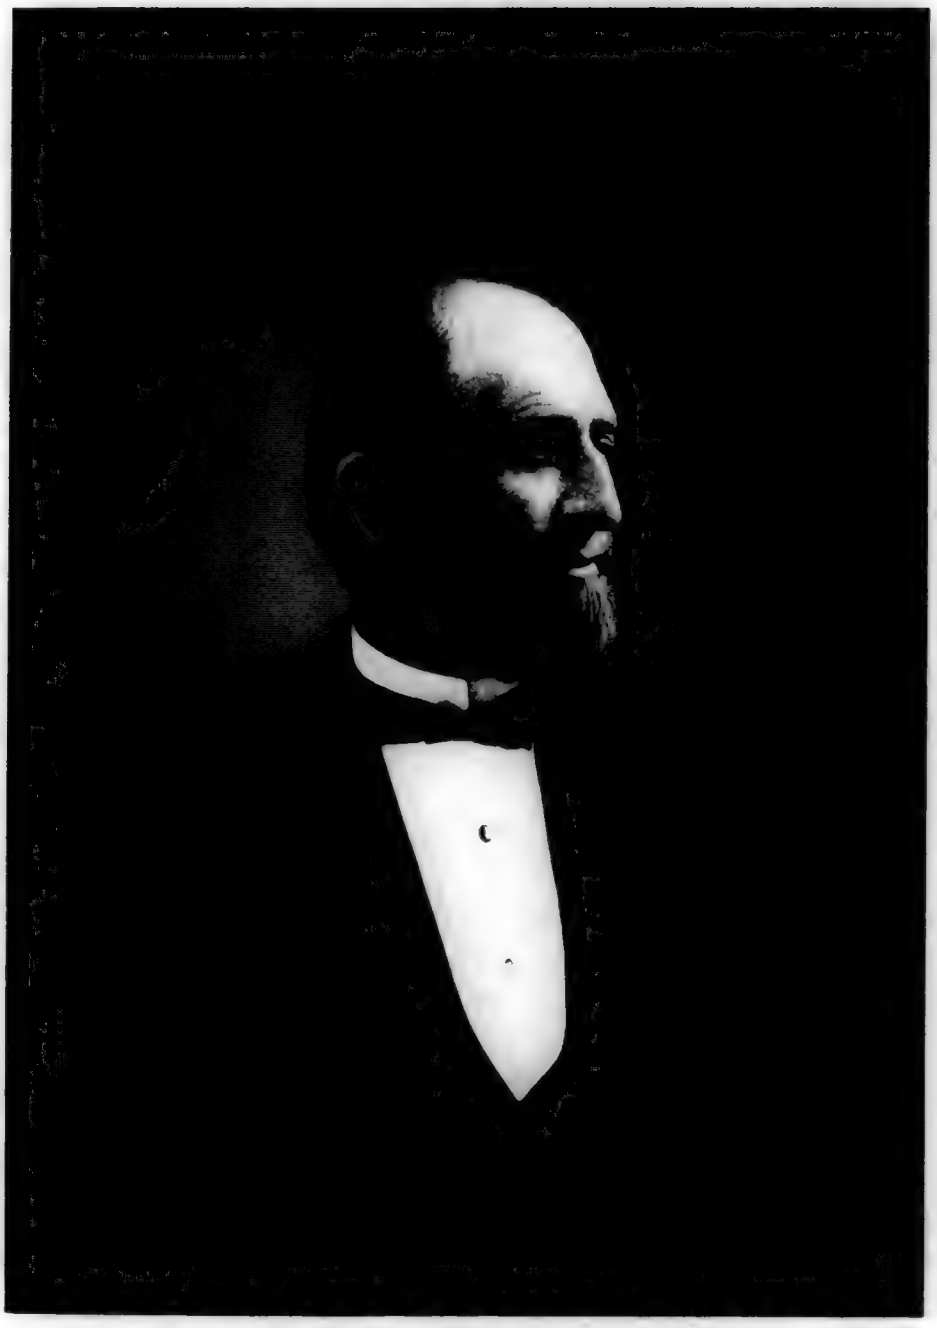
PROFESSOR NEHEMIAH H. LOSEY.

Thirty-seven years have passed since Professor Nehemiah H. Losey was called from this life, and yet Galesburg will never cease to honor his memory because his work lives on in the lives of those who came under his teachings and those who have benefited by the instruction received in Knox College, of which he was one of the founders and promoters. He was born in Orange county, New York, in 1804, and was graduated from Middlebury College, Vermont, in that city, with the class of 1830. Taking up the profession of teaching as a life work, he was connected with the Potsdam (N. Y.) Academy for a time and subsequently became a teacher in Whitesboro, New York. While in the latter place he became interested in the project instituted by the Rev. Dr. Gale for founding and endowing a Christian college in the then far west. He became one of the incorporators of Knox College and a lifelong member of its board of trustees. For seventeen years he was secretary of the board and for eleven years was its treasurer. He came to Illinois in the early summer of the year 1836 and surveyed and laid out the town of Galesburg. He then returned to Michigan for his family and in the fall again reached Knox county and opened a school at Log City, Henderson Grove, with Miss Lucy Gay as his assistant. In that school both the common and classical branches were taught and this constituted the real foundation of Knox College. In connection with his school duties he served as the town's first postmaster, being appointed in 1837 and acting in that capacity for four years. He remained as principal of the academy until college courses were organized and introduced, at which time he was elected to the chair of mathematics and natural philosophy, which position he held until the year 1861, when failing health compelled him to resign. During the earlier years of the school he also filled the chair of physics and chemistry and the progress of the school is indicative of the excellent work which he did in collaboration with the other teachers of the institution. He ever held to high ideals in his work, was progressive in his methods and kept in touch with the advancement continuously being made in the teachers profession.



Soon after resigning Professor Losey returned to New York, where he resided for three years, and then again came to Galesburg. He was elected to the office of treasurer of the college, which position he filled to the time of his death in June, 1875.

His political allegiance was given to the republican party and his religious faith was that of the Presbyterian church. He was one of the first in the Upper Mississippi valley to plant the seeds of higher civilization. When Chicago was struggling to maintain its place as a thriving village he was engaged in the organization and conduct of a school that in the scope of its work and influence should be equal to the older institutions of similar character in the east. Knox College stands as a monument to the labors of such men and its hundreds of alumni pay tributes of respect and honor to his memory. He was a man of high ideals, broad culture and a teacher of eminent ability. Although retiring in disposition, he was ever genial and amiable, was conscientious in the discharge of his duties and ever stood as a high type of the Christian gentleman.

CHARLES H. MATHEWS.

To accomplish what one undertakes, to believe that one's capacities and powers are equal to his opportunities, to avail oneself of the advantages near at hand—all these things indicate the innate strength of the individual and are the measure of his success. Prominent among those who have occupied foremost positions in the ranks of Galesburg's business men and who have attained a notable measure of prosperity, at the same time commanding the respect and honor of those with whom they have had dealings, was Charles H. Mathews who was born in Schenectady, New York, February 1, 1823. His parents, John and Letitia (Humphrey) Mathews, were born, reared and married in County Tyrone, Ireland, and after the birth of their first child they came to America, settling at Schenectady, New York, where the father followed merchandising for many years. He died in 1871.

In the common schools of his native city Charles H. Mathews pursued his education, but his father met with financial reverses and the boy began earning his own livelihood by clerking in a store in Schenectady when thirteen years of age. Later he went to New York city where he engaged in business on his own account for several years. He then returned to his native city where he established a large dry-goods business which he conducted successfully until 1856. His interests were constantly broadening in scope and volume, and believing that there were still better opportunities in the middle west he came in 1856 to Galesburg where he engaged in merchandising until 1864. The following year he became identified with the First National Bank of the city but in the autumn of 1865 he returned to Schenectady where he remained, retired from business, until 1874. His Galesburg interests having grown to large proportions he returned here and again entered the dry-goods business from which he finally retired in January, 1881. So wisely, capably and carefully were his interests directed that he amassed a fortune and had become the richest man in Galesburg at the time of his death which occurred on the 12th of March, 1883. Difficulties and obstacles never seemed to cause any great mental disturbance with him; he seemed to find a way out of any dilemma such as one continually confronts in a business career and gradually he advanced to a point where his success made him one of the foremost business men in Galesburg. He always followed constructive methods, never taking advantage of the necessities of another, and his straightforward dealing and enterprise gained him not only prosperity but the high regard and honor of his fellow townsmen.

Charles W. Mathews

On the 18th of October, 1855, in Amsterdam, New York, Mr. Mathews was married to Miss Eliza Sheldon, a daughter of Alexander Sheldon, for many years a distinguished member of the Albany bar. He married Miss Jackson and died in Amsterdam, New York, in 1860. Mr. and Mrs. Mathews became the parents of five children: Alice, now deceased; Letitia; Charles H., who has also passed away; Mary; and Annie W., who is the wife of J. Grant Beadle of Galesburg.

Mr. Mathews gave his political allegiance to the republican party but never sought the rewards of office in recognition of party fealty. He died in Galesburg, March 12, 1883, and a life of great activity and usefulness was thus ended. Many years have since come and gone but his memory is cherished by those who knew him and all students of history recognize the part he played in the upbuilding and development of this section. It was a far step from his starting point in a humble clerkship at the age of thirteen years to his later position as a foremost citizen of Galesburg, but the way which he traveled was straight, his purpose unfaltering and his success was the legitimate reward of his enterprise.

ERASTUS SWIFT WILLCOX.

That man may be considered fortunate who succeeds in finding a place in the business or educational world, for which he is in all respects thoroughly adapted.

The above reflection applies with full force to Erastus Swift Willcox, the librarian of the Peoria public library. Mr. Willcox was born at Port Henry, Essex county, New York, February 16, 1830, a son of Henry and Mary Keziah (Meacham) Willcox. They both belonged to that sturdy, substantial, sensible class, common to New England and New York state. The father was a farmer. He came west as one of the first colonists who settled on the prairie where the city of Galesburg, in Knox county, now stands. His object in settling there was to give his children the benefit of a liberal education in the college which, under the plan of Dr. George W. Gale, was about to be established in Galesburg, now and for a long time known as Knox College.

James Willcox, grandfather of Erastus S. Willcox, was born in Killingworth, Connecticut. His ancestors came from Plymouth, England, about 1640. In 1773 the grandfather, when about eighteen years of age, removed to Bridgeport, Vermont, where he owned a large farm on the shore of Lake Champlain, residing there until his death in 1840. He was one of the two guides to help Ethan Allen and his Green Mountain boys across the lake at the time of the capture of Fort Ticonderoga in 1775. His remembrance of the language of Ethan Allen, at the time of his demand for the surrender of the fort, was: "In the name of God I'Mighty and the Continental Congress," etc., instead of the language usually attributed to him.

The great-grandfather on the mother's side was Captain William Meacham, commander of a company in Colonel Woodbridge's regiment. He was killed at the battle of Bunker Hill, June 17, 1775, and his name is inscribed on the bronze tablets at Winthrop Square, just below that of General Warren.

It will be seen that the subject of this sketch is descended from patriotic, fighting stock, and it accounts, in a measure, for that persistent tenacity which has characterized his entire career. Mr. Wilcox was graduated in the classical department of Knox College in the class of 1851. As before stated, his father was a farmer, and Mr. Willcox was reared upon the farm. His taste, however, was not for that sort of a life, but rather for books. After graduation he taught a select school in Farmington, Illinois, for one year. He then became clerk in a bank in Peoria, where he remained for a year, after which he studied and traveled in Germany, France, Italy and England, for two years, with his personal friend, Professor Churchill, of Knox College. He was then professor of modern languages for six years, until the war of the Rebellion compelled retrenchment in the college finances. He then returned to Peoria, studied law and subsequently engaged in the business of manufacturing and coal mining, which he continued until 1891, when he assumed the duties of librarian of the Peoria public library. Probably no man in Peoria was so actively and earnestly engaged in the establishment of the public library as Mr. Willcox. Soon after his return and settlement in Peoria he interested himself in the library as it then existed, and was one of the prime movers in the establishment of the Mercantile library. With great persistence and sound judgment he aided in the development of the latter, and subsequently, in connection with others, brought about the establishment of the Peoria public library, to which was transferred all of the personal property of the Mercantile Library Association. The beautiful building, now known as the Public Library building, was largely the result of the earnest efforts of Mr. Willcox, and it will stand as a monument for years to come of his zeal and interest in the education of the people. He has occupied the position of inspector of the Peoria public schools, and was president of the board for two years. He has always been especially interested in the subject of education, not only in the public schools, but through the influence of the public library, and has been noted during his whole career in Peoria for his devotion to this cause. His experience as a director of the Mercantile library from 1864 demonstrated that a subscription library—the only kind of public library known in those days—was a failure, so far as reaching the masses of the people were concerned; and, for the very good reason that the women and children who hungered for books did not hold the family purse strings, while the men who held the purse strings did not care particularly for books.

Mr. Willcox has always earnestly favored the societies and organizations that had for their purpose the development of all that was best in the city, and has given of his time and means generously in that direction. He is the author of the present state library law, which was adopted March 7, 1872—the first really comprehensive free public library law in the United States, and the model of the library laws which other states have enacted since. The proof that such a law was needed is seen in the fact that, whereas, the old subscription library had a membership never exceeding three hundred, the free public library now has a membership of nine thousand, four hundred and seventy.

Mr. Willcox grew up under the influence of the Presbyterians and Congregationalists, but in his maturer years has not been able to subscribe to all the peculiar tenets of either of those churches, but has always believed in all that was best in all church work.

In politics he is and always has been a republican but believes in that manly independence which leads a man to vote for the best man for public office, especially in local affairs, whether belonging to his own party or another.

In July, 1857, Mr. Willcox was married to Mary T. Hotchkiss, of Peoria, the only daughter of J. P. Hotchkiss, and granddaughter of General Walter Booth, of Meriden, Connecticut. She died January 10, 1863, leaving two children, George M. and Mary H., the latter now Mrs. Sisson, of Flagstaff, Arizona. Mr. Willcox was again married, June 22, 1869, his second union being with Mary L. Hatch, of Warwick, Massachusetts. Two children have been born of this union, William Arthur and Harold Hatch.

As the beginning of this sketch indicates, Mr. Willcox is the right man in the right place. His thorough education, his foreign travel, his interest in and acquaintance with books, render him an invaluable man in the position he now occupies. It would be exceedingly difficult to fill his place with any one so well fitted to discharge the duties of the position. He has for years kept himself well abreast of the times and well informed in reference to books and writers. His sound knowledge touching the value of books peculiarly fits him for the position. He has made a special study of public libraries, and is well versed in all modern methods relating to their operation. All the friends of the public library earnestly hope for many future years of his efficient, acceptable service, and would seriously regret his retirement. He has always in all his dealings and life been highly regarded for his high purpose, his advocacy of all that is best in personal, municipal and national life. The influence of such men is not always fully appreciated during their life but it leaves its mark for good upon the community, becoming more apparent and potential as time goes on.

THEODORE M. COX.

Theodore M. Cox, the president of the Galesburg Grocery Company and also of the Cox Brothers Company, made his start in life upon the basis of a public-school education and good home training, and since that time has constantly advanced, the field of his activity continuously broadening while his labors have more and more become a factor in upholding the commercial stability and progress. He was born in Vermont, Fulton county, Illinois, May 26, 1866. His grandfather, Jesse Cox, was a native of Pennsylvania and a carpenter by trade. He married Theodosia Mershon and they became early residents of Fulton county, Illinois, where their remaining days were passed. They had a large family including Mary, Samuel, Henry, Rebecca, Caleb B. and others. The maternal grandfather of Theodore M. Cox was Josiah Wilkinson, who was born in Pennsylvania and learned and followed the cabinet-maker's trade. He was also an early settler of Fulton county, Illinois, where both he and his wife, who bore the maiden name of Ellen Hamer, lived to an old age. Their children were as follows: Joseph, Hannah, Mary, Annie B., Henry, Cornelia and Charles.

Caleb B. and Annie B. (Wilkinson) Cox, the parents of Theodore M. Cox, were natives of Pennsylvania. The former was reared in the Keystone state and became a school teacher but, removing to the west, cast in his lot with the early settlers of Fulton county, Illinois, where he engaged in merchandising. Some time afterward he turned his attention to the banking business in Vermont, Illinois, and also became a prominent factor in the public life of the county which for two terms he represented in the Illinois legislature. He also served for three years in the Eighty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry during the Civil war with the rank of major. He died in Vermont in 1874 when but forty-one years of age, and in that period he accomplished a work which might well be regarded as a serviceable life work of many a man of twice his years. His widow still survives him. They were originally members of the Society of Friends or Quakers. Their family numbered seven children: Wilmer, deceased; Theodore M., of this review; Mary Ellen, who has also passed away; Olive, the wife of H. H. Cleveland, of Rock Island, Illinois; Edward, of Galesburg; Howard, also a resident of Rock Island; and Sherman, of New York city.

Theodore M. Cox spent his youthful days in his native county and after attending the public schools of Vermont was for a brief period a student in Knox College. He afterward began clerking in a hardware store belonging to his uncles, J. W. and Henry Cox, and subsequently became a partner of his uncle, Ezra Dilworth, and the latter's son Willis in the conduct of a business at Vermont under the firm name of E. Dilworth & Company. After two years Mr. Cox withdrew from that partnership and joined his brothers Edward and Howard in purchasing the Dilworth interests in the business, which they continued to conduct until 1896. In that year Theodore M. Cox and Howard Cox came to Galesburg and purchased the business of the Avery Brothers & Brooks Company which they conducted with success until 1903, when they sold out and erected the Cox building at the corner of Chambers and Mulberry streets. There they conducted a heavy machinery storage and transfer business and in 1904 organized the Cox Brothers Company in order to engage in the general vehicle and implement business in addition to their storage enterprise. They also opened a retail store for the sale of vehicles, farm implements and seeds, and through the establishment of branch houses conducted business in that line in three different locations. Eventually, however, they disposed of their retail interests and in 1909 in connection with F. S. Taylor acquired the Galesburg Grocery Company of which Theodore M. Cox is the president. In 1910 he also became interested in the Galesburg Cornice Works, the business being now conducted in the Cox building. He is likewise a member of the syndicate that purchased the George W. Brown property. Long since recognized as a prominent and progressive man, his cooperation has been sought in many fields, in all of which his labors have become effective and far-reaching elements of success.

Mr. Cox was united in marriage to Miss Lilly I. Oviatt, a daughter of Henry and Mary (Jones) Oviatt and a native of Arkansas. Eight children have been born of this marriage, as follows: Anna Beth, Margaret Ella, Olive Louise, Doris Irene, Mary Ann, Syble Josephine and two who died in infancy.

In his political views Mr. Cox is a republican and has served as chairman of the board of election commissioners but has on the whole taken little active part in politics or public affairs, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his business interests which have constantly developed in importance and in extent. He never falters until he has carried forward to success his well defined plans, yet in their execution he has never been known to take advantage of another in trade conditions but has promoted his business along constructive lines and by honorable methods has won public confidence as well as prosperity.

ISIDOR I. BONDI.

For fifteen years Isidor I. Bondi has been numbered among the merchants of Galesburg, having in 1897 opened here a dry-goods store under the name of Bondi Brothers & Company. The correctness of their business methods is manifest in their success, which has enabled them not only to build up an extensive establishment and control a large trade in this city but also to establish various branch stores elsewhere which are also proving profitable sources of income.

Mr. Bondi was born in Salina, Kansas, April 29, 1868, his parents having been pioneer settlers there. His father, August Bondi, was born in Vienna, Austria, July 21, 1833, and acquired his education in the Academic Gymnasium of Vienna. He was fifteen years of age when on the 15th of May, 1848, he joined the Academic Legion, lifting the first granite paving block to start the first barricade in the Vienna revolutionary struggle. On the 6th of September, 1848, he left Vienna for the United States, arriving at New Orleans on the 10th of November and going thence to St. Louis. In October, 1849, he began retailing auction stock at Quincy but afterward returned to St. Louis to learn the printer's trade. In 1854 naturalization rights made him a citizen of the United States and the same year he entered a claim near Lawrence, Kansas. While there he formed the acquaintance of John Brown, the noted apostle of liberty, and joined the Free State minutemen under command of that intrepid leader. They marched to Lawrence and thus was instituted the beginning of the Border Ruffian war. On the 14th of May, 1857, Mr. Bondi was appointed postmaster of Walker, Anderson county, Kansas, and was still the incumbent of that office when, three years later, on the 28th of June, 1860, he was married to Henrietta Einstein, of Leavenworth, Kansas. On the 23d of December, 1861, he offered his services to the government in defense of the Union as a member of Company K, Fifth Kansas Cavalry, with which he remained for three years. Mr. Bondi was a lawyer by profession and was prominently identified with public interests in the various communities in which he lived. He served at different times as United States commissioner at Fort Harker, as postmaster at Salina, Kansas, and in various county and state offices in Kansas. The love of liberty and the spirit of loyalty which prompted him to ally his interests with the contending forces in Vienna when but fifteen years of age were manifest throughout his entire life. He died September 30, 1907.

Isidor I. Bondi laid the foundation of his education in the public schools at Salina, Kansas, and made his initial step in the business world in 1886 by pursuing a course of drafting and serving an apprenticeship at carpentering and building. Subsequently he took a business course in the Salina Normal College at Salina, Kansas, and in the spring of 1889 he removed westward to Portland, Oregon, where he remained for six years. The following year was spent in eastern Oregon and in Idaho and after the McKinley election he left the west and came to Illinois. In the spring of 1897 he formed a partnership with his brother, Hart E. Bondi, and opened a dry-goods store in Galesburg under the firm style of Bondi Brothers & Company. They have increased their business from year to year until theirs is one of the most extensive establishments in this part of the state and in addition they have opened and conduct successfully branch stores in Kewanee, Illinois; Salina, Kansas; and Sedalia, Missouri.

On the 26th of July, 1911, Mr. Bondi was united in marriage to Miss Tennie Zuzak, of Boonville, Missouri. They have one daughter, Helen, who was born on the 8th of June, 1912. Mr. Bondi belongs to the Sons of Judah, a Jewish congregation, and is its secretary. He is a charter member and one of the directors of the Provident Saving & Loan Association of Galesburg and his fraternal relations are with the Elks Lodge No. 894 and Veritas Lodge, No. 478, I. O. O. F., of which he has been treasurer for a number of years. He is likewise an active member of the Galesburg Club, serving at the present time on its commercial committee, and he is a member of the Soangetaha Country Club. He also has an interesting military chapter in his life record, for at the age of seventeen years he was mustered into the Fourth Regiment Band of the Kansas National Guard, with which he served for three years. As a business man he is alert and enterprising, actuated by a spirit of progress in all that he does. As we look over life we see that to one is given the talent for poetry, to another that of art, to another of construction, to another of mechanics, and to still another the capability for successful business management. Few men under fifty would willingly admit that the last mentioned is limited and young men especially all believe that they possess it. But the annual records of business failures show that the rule holds good and that only a comparatively few have the capability for the successful control of commercial interests. Mr. Bondi is one who has been thus endowed and his diligence and progressiveness have constituted the basis of continuous advancement.

REV. LUCIUS H. PARKER.

For many years the Rev. Lucius H. Parker devoted much of his life to Christian teaching. As a minister of the Congregational church his labors were far reaching and effective and still bear fruit in the lives of those who came under his guidance. He was born March 20, 1807, in Woodstock, Vermont, and although he passed away in Galesburg on the 29th of February, 1872, he is yet remembered by many of the older citizens who recognized his worth and entertained for him the highest regard and gave to him their warm friendship. His parents were Lucius H. and Marion (Wallace) Parker, in whose home his youthful days were passed. Having determined to devote his life to the ministry he began studying in the Lane Theological Seminary at Cincinnati, Ohio, but left that school in April, 1836, six weeks before graduation, together with ninety other students because of the anti-slavery ideas which they held. Later he attended lectures at Oberlin College, of Oberlin, Ohio, and his wife was a student there at the same time.

In 1836 the Rev. Lucius H. Parker went to Galena, Illinois, where he engaged in preaching for about one year and then resumed his studies at Oberlin where he remained for two years. On the expiration of that period he accepted a call from a church at Erie, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in preaching until 1844. He then came to Galesburg and filled the pulpit of the Congregational church at this place for two years. In addition to his church work he was interested in agriculture. When he no longer accepted regular pastorates he spent much of his time in organizing Congregational churches and many of the now strong church societies of the northern and central part of the state were formed through his instrumentality and under his guidance. He likewise labored earnestly in the interest and for the upbuilding of Knox College until the time of his death.

On the 31st of August, 1836, the Rev. Parker was married to Miss Elizabeth Treat Holyoke, a daughter of William and Lucy (Greenleaf) Holyoke, the latter an own cousin of the poet, John Greenleaf Whittier. Mrs. Parker's father was a wealthy carriage manufacture of Cincinnati, Ohio, and the daughter attended Harriett Beecher Stowe's school in that place.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Parker have been born the following named: William Holyoke, Lucius Clark, Robert Stuart, Edward Austin, Mary Elizabeth Castle, David, Charles Wallace and Emily Almira Gilbert.

The Rev. Parker was always deeply interested in the anti-slavery movement and before the war his home was one of the so-called stations on the famous underground railway and gave shelter and food to many fugitive slaves on their way to Canada. His early political allegiance was given to the whig party and when the republican party was formed to prevent the further extension of slavery he joined its ranks and continued one of its stanch advocates until his death. He was very deeply interested in the Union cause during the Civil war and at all times was a loyal and progressive citizen who sought the welfare of the community at large as well as the advancement of the individual.

EWING VAN DARIEN MORRIS, M. D.

Dr. Ewing Van Darien Morris is now one of the oldest practicing physicians in Galesburg in years of continuous connection with the profession, having first opened an office in this city in 1885. Thorough preparatory training well qualified him for the responsibilities which have devolved upon him and study abroad has also given him intimate knowledge of the methods followed by many of the distinguished physicians and surgeons of the old world. Illinois claims Dr. Morris as one of her native sons, his birth having occurred in Monmouth, on the 7th of May, 1858. His parents were Easton and Rebecca Ann (Butler) Morris, the father born in southern Illinois, May 13, 1833, while the mother's birth occurred in Monmouth on the 28th of February, 1834. Easton Morris after establishing his home in the vicinity of Monmouth gave his attention to farming which he made his life work. He met a sudden death, on the 8th of September, 1866, being struck by lightning while in Kansas, whither he had gone to purchase land. His political support was ever given to the democratic party and the community in which he lived regarded him as a worthy and valued citizen. His wife was a daughter of William and Susan (Chapman) Butler, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Illinois. To Mr. and Mrs. Easton Morris were born three children of whom the Doctor is the eldest. The second child, a daughter, died in infancy, while Myron is now a farmer in Minnesota.

Dr. Morris was a lad of only eight years at the time of his father's death. In his youthful days he walked three and a half miles to and from school and when but nine years of age he engaged in driving teams. When a lad of nine years he began farming for himself and he saved money until he had a sum sufficient to buy a self-raking reaper, after which he cut grain for neighboring farmers by the acre. Later he purchased a binder and continued his work as a factor in the agricultural development of the community. From his earnings he saved every cent possible, until he felt that he was justified in carrying out his intention of preparing for the medical profession. He was twenty-two years of age when he entered the office of Dr. Webster, of Monmouth, Illinois, who directed his preliminary reading while later he pursued a three years' course in Rush Medical College. He also spent one year in the study of dental surgery in Chicago and in 1884 he entered upon the practice of medicine at Cullom, Illinois, where he remained for a year. In 1885 he came to Galesburg and is one of the oldest practicing physicians in this city, having for more than a quarter of a century been active in the profession here. From the outset he has been a close student of everything bearing upon the profession and tending to bring to man the key to the complex mystery which we call life. In 1894 he pursued a post-graduate course in Chicago and a year later went to New York for further study. Another year passed and he then went to Vienna, Austria, where he spent a year, and also pursued special courses in Berlin, Paris and London, coming under the instruction and watching the methods of some of the most eminent practitioners and specialists of the old world. Since 1904 he has remained continuously in Galesburg and in 1909 extended his business activities to include the conduct of a drug store, becoming a partner of Dr. Dickinson in this enterprise. Subsequently he purchased his partner's interest and is now sole owner of the business. Dr. Morris has always enjoyed an extensive practice and his ability is widely recognized, placing him among the eminent representatives of the profession in this part of the state. He is extremely careful in the diagnosis of his cases and very conscientious in the performance of professional duties.

Dr. Morris has been married twice. He first wedded Miss Francis Margaret McVey, a daughter of Daniel and Margaret McVey, of Warren county, Illinois. She was born November 2, 1858, and died on the 30th of October, 1883. For his second wife Dr. Morris chose Miss Lavina Gale, a daughter of James Gale, of Galesburg, this marriage being celebrated in January, 1895. Dr. Morris is a member of the Modern Woodmen Camp at Galesburg and his social as well as his professional qualities render him popular. He has a very wide acquaintance and his friends are many. He never allows social or other interests, however, to interfere with the faithful performance of his professional duties and he keeps in close touch with the onward move of the profession through his membership connections with the Knox County Medical Society, the City Medical Society, the Illinois State Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

INDEX

Abdill, J. F. 861
Abrahamson, Charles 685
Adams, E. R. 302
Adams, F. L. 27
Aldrich, D. W. 1005
Allen, A. H. 448
Allen, C. E. 108
Allen, H. A. 294
Allen, J. S. 57
Allen, N. T. 106
Ament, G. D. 368
Anderson, A. B. 445
Anderson, A. O. 846
Anderson, Ole 937
Anderson, S. A. 347
Appell, A. L. 593
Appell, E. J. 704
Applegren, J. M. 471
Armstrong, James 913
Arnold, B. F. 160
Arnold, H. F. 154
Arnold, Wilfred 147
Asplund, J. W. 599
Austin, Charles 606
Austin, Thomas 825
Avery, C. M. 30
Ayres, S. C. 80

Bailey, Walter 819
Baines, Francis 22
Baird, B. P. 774
Baird, L. P. 661
Barlow, A. A. 472
Barlow, J. E. 807
Barry, Frances 1040
Bartlett, F. S. 308
Bartlett, J. D. 371
Bartlett, W. A. 362
Bates, M. C. 153
Baymiller, Michael 831
Bearmore, F. C. 785
Becker, Louis 86
Beckett, John 251
Behringer, George 516
Belden, W. L. 319
Bellwood, W. S. 856
Bennett, H. J. 891
Benson, L. W. 795
Bentley, W. F. 360
Berggren, A. W. 276
Betterton, Joshua 1018
Bliss, C. R. 842
Bloom, H. C. 996
Bohan, J. M. 339
Bond, William 862
Bondi, I. I. 1143
Boutelle, A. J. 170
Bowers, Aaron 385
Boyes, W. F. 1034
Bradburg, J. L. 330
Bradley, W. O'R. 71
Bradshaw, D. W. 438
Brandt, John 331
Bridge, G. H. 728
Briggs, J. W. 793
Broadfield, E. H. 766
Brooks, R. J. 1021
Brown, Charles 459
Brown, G. W. 1115
Brown, P. F. 1083
Bryant, J. H. 78
Buck, W. N. 758
Bulson, Ira 591
Burch, John 857
Burgland, H. P. 327
Burnaugh, Daniel 886
Burnett, A. C. 118
Burnside, C. S. 541
Burnside, Isaac 867
Burnside, William 369
Butler, A. C. 786
Byram, G. R. 845

Cadwell, O. O. 933
Cain, J. H. 844
Call, E. C. 646
Callahan, Alex. 898
Callender, I. S. 217

Cameron, W. S. 468
Campbell, O. L. 502
Campbell, S. M. 546
Carlson, A. P. 923
Carlson, C. J. 934
Carlton, W. B. 378
Carns, J. Z. 95
Carr, C. E. 5
Cation, David 796
Cation, James 976
Chamberlain, C. H. 393
Chapin, B. N. 712
Chapman, Frank 691
Chase, Mrs. W. A. 821
Churchill, George 310
Churchill, G. B. 189
Clark, C. S. 386
Clark, G. M. 137
Clark, T. A. 789
Cline, A. J. 85
Cline, G. W. 866
Cole, F. G. 921
Cole, I. F. 178
Coleman, Eliza A. 632
Collinson, E. T. 703
Collinson, G. M. 677
Colton, C. S. 1072
Colton, Francis 1076
Colton, J. B. 268
Colville, R. W. 186
Conger, F. L. 83
Conley, G. F. 305
Cook, James 616
Cooke, F. F. 105
Cooke, John 96
Corbin, J. F. 353
Costa, Joseph 248
Cox, J. N. 345
Cox, J. W. 736
Cox, L. J. 764
Cox, Reuben 946
Cox, S. J. 515
Cox, T. M. 1141
Craig, A. M. 254
Craig, C. C. 588
Craig, George 328
Craig, W. D. 927
Craver, Thomas 623
Crocker, G. D. 50
Crouch, J. R. 266
Crump, Seth 174

Dalton, Enoch 823
Daugherty, M. J. 1091
Daughmer, F. U. 772
Davidson, G. W. 651
Davidson, R. E. 671
Davis, S. B. 168
Davison, Edward 684
Davison, I. W. 622
Davison, Robert 630
Dayton, Benjamin 562
Dayton, W. O. 563
DeLong, W. D. 425
Dennison, L. H. 343
Dickinson, J. T. 1052
Dikeman, W. N. 878
Donason, A. O. 694
Doubet, G. L. 897
Doubleday, G. P. 261
Doyle, W. E. 124
Drake, E. R. 139
Drury, H. F. 173
Dunbar, G. W. 484
Dunn, F. J. 719
Dunn, W. E. 485
Du Von, F. T. 1060

Eastes, G. J. 92
Edgar, F. L. 199
Edgar, L. J. 198
Edmundson, G. P. 834
Edwards, D. B. 415
Eiker, A. M. 743
Ekstadt, C. A. 896
Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. 1048
Elliott, G. W. 936
Elliott, W. B. 968
Ely, Boannerges 226
Emrich, Henry 323
Ennis, Hugh 1032
Epley, Peter 141
Ericson, J. E. 356
Ervin, R. E. 332

Fahnestock, J. C. 324
Ferris, L. C. 995
Finley, J. A. 615
Finley, J. O. 580
Fisher, Joseph 530
Fleharty, W. D. 225
Frankenburger, B. E. 945
Frankenburger, C. E. 945
Fredricks, G. E. 608
French, P. H. 566
Fritz, William 600
Fuller, Erastus 986

Gabrielson, Axel 1107
Galpin, John 835
Garren, U. S. 816
Gates, G. S. 401
Gay, F. N. 610
Gebhart, W. A. 421

Geer, J. C. 122
Gehring, Alexander 494
Gehring, A. J. 571
Gehring, Joseph 836
Gibbs, A. O. 908
Gibbs, Grant 663
Gibbs, Jonathan 941
Gibbs, L. E. 755
Gibbs, P. H. 922
Gibbs, Robert 779
Gibbs, R. F. 748
Gibbs, W. H. 592
Gibbs, W. H. 966
Gibson, G. A. 992
Giles, H. W. 62
Gillis, Heber 444
Givens, Strawther 863
Godfrey, W. D. 1053
Goff, W. B. 631
Goldquist, Fredericka 372
Goldsmith, E. W. 664
Goodspeed, N. H. 408
Gough, T. R. P. 876
Graham, G. H. 431
Granville, P. N. 88
Gray, J. D. 865
Greep, Catherine U. 733
Griffith, H. R. 164
Griswold, D. J. 275
Gross, Joseph 283
Grubb, J. W. 159
Gustafson, F. O. 1070

Hagan, G. L. 804
Hagan, H. A 805
Haggenjos, K. R. 558
Hall, John 983
Hall, Lydia M. 730
Hamerstrand, A. W. 721
Hamilton, Josiah 938
Hamilton, J. F. 130
Harler, W. W. 803
Harris, I. J. 486
Hart, B. T. 499
Hathaway, J. B. 672
Hawkinson, Andrew 957
Hawkinson, C. M. 437
Hazlett, F. R. 398
Hedstrom, G. L. 1008
Heffernan, John 576
Heller, S. H. 855
Hensley, J. A. 801
Herlocker, W. A. 56
Hertig, E. F. 87
Hilton, G. F. 726
Hinchliff, E. E. 116
Hinchliff, J. E. 212
Hinchliff, R. W. 117
Hinckley, C. A. 1128
Hjerpe, John 392
Holahan, John 211
Holland, H. M. 1108
Holmes, C. E. 532
Holmes, E. F. 197
Holmes, F. L. 200
Hoofnagle, A. L. 579
Hooker, F. H. 99
Hopkins, Frank 814
Hopkins, F. C. 481
Hubbell, T. J. 542
Huber, Jacob 901
Huber, J. L. 914
Huber, W. B. 907
Huff, B. J., Jr. 531
Hughes, S. M. 354
Humphrey, A. G. 435
Hunt, R. C. 215
Hunter, J. W. 916
Hurburgh, C. F. 262
Hurd, A. L. 548
Hurlbut, Francis 925
Hurlbutt, D. C. 102

Ingersoll, S. A. 377
Ives, N. B., Sr. 624

Jelliff, F. R. 34
John, Mandiville 751
Johnson, A. J. V. 771
Johnson, C. G. 585
Johnson, C. O. 953
Johnson, F. E. 1124
Johnson, John 705
Johnson, Jonas 577
Johnson, S. H. 952
Johnston, J. A. 1002
Jones, G. W. 1081
Jones, J. W. 1065
Jordan, W. A. 36
Junk, John 637
Junk, J. H. 597
Junk, Thomas 453

Keefe, Thomas 177
Keener, A. C. 476
Keightley, H. N. 9
King, Ambrose 915
King, A. L. 578
King, E. J. 647
King, H. R. 912
King, Hugh 918
Kjellander, E. J. 695
Krans, Anna O. B. 682
Kråns, F. C. 500
Kunkel, H. J. 493

Lafferty, John 540
Lamoreux, J. M. 1037
Lapham, Frank 888
Larson, Erich 605
Larson, N. J. 697
Larson, William 340
Lass, Ebenezer 710
Lawrence, R. A. 26
Lawson, P. F. 1069
Leffingwell, C. W. 1133
Lehman, W. G. 789
Lemon, M. S. 790
Leng, Albert 722
Lewis, J. H. 110
Liken, C. T. 553
Lindstrum, A. O. 452
Little, O. H. 524
Locklin, John 594
Lockwood, E. J. 234
Lofgren, Gust 601
Longden, A. C. 351
Losey, N. H. 1135

McAuley, J. B. 423
McCallister, Alpha B. 1017
McClelland, Thomas 1127
McClure, Thomas 669
McCornack, A. F. 429
McFarland, F. O. 583
McGaan, Hugh 944
McGaan, William 943
McGirr, N. H. 833
McGirr, W. L. 805
McKeighan, R. J. 760
McKie, J. M. 202
McKissock, Peter 690
McMaster, C. J. 126
McMaster, D. N. 962
McMaster, John 508
McMaster, J. E. 645
McMaster, J. M. 926
McMurtry, J. C. 462
McQuarrie, Alan 510
McWilliams, David 155
Machen, C. H. 977
Machen, H. S. 984
Mack, M. J. 241
Mackey, John 893
Maholland, Andrew 681
Main, C. A. 636
Main, C. W. 659
Main, H. E. 529
Main, J. E. 906
Main, T. P. 519
Main, William 644
Main, W. B. 826
Malcolm, C. A. 316
Maley, W. H. 148
Mason, E. T. S. 65
Mathews, C. H. 1136
Mathews, J. S. 649
Matteson, F. G. 209
May, S. W. 284
Merrill, C. W. 447
Merris, J. B. 564
Metcalf, E. P. 300
Miles, J. W. 958
Miller, Charles 233
Miller, D. C. 69
Milroy, Nathan 770
Milroy, N. M. 629
Moats, Summerfield 693
Montgomery, W. H. 440
Moor, Angus 362
Moore, W. B. 443
Morgan, G. E. 904
Morgan, J. E. 928
Morris, E. V. D. 1145
Morse, Menzo 820
Mosher, S. W. 935
Mosser, John 192
Mott, F. B. 432
Mount, Michael 399
Murphy, H. N. 125

Nash, Edwin 299
Neale, J. W. 1046
Neely, C. R. 1028
Nelson, C. V. 555
Nelson, J. C. 670
Nelson, J. H. 924
Nelson, O. C. 322
Nelson, S. B. 1014
Newberg, G. L. 458
Niles, D. P. 461
Nisley, J. M. 28
Norene, E. W. 769
North, C. D. 738

Oberg, J. C. 391
Oberholtzer, J. M. 744
Oberholtzer, O. J. 142
O'Connor, J. D. 43
Olson, F. H. 654
Olson, N. E. 273

Paden, A. F. 911
Paden, James 348
Palmquist, Louis 117
Parker, I. A. 411
Parker, L. H. 1144
Parkinson, J. R. 446
Parkinson, S. R. 778
Patterson, J. H. 725

Patty, George 584
Payne, J. S. 620
Payton, Orlando 809
Penn, C. B. 1058
Percy, J. F. 1096
Perrin, M. T. 281
Perry, Albina H. 1088
Perry, A. J. 1084
Perry, G. A. 1064
Peterson, August 656
Peterson, L. W. 538
Peterson, Swan 1039
Peterson, S. H. 344
Pillsbury, I. L. 520
Poplett, Frank 759
Porter, Hattie 817
Potter, A. S. 788
Potts, Silas 683
Preston, I. C. 701
Pulver, C. H. 955
Purdy, John 991

Quick, C. E. 613

Rankin, Samuel 628
Ray, T. W. 956
Rebstock, James 963
Redmon, J. C. M. 394
Reed, F. L. 272
Reed, G. W. 563
Reed, J. G. 587
Reed, W. P. 872
Reifsnider, Edson 988
Reynolds, C. C. 492
Reynolds, G. W. 74
Reynolds, Jennie H. 974
Rhodes, C. H. 621
Rice, A. H. 903
Rice, A. S. 951
Rice, J. H. 1007
Rice, R. C. 40
Richey, James 813
Rickords, S. S. 290
Rinella, August 384
Ripley, C. B. 1026
Robbins, W. A. 314
Roberson, J. E. 874
Roberts, O. T. 882
Robertson, C. W. 675
Robson, E. P. 1054
Roby, A. L. 609
Roe, C. W. 426
Rogers, F. E. 376
Root, Riley 1120
Ross, A. J. 737
Roundtree, J. H. 44
Routh, J. A. 875
Routh, T. L. 696
Ryan, L. R. 218
Ryan, S. H. 884
Rylander, Andrew 477
Rylander, F. O. 460

Sanborn, L. W. 534
Sargent, A. I. 359
Schryver, J. H. 73
Schwarz, John 507
Seacord, De F. 222
Seacord, Wilkins 1109
Seaton, B. F. 252
Selby, W. H. 565
Sennett, L. F. 267
Shadley, B. F. 1082
Shaffer, B. F. 830
Shaffer, J. A. 881
Shaffer, T. B. 824
Sheahan, D. W. 1102
Shear, J. H. 655
Shipplett, G. A. 750
Shives, Samuel 806
Shumaker, C. E. 569
Simonds, W. E. 998
Simpson, D. M. 780
Simpson, H. C. 1020
Simpson, J. C. 175
Sinclair, R. G. 163
Sisson, H. M. 93
Sloan, H. A. 852
Sloan, Sarah 818
Slough, G. K. 747
Smith, C. P. 782
Smith, Dewitt 752
Smith, F. C. 145
Smith, F. G. 561
Smith, G. A. 570
Smith, G. H. 517
Smith, H. A. 282
Smith, H. P. 741
Smith, J. F. 864
Smith, J. W. 338
Smith, W. D. 1111
Snider, William 635
Sornborger, G. M. 964
South, David 851
Spencer, Charles, Sr. 932
Spies, W. A. 794
Spinner, W. H. 72
Squires, A. L. 470
Standish, H. A. 16
Standish, J. Van N. 10
Stearns, G. G. 478
Steele, L. L. 201
Steele, W. L. 380
Steepleton, L. P. 183

Stegall, Edward 843
Stephens, J. W. 706
Stephenson, F. S. 652
Stephenson, G. L. 469
Stephenson, J. C. 892
Stephenson, William 533
Stevens, B. A. 526
Stevens, Loren 320
Stockdale, W. M. 698
Strom, Peter 556
Stuckey, N. S. 598
Stuckey, R. C. 954
Stuckey, S. V. 660
Sunwall, P. A. 967
Swanson, Oliver 495
Swartz, August 895
Sweborg, J. A. 832

Tanney, James 539
Tapper, A. W. 416
Templeton, Mary A. 711
Tennery, P. E. 678
Thirlwell, John 1130
Thisted, Martin 1066
Thomas, W. N. 781
Thompson, David 953
Thompson, G. W. 1022
Thompson, W. A. 1033
Thomson, T. W. 1003
Thuline, S. J. 765
Toler, J. C. 185
Townsend, L. A. 52
Tucker, J. A. 902
Tucker, M. E. 156
Tucker, N. N. 877
Tucker, Samuel 132
Turner, J. S. 115
Tyler, F. P. 496

Upp, C. H. 1059

Van Buren, G. W. 547
Vance, S. L. 948
Vivion, J. B. 454
Vivion, J. G. 66
Volk, Anna 822

Wagoner, S. A. 306
Wainright, Daniel 208
Ware, E. H. 854
Warner, W. E. 810
Wayman, Cornelius 572
Weech, C. E. 642
Weinberg, Lafayette 63
Welch, Henry 501
Welsh, Jay 602
Welsh, J. D. 58
Welsh, Michael 978
Welsh, W. M. 885
Wenzelmann, Gustave 231
Wertman, L. F. 22
West, John 858
West, O. B. 975
West, W. E. 1046
Whipple, W. W. 1104
White, C. A. 274
Whited, George 947
Whiting, S. M. 868
Wikoff, F. Z. 42
Wilks, James 100
Willard, E. S. 997
Willcox, E. S. 1139
Willcox, W. H. 406
Williams, A. C. 653
Williams, E. P. 236
Williams, George 51
Williamson, Douglas 993
Williamson, E. P. 686
Williamson, M. O. 1112
Williamson, W. S. 418
Willis, H. F. 482
Willsie, John 1101
Willsie, W. F. 1027
Wilmot, Jesse 667
Wilson, F. E. 48
Wilson, L. P. 982
Witherell, G. W. 734
Witherell, L. R. 223
Wood, H. W. 242
Woolsey, David 638
Woolsey, F. E. 182
Wyman, Stephen 972

Young, J. M. 942
Young, J. R. 402
Youngdahl, C. L. 757

Zenor, C. A. 848